"Hands Up," the Western serial, produced by Astra and featuring Ruth Roland, has established a unique record in booking. In mapping out the campaign, Pathe Exchange, Inc., fixed the amount of business that each of its thirty exchanges were expected to turn in. Up to one day before the release of the serial, 90 per cent. of these branches had exceeded in contracts the record of any previous serial. It had been liberally booked through Atlanta, Dallas, Chicago, Minneapolis, New York, Boston, St. Louis, San Francisco, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Philadelphia, and Washington.

The Philadelphia exchange lead with 26 two, three and six-day bookings; Boston 24 two and three day bookings; Cincinnati more than double the amount of contracts over the previous serial's high water mark; Detroit 400 per cent.; Atlanta 300 per cent.; Kansas City 300 per cent.; Cleveland 50 per cent., Philadelphia 50 per cent. This is the record before the serial was released. Since that time there has been a brisk rivalry among the exchanges to reach the individual high spot in the new release.

Madge Kennedy Now Thrill-Proof.

Madge Kennedy is now thrill-proof. Nothing the charming Goldwyn star is called upon to do in future will give her a moment's disturbance after her thrilling experience in the water in "The Kingdom of Youth," her latest Goldywn Picture.

Miss Kennedy emerged with flying colors from her first motion picture drowning incident. Though in the water fully thirty minutes she was ready for work as soon as her clothes were dried. Despite the fact that the Goldwyn star could hardly be called an expert swimmer, she found very little trouble in keeping her head above the water, though one scene required that she be shown sinking.

"I could easily have stood another hour of it," the star smiled. "Luckily the director picked the right day for it." The water scenes were taken on August 7, which weather officials recorded as the hottest day New York has ever experienced. Being rolled on the grass before the pulmotor was brought into play was the only feature that gave Miss Kennedy any discomfort.

Fox Offices Report Demand for Evelyn Nesbit Pictures

BEFORE a producer employs a star or starts a picture he usually thinks he is able to tell about what the result will be. The same thing is true in the case of the exhibitor booking a production. But sometimes there is miscalculation. William Fox reports an illustration. He was certain, he says, that the announcement of the employment of Evelyn Nesbit to make a series of five productions for his Standard Pictures series would prove of decided interest to exhibitors, but he was not prepared for the volume of inquiries that had followed the limited advertising it has thus far been possible to do in the trade press.

Immediately on the heels of the announcement that Evelyn Nesbit had begun work on "The Woman Who Gave," the first of the series, booking for all of these pictures began to pour in in a flood that has broken records.

Many exhibitors, on the other hand, remember that her picture, "Redemption," released some time ago, achieved a signal success. These exhibitors, it is apparent from their letters, calculate that given the resources of the Fox corporation, Miss Nesbit will prove a bonanza in "The Woman Who Gave."

It is declared in a statement from the Fox corporation that for dramatic interest, gripping situations and lavishness of production the pictures which Miss Nesbit has started for Fox will surpass anything that company has attempted on the screen.

"The Woman Who Gave," upon which Miss Nesbit already has begun at one of the Fox studios in New Jersey, is an example of the extent to which the Fox forces have gone in providing a fitting vehicle for Miss Nesbit's talent. This play, in which the star appears as a Paris art model and the wife of a brutal Bulgarian nobleman, affords Miss Nesbit opportunities for a portrayal of character which is of peculiar interest to the American people, as many American girls who have married foreign noblemen have come to grief on the sea of matrimony.

One of the big scenes of "The Woman Who Gave" is that which shows a sensational dinner party given in New York by the Bulgarian nobleman for the express purpose of flagrantly exploiting his wife's charms.

The settings for "The Woman Who Gave" are said to be notable for their lavishness and the outlay of money they involve.

Madelyn Clare Back in New York.

Madelyn Clare, the Broadway actress, who has just finished her work as the leading feminine role in "Young America" at the Essanay studio in Chicago, has returned to New York. She took with her two of Essanay's carrier pigeons, which are being trained for government work, to test their speed in flying from New York to Chicago.

The pigeons made the return trip of a thousand miles in a little less than twelve hours. Each carried a message attached to a tube on the foot to the effect that Miss Clare has arrived safely.

Miss Clare will be seen in "Young America," the Cohan and Harris stage success, which was made into a super feature film by George K. Spoor. The play is now completed and will be announced for release in the near future.

Elton Joins Current Events Staff.

Leslie Elton, the well known cartoonist, who has been making cartoons for moving pictures for quite some time, is now drawing for the Universal Current Events. His cartoons feature the war. Some of his latest are "Hoch De Kaiser," "Liberty on Guard" and "Doing Their Bit." Each one of these is being well received.

Jewel Has Completed Work on "The Yellow Dog"

THE Jewel Productions' visualization of Henry Irving Dodge's widely discussed Saturday Evening Post story, "The Yellow Dog," has been fully completed at the West Coast studio, and the release date will stortly be announced. Very little has been said during the filming of this big feature, but with a cast of exceptional excellence under Director Colin Campbell the full measure of the stimulating, patriotic qualities of the story have been transferred to the film.

While "The Yellow Dog" has been hailed as a great "win the war" story strictly classified it is not a war story at all, but a comedy drama of suburban life with a remarkable psychologic bearing on the struggle. There are no battle scenes or troops introduced in any part of the story and but one uniform is seen, that of a single recruit who is the victim of subtle Hun propaganda.

In its entirety the story deals with the malignant influence exerted by the fireside propagandists of the Kaiser and the disastrous effect of circulating lying rumors manufactured by our secret enemies. Unlike most stories pointing to an evil, "The Yellow Dog" develops a cure, and the practical solution of the problem of suppressing enemy propaganda has already been taken up seriously and made a reality in practically every municipality in the United States.

"The Yellow Dog" both as a story and as a film production is subtle humor with a strong moral and a high purpose. It is a boys' story for grown-ups and a man's story for boys with a vein of pure youthful romance that lends added interest for everyone of all ages and both sexes.

In the roster of one hundred players that make up the cast are many of the most notable artists in the film world. Ralph Graves, who had the leading masculine role in "Sporting Life," plays the male lead. Arthur Hoyt, who gained prominence as "Mr. Opp," plays an important role. Antrim Short, who has been seen in many well-known juvenile parts, as leader of the Boy Detectives, is the real hero of the production. Clara Horton plays opposite Master Short. Evelyn Selbie, Alfred Allen, Frederick Starr, Frank Hayes, Harold Goodwin, Gordon Griffith, Frank M. Clark and Frank Takanga, the clever Japanese actor, will all be seen in important roles.

The screen version of "The Yellow Dog" was made under the direction of Colin Campbell from the script prepared by Elliott J. Clawson, who wrote the scenario of "The Kaiser."

The story deals with the present day social conditions and the principal scenes are laid in an average suburban town.

"Triple Trouble" Breaks Essanay-Chaplin Records

ESSANAY announces that its new Charlie Chaplin film, "Triple Trouble," has broken all booking records for that company, exceeding all the Chaplins released by Essanay for the same period it has been on the market. The greatest number of bookings for a Chaplin film previously was on "Police." This had an exceptionally strong run, but the present release far exceeds the former in the number of bookings for the first month.

By Essanay this is attributed partly to the fact that there has been no new Chaplin film on the market for some time, only one new comedy having been issued in several months, and partly to the excellence of the comedy itself. Chaplin fans were eager for a new Chaplin film, and in consequence bookings have been pouring into the George Kleine releasing system from every part of the country.

Every exhibitor reporting on the comedy has announced that he has had a phenomenal run, and scores have arranged for second, third and even fourth and fifth showings.

To take care of all the demands for the picture the Essanay company has been kept busy issuing new prints. Nearly twice the number of prints have been sent out as were originally intended, and still more are being made.

World Buys "The Praise Agent."

World Pictures announces the purchase of "The Praise Agent," an original story by Earle Mitchell which will be converted into a scenario for a feature picture with Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley as the stars. The theme of this story is based on the efforts of a press agent who in order to gain publicity for his principal created a condition of affairs that makes it necessary for his star to live up to the story he has sent out for public consumption.

Cecil De Mille Talks of His Second "Squaw Man"

CECIL B. DE MILLE has embarked upon his reproduction of "The Squaw Man," which was the first Lasky picture, and remains one of the best, despite the immense strides since made in the production of screen dramas.

"Why did I wish to again produce 'The Squaw Man?'" asked Mr. de Mille. "Well, there are several reasons, sentimental, business and professional. In the first place, it had been decided by our company that it was a picture which would prove decidedly acceptable even to those who had seen it before, while a great many new cinema patrons have been added in the several years since it was first produced. In this I concurred, and so it was determined to go ahead.

"It was my first picture. In the interim I have produced a good many films of different character, and I feel that each has in some measure surpassed the predecessors. And I also believe that I can, by reason of the fact that I have already produced 'The Squaw Man,' accomplish something really worth while in the reproduction of the drama. With what I have gained in knowledge, practice, experience, with the greater facilities in lighting, investiture, etc.—the technical advancement, in a word—and with the truly superlative company I have assembled, I am certain that the new version of 'The Squaw Man' will be infinitely better than the old. You see, I have something to compare to; I can check up on the weak spots and avoid them—I can strengthen the already strong elements; I can avoid mistakes.

"How many directors would welcome an opportunity to repeat a picture after the lapse of a few years? I should say every one. That, in fact, is the hardest part about picture-making. In a stage production you can rehearse a thing in its entirety; if the first night performance is bad, it may be improved at the next, and so on. After half a dozen performances, say, you have a perfect and smoothly oiled production. But a picture is fixed. When it is completed—that's an end of it. And you sit back in the projection room and watch it run. You say to yourself 'if only I had not done thus and so'—or, 'if I'd only thought to do this or that how much better it would have been.' Now I can profit by the errors of omission or commission in the first version.

"Again, it is a strong, a stirring drama—one with the reddest kind of red-blooded action. It has intensity, suspense, thrill, pathos, humor, and withal the wonder of the great west as atmosphere. It is a picture that will not grow old.

"I have a company today, as I say, which I do not believe could be excelled. Every role, even down to the least important, is played by an artist of real merit. Each is typical. I have every possible facility—every requirement in the matters of costuming, setting, properties—the result should be as nearly perfect as anything may be that is of human origin or design.

"Such, in brief, are my reasons for wishing to again put Edwin Milton Royle's drama on the screen. I have such splendid artists as Elliott Dexter, Theodore Roberts, Thurston Hall, Ann Little, Katherine MacDonald, Herbert Standing, Noah Beery, Edwin Stevens, Tully Marshall, Jack Holt, etc., in the cast—to see such a company together in one picture is like an all-star revival of some celebrated play in New York. I think it will be a distinct attraction in itself."

Many of the interiors have already been taken; the company is now at work on the exteriors. This will be Mr. De Mille's first Artcraft special for the new year, and indications are that it will be his greatest production to date.

Small Towns Like "The Kaiser."

Jewel Productions, Inc., which is distributing "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," is in receipt of many letters from the rural districts indicating that exhibitors in small towns need not be afraid of big pictures. In the past the small town men have stood in fear and trembling at propositions to take a chance on such subjects. Two of these communications show that patrons out in rural districts will come out strong for the big production and are willing to pay an increased admission price for the chance. The statements come from Platte Centre, Neb., a town of 500, and Milbank, S. D., another small town.

J. J. Nelson, manager of the Bentley Grand Theatre, at Milbank, S. D., writes that he made more money on "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," than he ever made on any other picture.

"The advertising possibilities are great with this picture," he says, "and anyone who goes after the business with it can't fail to produce the desired results."

Critics Praise Japanese Nightingale.

Reviewers and art critics have been enthusiastic in their praise of "A Japanese Nightingale," the first of Pathe's Extra Selected Star Photoplays, featuring Fannie Ward, and which will be released September 22. It was written by William Young, from the successful novel of Onoto Watana. Special praise has been accorded to Director George Fitzmaurice, who has set the story in a series of beautiful scenes.

Alden Sedgwick, art critic and traveler, calls it "A singing picture."

Virginia Pearson Starts Work on "Buchanan's Wife"

ALTHOUGH delayed a few days by the illness of Director Edmund Lawrence, Virginia Pearson has finally begun work on "Buchanan's Wife," adapted from the novel by Justus Miles Forman. Mr. Lawrence has completely recovered from his illness and it is not expected the brief delay will intertere with releasing the picture on scheduled time.

"Buchanan's Wife" is described as the tale of a love-hungry woman's successful fight for love and happiness against the opposition of men and the powers of death and magic. Buchanan's wife is a young woman who is married to a man much older than herself, who has used his hypnotic powers over her to force her into their present unhappy union. When the husband tires of his bargain he suddenly disappears without leaving a trace.

The wife eventually marries the lover of her girlhood after she has identified the dead body of Buchanan. Then the supposedly dead man turns up as a ragged beggar, broken in health and mind, who makes a strong appeal to the sympathies of his twice-wedded wife. Inevitable discovery follows, and the woman is compelled to confess to her present husband that she had made a false identification of Buchanan's body in order to win her freedom.

The resulting climax is described as unusually interesting, and the role of Buchanan's wife, as portrayed by Miss Pearson, is said to afford the Fox film star many opportunities to display her emotional ability. The subject is scheduled as a release on the Excel Pictures program for Fox.

Lees Make Hit in Wall Street.

New York was given its first glimpse of the new posters officially chosen for the coming Liberty Loan campaign September 4 on the steps of the Sub-Treasury Building. The posters, arranged in a group on the granite steps of the building, attracted a large noon-hour crowd from the financial district. They also served as a unique setting for a scene in "Swat the Spy!" the production which Jane and Katherine Lee have in work for William Fox. Under the direction of Arvid E. Gillstrom the children acted their scenes on the Sub-Treasury Building steps, while the big crowd in front of the place cheered them on.

It is estimated that there were 3,000 persons in the impromptu audience. The crowd blocked Wall and Nassau streets so solidly that traffic policemen had difficulty in keeping a passageway open for pedestrians, and drivers of vehicles did not attempt to get through.

In "Swat the Spy!" the Fox baby grands have a rapid-fire patriotic comedy, in the course of which they live up to the title of the production and take numerous cracks at Germany's secret agent in this country. As the scene on the Sub-Treasury steps showed them strafing Germany and Germany's agents the children made a decided hit with the crowd.

"Hello Trouble" (Universal).

The troubles of an undertaker in war times is a theme that brings the comedy talent of L-Ko stars into the high speed of fun. Their film on this subject is "Hello Trouble." Charles Inslee, in the role of an dishonest undertaker, stirs up droll, laughable tragedy between two devoted husbands and their loyal wives in his attempt to build up an insurance sideline when the undertaker business falls.

Charles Parott directed the picture. Babe Hardy and Billy Armstrong are the devoted husbands. Peggy Prevost and Bartine Burkett are the loving wives.

Farrar's First Goldwyn Goes Over Big All Over

A TREMENDOUS and brilliant success from the box office as well as the artistic point of view." That is the verdict of the nation's biggest exhibitors on Geraldine Farrar's first Star Series production for Goldwyn, "The Turn of the Wheel," which opened to record business last week and this in a score of the country's great motion picture theatres.

This note of exhibitor approval was echoed in the newspapers. Critics praised the production, declaring it to be the most impressive and satisfying vehicle of the famous diva's screen career.

"The Turn of the Wheel" opened the fall season in the big Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia, to waiting box office lines a block long. The New York Strand played it a solid week to ever-increasing crowds and to satisfied enthusiasm that augurs well for the remaining five of Geraldine Farrar's Star Series productions for Goldwyn this year.

"After opening with 'The Turn of the Wheel' I doubled its playing time at the Orpheum," wired Aaron J. Jones, head of the Jones, Linick & Schaefer organization, Chicago. "Geraldine Farrar is the greatest of all motion picture stars."

Nathan Ascher, head of the Ascher Brothers' Enterprises, Chicago, was equally enthusiastic.

"Geraldine Farrar has gone over big," he telegraphed. "She has an individual and distinctive following of hundreds of thousands in addition to the regular patrons of the cinema. 'The Turn of the Wheel' is a dramatic and optical treat."

Jacob Lourie, the cautious and discerning Boston theatre owner, reports tremendously satisfying business at his famous Modern and Beacon theatres, Boston, for the week of the Farrar engagement.

Messrs. Webb and Depkin in Baltimore; M. L. Markowitz, owner of San Francisco's famous Strand, and Leo Weinberger, his wide-awake and progressive manager; Crandall's Knickerbocker in Washington, D. C.; Baxter's famous Isis in Denver; Messrs. David and Lord's newly opened Pleasant Street Theatre in Worcester, Mass., and a dozen other well-known houses did capacity business for the length of their runs.

Terry Ramsaye Vouches for This.

It has been said that no woman can successfully impersonate a man—either in real life or on the stage or screen. Wait until you have seen Gail Kane in her forthcoming Mutual production made from the story of Maria Thompson Daviess, "The Daredevil."

Miss Kane, playing the role of a French girl who is forced to come to America to the home of her uncle after the death of her father in the war, finds that she can do the greatest service to her beloved France by dressing in the clothes of her American boy cousin.

James M. Sheldon, president of the Mutual, went out to the studio to call on Miss Kane the other day, while the picture was in progress. He tapped at Miss Kane's dressing room door. Her voice called to him to come in. He opened the door, but he could not see Miss Kane. A tall, slender boy with brown hair and handsome eyes stood beside her table, but she was not in evidence. It was not until the boy threw back his head and laughed that Mr. Sheldon knew he was Miss Kane.

Doris Kenyon's Next Is "Wild Honey."

Doris Kenyon is now selecting the cast for her third production, "Wild Honey," which will be produced by her own company, De Luxe Pictures, Inc. Work on the new feature will be started next week. "Wild Honey" was picturized by Louis Joseph Vance from the original story by Vingie E. Roe, which appeared early this summer in Pictorial Review, which reaches 1,500,000 homes each month.

Gaumont News and Graphic Covers Wide Field

THE success of our shipbuilding program is again illustrated in the current Gaumont News, No. 24, released Sept. 3. Many interesting pictures of yards of both sides of the United States are shown. A New Jersey yard has set its pace at two ships a week, and a California yard shows the first camouflaged specimen of the big fleet it has contracted to build. Pictures from France show how the Salvation Army, with its oil-stoves, coffee pots and doughnut kettles, is carrying comfort and happiness to our fighters.

German propagandists have stated that our men are being ill-treated and overworked in camp. No one believes any German statement, whatever, but the refutation of this slander can be shown in no better way than as illustrated in one of the subjects in this number of the News. Among the other subjects in this issue are shown the many relics, fresh from the battlefields, just received for the War Exposition in Chicago; the training of balloon observers; the use of the rifle by marines; how monster dredges are working over the first gold fields of '49, etc.

Gaumont Graphic No. 24, released three days later, shows the opening of the War Exposition, in Chicago; the visit of South American naval officers to our Naval Academy, at Annapolis; the entertainment of the French Military Mission in Chicago on a gasless Sunday; the winning of the Challenge Cup in the 15th Gold Cup Regatta by "Miss Detroit III," claimed to be the fastest motor boat ever built; and many other news topics, including the rounding up of 30,000 men in and around New York City in the great raid to find draft dodgers.

Many interesting scenes make up the Official War Pictures in this issue of the Gaumont Graphic, showing the work of our boys in France, the dugouts and shelters behind the second lines of defense, the Y. M. C. A. distribution of tobacco, the last lap of the journey to the firing line, a tour of inspection to the first lines, etc.

Delano Story is Screencraft's First.

"Flaming Ramparts," the story by Edith Barnard Delano, which was published in Harper's Magazine, will be picturized and presented as the first offering of Screencraft Pictures, which plans to make twelve dramatic features annually.

The title of the initial feature, together with the list of exchanges that will handle the picture, will be announced within a few days. Although many exchanges already have been signed to handle the film it was thought best to defer any announcement in this regard until the list was complete.

The story has been made under the personal supervision of Frank Reicher, a director who, among other accomplishments, made thirty or more features for the Paramount program. Mr. Reicher was given a free hand by the officials of the Screencraft corporation. The director promises one of the finest productions he has turned out.

Mary Boland and Lucy Cotton will be the stars of the initial feature. They will be supported by a selected cast. Miss Boland will be remembered as John Drew's leading woman for many seasons. Miss Cotton has been delighting theatre goers in "Turn to the Right." Both of the stars have had considerable successful screen experience.

Lucas and Bess Meredith Co-directing Bill Parsons

SINCE his return to his studios in Hollywood from an eastern trip that included personal appearances in theatres in many of the larger cities, "Smiling Bill" Parsons, star of Capitol Comedies, has lost no time in catching up with his schedule of two-reel comedy releases for Goldwyn. Two new ones are completed, and the millionaire star is at work on a third.

"A Pair of Pink Pajamas," the first of the new group, will follow "Camping Out," released October 7. Mary McIvor is leading woman in "A Pair of Pink Pajamas," co-directed by Wilfred Lucas and Bess Meredyth. Parsons' wardrobe for this production is one pair of silk pajamas, which he wears throughout the picture. A locomotive and a train of Pullman cars were used in the making of this comedy.

Mr. Lucas and Miss Meredyth also are responsible for the direction of Mr. Parsons' succeeding vehicle, "The Jelly Fish." In this Leach Cross, New York's famous fighting dentist, makes his first appearance on the screen as sparring partner for "Smiling Bill."

"You Know What I Mean" is the title of the comedy now in work at Hollywood. Bess Meredyth wrote it and she and Mr. Lucas are directing it.

Earle Paints Art Titles for Metro.

An artistic touch lent to "Pals First," a Screen Classics, Inc., six-reel production, starring Harold Lockwood, announced as a September release by Metro, is the latest development in art titles as designed and executed by Ferdinand Pinney Earle. Mr. Earle's work is represented in a series of oil-painted pictorially descriptive titles and a novelty in decorations for the spoken titles.

Painting art titles has become a study with Mr. Earle, whose work in this direction first attracted attention in J. Stuart Blackton's "Womanhood" and later in the production of "Within the Law."

Universal to Show What Home Workers Are Doing

THE title of a five-reel feature picture soon to be distributed by the industrial department of the Universal for showings in factories and workshops of all kinds is "Keep the Working Man at His Bench."

Harry Levey, director of the industrial department, has compiled a strong series of scenes for this subject, visualizing the high importance of the work in plants and mills at home to the success of our fighting forces overseas.

What the women are doing, as well as the men, forms an interesting phase of the subject. There are scenes of women at various tasks, including that of farming. Also glimpses are given of shipbuilding and launching. Men past middle age and boys are showing "doing their bit" in essential industries.

The film is to be shown at the noon hour in various plants by arrangement with the employers. The aim is to show workers the necessity of their remaining at their particular specialty and not permitting themselves to be lured away to other fields of labor on false offers of better wages.

Vendetta Theme for Fritzi Brunette.

Bluebird's feature release for September 23, entitled "Vendetta's Daughter," gives an insight into one of the romantic phases of the Italian code. It suggests in thrilling effect the workings of the rule "an eye for an eye," as followed by the secret societies of Italy, about which so much has been written.

Fritzi Brunette, who entertained in her previous Bluebird, "Playthings," is featured in the new picture. She is cast in the role of an Italian peasant girl who swears the oath of the vendetta to slay the man who killed her brother.

The girl finds a great love in the course of her turbulent experience and her heart is changed at the last minute. There are some exciting scenes of emotional conflict, and settings, that brings to the fore the atmosphere of Italy in the picture.

Select Star Completes Fourth Stage Success

THAT Constance Talmadge has built up for herself a strong repertory of former stage successes is apparent from a brief examination of this star's recent and announced forthcoming attractions. "Sauce for the Goose," which has just been released, is the third in this succession of former stage triumphs; and now comes the announcement that Miss Talmadge has completed another, "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots."

Her first assault against this phalanx of tried and proved stage winners came when Constance Talmadge made "Good Night, Paul" into that most difficult of screen productions, a photoplay farce. "Good Night, Paul" had furnished the successful vehicle with which Ralph Herz had starred in a musical comedy under the same title. This picture was released during June.

One month later came that splendid success of both stage and screen, "A Pair of Silk Stockings."

And now "Sauce for the Goose" is again furnishing the admirers of the fascinating select star to see as silent drama one of the successful comedies of the American stage.

The inclusion of the forthcoming "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots" in this list brings into Constance Talmadge's repertory a work by that most popular of American dramatists, Augustus Thomas.

All-Star Support for Mary MacLaren.

It has become the custom to refer to groups of supporting players as an all-star cast, but for Mary MacLaren's newest picture, "The Vanity Pool," now being created for the screen by Universal's artistic woman director, Ida May Park, a cast that is really stellar has been secured.

Anna Q. Nilson, former Metro star, has an important role; Marin Sais, Kalem's former serial star, has a big part, Virginia Chester, old Biograph star, and more lately featured by the Mena Film Company, is seen as a broken down variety actress, and Franklyn Farnum, Bluebird star, will play opposite Mary MacLaren. Others of note in the cast include Willis Marks, a veteran character man of stage and screen; Thomas Holding, well known stage star, and Harry Northrup, a celebrated heavy recently featured in a number of Metro productions.

Vera Royer

CAMERAMEN of the Animated Weekly and Current Events staff of the Universal, working under the command of Jack Cohn, have had an adventurous week or more trying to get "shots" at Captain Archie Roosevelt, son of the former President. After trailing the young man, who recently returned from the front suffering from severe battle injuries, in three cities, the cameramen of the New York office finally got what they sought.

They had tried in vain in Newport News, Washington and New York, till Captain Roosevelt finally landed in the hospital in New York for a series of examinations. The cameramen waited outside the hospital. The captain came out the back door and headed down a quiet side street for the subway when the camera sleuths discovered him. They had their "Weekly" car with them and they caught up with him and invited the young man to take a ride. He hopped in, and thereupon pictures were taken.

Other scenes in the Weekly show each of the Allied armies as they are rushing to vital points on the western front for the latest drive.

Show Fashions in Screen Magazine.

Fashion displays revealing the latest creations from Paris form an interesting part of the Universal's Screen Magazine set for release September 27. Zalud, the famous designer, is shown at work on his original method of getting inspirations. The results of his system are some delightful fashions in gowns and dress for the Co-ed.

The Magazine also includes excursions into war preparation, industry and the barrel of comedy one finds out at Coney Island. The scenes from industry show how a ruby grows, under the wizardry of the chemist and electrician. The spectator sees chemicals mixed and treated electrically until they produce a sparkling gem. "Miracles in Mud," produced by Willie Hopkins, the noted sculptor, conclude the magazine.

Hall Plan Shows Quick Results With Big Circuits

THE rapidity with which the Producers' Distributing Corporation has followed the announcement of the Loew Circuit bookings for its twelve special pictures with news of the signing up of other large circuits seems to promise well for the popularity of the plan which resulted from Frank Hall's bold decision to set fixed prices for his pictures and announce them broadcast to the trade. Mr. Hall's move took him into paths hitherto carefully avoided by his fellow motion picture magnates although long and successfully trod by men in purely commercial lines.

His decision was made following the presentation of several large special productions distributed under his personal management and impressing upon him strongly the disadvantage of the usual methods of fixing film rental prices for extra attractions. That the price an exhibitor paid for a picture should depend upon the amount of money a salesman could talk him out of seemed all wrong to Frank Hall. Not only did it place the exhibitor in the uncomfortable position of sparring for an equitable price and imaging that he was paying more than his fellow-exhibitors, but it also made it impossible for the producer and distributor to gage the earning power of their productions in advance.

Mr. Hall came to the conclusion that there was no good reason why a series of prices could not be decided upon for all first class pictures and advertised so that the price juggling bugbear might be stricken from the list of the exhibitor's troubles. He reasoned that the entertainment, artistic and box-office values of his pictures would then be the only concern of the theatre managers and that the success of his offerings would depend upon their drawing power and not upon the ability of salesmen to sign first run bookings at high rental prices. He found that ten, twenty and thirty dollars per day would be recognized immediately as equitable prices and would, at the same time be practicable from the standpoint of production and distribution.

Being the first to advertise fixed prices, Mr. Hall knew that a great deal of comment and considerable criticism was bound to follow his first announcement. He also knew that it was necessary for him to select pictures, the mere announcement of which would remove all doubts as to the honesty of his purpose to supply the very best productions the market affords at the prices advertised. Ordinary productions would not only fail to illustrate the strength of his policy as originally planned, but would make the fixing of standard prices of no moment to the better class of theatres.

Evelyn Nesbit in "Her Mistake" was selected as his first offering, and the full meaning of his ten, twenty and thirty policy seems to have been recognized immediately. The Marcus Loew bookings for all of his pictures were secured at once and he now announces the signing of similar contracts by Moss, Keith, Mastbaum and Ascher Brothers which show a keen interest on the part of prominent exhibitors in New England, New York, New Jersay, Pennsylvania and Illinois. Mr. Hall is authority for the statement that similar interest is evidenced by contracts and inquiries from practically every section of the country.

Independent Booking Market Reflects Activities

THE Arrow Film Corporation report the following additional state right transactions negotiated through their office:

"The Hand of Vengeance," Gaumont serial, to United Film Company, for Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey.

Ten two-reel Warren Kerrigan reissues, to Hodupp-Towne Photoplay Company, for Missouri and Kansas.

"Huns Within Our Gates," to Criterion Film Service for six Southern states and to R. D. Marson Attractions for New England States.

Concentration is also being made by Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, of the Arrow Corporation, on the foreign market, and he will shortly announce the opening of an office in Paris and in Rome, the company already having representatives in London and Rio de Janeiro. Dr. Shallenberger will give personal attention to the foreign market and will supervise the work of domestic sales, which department has been under the managership of Jesse J. Goldburg for the past few months.

"Carmen of the Klondyke," handled throughout the eastern territory by W. J. Pratt for the S. A. Lynch Enterprises, after a run at Gordon's Scollay Square Theatre, Boston, has been booked solid over the entire Gordon and Poli circuits, and is also booked for a first-run showing in every large city in the New England States.

W. H. Productions Company announce the following sales: Australasian Films, Ltd., "Mickey," for Australia and New Zealand; Masterpiece Film Attractions, Philadelphia, series of twenty-four single-reel Fatty Arbuckle comedies for Southern New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania; W. H. Film Company Baltimore, series of twenty-four single-reel Fatty Arbuckle comedies for Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia; Eltabran Film Company, Charlotte, N. C., series of sixteen two-reel Shorty Hamilton Western comedy-dramas for Virginia and North Carolina; Bee Hive Film Distributing Company, Chicago, series of sixteen two-reel Shorty Hamilton Western comedy-dramas for Illinois, Indiana and Southern Wisconsin; Boston Photoplay Company, Boston, Bessie Barriscale in "The Straight Road" for the New England States; F. M. Sanford, Dallas, Tex., series of sixteen two-reel Shorty Hamilton Western comedy-dramas for Texas and Arkansas; R. D. Lewis Film Co., Oklahoma City, Okla., series of twenty-four single-reel Fatty Arbuckle comedies for Oklahoma; J. Pearce & Sons, New Orleans, six two-reel William S. Hart productions for Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana; three William S. Hart super-features ("The Two-Gun Man" in "The Bargain") for Louisiana, ("The Bandit and the Preacher") Louisiana and Mississippi, ("The Hell Hound of Alaska") Louisiana and Mississippi.

Nathan Hirsh, president of the Pioneer Film Corporation, reports that "The Still Alarm" has been disposed of for the following territories: First National Exchange of Denver, Wyoming, Utah, New Mexico; Sydney B. Lust (Super Film Attractions), Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, District of Columbia, North Carolina; Special Features Company, Alabama, Tennessee, South Carolina, Florida; First National Film Exchange, Seattle, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana; Hatch Film Company, Kentucky, Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey; Superfeatures, Canada; Specialty Film Company, Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi.

The Greiver Distributing Co. reports that the Bee Hive Exchange, R. C. Cooper manager, Chicago, Ill., will handle the Ford Educational Weekly in Northern Illinois, Southern Wisconsin, Northern Indiana and Eastern Iowa.

Raver's "Public Defender" Showing Great Activity

THAT HARRY RAVER made no mistake when he picked upon Mayer Goldman's book, "The Public Defender," as suitable material for a motion picture has been evidenced by the splendid list of booking records recorded for the film by exchanges who purchased territory for the production. Backed by pages of newspaper and magazine articles covering the nation-wide Public Defender movement, the Raver pictorial illustration of the theme easily becomes the finest sort of attraction with which to obtain plenty of local press comments, to say nothing of the drawing power of Frank Keenan, Robert Edeson and Alma Hanlon, the star trio of the cast.

Among the representative distributors, who are booking "The Public Defender," and the cities in which they are located, are First National Exhibitors Exchange, Pittsburgh; Boston Photoplay Co., Boston; First National Exhibitors Exchange, San Francisco; Celebrated Players Exchange, Chicago; Associated Theatres, Minneapolis; A. D. Flinton-Yale Photoplay Co., Kansas City; Independent Theatre Supply Co., Montreal, and Modern Feature Photoplay Co., New York.

Maurice Tourneur Actively Producing.

Maurice Tourneur is now completing a production, the title and subject of which are to be later announced. The scenario is the work of Mr. Tourneur himself, the subject having developed in the director's mind during his years of work in the studios. The story is described as at once sensational and striking.

In the cast of this new production are Paul Clerget, a French actor, famed for his Pierrot, Sr., in "Pierrot the Prodigal"; Flore Revalles, singer and dancer of the Bakst Ballet Russe; Diana Allen, a beauty of the Ziegfeld Follies; Ethel Hallor, from the Century roof show; Gloria Goodwin, well known dancer; Lyn Donaldson, Fair Binney, Warner Richmond. Chester Barnett. Escamillo Fernandez (who recently scored as Pierre in "Heart of the Wilds"), and George West.

Meanwhile, Director Tourneur has announced that his forthcoming production, which will be a screen version of the late Jacques Futrelle's popular novel, "My Lady's Garter." This romance first ran in the Saturday Evening Post, where it attracted wide attention, and has since, in book form, ran in many editions.

Film Novelty Makes Headway.

A. E. Siegel, responsible for the latest successful novelty, "Topics of the Day," reports the following territory contracted for by exchanges: Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, Exhibitors Film Exchange, Washington, D. C., controlled by H. M. Crandell; Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey, Mr. Schwabe, of the First National Exhibitors Circuit; Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Marion H. Kohn, Northwestern Consolidated Film Corporation.

According to reports received in the New York office Sol Lesser's exchanges in San Francisco and Los Angeles are now showing in thirty-four theatres in that territory. This is considered very good results owing to the nature of this novelty. "Topics of the Day" can only be shown in the first class theatres changing weekly or not more than twice a week.

Big Houses Book Hayakawa.

A. S. Kirkpatrick, assistant general manager of Mutual, announces that the prerelease bookings of the Hayakawa Special Productions, produced by the Haworth Pictures Corporation and released through Mutual exchanges, now include practically every representative house throughout the country. Many of these theatres will run the entire series for a full week, and the rest have booked the series for two and three days.

The Ziegfeld Theatre, Chicago, located on Michigan avenue, ran "His Birthright," the first Hayakawa picture, for an entire week. The B. S. Moss Circuit has contracted for the entire series for New York City and Brooklyn, and will run each picture three days in each house.

Distributing of Gaumont's Serial.

The Gaumont Company announces that it has sold its 20-reel photo-serial, "The Hand of Vengeance," to the United Film Exchange, Philadelphia, for Eastern Pennsylvania to the 77th Parallel, and Southern New Jersey, including Trenton.

The Celebrated Players Film Corporation, Chicago, which has purchased the rights for the States of Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, and North and South Dakota, have arranged for the Foursquare Exchange, of Minneapolis, to handle the distribution in North and South Dakota, Minnesota, and upper Wisconsin.

"Stolen Orders" Opens New Loew Theatre

"Stolen Orders," William A. Brady's story of diplomatic intrigue interpreted by Kitty Gordon, Carlyle Blackwell, Montagu Love and June Elvidge and others, has been selected as the opening feature attraction for Marcus Loew's new Brooklyn theatre, the Metropolitan. The new Loew house, which has a capacity of 4,000, it is understood, will open the latter part of September. Following its presentation at the Metropolitan, "Stolen Orders" will play the other houses of the Loew circuit.

The Brady picture will shortly be playing the far places and the near, as release dates will shortly be announced for Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia and Florida, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, New Mexico, Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma, and Western Canada, including Manitoba, Saskatchewan, British Columbia and Alberta. "Stolen Orders" will shortly be playing in twenty foreign countries, and probably will be showing simultaneously in as widely separated spots as Paris and Pekin.

Gerard's Famous Photoplay Now Shown World Wide

NOW that Ambassador Gerard's famous photoplay, "My Four Years In Germany," has been sold for Argentine, Chile, Peru, Uraguay and Paraguay, Hiller & Wilk, Inc., selling agents for the foreign rights to this production, state that this unusual feature has been sold in every continent. In the Far East the picture has created a sensation and in Australia it has established new records. South Africa reports that it is as big a hit there as any picture ever shown before. In India the most influential theatre operator has taken over the rights and has promised to exploit "My Four Years in Germany" more lavishly than he has attempted any showings up to the present.

In England at the initial private showing given, the audience was composed of members of Parliament and the leading social figures of Great Britain. To supply the demand, the English owners decided it best to release "My Four Years in Germany" one reel weekly for a period of ten weeks. This novel method has been a great success. In the Scandinavian theatres the picture has served to open the eyes of those neutral peoples to the causes of America's participation in the great war.

The success that has attended the American exploitation is very well known to everyone who keeps abreast of the doings in the motion picture field. On all sides Messrs. Warner and Dintefass have been showered with congratulations because of their daring and foresight in producing Ambassador Gerard's internationally known book. Hiller & Wilk, Inc., state that there are only a few territories throughout the world still available and negotiations are pending for them.

Auto Chase Features Petrova's "Panther Woman"

IN ADDITION to the numerous thrills which abound throughout "The Panther Woman," Madame Petrova's latest picture, a most exciting auto chase will be seen when the picture is released. The story details vividly a ride against time to save the life of the woman in the death house.

In order to secure the proper realism, a platform on wheels was constructed for the use of the photographer Harry B. Harris. With his machine erected on this structure, Harris photographed the exciting incidents of the auto ride, the platform being attached to the side of the fast moving machine. A racing driver of considerable note was engaged to handle the car, with the result that innumerable hair-breath escapes and wild turns are shown throughout the ride.

"The Panther Woman" has been directed by Ralph Ince, and is to be released in the near future via the exchange of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit. This organization has distributed other Petrova features: "Daughter of Destiny," "The Light Within," "The Life Mask" and "Tempered Steel." It was adapted from Gertrude Atherton's novel by Mary Murillo, responsible for many of the leading features of the past year.

Adventure Stories Please Washington

ITS population made up largely of the most highly cultured and educated people, drawn from all sections of the United States and foreign countries, Washington, D. C., claims to stand in a class alone. Its entertainment seekers are composed not only of statesmen and diplomats and their families, but of the many thousand employees of the Government who are necessarily well educated, and whose amusement tastes are therefore refined and discriminating.

In the past some exhibitors who own big "down-town" picture theaters have seemed to fear that serials would not appeal to their patrons, but were more suited to the neighborhood or lower-priced houses. The Gaumont Company has been able to show that this fear is not justified. It has made the claim that its newest photo-serial, "The Hand of Vengeance," will appeal to the majority of the picture-seers in any theatre, large or small, "high-brow," "low-brow" or between.

That its judgment is correct has been clearly proven by the success of "The Hand of Vengeance" in the District of Columbia. Sidney B. Lust, hustler extraordinary, and president of Super-Film Attractions, Inc., which is distributing this photo-serial in that territory, has already broken all serial records by placing it with more than one-third of the theatres in the "Athens of America," and expects to have it running soon in more than half of the theatres catering to his highly discriminating clientele.

There is nothing surprising in this, however. From a canvass of the literary taste of the most prominent residents of Washington, made a few years ago, it developed that a great many of them preferred just such stories as are pictured in "The Hand of Vengeance."

High court officials, senators, representatives, a Speaker of the House of Representatives, and at least three of our presidents have acknowledged that this style of literature appeals to them more than any other. Indeed, one of our ex-presidents, forced to spend some time in a hospital, beguiled his moments of convalescence with just such a he-man story. Which confirms the Gaumont theory that clean, red-blooded stories of love, action and adventure, properly shown, will appeal to the patrons of all theatres.

Comedy Plus Thrills in Cameraman's Life

MAKING motion-picture is not only an essential, but a hazardous occupation. War cinematographers say their work is more dangerous than soldiering—they can't fight back. Now comes Walter Pritchard, star photographer for the Gaumont News and Graphic, who avows that not all of the dangers incident to crank-turning are attendant upon climbing steep mountain cliffs, hanging on to cloud-piercing airplanes, or dodging bullets on the battlefields.

With all the necessary paraphernalia, Walter sallied forth to make some great historical pictures of the thousands of draft-evaders recently rounded up in New York City. He got along all right for awhile, until a solicitous official demanded his registration card, when it developed that the draft board had presented the camera-man with a deuce, the wrong color, or something which did not satisfy the inspecting officer.

After spending many hours in the "bullpen" the mistake was rectified, but not before Pritchard had visions of being shot at sunrise or forced to associate with interned Germans in some Federal calaboose. Pell Mitchell, editor of the News and Graphic, was on hand, and personally photographed the round-up. (P. S.—Pell escaped when the officials inspected the top of his head.)

Benjamin Loweree, another member of the News and Graphic staff, was recently notified that he must leave for Camp Gordon, Ga., on Sept. 5. The night of the 4th, Benny arrayed himself in a brand-new suit of clothes to bid his sweetheart good-bye, but in his excitement he neglected to transfer his papers from his old suit. Just as he was greeting his girl, along came an officer. The rest is too heart-rending to tell.

Budget of New Ebonies.

A budget of new Ebony Comedies, the one-reel offerings with colored players featured, which are released semi-monthly through General Film Company, will be seen during this month and October.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by GEORGE W. BEYNON

The Secret of Synchronized Scores Calls for Intelligent Co-operation

AN ABSOLUTELY essential feature of a musical score arranged for motion pictures is "Synchrony." That is, the exact timing of accompaniment to score. It is something which everyone in the audience senses, although few probably, except musicians, recognize the factor which obviates sudden stops and jarring changes in the musical setting.

Synchrony, however, as applied to motion picture music, has not yet been reduced to its ultimate perfection. It is at present comparative, depending largely upon the intelligence of the orchestra leader. A correct knowledge of tempo, the completeness of the film as originally set to music, the steadiness of projection and the care of the operator are all contributing factors.

Tempo, is, of course, comparative. Many leaders have their own individual conception of andante, allegro, moderato, etc. But metronome marks are of the utmost importance and should be relied upon wherever quoted.

If the film has been cut, certain scenes will be shorter than the music assigned. This is a frequent occurrence, as the producing companies know to their sorrow. In different states, certain portions of film are not allowed to be shown because of censorship. These portions vary according to the varied minds of the censors. Thus the timing of musical setting with scene may be absolutely perfect in Pennsylvania and entirely at odds in Ohio. Also, there have been operators so enamored of certain scenes from a film that these portions were found to be among the missing when the film reached its next exhibitor.

Another problem in connection with synchrony is purely a mechanical one. The change of the "load" in the electrical current supplied to the projection machines will vary the speed of projection and upset the synchrony of the music. Should the operator, while shifting reels, carelessly thread twenty feet of action through, the music will be that much over. Synchrony is usually based on a schedule projection of 1,000 feet in fifteen minutes. Again we find that projection is comparative and the judgment of the operator is called into play. A difference of one minute per one thousand feet for five reels will tend to seriously disturb the unity of setting and scene.

Furthermore, in synchronizing the original score in the operating room, there is usually a double projection machine and consequently no time is lost between reels. In showing pictures, however, where there is only one machine available, there is necessarily a loss of several minutes consumed by the changing of the film which tends to destroy synchrony unless the leader is watchful.

With a live leader at the head of the orchestra, who takes an intelligent interest in his work, these difficulties can be overcome; but any man who will run through the score, regardless of consequences, will soon find that the scenes on the screen do not coincide with the music assigned in the score. Admittedly, the synchronizing, or exact timing of music and picture, has not yet reached a state of perfection. The method of achieving perfect synchrony may still be open to improvement, but the method now employed will yield wonderful results if faithfully followed.

There are various methods of arranging scores, largely dependent upon the ability and ingenuity of the arranger. Some scores have certain numbers of a definite length properly cued at their commencement. If the selection be long, it makes the work of the musical director more difficult for the first few performances, as his unfamiliarity with the pictures gives him no idea of the tempo necessary to perfect fitting. Other scores use a block system by frequently cueing minor titles or descriptions at points where they will coincide with the music. This method is excellent, for it gives the leader a chance to follow every foot of the film with his eye and bring the music along concurrently. Yet this "cueing" every few bars may be carried to extremes when it forces the musician to read the entire story from his score.

Short numbers are more easily brought to end with the finish of the scene and if long numbers be used, they should be "blocked" by minor cues at least every thirty-two measures.

The "first-run theatres," as a rule, find little difficulty in giving a smooth performance. The film has not been cut and the selected numbers are exactly the same length for each scene. These numbers are in key sequence (A key followed by its relative) so that if a change is forced prematurely it is little noticed. But the difficulties, mechanical and otherwise, which are encountered in the synchronizing of musical settings to motion pictures are problems which are bound to crop up even in the best equipped theatres. The remedy or, in other words, the real "secret of synchrony" is co-operation. Success will follow the efforts of the leader who uses his head, sees that the operator has the basis of synchrony and follows it, and "pulls in" his orchestra as the change of scene and musical setting approaches.

Fair Bill Offered at the Rivoli.

Selections from Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" opened the program at the Rivoli for the week commencing August 25. The Rivoli Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Rappe conducting, played this favorite overture with their usual good sense of rhythm and excellent accentuation.

The program informed us that "Madame Butterfly," founded on Belasco's play, was produced in Milan, February 17, 1904. It was hissed off the stage at the first performance—no one knows why, as Puccini was such a favorite. But several months later it was sung at Brescia, and later in London. It began to make good and has become perhaps the most popular opera of this century.

One of the outstanding numbers of the program was a delightful wonder-piece, "Come Watch With Me the Passing Night." Aside from its being a masterpiece in photograhic art, Mr. Van Scoy should be congratulated on the thoughtful compiling of the titles. The musicl setting to this number was ideal, the synchrony perfect.

The "Gavotte" from Massenet's "Manon" was interpreted by Mlle. Madeline D'Espinoy, soprano. The audience seemed to enjoy it. They applauded.

The musical setting to the Pictorial was very inspiring. The hand-clapping was reinforced by cheering from the orchestra. However, we did not think the audience needed the "Claque."

Carlo Mejia, tenor in-fact, we would call it lyricissimo tenor, gave for the audience's approval, "When First the Heavenly Grace," from "La Juive," by Jacques Halevy. He was wise in not choosing a well-known aria, as he might have suffered from comparison. Yet the audience applauded.

Welcome to the feature! It was Cecil B. DeMille's production, "Till I Come Back to You." It's musical setting was a bit monotonous, which is unusual at the Rivoli. While it was always "under the picture," as it should have been, there were times when it did not support adequately.

Professor Swinnen at the organ finished the program with a march by Francois Fetis. At least the program said so. Professor Swinnen's organ numbers usually receive marked attention, although coming in a bad part of the program. But at this performance it appeared to have been played more as a filler, as no lights were shown to show that he was really reading score.

"The Historic Fourth of July in Paris."

During the run of the Red Cross film, "The Historic Fourth of July in Paris," at Poli's Theatre in Wilkes Barre, a very effective musical setting was given the picture by J. J. Garvin, managing director of the theatre. This is probably the first elaborate musical program to be used for a single reel subject in any motion picture presentation outside of New York. Mr. Galvin's program was as follows:

"The Star Spangled Banner," "Pack Up Your Troubles in Your Old Kit Bag," "Like Washington Crossed the Delaware," "Onward Christian Soldiers," "Good Night, Germany," "Keep the Home Fires Burning," and "Rally Round The Flag."

"Old Folks at Home" Typically American

Closely associated in our hearts and minds with "Home, Sweet Home," but distinctively more American in its atmosphere, is the subject of this sketch.

Stephen Collins Foster, composer of a great number of songs which have retained their popularity to the present time, was born on July 4, 1826, in the city of Pittsburgh, during the celebration of fifty years of American Independence.

His musical talent asserted itself at an age when children are usually considered infants. When he was only two years old he would place his sister's guitar on the floor and pick out harmonies. At eight he taught himself the flute and a bit later the piano..

One day in 1851 Foster rushed into his brother's office and said: "I have a new song and need the name of some Southern river of two syllables to use in it." They took down an atlas and ran through the pages until they came to a little river in Florida. The name suited. Thus "Way Down Upon the Suwanee Riber" became a classic.

Cristie, the famous minstrel, bought the right to sing the song before it was published. He also stipulated that one edition at least should bear his name as author and composer.

"Old Folks at Home" has been called the "song of the homesick." Its potency to calm the "Savage Breast" is illustrated in the following anecdote of the Civil War: One of the northern regiments were so discouraged over inactivity and slow pay that they were on the verge of mutiny. Indeed, several of them did break through the lines, and returned again late at night and intoxicated. They refused to obey orders. When even the colonel failed to establish discipline the bandmaster called his men together and told them to play. Soon the strains of "Old Folks at Home" seeped through to the inner consciousness of the half-crazed, despairing soldiers. The melody touched their hearts and the chastened "Boys in Blue" wept themselves to sleep.

Authorities seem agreed that the style of Foster is more distinctive than that of any other American composer. The melody of his songs is simple and the words are always his own. He gave to the world one hundred and seventy-five songs in all. "Old Black Joe," "Massa's in De Cold, Cold Ground" (said to be inspired by his grief over the death of his father), "Old Dog Tray," "My Old Kentucky Home" and "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming" are his best loved songs. The latter is his most ambitious composition and his own favorite.

So much for the poet and musician! What of the man? Stephen Collins Foster was gentle and kind, adoring his family. But he was also proud and sensitive, resenting the least slight. A woman of his acquaintance once said to a friend: "Tell Stephen to come to my party and to be sure to bring his flute." Foster sent his flute but absented himself. He was an indefatigible worker. Indeed, it was not at all out of the ordinary for him to write a song in the morning, dispose of it in the afternoon and spend the proceeds before bedtime.

When he was only thirty-eight, at the age when most men have not reached the zenith of their careers, his life was snuffed out. He died suddenly at Bellevue Hospital, in New York City. His identity was not known and his body was sent to the morgue. Friends traced it and sent the body back to Pittsburgh to rest where the composer was born. The Shakespearian axiom was reversed in Foster's case, for his strength lives forever and only his weaknesses were interred with his bones.

His passing reminds one in its grim warning of that of one other great American genius, Edgar Allan Poe. Both were aristocrats of Southern antecedents; both spoke in an idiom peculiarly American; each bequeathed to his country poetry that is practically immortal, and neither ever learned to control himself.

We hear so much these days of the idiocyncracies of geniuses. We applaud their achievements and condone their mistakes. But we are overjoyed when we read of the splendid men who have given of their best to the world and have taken nothing beautiful away from it.

"We'll Wallop the Kaiser" Makes Appeal

Another evidence of the entente cordiale existing between those of French and American blood is found in the latest song to make its appearance in New York City, entitled "We'll Wallop the Kaiser," the words being by Mrs. Woodallen Chapman, an American, and the music by Madame Elsa Gregori, a French composer, whose work is even better known upon the continent than in our own land.

The author of the words was, through her ordinary occupation, brought into frequent contact with the boys in the training camps. As a consequence she was given many interesting glimpses of their point of view and something of a knowledge of their characteristic expressions.

The phrase "We'll Wallop the Kaiser" came often to her ears and finally became a sort of refrain that sang itself over and over in her mind. Other phrases began to cluster themselves about it, until finally they seemed to call for some sort of formal expression.

The various experiences that came to her and the phraseology that so appealed to her were related to the composer, who finally went to the piano one day saying, "These words of the boys should be put into song—the kind of song that the boys will love to sing. The music should be bright, catchy, stirring—something like this"—and she played the opening strains of the present well-known song.

Inspired by the music the American woman then took up the task of weaving into poetical form the words so often on the lips of the doughboy himself.

Thus with mutual criticism and encouragement the song was evolved, with the thought always in mind of writing something which the soldier boy himself would enjoy singing and which would serve to raise his spirits when on a long, tiresome hike.

That their aim was accomplished has been proven by the reception given the song by the boys. Its sentiment appeals to them:

"Come boys, help wallop the Kaiser,
Beat him till he's sore;
He says that we're lazy;
We're cowards, we're crazy—
Just watch us make him roar."

It has the right sort of ring to it, for it sounds like business, like sticking at it until the job is done:

"Yes, boys, we'll wallop the Kaiser,
We're bound to win the war.
We'll ram him, we'll jam him,
Eternally slam him—
Then damn him and pound him some more."

Camps in many different parts of the country are being provided with orchestra and band parts and also with slides containing the words, so that all the boys may enjoy the pleasure of singing it in unison.

The cover—a color cartoon by John B. Gruelle—showing the Kaiser's countenance badly damaged by the fists of the Allies, has also been reproduced in colors for the screen, and always brings a roar of applause.

The song has proved itself an inspiring addition to the music of the day and the author and composer may congratulate themselves upon having done a very practical "bit" toward winning the war, for their production cannot fail to increase, in every individual who hears it, the sort of patriotic determination essential to ultimate victory.

Thrown on the screen in a picture theater, it never fails to bring enthusiastic applause, and the air is so easy to follow that audiences soon sing it with great gusto.

New Music Offered at Bargain Prices.

Chappell & Co., realizing that the field of picture playing offers a splendid medium for distribution, and fully aware of the vital importance of this comparatively new vocation, have placed before our readers a proposition that should appeal to every exhibitor, his pianist, organist and musical director. In another column you will find advertised twenty orchestral numbers ranging from waltzes to entr'acte numbers, for the ridiculously low price of ten cents each, when ordered together.

Everywhere has been heard the cry for "New Music." Managers continually "kick" about constant repetition. Patrons want up-to-the-minute stuff. This galaxy of musical numbers should certainly be welcomed by every hard pressed, worried musician in the country.

"Evensong," "Sunbeams" and "Mother o' Mine" make splendid themes. They are varied in treatment and adaptable to almost any picture. Then you will note that popular Irish song, "Mavourneen Roamin'," sung with such success by Lambert Murphy. It breathes the scent of the Emerald Isle and is prettily arranged for orchestral combinations. "Waiting" is timely and homey, a true prediction of the reward of mothers after the war. Other patriotic numbers are "Allies March to Freedom" and "Laddie in Khaki." "Amaryllis Waltz" is found suggested on many cue sheets and every leader needs it.

Nothing like this has been offered before and it behooves the picture player to take advantage of it at once.

"For Husbands Only" Draws Many Women.

Will the exhibitor never regard his music seriously? He must know that the public demands a form of entertainment in connection with moving pictures that is educational and musical. He surely has learned from the failure of others that the best pictures in the world, the finest advertising stunts and lobby displays, will not hold his patronage if his music is neglected.

The music at the Broadway for the week commencing September 1 could only be classed under the one heading—careless. A grand opera overture—"Barber of Seville"—was programed, but a comic opera selection was played. The organist seemed in a hurry to finish his selection, and although it was one of his own composing, he gave the impression that he hated it.

The cat-calls during the comedy cheapened the performance, detracted from the picture because of their frequency and became an unmitigated nuisance.

The Trio—"Largo"—from Zerxes by Handel was great. The instruments blended well and the tonal balance was evenly distributed. It was real chamber music of the highest order and sparkled—a gem in the crown of music.

"For Husbands Only" was featured as the cinema attraction, but by the number of ladies present one could see that the injunction had not been followed. The music fitted the picture fairly well, but there was no synchrony nor attention paid to relative keys. This spoilt it for us. Nevertheless the people enjoyed the picture and some praised the music.

James C. Bradford, the musical director at the Broadway, is a lovable chap and a fine musician. His experience in picture playing dates back to the early days of the industry and on occasion he has risen to enviable heights in picture scoring. "Jimmie" is well liked by his "boys" and gets lots of work out of his orchestra. With so much ability and loyalty upon which to depend, it seems a shame that a little carelessness should creep into the work of so popular a conductor.

Klaw & Erlanger Road Shows Successful.

"Some Night," Joseph Klaw's new production of Harry Delf's comedy with music, moved last week from the Jersey coast to Boston, where it was splendidly received and scored a quick triumph. Several of the lively song numbers were encored five or six times; notably, "With The Boy I Love," "Alone in a Great Big World," "Something That Money Can't Buy," and "Send Me a Real Girl." The same day, "The Rainbow Girl" opened at the Illinois Theatre in Chicago. This was the company which presented this successful musical piece by Rennold Wolf & Louis A. Hirsch at the New Amsterdam and Gaiety theatres in New York this spring and summer. The music for both "The Rainbow Girl" and "Some Night" is published by Witmark & Sons.

Two Popular Irish Songs Featured.

Two of the biggest favorites among th popular Irish songs published by M. Wi mark & Sons, are being featured by Jo Morris & Winn Shaw, who are just star ing a tour of the Pantages houses ot west. These numbers are "My Irish Son of Songs," already made famous by Chaun cey Olcott in "Once Upon a Time," an "'Twas Only an Irishman's Dream," whic is as popular as ever.

Leaders' Service Bureau.

Questions Asked—Suggestions Offered.

OWING to the draft we are minus a piano player and cannot get one. We have been using a combination consisting of organ, violin, cello and piano. Our organist has been handling the piano and the orchestra has seemed weak without the organ. In your judgment, would you consider it effective or proper to leave out the piano entirely?

A. You have not said whether your organ was a Wurlitzer, Seeburg, Photoplayer or Austin. In any case we believe that you could obtain excellent results in the Feature and probably the scenic, but if you have a church organ we would advise the use of the piano in the Comedy and Pictorial Review. If you are fortunate in possessing one of the others, your entire show could be handled by it and the orchestra.

Q. Why do I continue to have difficulty in obtaining cue sheets? If this service is for us, as you have intimated in your articles, why are the exchanges always out of them?

A. The fault very probably lies with the exchange in their unwillingness to be inconvenienced in the matter of cue sheets. We would advise you to write direct to the producer, and address your letter to their Publicity Department. It will receive instant consideration.

Q. Who is the greatest conductor in the picture industry today?

A. Unfortunately we haven't heard all of them, and our opinion would hardly prove the fact. We are writing you under separate cover, giving you the names of those conductors who are generally regarded as leaders in their profession.

Q. How can I learn of positions open for a musician?

A. Under the heading of classified advertisements in the various trade journals, you will probably find what you want. Look in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD first.

Q. Would it be possible to get results from a ladies' orchestra composed entirely of strings, woodwind and piano?

A. We believe that excellent results can always be obtained from such a combination whether of male or female composition. The larger number the greater the results.

Q. I shall be greatly obliged if you will give me the following information, as I see in your Service Bureau that you answer many questions in regard to music. When was the opera "Salome" first performed in New York City? Who took the role of Salome? How long did the opera run? Thanking you in advance.

A. "Salome" was first produced at the Metropolitan Opera House in 1907, the title role being sung by Fremstad. Some of the women of New York were so shocked that a petition for its withdrawal was circulated, headed, it is said, by Anne Morgan, and sent to the proper authorities, with the result that the danger to New York morals was "scotched but not killed." In the following autumn, Oscar Hammerstein produced the work at his opera house, with Mary Garden as the prima donna, and New York seems to have called for other performances since that time, without any further clamor from society.

Q. Have there been any announcements yet of the operas to be produced next season by the Chicago and Metropolitan opera companies? If so, can you give me a list of them? Will "Le Coq d'Or" be repeated this season?

A. Neither the Chicago nor the Metropolitan companies have as yet announced in full their repertoire plans for the next year. However, Cleofonte Campanini, general director of the Chicago Opera Association, named the revivals which he will undertake next season. They are Donizetti's "Linda di Chamounix," Ricci's "Crispino e la Comare," Rossini's "William Tell," Puccini's "Tosca" with Mary Garden, Verdi's "Otello" and "Falstaff," Bellini's "Norma," Sant-Saens' "Samson et Dalila," and Mozart's "Don Giovanni" with an all-star cast. "Le Coq d'Or," the principal success of the last Metropolitan season, will undoubtedly be given the coming season.

Q. I would like to know the name or names of teachers of the piano who give rather advanced lessons and who hold recitals now and then for the benefit of their pupils. Like most musical people, I think I have the ability and would like to prepare for concert playing. What is the average cost per lesson for such instruction? I am a young girl nineteen years old, working, and will have to pay for it out of my allowance each week.

A. Many of the leading pianists, who appear before the public, receive pupils in advanced work during their days of leisure between engagements. As you say you are working, do you think it will be possible for you to take lessons during the day? Naturally in placing yourself under an artist you would be obliged to make the hours of lessons suit the leisure of the teacher. Have you considered studying at one of the large music schools?

The prices vary. The lowest charge any big teacher makes is $10 per lesson, and the really famous pianists who occasionally teach charge much more. At a music school you could undoubtedly find competent instruction for less.

Is there not some large music school in your own city where you could study in the evening, which would seem to be the best possible time for a worker?

EXHIBITORS OBSERVE LIGHTLESS ORDER

Majority of Managers in Affected Area of California Heed Ruling to Conserve Power

By T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO—While most exhibitors in Northern and Central California are strictly obeying the orders of the Power Administrator in regard to the conservation of electrical energy, and are keeping their signs dark, except on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays there have been a few who have sought to evade the provisions of the ruling. The authorities have not been disposed to listen to excuses on the part of those who have been arrested after due warning for violations of these orders, and one exhibitor, who conducts a house on Fillmore street, has languished for ten days in jail as a result of his unwillingness to co-operate in the saving of power.

Farnum Opens Liberty Loan Campaign.

The opening gun in the campaign for the Fourth Liberty Loan in this city was fired at the Rialto Theatre this week when William Farnum appeared on the stage and made a short talk. A short propaganda film made by this screen star at the special request of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo was also shown and was impressively received. The feature offering on the program was also a Farnum film, "Riders of the Purple Sage."

Film Women to Tender Dance.

An entertainment and dance is to be tendered to enlisted soldiers and sailors at Photoplayer Hall on the evening of September 21 by the Moving Picture Auxiliary of the Stage Women's War Relief. This is the beginning of a series of entertainments to be given throughout the duration of the war.

Triangle Official Inspects Exchanges.

R. W. Lynch, vice-president of the Triangle Distributing Corporation, was a recent visitor here and made a careful inspection of the new exchange at 86 Golden Gate avenue, which he pronounced to be one of the best arranged he had ever seen. He has returned his trip of inspection along the Coast, but is expected here again at an early date.

Supplies in Big Demand.

Exhibitors are apparently realizing that supplies are becoming scarce, with higher prices in prospect, since many are anticipating their needs much more fully than formerly. G. A. Metcalfe comments on the demand for carbons and states that he is bringing two full cars of Speer carbons to the Coast this year, instead of one, as last year. He is also doing a big lobby display business and recently furnished a complete outfit to W. R. Spalding, of Visalia, Cal.

Theatres Change Hands.

In spite of unsettled conditions many moving picture theatres are changing hands, among the recent sales made through the United Theater Exchange being the following: A one-half interest in the Empire and Unique Theatres at Napa, Cal., from E. Rosenthal to L. Kaliski; the Haussler Theatre on Fillmore street, near Sutter, San Francisco, from H. Haussler to G. H. Blowers, the New Sixteenth Street Theatre, San Francisco, from L. Levin to C. W. Smith; the People's Theatre, Twenty-first and Mission streets, San Francisco, from J. A. Bradley to C. R. Guttle, and the Colonial Theatre, 554 Haight street, San Francisco, from Grover George and Howard Green to Otto Liedicit.

New Manager for Select.

H. H. Hicks, who has been in charge of the local branch of the Select Pictures Corporation, is to be transferred shortly to the Seattle office, and his place here will be filled by H. L. Knappen, for some time manager of the Denver branch of this concern. Mr. Knappen is no stranger here, having been in charge of the local office of the International Film Service until its business was taken over by Pathe.

New Projection Room Proves Popular.

Walter Freddy, 187 Golden Gate avenue, has installed a projection room for the trade in connection with his machine and supply establishment and wide use of this is being made by film exchange managers on Film Row. A Freddy non-carbon outfit is used with Power's machines.

Chamberlain Back from Texas.

George Chamberlain, who conducted the Independent Film Exchange in this city for several years, has returned from a trip to San Antonio, Tex., where an exchange has been opened under this name with Vivian Preston in charge.

Theaters Improve Orchestras.

Many changes are being made in the orchestras of the large moving picture theatres in preparation for the fall and winter season, and several houses that have never before used orchestras have added this class of music. Herman Heller, formerly of the Palace Hotel orchestra, will take charge of the orchestra at the California Theatre, and Ralph Wetmore, now of the Alhambra Theatre, will direct the Strand musicians, succeeding Pietro Marino, who is going on the Orpheum Circuit with a musical act. J. Lawrence, formerly of the States Restaurant, will direct the Rialto Theatre orchestra, which has been augmented of late by several new men. An orchestra has been added at the New Fillmore Theatre, and this will be in charge of Leon Strachan. A change in organists has been made here and the big instrument is being presided over by Lyle C. True.

Serving the Flag.

Charles Perryman, formerly cameraman for the Duhem Motion Picture Manufacturing Company, has graduated from a special class at Columbia University and is now an aerial cinematographer in service at a large aviation camp. Harry Davis, son of Sam Davis, of Davis Brothers, and well known on Film Row, has arrived on French soil.

W. W. Vaughan, formerly publicity man for the Famous Players-Lasky Company, and later salesman for this concern, has enlisted in the army and will train at Camp Pike, Ark. Fellow employees presented him with a handsome watch on his departure.

All Exhibitors Want War Films.

The U. S. Government official war films being distributed by the Film Division of the State Council of Defense continue to be in great demand and are being booked by even the smallest houses. The Rialto Theatre has booked the second big feature, "America's Answer," for two weeks, with an option to extend the engagement. The California, Imperial and Orpheum Theatres are showing the official war reviews simultaneously, and many inquiries are being made for the first United States industrial film, a "Bridge of Ships."

House Records Broken.

All records for attendance at the California Theatre were broken recently by the week's engagement of "The Great Love," Griffith's second picture of the great war. So wonderful was the showing that was made that this production has been booked for the Portola Theatre for the week of September 8, the first time that an attraction has been used by both houses.

Ackermann & Harris Activities.

Irving C. Ackerman, of Ackerman & Harris, owners of the Hippodrome Circuit, has returned from a tour of the houses in the Northwest, where he found business to be excellent.

The Macdonough Theatre at Oakland will be opened with Hippodrome vaudeville and moving pictures on September 8. Bids for the remodeling of this house show figures far in excess of the sum set aside for the work and new plans are being prepared.

The house at Fresno, Cal., will reopen on September 15, having been closed for the summer.

San Francisco Briefs.

Sam Edwards, formerly in charge of the Berkeley T. & D., is now filling a road position with the Turner & Dahnken Circuit.

Claude Jensen, of Jensen & Von Herberg, Seattle, Wash., was a recent visitor.

Miss Gertrude Edwards, a charming member of the office force of the Western Triangle Distributing Corporation, was married recently to Sergeant Ernest Kuckein, of the aviation corps.

Breezy News from Michigan.

Ann Arbor.—A. J. Moeller, formerly an exhibitor in Howell, and former manager of the Franklin Theatre in Saginaw, has taken charge of the Majestic Theatre for the Butterfield circuit.

Detroit.—Manager A. J. Reed of the George Kleine Exchange reports that he has three prints on "Triple Trouble" booked solid for the next two months.

Detroit.—W. F. Schuttenheim has taken over the house management and booking of the Stratford Theatre, Dix and Ferdinand.

Detroit.—O. R. Becker, who owns the property, has taken over the active management of the Hippodrome Theatre.

Detroit.—Joe Horwitz, of the Foursquare Exchange, has disposed of his interest in the Cleveland branch to Joe Deiner and B. M. Sturn.

Detroit.—R. H. Ramsey, formerly salesman for the General and recently manager of the Blackstone Theatre, has been appointed traveling representative for the Detroit office of Paramount-Artcraft. He will cover Northern Ohio and Northern Indiana.

Louisville Trade Letter

By Ohio Valley News Service, 1404 Starks Building, Louisville, Ky.

Steurle Held Up By a "Drunk."

JOSEPH STEURLE, manager of the East Broadway Theatre, and an officer of the Broadway Amusement Enterprises, had an interesting experience on the first gasolineless Sunday in Louisville, while using a motorcar to make the rounds of the houses operated by the company. When passing Seventh and Shipp streets he was held up by a heavily armed "drunk," who contested his right to operate an auto on Sunday, and who held him under drawn revolver under a death penalty for moving. Finally Steurle convinced the man that he had a right to operate his machine on Sunday, and was allowed to proceed.

The cause of the disturbance was Michael Blidariu, a Pole, 35 years of age, who, being unable to operate his machine, decided to investigate the stock at the bar of his saloon, which was closed for the day. After absorbing enough liquid joy to drown his sorrows, he secured a 45 calibre revolver, and went out to preserve law and order according to his own interpretation. For more than an hour he stood guard at the corner, taking license numbers, names and addresses. Finally a riot call was sent in, and Blidariu was arrested on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

Levy Purchases More State Rights Films.

Col. Fred Levy, president of the Big Features Rights Corporation, who is also a large retail clothier of Louisville, recently went to New York, where he attended a meeting of the National Clothiers' Association, of which he became first vice-president, having formerly been second vice-president. Mr. Levy is still in the East, where he is devoting a considerable amount of time to purchasing feature pictures for the local company. Among recent purchases which he has reported were four Arrow Film Corporation pictures featuring Harold Lockwood and May Allison; Lawrence Reid in "The Woman's Law," Frank Miles, on "My Friend's Husband," state rights having been secured on the six pictures for Kentucky and Tennessee. The company has also secured the First National's new production, "Italy's Flaming Front."

Wurlitzer Company Files Suit.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company has filed suit against the Sturdo Amusement Company, of Louisville, for $2,760 and the enforcement of a lien on a musical instrument to satisfy a claim.

Lexington Sunday Battle Eases Up.

The fight between the churchmen and the moving picture exhibitors' relative to Sunday closing in Lexington has eased up somewhat for the present. However, it is expected that the churchmen will make a new move within a few days, but so far the courts have been decidedly with the picture houses, as has also been public opinion.

Film Burns in the Liberty Theatre.

A burning film at the Liberty Theatre, Mt. Sterling, Ky., communicated to the building and caused some alarm. However, the fire was headed with small loss, and the people were gotten out without a panic.

Camp Taylor to Get Another Theatre.

R. R. Smith, director general of all Liberty Theatres at Federal cantonments, has announced that an additional Liberty Theatre will be erected at Camp Taylor, Louisville, at a cost of about $30,000, this decision following a recent visit to the camp. The new theatre will have a seating capacity of about 1,300, and will face the street car line at the opposite side of the camp from the present one. Plans are also being made for similar theatres at Camp Knox, the new camp now building at Stithton, Ky., and extending over to West Point, Ky.

CINCINNATI THEATRES RAISE PRICES

Family and Strand, First-Run Downtown Houses, Increase Admissions to Fifteen Cents, Plus War Tax

By Kenneth C. Crain, 307 First National Bank, Cincinnati, Ohio.

BEGINNING with the week of September 1 several leading downtown houses in Cincinnati eliminated the ten-cent charge and revised prices upward, as it has been predicted they would do. The change was most prominently in the public eye at the Family and the Strand, two of Manager I. Libson's houses, which are in the heart of the downtown district and have for several years been giving the public first-run pictures of the highest type for ten cents. These houses now charge fifteen cents, plus the war tax, and the Strand, in addition to making this change, inaugurated its new policy of running attractions a full week instead of changing programs twice weekly. The management gave its patrons ample notice of the change by announcements on the screens of the two houses for a week or so preceding the first of the month. The Walnut, which has for some time been somewhat unsettled as to admission charges, will remain on the fifteen cent basis, with the other two houses, with a rise very probable in the near future. As the Gifts has from the start charged fifteen cents, including the war tax, this leaves only the Fifth street theatres sticking to the ten cent charge.

Pieture Season Closes in Blaze of Glory.

The Grand, Cincinnati, closed its moving picture season in a blaze of glory with a patriotic feature which fittingly terminated the series of strongly American films which have been seen at the theatre during the summer. The second official army film, "America's Answer," was the picture shown, and the magnificent performances of "Pershing's Crusaders" during the past two months inevitably lent special interest to "America's Answer."

Lyric Closes with Howe's Marine Pieture.

The second week of the Lyman H. Howe pictures at the Lyric Theatre, Cincinnati, closing the moving picture season and opening the regular season, featured the work of the Marine Corps' aviators, in a thrilling series entitled "Up in the Air with the Marines." Many people did not know before seeing this record of hair-raising air performances by this branch of the Marine organization that the "Devil Dogs" had aviators.

Kleine Exchange Moves to Bigger Offices.

Manager J. F. Brett, of the George Kleine Exchange, Cincinnati, had an unpleasant job thrust upon him, largely through his own fault. His energy in letting exhibitors know the pulling power of Perfection releases resulted in such active business that his exchange outgrew its quarters, and consequently had to move; and moving is no joke. The new address of the Kleine exchange is at 112-114 E. Sixth street, where it has the entire second floor, giving ample room for all activities, including a big reception room for exhibtors and other visitors. Manager Brett also announces that F. H. Schotenburg, formerly shipping clerk at the local Paramount office, has joined the organization, succeeding C. J. Callahan, promoted to Cincinnati city salesman.

Cleveland News Letter

By M. A. Malaney, 607 Belmont Building, Cleveland, Ohio.

Operators Strike Averted.

THE threatened strike of moving picture machine operators in Cleveland has been averted for the present by the action of both sides to submit the matter to Government arbitration.

The exhibitors and operators each have chosen a representative for the arbitration board, but could not agree on the third man, so the matter was put up to the United States judge, who will select the third man.

Strangely enough this crisis has resulted in all of the downtown and first-run theatres joining the Exhibitors' League.

The operators now receive 62½ cents per hour, and are asking for 80 cents per hour.

Ohio First National to Hold Meeting.

The Ohio First National Exhibitors' Circuit will hold a convention in Cleveland, September 17 and 18. Plans for the event are now being worked out by a committee of local members of the circuit who will arrange a program of social and amusement events. The new Chaplin picture, "Shoulder Arms," will be either screened or released that week.

Woleott Sells Theatre Interests.

J. V. Wolcott, owner of the Princess Theatre, Cleveland, and part owner of other theatres, has sold out his interests in the Milo Theatre, Cleveland, and the Geneva Theatre, Geneva, Ohio, to his partner, S. W. Manheim.

Rosenthal Goes to the Argus Company.

Syd Rosenthal, well known film salesman, has resigned from the Standard Film Service Company, Cleveland, and joined the Argus Company, which concern makes the Plain Dealer Screen Magazine and the products of the Educational Films Corporation, including scenics, cartoons, and nature studies.

Stork Theatre Opened.

The new Stork Theatre, at Lorain avenue and West 85th street, Cleveland, was opened August 31, to an unusually good business.

The house has been leased by Howard Reif, who also owns the Ridge Theatre, nearby.

The Stork has 1,000 seats and has been constructed most substantially, and from an artistic standpoint it is beautiful. A $6,000 pipe organ furnishes the music.

Griffith Pieture Closes Four Weeks' Run.

"Hearts of the World" has just closed a very successful four weeks' engagement at the Colonial Theatre, Cleveland, and if the house had available time, it could have stayed four more weeks. The house was sold out completely for every evening performance and had very good attendance at the matinees. Manager Fred Meek announced that the show would play several other Ohio cities at once, including Columbus and Sandusky.

Tessier Leaves for Camp.

Paul Tessier, roadman with the First National Circuit, Cleveland, received a notice last week from his home town, New Orleans, to report for induction into the national army.

Cleveland Theatre Notes.

The Savoy Theatre has reopened after several weeks of darkness. A new pipe organ has been installed and the house was redecorated.

The Sun Theatre with its new addition is certainly doing a fine business for a Cleveland neighborhood house. There are almost 1,000 seats now.

The National Theatre on Clark avenue has just been redecorated.

After being closed two weeks, the Manhattan Theatre has been reopened. A new lighting system has been installed and a marquis added to the entrance. Manager Davis is now arranging his season bookings.

H. C. Padfield has bought the Lincoln Theatre, Mr. Padfield is the owner of the Glen Theatre, too.

A. Kleinsmith has taken over the management of the Parkview Theatre.

The Madison Theatre has just undergone many improvements, including complete redecorating.

MORE RELEASES FOR PAREX EXCHANGES

Branch at Minneapolis Announces New Productions Acquired by Sherry—Exhibitors Pleased by News

By William Edward Mulligan, Minneapolis Journal, Minneapolis, Minn.

THE announcement of Manager Nelson of the Minneapolis Parex exchange that William L. Sherry has acquired several new productions for distribution through Parex exchanges was received with great interest in Northwest film circles because of the recent successes of the Sherry Service. According to the announcement, the Sherry Service will distribute eight G. M. Anderson (Broncho Billy) pictures and one two-reel special. The first release on the new series will be "Red Blood and Yellow," available at Parex exchanges September 22. The second release, "The Son of a Gun," will be issued October 20. Mr. Sherry has also contracted with Frederick Burlingham, noted Alps climber and traveler, for distribution of the Burlingham single-reel travel and scenic pictures. These pictures have been successfully screened for a number of years abroad, and Manager Nelson is confident that they will take in the northwest. Manager Charles Branham of the Minneapolis Strand liked the Sherry series so well that he booked them all for first-run showings in Minneapolis. Ed Hinz, manager of the Coxy Theatre of Minneapolis, says that "The Street of Seven Stars" pleased his audience more than any other picture he has shown at his house for many weeks.

Supreme Pictures Making Good.

"Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman," featuring John Barrymore, and "Redemption" are having a wonderful success in the Northwest, according to Manager Frank W. Thayer of the Minneapolis exchange of Supreme Feature Film Company. Both of these pictures are comparatively new in this territory, although they have been playing the East for about a year. "Nine-Tenths of the Law," starring Mitchell Lewis, will be here during the first week of September. The Minneapolis Supreme Fenture exchange has done well in handling the U. S. Exhibitors' program in this territory.

Vitagraph Makes Deal.

E. S. Holmes, manager of the Minneapolis Vitagraph exchange, recently closed a contract with the Ruben & Finkelstein interests of Minneapolis and St. Paul providing for the showing of the New Star series of Blue Ribbon features in St. Paul one every week. The R. & F. concern also arranged with Mr. Holmes to secure the new two-reel Big V Comedies for first, second and third runs in Minneapolis and first run in St. Paul.

Omaha Theatre Opens.

The Strand Theatre at Omaha, closed for several weeks, has been opened, following the completion of alterations costing more than $15,000. Manager Thomas opened his theatre with a fifteen-piece orchestra and "My Four Years in Germany."

Changes at the U. T. E.

George Rogers has resigned as Minneapolis branch manager of the United Theater Equipment Corporation to enter the United States army. He has been replaced by O. H. Dutton, prominent in the supply business in the northwest and for years a leading projection operator. It is also announced that the Minneapolis branch will move into new quarters at 508-510 Produce Exchange Building. Mr. Rogers was for several years associated with Van Husen at the Universal exchange and Western Supply Company of Omaha.

Lectures with War Film.

Manager L. H. Cohen, of the Minneapolis Universal Exchange, has engaged the services of Mme. Marie Arrois, former French actress, who escaped to America from Belgium, where she was held a prisoner for virtually two years in her home, to lecture in connection with the film showing of "The Spirit of France," featuring Rupert Julian. Mme. Artois addressed the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association, and will open her lecture tour during the State Fair Week.

New Tarzan Film.

"Romance of Tarzan," sequel to "Tarzan of the Apes," featuring the same cast as the former Tarzan success, including the giant, Elmo Lincoln, will be released by the First National in Minneapolis territory, September 16, Manager E. R. Pearson announces. Despite the fact that it was shown during the hottest days of the summer, "Tarzan of the Apes," established a box office record at the Minneapolis Strand.

Watson Named as Assistant to Koch.

Billy B. Watson will become assistant to William Koch as manager of the Ruben & Finkelstein Minneapolis theatres, New Garden, Unique, Aster and Grand, September 16. Mr. Watson has been a prominent worker in the Moving Picture Exchange Corporation of the Northwest, and his promotion comes as a recognition of meritorious service. He is at present manager of the New Garden, and his feat of turning that theatre from a lemon to a success in a year's time has been the cause of much comment in moving picture circles. He was previously manager of the New Lyndale in Minneapolis, and was also with the Nemic Theatre circuit at St. Cloud and Little Falls for some time. Mr. Watson is a veteran of 24 years in the show business.

Exhibitor Watson Is 51 Years Old.

"Daddy" Watson, proprietor of the Happy Hour Theatre at Excelsior, Minn., recently celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday. Despite his years, Mr. Watson carries his own film and is in direct charge of the operation of his house at all times.

Personal Items.

Floyd Junkin, manager of the Isis Theatre, of Fargo, N. D., has discontinued his activities in the moving picture business for the duration of the war to enter an army training camp.

E. L. Conlan, booker for the Minneapolis Vitagraph Exchange for the past six months, left last week for Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., in response to a call from Uncle Sam.

F. B. Thorne has been added to the selling force of Paramount-Artcraft in this territory. He will cover North Dakota. Last week he went out with J. F. Cubberly, assistant manager of the exchange, and closed Wahpeton, Jamestown, Bismarck, Dickinson, Minot, Devil's Lake and Grand Forks for next year's contracts.

Jack O'Toole, manager of the Minneapolis Foursquare Exchange, has closed a deal with Ruben & Finkelstein for first, second and third runs in Minneapolis and second showing in St. Paul of the Christie Comedies.

J. E. Chandler has purchased the Orpheum Theatre at Ironton, Minn.

W. H. Gilfillan has opened the Jewel Theatre for moving pictures at Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Matt Haugen has purchased the moving picture theatre at Hannaford, N. D., from H. H. Hagen and opened the house for business.

Tony Tabrocki has begun the erection of the Liberty Theatre at Wico, Minn.

Portland News Letter

By I. Leeser Cohen, Evening Telegram, Portland, Ore.

Kohfelt Enlists in Merchant Marine.

W. W. KOHFELT, at one time manager for Pathe in this territory and now manager of the Majestic Theatre of this city, has enlisted in the merchant marine and secured the berth of steward on the Dumara, sailing Wednesday. The Dumara is a product of one of our local shipyards. L. A. Samuelson, former booker for Pathe, has joined his chief and enlisted for service on the same boat.

Change in Globe Theatre Management.

There has been a change of management in the Globe Theatre, the prettiest little house in town. The new manager announces as his policy a showing of Paramount and Artcraft productions exclusively.

Brownwell Manager of Mutual Exchange.

H. H. Brownell, known on the Coast as "Brownie," has been appointed manager of the local exchange of the Mutual Company. Brownie is a free lance cameraman of long standing, having made many feet of film for the news reels. He was also cameraman for Vitagraph in Los Angeles, and worked with Willis and Ingalls.

Hamberger Now with the Circle Theatre.

Mr. Hamberger, late of the Mutual, is now publicity and assistant manager of the Circle Theatre. The Circle has been a five-cent one-day house, but has changed to higher prices, and now shows only the big features of all makes, running them as many days as Mr. Holtzclaw, the manager and owner of the Circle, believes they will stand.

Theatre Manager Becomes Publicity Man.

Paul C. Noble has been brought to this city by Jensen & Von Herberg to become publicity man for the Columbia and Liberty theatres. He is not new to this field, having been manager of the National. Noble was manager of the American in Butte before taking his present position.

Will Open Park Theatre.

Goldstein Bros.' Amusement Company will open the Park Theatre, Utica, N. Y., with a program of vaudeville and pictures. The proprietors recently visited the Triangle exchange, Buffalo.

Babcock May Open Another Theatre.

Wellsville, N. Y., may have a new theatre. C. L. Babcock, proprietor of the Lyric theatre of that place, states that he expects to soon remodel the large block in Main street, Wellsville, recently purchased by him for use as a moving picture and vaudeville theatre.

Opens Four Offices in the Dominion.

The Exhibitors' Distributing Corporation, Limited, the new Canadian exchange, has opened four offices in the Dominion as follows: Montreal, 204 St. Catherine street West; Winnipeg, 115 Phoenix Block; St. John, N. B., 19 Market square, and Toronto, Rialto Theatre Building, 221 Yonge street, the head office being the last named.

Announcement has been made that the company has secured the Canadian rights for "Eyes of the World," "The Still Alarm," "Nine-Tenths of the Law" and three new Ivan releases, "The Faded Flower," "His Wives" and "The City of Illusion." These are in addition to many other features previously announced and already issued.

The company has also arranged to distribute Mack Sennett-Keystone, Chaplin-Keystone and Arbuckle-Keystone Comedies as well as Paralta Plays. The new company has taken over the business of Superfeatures, Limited, and Globe Films, Limited.

Censor to Designate Films for Children.

The Provincial Secretary of Alberta, Hon. George P. Smith, has announced that the moving picture censor for that province will shortly arrange to recommend various film releases as suitable for children. It will be possible, under this arrangement, for exhibitors to advertise that such pictures have been recommended or indorsed by the Provincial Censor for children. A suggestion that the censor accept various releases for exhibition before adults only has not been acted upon to date. The co-operation of parents has been asked for. Official announcement regarding the plan will be made shortly.

Canadian Brief Items.

Eugene Maynard has been engaged by Manager George Rotsky as musical director for the New Grand Theatre, Montreal.

General Manager Phil Kauffman of the Monarch Film Company, Limited, Toronto and other cities, has announced that his company will handle the Capitol Comedies throughout Canada.

F. J. Walsh, owner of the Home Theatre, Walkerville, Ontario, has bought the Star Theatre, another Walkerville house, and will operate both.

Manager Hyde of the Crescent Theatre, Winnipeg, has taken over the Wonderland Theatre and will manage the second house himself. Mr. Kershak the former lessee, promises to erect another theatre in Winnipeg.

Ralph Miller has been appointed manager of the Starland Theatre and has shown considerable progressiveness.

Professor Metcalfe, organist at the Province Theatre, Winnipeg, for a number of months, has secured a position in New York City.

The National Theatre, Winnipeg, has been redecorated inside and out and Manager Williamson has also adopted some new ideas for the house.

The Grand Theatre, Main street, North, Winnipeg, which was partially destroyed by fire last winter, is being made into an office building.

B. J. Kellert, formerly with the J. H. Aloz Booking Agency, Montreal, has become secretary to I. Soskin of Montreal, who is prominently associated with the Famous Players' Film Service in Eastern Canada.

"Hearts of the World" opened at the Dominion Theatre, Winnipeg, on Labor Day, September 2, with an immense attendance at $1.50 prices.

Announcement has been made that F. E. Stonge is through as manager of the Coliseum Theatre, Toronto, on September 30.

Ben Cronk, of Toronto, supervisor of Allen Theatres, is spending three weeks in Montreal to arrange various details in connection with the new Allen Theatre in Westmount. Mr. Lemars, of Montreal, has been named the manager of the new Allen Theatre at Lachine, Quebec.

REGAL, Ltd., ENLARGES THEATRE HOLDINGS

Big Toronto Operating Company Conducting Thirteen Houses in the Dominion Adds Three More to List

By W. M. Gladish, 33 Wineva Avenue, Toronto.

N. L. NATHANSON, managing director of Regal Films, Limited, Toronto, is the latest to put over a big "coup" in the matter of theatre purchases in Canada. In behalf of interests which he represents, Mr. Nathanson has secured control of several more theatres in Ontario and, in so doing, has given the film folk a big surprise, namely the acquisition of the Temple Theatre of Galt. This was formerly owned and managed by John C. Green, who is known as the pioneer exhibitor of Canada. Furthermore, Mr. Green has always been classed as a real showman. He is now associated with Regal interests in a rather wide capacity.

Another theatre secured is the Stand Theatre, of Kingston, Ontario, and Mr. Green was sent to Kingston to supervise the opening of this house under Regal auspices.

The Teck Theatre, Queen street East and Broadview avenue, Toronto, has also passed into the control of the Nathanson interests. It is understood that a number of changes are to be made in this theatre before a definite policy is adopted, and probably before a new manager is appointed.

The companies represented by Mr. Nathanson now control some fifteen or sixteen moving picture theatres in Canada.

Twenty-One Now in Regent Orchestra.

The Regent Theatre has increased its fine orchestra by the addition of two more wood instruments, making twenty-one players in the organization under the direction of John Arthur. The augmented orchestra started in by making a distinct hit with the musical accompaniment for "To Hell with the Kaiser," which was presented during the week of September 2. The orchestra also made more or less of a sensation by its rendering of a selection from "Eileen" as a number of the same program.

Theatres Use Combination Advertisement.

"Race Suicide" and "Damaged Goods" was the heading of a combination advertisement appearing in Winnipeg newspapers for the Rex and Monarch theatres when these two houses presented the features indicated. "Race Suicide" was shown at the Rex Theatre as an "extra special" picture and as a sequel to "Damaged Goods." Children under eighteen years of age were not permitted to enter either house while these features were being shown. Each was shown for three days simultaneously.

"Bun" Hazza Moves to Edmonton.

"Bun" Hazza, of Toronto, has moved to Edmonton, Alberta, to become associated with John Hazza, manager of the Empress and Hippodrome theatres, in the operation of these theatres. They are brothers. John Hazza recently returned from New York City.

Exhibitor Refuses Censor-Cut Picture.

Manager Williamson of the National Theatre, Winnipeg, Man., refused to accept "The Combat," a Bushman-Bayne feature, for a booked date, because the film had been "badly cut up" by censor boards of other provinces before it reached Manitoba, it is declared. The picture was slashed so extensively, it is said, that even the Manitoba censors found nothing to eliminate.

Spends $6,000 in Improving the Cum-Bac.

Manager W. A. Baillie of the Cum-Bac Theatre, Dovercourt road, Toronto, has made improvements in his theatre which have cost $6,000. The new features include a pipe organ and new equipment in the projection room. The latter includes two new Power's machines. The theatre also has a new gold fibre screen. The walls have been festooned with draperies and flowers, giving the house a very cozy appearance.

An interesting detail is that Manager Bailie has arranged with the Toronto Railway Company for the display of one-sheet advertising boards on the front of all street cars on the Dovercourt route. These cars pass the Cum-Bac Theatre and pass through the section served by the theatre. Mr. Bailie believes that he is the only exhibitor in Canada to make such an arrangement for advertising.

Allens Plan Big Theatre in Winnipeg.

Messrs. Jule and J. J. Allen have laid plans for the erection of a theatre in Winnipeg, Manitoba, where they already have the Dominion Theatre, one of the largest of local houses, under lease. The new Allen Theatre will be located on Portage avenue, next to the Sterling Bank Building, the site having a 100-foot frontage The new house, with the site, will cost in the neighborhood of $275,000.

Wilson to Book on Open Market.

Manager Wilson of the Lyceum Theatre, Winnipeg, has announced that he will book pictures on the open market during the coming year. This is a distinct change in policy for the Lyceum. Mr. Wilson recently spent $3,000 for new equipment in the projection room of the Lyceum, which has the largest seating capacity of any picture theatre in Winnipeg.

Rushing Changes in Province Theatre.

Workmen are rushing through the costly improvements in the Province Theatre, another of Winnepeg's large theatres. The house will be reopened on September 25 and the first attraction will be Charlie Chaplin's "Shoulder Arms." The changes are costing about $40,000, and include a handsome new front.

Palace Theatre Reopened Labor Day.

The Palace Theatre, Queen street East and Greenwood avenue, Toronto, was reopened on Labor Day, September 2, with a fine crowd. The first attraction was H. B. Warner's "God's Man." Prices at this theatre will be five and ten cents. This house has been closed several times and was formerly known as the Woodbine.

Had an Eighteen-Reel Program.

The Moulin Rouge Theatre, Montreal, recently broke all records for quantity presentation. And the pictures were of good quality, too. The program consisted of "To-Day," seven reels; "Rough and Ready," eight reels; an episode of a serial, two reels, and a comedy, one reel, making eighteen reels in all.

Canadians Change Title of Fox Feature.

Announcement is made that Fox's "Why America Will Win," the life story of General Pershing, will be known in Canada as "Pershing with the Allies." Announcement has also been made that Fox's "Queen of the Sea" will shortly be released on a rental basis. The release date of "Put the Flag on the Firing Line" will also be announced shortly, it is declared.

Allens Open Their Nineteenth House.

The Royal Alexandra Theatre, at Lachine, Quebec, the nineteenth theatre in the chain of Jule and J. J. Allen, has been opened under the management of H. C. Lamarre, of Montreal. The opening attraction was Mary Pickford in "M'liss." Two days before the opening Manager Lamarre gave a dinner at the Corona Hotel which was attended by sixteen exchange men and exhibitors of Montreal and Lachine.

CIRCLE CELEBRATES ITS SECOND YEAR

Indianapolis' Most Beautiful Theatre Observes Anniversary with Impressive Series of Tableaus

By Indiana Trade News Service, 69 Layman Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

THE Circle Theatre in Indianapolis, Indiana's most beautiful motion picture house, celebrated its second anniversary this week with the presentation of D. W. Griffith's second drama of the world war, "The Great Love," and a unique stage spectacle arranged by S. Barret McCormick, managing director. Capacity crowds of friends and admiring patrons were in attendance throughout the week.

When this beautiful photoplay house was opened two years ago there were many skeptical ones who predicted that it would not be a success. So it remained for the unflagging zeal and keen business acumen of A. L. Block, the president, and Robert Lieber, vice-president, combined with the genius of Mr. McCormick, the managing director, to make it a huge financial success, as well as a theatre of more than national interest.

The spectacle arranged by Mr McCormick for the anniversary program consisted of a series of tableaux typifying the different sorts of theatrical entertainment found in Indianapolis. The opening tableaux showed English's Theatre, typified as the home of the drama. Then came the Majestic, with burlesque, Keith's, with all the acts of vaudeville including the acrobats and stale Ford jokes, the Murat, with the Winter Garden productions, and last, and by no means least, the Circle, "The Shrine of the Silent Art."

The tableaux typifying the Circle showed a cameraman on the top of the world filming all the figures which participated in the other scenes—in other words, everything, from the drama to burlesque, being shown on the screen at the Circle. The tableaux were all effectively arranged with the aid of varicolored lights. All in all, it was one of the most lavish spectacles produced by Mr McCormick in many months and drew round after round of tremendous applause.

Carlton to Manage the Sipe Theatre.

Kokomo.—Samuel Carlton, of Frankfort, Ind., has been selected as manager of the Sipe Theatre here. Mr Carlton has been serving in a similar capacity at the Blinn Theatre in Frankfort.

Griffith's Spectacle Shown in South Bend.

South Bend.—D. W. Griffith's gigantic war spectacle, "Hearts of the World," was exhibited for the first time in this city Sunday at the Oliver Theatre, and drew capacity audiences. The picture was continued throughout the week, and it was said that it may be brought back later, as many were unable to get inside the theatre.

Bijou Opens Under New Management.

Hammond.—The Bijou Theatre, this city, which has been extensively remodeled and redecorated, has been reopened under new management, and is running the best and latest motion pictures. A new ventilating system was installed and many other improvements made.

Makes Terre Haute His Headquarters.

Terre Haute.—A. J. Brentlinger, general manager of the Terre Haute Theatres Company, which owns the new Terre Haute Theatre which is just about completed at Eighth and Wabash streets, has announced that he will make Terre Haute his headquarters, taking active charge of the new theatre, which will be opened soon, and directing the policy of the other three theatres controlled by his company from this city.

Mr. Brentlinger's son, Byron, had been slated for the position of manager of the new Terre Haute Theatre, but he has enlisted in the navy for the duration of the war, and is now in training at the naval training station at Great Lakes, Ill.

Mr. Brentlinger arrived in the city this week from Fort Wayne, and expects to be busy during the next few days signing up musicians and other attaches of the new house and superintending the preparations for the formal opening which will be held early in September. The new theatre has been erected at an approximate cost of $115,000, and is one of the most up-to-date in the state.

Bucklen to Show "Hearts of the World."

Elkhart.—Manager Lerner, of the Bucklen Theatre, has announced that he has booked the big war cinema feature, "Hearts of the World," for exhibition at the Bucklen on November 11, 12 and 13. He is preparing for an extensive advertising campaign to be conducted prior to the showing of the film.

Starette Theatre Redecorated.

Newcastle.—The interior and exterior of the Starette Theatre in this city has been redecorated, and now presents a very attractive appearance. Manager Sipe is making an effort to procure the photo of every Henry County boy who is in the service of his country, and is using the photographs on slides at intervals. The feature is proving quite a popular one, he says.

Coliseum Shows "Pershings Crusaders."

Evansville.—A full house greeted each showing of the Government war film, "Pershing's Crusaders," which was shown at the Coliseum for four days this week under the auspices of the registered men of the second division. An admission fee of twenty-five cents was charged, and an additional twenty-five cents was charged for reserved seats. The proceeds will be used for patriotic purposes.

Crystal Theatre Again Changes Hands.

Anderson.—The Crystal Theatre, recently transferred on a contract of sale to Welch & Walbourn, managers of a stock company, again changed hands last week, being taken over by J. Miller, of North Carolina. The theatre will be remodeled and redecorated and made thoroughly up-to-date, according to Mr Miller, who intends to run a combined motion picture and vaudeville program.

Baltimore Trade Letter

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mt. Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Maryland.

Bushman Club Convention.

THE Bushman Club, of which Francis X. Bushman, the Metro star, is the honorary president, held its convention at the home of the film star, Elderwood, Green Spring Valley, on Saturday, August 31, and about 200 delegates, representing nearly 30 states in the union, came to Baltimore to attend the affair.

Boy Scouts were stationed at the entrance of the estate of Mr. Bushman, and as the first of the delegates began to arrive, they fired a salute on a small cannon. Mr. and Mrs. Bushman greeted the guests as they arrived. One of the feature of the day was the rasing of a Bushman service flag, containing 36 stars and one gold star, representing the number of the club in France.

Miss Virginia Bushman, daughter of the screen actor, sang the Marsellaise as a number on the program. Luncheon was served on the lawn. Badges as souvenirs were given all the guests and Japanese parasols presented the ladies.

A business meeting was held. An election of officers was held and a discussion took place as to the best means of keeping up the work for cleaner and better pictures. All the members of the club are Bushmanites.

Pictures Aid W. S. S. Rally.

Moving pictures showing the "Sammies" in their various activities and a Douglas Fairbank film helped greatly to arouse interest at the meeting in the interest of the War Savings Stamp drive which was held at Glenelg, Ellicott City, Md., the estate of Gen. W. Bladen Lowndes, a patriotic worker, on Saturday, August 31. The affair was held under the auspices of the Woman's Section of the War Savings Committee of Howard County, of which Mrs. Lowndes is the chairman.

"The Whip" at the Parkway for a Week.

B. Lust, of Washington, D. C., booked "The Whip," for the entire week, beginning September 2, at the Parkway Theatre, 3-9 West North avenue, by Manager Bernard Depkin, Jr., who says it is the first independent picture he has ever booked for this playhouse. It has played to big crowds. Mr. Lust says he has signed up 30 Baltimore houses for Gaumont's new serial coming out in 10 episodes.

Faulkner's Brother Missing in Action.

The brother of Kenneth G. Faulkner, organist at the Parkway Theatre, 3-9 West North avenue, Gordon L. Faulkner, of Chester, Pa., has been mentioned in the casualty lists as missing in action. He was 26 years old, a member of the machine gun company of the One Hundred and Tenth Infantry and has been in France since last May. When the United States had trouble with Mexico several years ago, Mr. Faulkner enlisted in the army at that time.

Has Schooner Named in his Honor.

The schooner, Jacob W. Hook, named in honor of Col. Jacob W. Hook, vice president of the Parkway Theater Company, will be launched at the shipyard of the Crosby Navigation Company, Richmond, Me., for the Maryland Navigation Company on Thursday, September 5. Mayor J. H. Preston of Baltimore and several other city officials have received invitations to the launching.

Baltimore Personals.

Blanke & Zink, the prominent Baltimore architects, who have designed many beautiful moving picture theatres, have now closed their offices in the Equitable Building and turned back several big commissions until after the war, because they believe they can be of more value to the Government by serving in its branches.

John J. Zink, who has had under his supervision the building of the Rialto Theatre in Washington, for Tom Moore, is now awaiting a commission in the army. E. G. Blanke has become associated with the Interstate Commerce Commission as expert valuation engineer.

Through the courtesy of George A. McDermitt, manager of Loew's Hippodrome Theatre, the Red Cross workers of Baltimore sold tickets at each performance during the week of September 2, for a big athletic meet which was held on Saturday, September 7, at Homewood, for the benefit of the Camp Purnell hospital fund and held under the auspices of Army and Navy Association of Maryland. Over 500 tickets were sold at the performances on Monday, September 2.

Ben Abrams, who is well known in the film circles of Baltimore, having represented the Foursquare and First National pictures in this territory, and has recently represented the Fox Film Corporation through the South, has now become associated with the Sherry Service, as their Maryland and District of Columbia representative. Mr. Abrams, otherwise known as "Big Ben," always has a genial greeting for his friends.

Oliver B. Wight, the architect who planned the beautiful designs from which the Parkway and McHenry theatres in the Parkway Theatre Company Circuit were built, has enlisted in the Engineer Corps. He left for Washington last week.

HONOR TRIANGLE'S SEATTLE MANAGER

Hurn Tendered Farewell Luncheon by Northwest Film Board of Trade Upon His Leaving for Army Training

By S. J. Anderson, East Seattle, Wash.

As a farewell to H. H. Hurn, Triangle manager, who left on August 28 to report for training at Camp Lewis, the Northwest Film Board of Trade gave a luncheon at the Hotel Washington on August 27. After "eats" and speeches Mr. Hurn was presented with a wrist watch and compass. The Board of Trade also took this opportunity to entertain several special representatives of various film companies who happened to be in Seattle at this time. They were S. A. Lynch, vice president of Triangle; J. R. Grainger, Fox; P. N. Brinch, W. W. Hodkinson's personal representative; Meyer J. Cohen, Kleine; Joe Merrick, Mutual; Harry Lustig, Metro; J. S. Woody, Select.

Mr. Lynch announced the appointment of R. R. Nave to take Mr. Hurn's place. Mr. Nave is already known by film men and exhibitors throughout the territory, having been booker at the Triangle office almost as long as there has been a branch in this city. For the past ten months he has also been assistant manager. This office is also losing its shipper, George Justi, in the draft.

"Finger of Justice" Breaking Records.

"The Finger of Justice," which made a record first-run of four weeks at the Rex, is completing the first week of its second run at the Little, where it is also breaking attendance records. John Hamrick, managing owner of the Rex, went down to Portland last week and leased the Star Theatre to show the picture there. He has booked it for two weeks with an option on the third.

123,000 Seattleites See Griffith Film.

In checking over attendance records this week for the five weeks' engagement of Griffith's "Hearts of the World" at Levy's Orpheum it was discovered that 123,000 people attended the show. The population of Seattle is 400,000; so this shows that more than a quarter of the city's population saw the picture.

Signs $35,000 Advertising Contract.

Jensen & Von Herberg, who operate the Coliseum, the Liberty, the Mission, and the Strand in Seattle, signed a contract this week for $35,000 worth of advertising in the Seattle Times for the coming year.

Post Now Has Exclusive Picture Section.

The Post-Intelligencer, Seattle's morning paper, has started a regular department for motion pictures exclusively. In the Sunday edition this department occupies several pages, and the leading theatres have responded by taking quarter-page and half-page space. Before this the P-I's motion picture news was more or less general and much abbreviated, being sandwiched in with other amusement notes. Eugene Banks, for several years dramatic critic on the P-I, has charge of the department, with Lloyd Spencer as advertising assistant.

Takes Views of Government Work.

Frank Montgomery finished some pictures this week of government work in the spruce forests of Washington, showing how the spruce is felled and prepared for the making of airplanes. A number of soldiers of the Spruce Division with their colonel were actors in the picture.

Describes Picture Conditions in Montana.

J. F. Busch, general salesman, who returned this week from a tour of Montana, gave the most accurate description of conditions in that territory of any that we have heard lately. Montana has, previous to this last season, been the best part of the Pacific Northwest for the film man, owing to the prosperity of the miners and the grain farmers. According to Mr. Busch the big towns and cities are still quite prosperous and the exhibitor's business is fairly good there; but the small towns, where the exhibitor could not afford to lose any of his regular patrons, have felt the strain when so many of their young men were drafted and whole families have left for the ship yards of the coast cities. Employment offices have been established in a great many of these interior towns for sending men to the ship yards, and they are going in droves. Exhibitors in very small towns of under a thousand are the ones who are suffering from this emigration westward.

Changes Among the Theatres.

Seattle, Wash.—John Hamrick, managing owner of the Rex and the Little and the Gem, sold the Little Theatre this week to Joseph Danz, who operates the Imperial, the Dream, the Isis, and the new Rialto, all on lower First avenue. The Little is up-town at 415 Pike.

Everett, Wash.—C. A. Swanson, manager of the Princess Theatre, has taken over the Everett Theatre, the legitimate house of the town, and will show special motion picture productions in it. He has remodeled and redecorated the house, spending $10,000 on the lobby alone.

Missoula, Mont.—J. H. Lux, formerly of Thompson Falls, has reopened the Alcazar Theatre, which has remained idle for the last six months.

Exhibitors Who Have Been Drafted.

George Ring, manager of the Society Theatre, the most successful neighborhood theatre in Seattle, has been called in the Draft and Mrs. Ring will run the theatre.

W. G. Ripley, manager of the Western Amusement Company, Aberdeen, operating several motion picture theatres in that vicinity, has been called in the Draft, and Mrs. Ripley will take charge of the houses. Both of these women have helped their husbands in the management of their theatres before, so they are thoroughly familiar with the work.

Among the Exchangemen.

Harry Lustig, Metro special representative for the West Coast, is moving his headquarters from Seattle, where he has been for the last seven months, to Los Angeles.

Tom North, Western division manager for Pathe, who came directly to Seattle from New York, was called back to New York last week on urgent business.

George Ekre, manager of the Portland General office, has been transferred to the management of the Los Angeles office. R. H. Allan, manager of the Seattle office, will look after the Portland branch.

G. G. Maxey, who completed a most successful trip through the Pacific Northwest with "My Four Years in Germany" for the Exhibitors Exchange, is now assistant manager of the exchange. H. C. Arthur, Jr., formerly with the De Lux Feature Film Company, is now out in the Montana territory for the Exhibitors Exchange. C. H. Feldman is covering Washington.

G. R. Sirwell, former Seattle exchange man, passed through this city this week on his way to take over the management of the Hodkinson service office in Los Angeles. Mr. Sirwell was more recently manager of the General branch in Kansas City.

Exhibitors Visiting Seattle.

Among the prominent out-of-town exhibitors visiting film row this week were: Fred Mercy, Yakima; C. E. McKee, Orpheum, Everett; W. G. Ripley, Aberdeen; W. P. Cline, Starland, Aberdeen; R. J. Charles, of Vader, Castle Rock, and Napavine, and Walter Armstrong, Strand, Portland.

MAY ESTABLISH SCHOOL FOR WOUNDED

Washington Exchangemen Consider Teaching Crippled Soldiers Operating and Film Inspection

By C. L. Linz, 622 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C.

Supplementing their work in getting flowers, cigarettes, games and luxuries to the wounded and sick soldiers at the Walter Reed General Hospital, the Washington exchangemen have under consideration the establishment of a school to teach operating and inspecting with a view to securing employment at the theatres and exchanges for crippled soldiers. The idea is to fit out a room with the necessary materials, including projection machines and rewinders and the different managers take turns as instructors. The Walter Reed Hospital Committee, of which Oscar Morgan is chairman, is to consider the problem further and then confer with the army people to see whether or not the plan is feasible and how best it can be carried to conclusion.

Abandon Carbon Filament Lamps.

Certain types of the inefficient carbon filament lamp are no longer to be manufactured, under an agreement between the manufacturers and dealers in incandescent electric lamps and the United States Fuel Administration. The lamp manufacturers, at a meeting held last week in this city, voluntarily agreed to abandon the manufacture of these lamps in accordance with a program which practically calls for the discontinuance of their manufacture and sale. It is declared that the change will give much better lighting and result in the saving of more than a million tons of coal.

Hotel Fire Damages Theatre Slightly.

A fire in the Stag Hotel, Washington, in which is located the Virginia Theatre, on Ninth street, caused slight damage to the latter, but emphasized the care with which Washington managers safeguard their patrons. Despite the fact that the fire apparatus was making considerable noise outside the building, the 300 patrons of the theatre made their exit with only curiosity as to how the fire was progressing.

Sherwood Joins the Colors.

E. A. Sherwood, traveling representative of the Mutual Film Corporation's Washington office, and assistant manager under H. R. Mason, is wearing Uncle Sammy's clothes, having answered the call to present himself in person at Camp Lee, Va., to undergo a course of sprouts in military training.

Among the Theatres.

Towanda, Kan.—S. R. McCorkil and Charles Johnston are making preparations to erect a moving picture theatre on the corner west of the Towanda State Bank.

Lincoln, Neb.—F. D. Egan will remodel his theatre at 137 North Thirteenth street at a cost of $5,000.

Austin, Tex.—The Majestic Theatre has been taken over by C. W. A. McCormack, also manager of the Crescent. The Majestic will be temporarily closed for about two weeks while undergoing repairs.

Waco, Tex.—W. F. Soneman has leased the building at 419 Austin street, and will install a moving picture theatre. A rear addition of brick will be added, and a modern ventilating and cooling system put in.

TAKES VIEWS OF KANSAS CITY EVENTS

Manager Curtis of the Doric Theatre Makes Up a Local News Reel—Idea Appeals to Patrons

By Kansas City News Service, 115 Railway Exchange Building, Kansas City, Mo.

A CROWD, estimated at between one hundred and one hundred fifty thousand people, assembled at Swope Park, Wednesday, August 28, to watch the air manoeuvres of the visiting British and French aviators. The Doric Theatre is running a picture of the Flying Circus taken by Mr. Curtis, owner, in the "Doric News," a current reel of interesting events occurring in Kansas City. Mr. Curtis has rebuilt a roadster for this particular purpose, with a platform extending from the back of the seat to carry the tripod and moving picture machine. The local news is run at the close of the regular news weekly and is a feature of the Doric programs. At the close of the year the films will be condensed into a review of out-standing events which have taken place in Kansas City during 1918.

The Doric Theatre opened its fall season September 1 with "His Birthright," featuring Sessue Hayakawa. Something novel in the way of posters and interior decorations was worked out to accompany the picture. Cuts from the film were glued to a background of Japanese matting, which was painted with Japanese scenes, Mount Fuji-yama, and lettering to produce a very artistic effect. The flower box just above the foot lights was banked with cherry blossoms and from two large translucent urns came a red glow and delicate incense.

Edwards of General Film Resigns.

Mr. Orear, division manager of the General Film Company, is in Kansas City for the purpose of appointing a successor to C. S. Edwards. Mr. Edwards is resigning as manager of the Kansas City branch to again associate himself with the Motion Picture Theatres of America, Inc., 1003 Commerce Building, as division manager of Kansas City, Omaha, and Des Moines.

Murray Theatre Changes Hands.

The Murray Theatre, 3204 East Twenty-seventh street, has changed hands. C. Cunningham took charge of the house, September 1. H. H. Barrnett, former manager, has not yet announced his future plans.

Kansas City Briefs.

The Mozart Theatre opened Sunday, September 1, with Dr. Wyman as manager.

W. B. Towne, president of the Hodupp-Towne Photoplay Company, St. Louis, will be in Kansas City shortly.

Richard Robertson, manager of the Kansas City office of Goldwyn Pictures, Inc., has left on a short business trip to Des Moines. Mr. Robertson will probably go to Sioux City before he returns.

J. A. Stevenson, division manager of the W. H. Hodkinson Enterprises, is in Kansas City for a period of two weeks.

The Equitable Film Corporation has purchased the rights for Kansas and Missouri from the Monopol Pictures Company, New York, for "Cleopatra," featuring Helen Gardner.

H. C. Holah, representing the A. H. Blank Enterprises, handling the First National Exhibitors' Circuit for Kansas, is in the city visiting Mr. Goldham, local representative. Mr. Holah reports that all of his First National releases are meeting with phenomenal success in Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas.

The Standard Film Corporation has closed a deal with the Columbia Theatre, St. Louis, for the first run of Ditmar's Living Book of Nature. Mr. Dean of the Educational Films Corporation of New York, has closed with the Standard for the distribution of its productions in Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, and Northern Oklahoma. The Standard has also acquired the distribution rights throughout Kansas for "Berlin via America."

Pathe Changes.

John J. Miley, formerly assistant booker, has been promoted to shipping clerk.

Merle C. Carr, formerly assistant shipping clerk, has taken charge of the poster department.

Roman A. Meighan, who has been with the Mutual Film Corporation for some time past, has taken the position of assistant shipping clerk.

Miss Blanche Lacy has been appointed booker.

Among the Exhibitors.

Parsons, Kans.—The New Elks Theatre opened September 2.

Topeka, Kans.—The Iris Theatre, which has been closed for some time undergoing remodeling, opened August 26 with G. L. Hooper as manager.

Crockett, Tex.—J. P. Polly and E. D. Foster have sold the Queen Theatre to Miss Sarah Conwell of Houston.

Seguin, Tex.—The Palace Theatre has been redecorated and remodeled.

Richmond, Mo.—The Farris Theatre is being redecorated and improved.

Webb City, Mo.—I. L. Davis has sold the Blake Theatre to A. L. Caulkins, owner of a moving picture theatre at Carthage. The Blake is undergoing several interior changes.

Hockerville, Okla.—The Hockerville Theatre has been chartered with a capital stock of $10,000 by Ethel F. Dowell and Mary E. Shibley, of Hockerville.

Duncan, Okla.—The New Pastime theatre has been opened.

Mr. Curtis and Son, of the Doric Theatre, Kansas City, and Photographic Outfit Used in Connection with Filming "Doric News."

Lufkin, Tex.—The Lufkin Amusement Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $4,500 by E. L. Kurth, J. K. Kurth, Jr., and W. C. Binion.

Corsicana, Tex.—H. W. Taylor and G. J. Arden have opened the Liberty Airdome on West Sixth Avenue.

Orange, Tex.—The Liberty and Strand theatres will open very shortly, with a seating capacity of between 1,100 and 1,200 each. The Princess theatre of this city will be located in the New Holland building with double its former seating capacity.

Port Arthur, Tex.—The Liberty theatre, owned by J. P. Pittman, is nearing completion and will be ready for opening in two or three weeks. The seating capacity will be between 500 and 600.

Marshalltown, Ia.—H. E. Cook and Logan Storey, of Minneapolis, Minn., have purchased a moving picture theatre in Marshalltown, and will manage the business.

Caruthersville, Mo.—The Dixie Theatre has been sold to Cecil Mears, owner of the Liberty at Caruthersville and a theatre at Blytheville. T. Kenneth Bademan is the former owner.

Norman, Okla.—Ray C. Berry, proprietor of the University Theatre, has been called to the colors, and during his absence Mrs. Berry will manage the theatre.

Orange, Tex.—The Strand Theatre has been completed, and was opened Monday, August 26. The theatre, which was constructed by Herschel Thomas at a cost of $45,000, has a seating capacity of 1,200.

Rochester News Letter

By L. B. Skellington, 61 Main St., East, Rochester, N. Y.

Shannon to Manage the Piccadilly.

H. W. SHANNON, for the past four years manager of the Temple Theatre in Geneva, has resigned that position to accept the management of the Piccadilly, Rochester, probably the largest as well as the newest picture palace in this city. During Mr. Shannon's residence in Geneva he has proved not only a successful theatre manager but also an aggressive and public spirited citizen. Through all the drives for the Liberty Loans and War Savings Stamps he has shown energy in furthering those good causes. He has provided pictures for the Temple, the popularity of which has been attested by the large clientele of that house.

Griffith Films Go Strong in Rochester.

"Hearts of the World" played to capacity business at top prices at the Lyceum Theatre, Rochester, all week. Without a doubt the picture is good for a long run. It was well handled here, not the least of the effectiveness of the presentation being due to the large symphony orchestra, which did full justice to the ambitious musical score of the production. From the first local showing the public took to the picture, and enhanced by the great charm of the musical accompaniment, it went over the top with a bang. "The Great Love," another Griffith production, played the week at the Regent and also did a big business. It looked as if most people who saw the latter film at the Regent, and at moderate prices, were willing to take a chance with the picture which was going at the higher prices. Also, many who saw "Hearts of the World" could not resist the chance to see the other and compare them.

Use Kleine Film in Education Campaign.

The United States Marine Corps conducted a campaign of public education in connection with the showing of "The Unbeliever," a Kleine production at the Rialto last week. Sergeant Robert C. Graham, former news editor of the Niagara Falls Gazette, gave frequent lectures, and the audiences liked him as well as the picture. He had been in this city with the picture on its previous showing.

BUDGET OF FILM NEWS FROM DALLAS

Late Arrival of New York Express Packages Annoys Picture Men—Vitagraph Feature Campaign Planned

By Philip Fox, Times-Herald, Dallas, Texas.

Late Parcels Inconvenience Film Men.

EXPRESS packages out of New York have been days late in arriving in Dallas recently. As a consequence the film men have been much inconvenienced. They have had to call upon Dallas printers and stereotypers to turn out their cuts and matrices and to print their one sheets. The printers and boiler plate men have reaped a good harvest here recently from this source.

Consolidated Closes its Houston Branch.

Manager Ned Depinet of the Consolidated Film and Supply Company announces the closing of the Consolidated offices at Houston, Texas. Business from the Houston office will in future be handled through the Dallas office, which has been found to be the more central and convenient. L. B. Rust, Houston manager, has come to Dallas and will have charge of all bookings.

Urges Change in Jewel Film Title.

Ned Depinet, Consolidated manager, has written his home office urging that the name of "Husbands Only" be changed without delay. This charming Jewel film showed disappointingly at the Hippodrome Theatre recently through no other reason that people thought the title suggestive and did not care to see it. Many people on seeing the title advertised extensively thought that the women of the family would be barred. Local critics were enthusiastic in their praise of the picture, but with one accord, advised a rechristening.

Preparing for Big Winter Business.

While the great sections of Texas and Southern Oklahoma are arid, Arkansas is smiling a-green after plentiful rains. L. B. Remy of Goldwyn, who has just returned from a business trip through the Razor Back state, says that Hot Springs, Ark., motion picture houses are preparing for the biggest winter season on record. At Little Rock the picture show business is reported exceptionally good. Soldiers from Camp Pike, six miles away, continue to crowd the theatres.

Exhibitors Fight to Get Gerard's Film.

Down at Orange, Texas, exhibitors are "lawing" over rights to Gerard's "Four Years in Germany." W. G. Minder started to show the Gerard feature when H. Thomas of the Airdome slapped down an injunction against the exhibition, claiming prior rights from the First National. The case remains to be fought out in court. Douglas Hawley of First National says that it takes a rattling good film to start a law suit.

Drought Causes Traveling Picture Shows.

Tank town touring with feature films is becoming increasingly popular in North and West Texas since the drought closed some of the smaller shows. Several Dallas motion picture men are now on the road with films which they are showing at one night stands in small towns and villages using school houses and churches as exhibition places.

Davenport Opens the Dixie Theatre.

Joe Davenport of the Waxahachie Company opened his new Dixie Theatre at Waxahachie during the last week in August. Dallas film men from several exchanges went to Waxahachie in their automobiles and were entertained by the exhibitor. The lobby of the Dixie was filled with cut-flowers sent by Dallas film men to Mr. Davenport, who is very popular here.

Like Soldier Boxing Matches.

Leaders of the motion picture distribution business of the Southwest can be found in a group at Camp Dick, the local aviaton officers concentration camp, almost any Friday night. The soldiers put on weekly boxing matches and fights which draw crowds from miles around. The film men, with hardly an exception, are red hot fight fans and usually attend the sessions en masse.

Vitagraph Feature Campaign Planned.

Division manager H. D. Norville of Vitagraph was in Dallas early in September, coming here from New York. With J. B. Dugger he made plans for a great Vitagraph campaign on their special features during the coming season. J. B. Dugger will spend the early part of September in the border country and in West Texas.

Patriotic Pictures Still Drawing Big.

Patriotic pictures of all kinds still continue to draw the crowds in Texas towns. Contrary to prediction, the theatregoers have not become tired of war films. The war being their one absorbing interest they continue to turn out in force to see any feature dealing with the world crisis.

Strand and Liberty Theatres Open.

Moving picture theatre congestion at Orange, Texas, has been relieved by the opening of the Strand and the Liberty theatres on Front near Sixth street in that city. Before these new play houses opened crowds would stand in line for an hour waiting to get a chance to see a show. The influx of population owing to ship building activity caused these conditions.

Work or Fight Dragnet Get Two Film Men.

Galveston friends of Ned E. Depinent, Dallas manager for Consolidated, and L. B. Rust, Houston manager, had a close up of them under arrest at the Galveston police station late in August. The couple, after completing some business in Houston, took the interurban car for Galveston for the purpose of enjoying a dip in the Gulf. On arriving in town they alighted in the midst of a big "work or fight" round up. Stalwart policemen asked them for their registration certificates. Both of them, who are in deferred classes, had left their blue slips at their homes which were miles away. They were taken to the city hall and cross questioned. Their friends, however, quickly identified them as being well known Texas business men and they were able to smile again.

Dallas Brevities.

C. E. Tandy, district manager for Paramount, is spending part of September in Dallas visiting Manager Harry Owens of the local branch. He came here from Atlanta, Ga.

Paramount Week, as observed here late in August, was a distinct success according to Manager Harry W. Owens. He reports that 40 per cent. of the exhibitors on his books ran Paramount features only for the seven days.

Charles Hartman of the Garrick Theatre, Dallas, has signed a year's contract to use Paramount features exclusively. So has W. A. C. McCormick of the Crescent Theatre, Austin.

Mrs. B. Revenaugh, the pioneer stenographer on Dallas film row, who is with the First National, is on her vacation. Mrs. Revenaugh knows the business from one end to the other having been connected with local film exchange for ten years.

Exhibitors Who Visited Dallas.

Among motion picture exhibitors who visited Dallas film row early in September were the following: G. H. Judia, Folly Theatre, Ciseo; J. C. Caver, Gem, Stephenville; J. B. Wilson, Gem, Sherman; Frank Barr, Peoples Theatre, Beaumont; George Walker, Hancock Opera House, Austin; C. W. Neece, Crystal, Hubbard City; J. L. Olive, Sugg Theatre, Chickasha, Okla., and W. J. Lytle, San Antonio.

Utica News

By Clifford A. Carroll, Utica Observer, Utica, N. Y.

Donlon Appointed Manager of Avon.

WILLIAM P. DONLON, one of the best known showmen in New York State, has been appointed as manager of the Avon Theatre, Utica. Mr. Donlon succeeds William Fait, Jr., who leaves to take charge of a Liberty Theatre for the Government. Mr. Donlon, the new director of the Avon, needs no introduction to the business or those connected with it in this state. He was in the employ of Wilmer & Vincent when that company controlled the Majestic and Orpheum theatres in this city. When the firm gave up the old Orpheum, Mr. Donlon became lessee and manager of the house and from the time he took possession until the disastrous fire in the spring of 1917, the Orpheum was one of the most successful houses in the city. Soon after Mr. Donlon became manager of the New Orpheum, formerly the South Street Theatre, and continued at this house until last January when he left the theatre business to return to the insurance business, in which he was interested before becoming connected with a theatre. Mr. Donlon will make an efficient manager for the Avon and he will be congratulated by his numerous friends on his return to the motion picture exhibiting business. Mr. Donlon is a member of the Utica Kiwanis Club.

Philadelphia Trade Letter

By F. V. Armato, 144 North Salford St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Dismiss Case Against Stanley Concern.

THE Federal Trade Commission which started proceedings Monday, August 19, against the Stanley Booking Corporation of Philadelphia for alleged charges have dismissed this case from the records, owing to the fact that the majority of the testimony revealed during the proceedings showed that this new corporation, of which Jules Mastbaum is the president and Frank W. Buhler the general manager, has conducted its business only in a fair and legitimate manner. Since the first of the year there has been a healthy and steady growth of the Stanley Booking Corporation's circuit of theatres, having already added a score of houses from the city and state.

Franklin Theatre Building Changes Hands.

The Franklin Theatre building at 747 to 753 South Third street, has been conveyed to S. Morris by B. F. Miller for a nominal sum and mortgage amounting to $18,000. The property is built on a lot 21 feet by irregular.

Suspect Hun Incendiaries in Film Fires.

Two fires within two weeks in a Norristown theatre are being investigated. Both fires occurred while anti-German films formed the program. Last week an anti-German film was destroyed by fire originating in the operator's booth, and another fire broke out under the stage while another picture of the same character was being subjected. Hun incendiaries are suspected.

Hunt Enlarge His Theatre Chain.

W. S. Hunt, recognized as the pioneer moving picture man of Wildwood, N. J., has supplied that popular seashore resort with its movie entertainment during the past ten years through his six first class theatres. Mr. Hunt has recently taken possession of the Palm and Auditorium Theatres in Collingswood, N. J., and is negotiating for several others to add to his chain.

Astra-Pathe Releases Second Two-Reel Subject Featuring Helene Chadwick.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

TWO weeks ago Astra-Pathe released a two-reel subject entitled "The Honest Thief," with Helene Chadwick appearing as an ingenuous country girl who turned a neat trick on a couple of crooks and restored some stolen bank funds. The story was written by Frank Leon Smith and directed by George B. Seitz. It was unusual for its swift action and clear, compact presentation. It told in two swift reels as much as is frequently found in a long feature.

A new two-reel subject with the same collaborators is entitled "'Getaway' Kate," and once more Helene Chadwick assumes the lead. This time she first appears as a girl on a train in the hands of a detective. While the latter is playing with some children across the aisle, Kate leaps from the moving train and dashes to a nearby suburban place. The owner, James Marlow, once escaped from the clutches of the law himself, and protects her. Kate lives at the Marlow place for two years, at the end of which time Marlow is killed under exciting circumstances. The son, David, loves her, and Kate's past is brought up against her. But in the end her own name and that of the elder Marlow are cleared. This number also shows a step in advance for two-reel subjects.

"SLEUTHS."

Paramount-Mack Sennett Comedy Features Ben Turpin and Charles Lynn.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

A GENTLEMAN CROOK, who walks into a private detective office and gets away with all of the money belonging to the proprietors and also with their pretty stenographer, is one of the characters in "Sleuths," a two-part Paramount-Mack Sennett comedy featuring Ben Turpin and Charles Lynn as the two gumshoe men. Tom Kennedy plays the part of the crook, and Mary Prevost is the good looking typewritist. The ability of Messrs. Turpin and Lynn to do funny falls, pull comic faces and keep the nonsense moving and the spectator on the broad grin is given continous proof during the action of this comedy. R. Richard Jones, the director, has been apt at inventing new bits of business, and the production is worthy its well known trade mark.

"MODERN LOVE."

Six-Part Special Universal Offering Features Mae Murray as Girl Actress.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

IN her part as Della Arnold in this six-reel Universal subject Mae Murray plays with greater vivacity than she has shown in recent numbers. The story, written by F. McGrew Willis and directed by Robert Leonard, gives her ample opportunity for contrast of moods, and she makes the most of them. She at first appears as a young actress temporarily out of an engagement, but facing the world cheerfully. Later she becomes an artist's model, and it is then that her entangled love affairs bring on suffering of the emotional sort. But the close once more brings her happiness.

The story is one of love affairs that refuse to run smoothly. Shortly after she becomes a model Della meets Julian Lawrence, whom she refuses recognition in the studio scenes, which are well staged. Lawrence is the man who has clouded her life. The artist, Wilbur Henderson, falls in love with her, and almost on the eve of their wedding Lawrence sees fit to tell Henderson things which decide him to call the match off. Then follows an unexpected turn of the plot, when George Addison, a wealthy young man whose intentions had previously seemed doubtful, comes to her rescue with proffers of real love and an offer of marriage.

The story of Della's affair with Lawrence is depicted as she tells it to Addison. Lawrence and she had been forced to stop at the same hotel in a country town while playing one-night stands, and he had made unsuccessful advances toward her after registering as man and wife. The scenes in which he attacks her and is afterward thrown out of the hotel by the indignant landlord are presented carefully, and should give no offense. The plot is not notable for any great novelty, but the cast is well chosen. Besides Mae Murray in the lead it includes P. McCullough, Arthur Shirley, Claire DuBrey and George Chesebro.

"BY HOOK OR CROOK."

Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley in World Comedy-Drama That Will Amuse.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

SILLY ASS heroes who develop almost unbelievable strength of mind when put to the test have long been favorite characters in fiction. The leading part in "By Hook or Crook," a five-reel World picture, comes under this head. Harry O. Hoyt wrote the story, and Clara S. Beranger made the scenario, which was directed by Dell Henderson. Carlyle Blackwell plays the hero, whose father has too much money and whose mother has too little sense. Between the liberality of the one and the molly-coddling of the other Freddie Pritchard is rapidly reverting into a type of worthless humanity that is considerably below a tailor's dummy, although the principal occupation of these dainty gentlemen is changing from one suit of clothes to another.

Freddy is quite as silly an ass as any of the breed. When first introduced he is still indulging in a beauty sleep, and his valet is afraid to waken him. After being permitted to gaze upon him in his perfumed bath the spectator is given other evidence that Freddie isn't worth his keep and would be utterly useless in a front line trench. Then comes the moment that tries his true metal, and Freddie delivers the goods.

Gloria Nevins and her mother are being robbed by the girl's uncle, who holds one hundred thousand dollars worth of gems belonging to them. Gloria and Freddie are in love, and the young lady tells Freddie about the gems. A bright idea strikes her beau. With the help of his valet and a book on the gentle art of safe-cracking, Freddie prepares to pry open uncle's strong box. A pair of professional cracksmen get the start of him, but he arrives in time to help capture the regular burglars and secure the jewels. He also secures evidence that puts a stop to uncle's robbing his relatives, and makes his father proud of him and happy to receive Gloria as a daughter-in-law.

Carlyle Blackwell does a number of Fairbanks stunts near the finish of the picture and meets all the demands of the character. Evelyn Greeley as Gloria is pleasing, and Jack Drumier is a thoroughly good Frederic Pritchard, Sr. Jennie Ellison, Nora Cecil, Frank Doane, Alice Chapin and Henry Warwick are useful members of the cast. Louis Ostland was the cameraman.

"A NYMPH OF THE FOOTHILLS."

Gladys Leslie in Conventional Blue Ridge Mountain Story Produced by Vitagraph.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE title of the five-part Vitagraph picture, "A Nymph of the Foothills," indicates clearly the nature of the story written by Rex Taylor and directed by Frederic Thomson. A rustic heroine, whose want of accomplishments is more than counter balanced, in the eyes of the city bred hero, by her bright smile and golden curls, is again made the central figure of a screen romance.

Much of the success of such a theme depends upon the personality of the actress who impersonates the girl. Gladys Leslie has the youthful charm and good looks that are half the battle, and the author has been liberal with her allowance of telling situations. The story is conventional but permits Emmy Chaney, the mountain girl, to experience an assortment of emotions, from light-hearted gayety to tragic despair, and Gladys Leslie meets all requirements of the part.

A pleasing feature of the production is the scenic embellishment. The mountain views are frequently of exceptional beauty.

Narrow-minded prejudice against city folk caused Lon Chaney, a bewhiskered southern mountaineer, to refuse his consent when Ben Kirkland, a wealthy young chap, who is camping in the neighborhood, asks for his daughter's hand. Lon drives Ben off at the point of his shotgun. The pair then go to the camp and are married by one of Ben's companions, who is a minister.

Ben then takes his wife home to his parents, and Emmy's table manners cause him considerable embarrassment. In the meantime, another of Ben's camp companions has hurried back to the city under the belief that he has killed Emmy's father, while shooting at a squirrel. Events are shaped so that Ben is accused of the murder, and Emmy is made to believe that her marriage is not legal. All the tangles are straightened out happily at the end.

The supporting cast is satisfactory and contains the names of Alfred Kappeper, Walter Hiers, Charles Hope, Arnold Lucy, John Pierson, Bradley Barker, Charles A. Stevenson, Jane Jennings, and Greta Ardin.

"ANGEL CHILD."

Plaza-Hodkinson Production Features Kathleen Clifford as Mischievous Girl.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

STORIES with the scenes located at girls' schools have been quite frequent and have considerable similarity. This five-reel offering, written by Hal McInroy and directed by Henry Otto, has a good many points in common with previous comedies of the kind. The scenes at the seminary are well done, and the bevy of girls in the large cast give a certain air of reality to that part of the production.

Kathleen Clifford appears as Glory Moore, youngest daughter of a financier. She is a romping creature, just verging on the tomboy type, without carrying her tricks to a disagreeable extreme. She makes things hum around her home and is finally sent to the girls' school, in charge of a severe principal named Miss Purcell. Glory proceeds to stir up excitement at the school and is soon a leader among the girls. As is usual in a comedy depending upon a series of humorous incidents, some of them stand out more strongly than others. That is the case in this offering, but some of them will prove amusing.

There is still another side to the story, which has to do with a letter taken by Glory when she went to school. This letter contains some business secrets of her father, with reference to cornering the supar market. The girl, in taking the letter, in which she wrapped up some candy, started some serious financial troubles, which are rather vague in character. This part of the production would have had more suspense if it had been a little clearer. But through these financial troubles she meets her future husband, a young lawyer.

Others in the cast are Leslie T. Peacock, Rita Harlan and Fred Church.

"THE MARRIAGE RING."

Ince-Paramount Picture Starring Enid Bennett Has Novel German Spy Story.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

BY selecting the Sandwich Islands as the scene of the most of the action in "The Marriage Ring," a five-part Ince-Paramount picture, written by John Lynch and starring Enid Bennett, the author has thrown considerable novelty about a German spy story. Fred Niblo has directed the production skillfully, and the acting of the entire cast is excellent. There is no want of exciting episodes througout the plot. Anne Mertons, the young wife of a gambler who is in the pay of German spies, learns her husband's true character while in San Francisco, when he tries to force her to help fleece a wealthy man, who lives in Hawaii. Anne warns the man, and Mertons attempts to shoot her. In the struggle the gambler is shot and his wife leaves him for dead. She boards a steamer for the Sandwich Islands, and meets Rodney Heathe and his mother.

Heathe is a sugar planter and a fine young chap. Mrs. Heathe asks Anne to the plantation. In a short time the young people fall in love. The man whom Anne saved from being robbed in San Francisco is a friend of Heathe's, and his arrival at the plantation almost puts an end to her new found happiness. She denies she has ever met him, however, and Heathe believes her. A greater danger threatens, when Anne discovers that Mertons is still alive and is living in the neighborhood.

The gambler is sharing the hut with a native girl, and is rapidly drinking himself in a state of frenzy. He discovers Anne and forces her to go with him. While at the hut, she learns that the German spy has arranged with Mertons to set fire to the cane fields. The plot is carried out, but Anne escapes from the hut in time to warn Heathe, and prompt measures prevent any serious damage. Mertons perishes miserably.

The Hawaiian scenes are realistic, one of the famous volcanoes of the Island being used in the picture. Enid Bennett, as beautiful as ever and as faithful to the demand of her part, makes an admirable Anne Mertons. Jack Holt is a manly Rodney Heathe, and Robert McKim does not leave Mertons one redeeming quality. Maude George as Aho, Charles K. French as the spy and Lydia Knott as Mrs. Heathe complete the cast.

"THE BURDEN OF PROOF."

Marion Davies in Select Screen Version of Americanized Sardou Drama.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

MARION DAVIES has been supplied with a screen version of Sardou's fine stage play, "Diplomacy," as her second picture release. Produced under the Select trademark by Julius Steger, the scenario was prepared by S. M. Waller. In many ways it is an excellent piece of work. The story has been Americanized and brought down to date. The atmosphere of diplomatic intrigue, which is the groundwork of the original readily adapts itself to conditions in Washington which the present war might bring about. As in all of his plays, Sardou uses the gloved hand, and the efforts of secret agents to convey stolen information out of this country are made with the quiet adroitness that distinguished the French author's method.

A simple love story is told in the opening. Then, a jealous woman starts to weave a mesh of apparent proof about the young wife of a government official intrusted with important dispatches. The means by which the husband is made to believe his wife has stolen the dispatches and sent them to a German agent, and the way the real culprit is caught form an absorbing story.

Elaine Brooks and her mother are people of good social position, but of little wealth, when the daughter marries Robert Ames. Just before they start on their honeymoon, Elaine sits down to write a letter to the editor of a Washington paper. The man is a German agent. Before she seals the envelope she is called away, and a Mrs. Durand, who is in the editor's employ, and who has already stolen one of the dispatches from Elaine's husband, offers to seal it for her. This is done after Mrs. Durand has slipped the dispatch into the envelope. The securing of the dispatch and the establishing of Elaine's innocence take up the rest of the action.

Marion Davies is a beautiful Elaine. The part by no means dominates the story, however. The lighter scenes she acts fairly well, but the emotional portions of her work leave a great deal to be desired. The members of the well selected supporting cast consist of Mary Richards, Eloise Clement, John Merkyl, L. Rogers Lytton, Willard Cooley, Fred Lenox, and Maude Love. Photography by Andre Barlatier.

"RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE."

William Farnum Manly Hero of Immensly Satisfying Screen Version of Zane Grey's Novel.

Reviewed by Walter K. Hill.

WITH a corking good novel to begin with, manly William Farnum to play its star part, and an evenly balanced and talented supporting company to manipulate, Director Frank Lloyd could do no less than turn out the entirely satisfactory entertainment "Riders of the Purple Sage" affords. There is the dash and fire of the open plains and strength of the rugged mountains to inspire the imagination; horsemen ride with skill and daring that quicken the pulse of the spectator, and William Farnum acts the hero's part with wholesome naturalness that merits unstinted praise.

Zane Grey's story of life among the Mormons many years ago lends itself admirably to screen representation. Mr. Farnum and his associates went to ideal locations to reflect the "atmosphere" of the piece and then and there collaborated to a delightful moving picture conclusion. Best of all there is promise of more of these Zane Grey stories, although this number is complete in itself.

Lassiter having avenged himself upon the Mormons by drenching them in an avalanche of rocks, is left in a beautiful valley with the woman he has learned to love. Free from intrusion they remain to lead a life of promised happiness until "The Rainbow Trail," a sequal picture, shall open to them a new road.

There should be an extra purpose in beguiling the public into a visit to "Riders of the Purple Sage." The splendid entertainment they will derive from this William Farnum treat will be an incentive to a "come back" when the companion picture is shown. If the screen ever served an entertaining purpose it will be acclaimed as useful and engaging while this Zane Grey passes in satisfying review.

"MYSTIC FACES."

Jap Star Very Pleasing in Triangle Picture of Chinatown.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

A CHINESE HERO, played by the Japanese actor Jack Abbe, lends novelty to "Mystic Faces," a five-part Triangle picture written by Magnus Ingleton, and directed by E. Mason Hopper. There have been any number of stage plays and screen stories with Chinatown for the principal scene of action, but the author of "Mystic Faces" has handled his theme along new lines, and the local color of San Francisco's Oriental district is so truthfully reproduced that the picture has a welcome freshness. The story is melodramatic, with German spies and a kidnapped maiden and a general mix-up at the finish between the police and the toughs that frequent Chinatown. The character of Yano is so likable, however, and his scenes with his almond-eyed sweetheart and "Gow", his dog, so human, the entire picture seems new and worth while.

Letty Stanford, a wealthy American girl, and Lieutenant Maxwell, her fiance, visit an antique store in Chinatown and make a number of purchases. Yano, the nephew of the proprietor, is sent to deliver the goods. The young chap is extremely fond of his dog, and Letty saves it from the dog-catcher.

The American girl's devotion to the Red Cross excites the hatred of two German secret agents, and they have her kidnapped. Yano gets track of the hiding place, and risks his life in rescuing Letty. Stunned by a fall from a window, the Chinese is picked up for dead and carried into his uncle's house. The tear stained face of Tama is the first thing he sees when revived. The reward he receives for saving Letty enables him to make the girl his wife.

Jack Abbe is the Charlie Ray of the screen. His smile and good nature and real acting ability make it easy for him to win friends. Martha Taka is a rolly-polly little Jap woman, with unexpected talent for the screen. Larry Steers, Clara Morris, W. H. Bainbridge, M. Seke and Liu Chung are the other members of the capable cast. Clyde R. Cook was the cameraman.

"THE SECRET CODE."

Gloria Swanson Has Few Opportunities in Five-Part Triangle Picture.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel

MOST of the situations in "The Secret Code," a five part Triangle picture featuring Gloria Swanson, lack the conviction necessary to make them effective. Adela Rogers St. John wrote the story, and Albert Parker directed it. The production is creditable all through, social and political life in Washington being excellently reproduced.

The star plays a submissive young wife, who sheds many tears because her senator husband is forced to devote so much of his time to secret business for the United States. The part does not permit Gloria Swanson to do any really impressive acting. She takes advantage of her few opportunities and carries out the author's conception of the character with her accustomed skill. The best acting part in the story falls to Barney Sherry, as Senator John Calhoun Rand. The senator is a man of action and handles his public and also his private affairs with firmness and intelligence. Actor and part are well suited to each other.

Senator Rand is fifteen years the senior of Sally Carter when he makes her his wife. Mrs. Lola Walling, a German agent, finds that a young Russian Baron is devoting a good deal of time to the senator's wife, and does all she can to arouse the husband's suspicions. The Baron's mother is an exile and is hiding in Washington. Her son prevails upon Sally to visit her, and events are so juggled that the young woman is compromised.

Later on Sally is the innocent victim of another plot of the Walling woman. Her husband is tricked into believing that his wife is conveying secret information to the enemy by the use of crocheted muffers. Husband and wife are about to separate forever when a Government detective clears up the plot.

Rha Alexander, Leslie Stewart, Joe King, Dorothy Wallace and Lee Phelps have congenial roles. Photographed by Pliny Horne.

"FOR HUSBANDS ONLY."

Lois Weber-Universal Production Presents Story of Moderate Strength.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS six-part Jewel offering was adapted by Lois Weber from a story by G. B. Stern and directed by the adapter and Phillips Smalley. Its special points of strength are found in the general presentation, rather than in the story itself. The settings, lighting and cast are all pleasing, in fact in the matter of externals the subject is much above the ordinary. The plot is one of the risque type and has not enough suspense to give it a strong holding interest. Shortening to five-reels would perhaps help the production.

Mildred Harris plays the part of a convent-bred girl, Toni Wylde, who falls in love, on her first introduction to society, with a predatory bachelor named Rolin Van D'Arcy. The latter part is very capably assumed by Lewis J. Cody, who gets his effects as a male heartbreaker without visible effort. Samuel Dodge, the third character of importance, is played by Fred Goodwins.

The story begins with Toni's society debut, at which she speedily falls a victim to the lure held out by Van D'Arcy. She mistakes his first kiss as a pledge of love, in her simple way, and when she discovers that he is playing with her, she plans revenge upon him. She marries Samuel Dodge, a true-hearted, but slow-witted fellow, and then proceeds to toy with Van D'Arcy's affections. She succeeds in getting him violently in love with her, but the situations lack suspense because the observer feels that there is really nothing at stake. The closing scenes have a pleasing touch of humor.

The artistic effects achieved in the private theatricals are noteworthy, particularly in the pantomime toward the close. The atmosphere of the social smart set is also finely depicted.

"HE COMES UP SMILING."

Attractive Farce-Comedy Released by Artcraft Featuring Douglas Fairbanks.

By Louis Reeves Harrison

FAR above the "vehicle," this story is admirably suited to the talented Fairbanks so far as its congenial spirit is concerned, and it affords him opportunity in chasing an escaped canary for his acrobatics, which is entirely rational. He leaves his position behind the cage-like bars of a bank teller's window to chase the escaped canary of the vice-president, and this chase becomes one of the wildest ever shown on the screen. It leads up to a philosophical tramp, who suggests that both man and bird be allowed to enjoy freedom. The suggestion is adopted, and the bank teller becomes a hobo. He is returning from a swim in his wild life, when he becomes pursued by some angry bees. To escape from them he hurries into the clothes of another swimmer, adopts the new identity and falls into an interesting series of adventures, ending with a pretty little love episode.

It might be said by those unaware of the yet unexploited ability of Fairbanks that he is at his best in this picture. He is very human, in spite of tendency to knock his support about rather inhumanly, and there is less of the braggadocio in his attitude toward the weak. It is an endearing characterization, frank and unaffected, when the hobo bank teller finds himself injected into a phase of life enjoyed only by the leisure class for a week because of his assumed personality. It is such a clever piece of work that it serves to indicate still greater possibilities in this versatile comedian. He will eventually subordinate his acrobatic performances to the deeper and more amusing revelations of human weakness in comedy without the farce element, using his remarkable physical strength only when the role and the occasion requires it. Restless, always on edge with excess of nervous energy, it is difficult for him to impose upon himself the restraint of fine comedy, but he is getting there, and with both feet. A large Rivoli audience warmly approved the play.

"THE SOURCE."

Wallace Reid, Hero of Vigorous Lumber Camp Story on Paramount Program.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

A YOUNG chap's rise from the downfall brought about by dissipation is traced entertainingly in "The Source," a five-part Paramount picture starring Wallace Reid. The author of the story is Clarence Buddington Kelland, and Monte M. Katterjohn made the scenario. George H. Melford directed the production. The vigorous life of a lumber camp is shown, and the picture is full of energizing outdoor scenes—stretches of unbroken forest, the rush of thousands of logs down a swollen river.

There is a suggestion of the effect of the German secret agent system on our industrial aims, and the story has several points of good Americanism; but it is the regeneration of the hero and the satisfactory outcome of his love affair with the pretty heroine that has first claim on the spectator's attention. Comedy relief is supplied by a "pust"-master, a quaint old character named Pop Sprowl, who turns out to be a silent partner in the rich lumber company that owns the camp.

The title refers to the forests that furnish the logs used in making certain chemicals that have an important bearing on the war. When Van Twiller Yard wakes up from a drunken sleep, he finds that he has been shanghied up to a lumber camp. Yard is a man of education and brains. He recognizes that here is the place to fight and conquer his weakness. Svea Nord, the daughter of the superintendent, also has a great deal to do with his resolution.

Yard is obliged to thrash the bully of the camp and lead a body of men against the guards of a water company that is controlled by German money. The company wants to prevent the spring drive of logs, and have refused to open one of their gates and let the water into the stream. After a general mix-up Yard's side wins.

Wallace Reid has lost none of his well known ability to visualize the hero of such a story. His Van Twiller Yard is quite as likable and as much of an artistic success as any of his previous impersonations. Ann Little fits the character of Svea snugly, and Raymond Hatton centers a great deal of amused attention on the part of Pop Sprowl. Theodore Roberts, James Cruze, Noah Berry, Charles West, Charles Ogle, Nina Byron and G. Butler Clonborough are other capable members of the cast.

"THE LAW OF THE NORTH"

Paramount Presents Charles Ray in a Sanguinary Drama of Life Among Canadian Trappers.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

HIGHEST value of this production is that of some exceptionally fine camera work, some very effective presentation of the subtitles and the acting of Charles Ray and Robert McKim. The latter represents an accomplished villain of extreme cruelty, who stabs to death the Post Commendante while eloping with his daughter, who holds the girl up to be shot when attacked in an old trading post by her revengeful brother, impersonated by Charles Ray, who stabs one of his dogs to death in order to throw the body to pursuing wolves when attempting his final escape from vengeance, a villain dyed deep red straight through. In addition the murder of the post Commander is discovered through the dripping of blood through the ceiling down upon a table, as in "The Girl of the Golden West." Emphasis is placed upon the sanguinary.

The female characters in the story are colorless, without definite characterization, and just that far removed from active interest. The same may be said of subordinates, who are moved about automatically as if incapable of individual initiative, a fault purely of direction. This causes a story which might have otherwise been given power to awaken emotion to revert to the early examples of cowboy drama. Ray as a vengeful hero is not accorded nobility of character—he throws an innocent young girl into the hands of a lecherous Indian who wants a white squaw, and the motives ascribed to him are only primitive ones, very destructive to the heroic idea of noble compassion and capability of self-sacrifice. Ray does his best with the role and lifts it out of mediocrity by whatever is attractive in his own personality, but all the drama there is falls to the heavy, admirably impersonated by McKim, but heavy with reminiscence of ancient melodrama. Mr. Ray is at his best where there is character portrayal.

"TRANSIENTS IN ARCADIA."

One of the Best O. Henry Stories Yet Produced By Broadway Star Features.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

EVERY moment of this pictured presentation demonstrates the value of story value, and this is not without full recognition of fine direction and capable acting. Edward Earle and Agnes Ayres belong in the artist class for their work in this one playlet. It is a gem. Shown on a Rivoli program with a larger and more elaborate comedy, having the added value of one of the most prominent stars, it held its own in public approval, all of which goes to establish what is gradually coming to be recognized, the necessity of story merit in addition to that of direction and interpretation. There is a tender little romance involved, one made entirely plausible by realistic settings and its appeal to human sympathy, yet it excites roars of laughter from its delicate humor besides.

It begins with tranquility. A well-dressed young man registers at the Astor Hotel. An interesting young lady follows with a signature having a delicious foreign flavor. The two are assigned opposite rooms on the same floor. A flirtation on the roof garden follows, and they fall in love. This movement is watched by a mysterious individual, who looks like the ambassador of some foreign court watching an escaped princess. High suspense follows, and it is all so cleverly done that the Rivoli audience, which accorded the play a veritable ovation at the end, was on edge until that time as to the outcome. The young man and the young lady are a couple of make-believes after all, and are brought to a confession of their timely comedy when the mysterious man turns out to be merely a house detective. The story is clean, effective and pure comedy. It will win with any audience.

"TO HIM THAT HATH."

World Picture Features Montagu Love in Story of Slum Sections.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS six-part World Picture is adapted from a novel by Leroy Scott and produced under direction of Oscar Apfel. Montagu Love plays the leading role, that of a young man of the slums named David Aldrich. Gertrude McCoy has the role of the heroine, Helen Chambers. Other parts are taken by Reginald Carrington, Clio Ayres, Marion Barney and Charley Jackson.

The story as a whole is one of only average strength. Though there is abundant plot interest it is not of the most convincing sort, the development tending toward melodrama in many scenes. At the same time there are occasional touches of human sympathy that do much to carry along the interest. A production of this type may find quite a strong welcome in the slum sections themselves, for it has considerable heart appeal and the atmosphere is faithfully depicted, without undue sordidness.

David Aldrich, the hero, shows up in St. Christopher's Mission, under the tutelage of Philip Morton. The latter is the guiding spirit of the mission, and at his death David comes upon information to the effect that Morton had had an affair with a woman at one time and had taken some mission funds to pay her blackmail. David, rather than expose the secret life of his dead friend, pleads guilty to the theft and serves a five-year prison term. This basic situation may have been convincing in the original story, but the adaptation does not carry with any degree of strength. Later events concern David's release from prison, his future struggles to earn a living and keep straight. His friendship for the boy thief is a good touch and also the love of Kate for himself. In the end he wins the affection of his first sweetheart at the mission, and then the novel he had written years before is published.

COMMENTS

General Film Company

A BIRD OF BAGDAD (Broadway Star Feature Company).—An O. Henry story shown at the Rivoli, where its amusing suspense held the audience well. Of light material, but entertining. Reviewed in last week's issue.

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation

JOHANNA ENLISTS (Artcraft), Sept. 29.—A bright, domestic comedy of war-time with Mary Pickford in one of her most amusing characterizations, an entire Artillery regiment in support. Reviewed in last week's issue.

ROMANCE AND BRASS TACKS (Paramount-Flagg), Sept. 29.—A comedy of outworn materials, whose subtitles are efforts to be funny. The entire production below present standards.

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation

THE TURN OF THE WHEEL (Star Series Productions), Sept. 2.—Geraldine Farrar plays her first strictly modern role in this five-part picture. It is a mystery story and is full of interest. It was written by Tex Chatwate and directed by Reginald Barker. A lengthy review appeared in the issue of September 14, page 1609.

W. W. Hodkinson Corporation

ANGEL CHILD (Plaza), Sept. 9.—A five-reel comedy written by Hal McInroy and directed by Henry Otto. Kathleen Clifford is featured as a romping girl, up to all sorts of tricks. She is sent to a girls' seminary, where she leads in the fun. The story also has a financial end and the usual love story. The production is one of average strength. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

PRISONERS OF THE PINES (Hampton) Sept. 16.—J. Warren Kerrigan plays a French-Canadian trapper in this six-part story, written by Kenneth B. Clarke and released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. The picture has good local color, but is poorly supplied with action. It is reviewed at length on page 1610, issue of Sept. 14.

Jewel Productions, Inc.

FOR HUSBANDS ONLY (Lois Weber).—A six-part Jewel production, adapted by Lois Weber from a story by G. B. Stern. It features Mildred Harris as a convent-bred girl who falls in love with a predatory bachelor. When she learns his intentions she determines upon revenge. The story is not uninteresting, but is too long and contains but little suspense. The general presentation is excellent. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Metro Pictures Corporation

THE SILENT WOMAN, Sept. 2.—Taken from a story by Lois Zellner, this five-part picture presents Edith Storey in a congenial role and contains a well defined plot. It was given a longer review on page 1609, Sept. 14 issue.

Mutual Film Corporation

SCREEN TELEGRAM NO. 52 (Mutual), August 27.—This issue includes scenes of wreckage in the wake of a western tornado, the funeral of aviator Morris, captured German guns to be used in Liberty Loan drive, and interesting scenes at the New York policemen's benefit.

SCREEN TELEGRAM NO. 53 (Mutual), August 31.—Interesting items of this issue show some of Uncle Sam's boys ready for action at the front, American airmen being honored for bravery, the funeral of our fighting ace Lufberry, and Pelham Bay jackies winning regatta on the Hudson.

PIN FEATHER PICKANINNIES (Outing-Chester), Sept. 1.—The 10th number of the Outing-Chester series is one of the best. It presents feathered songsters and water fowl with their young. A full review will be found in the Motion Picture Educator of this issue.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

THE PHANTOM'S TRAIL (Pathe), Sept. 8.—Episode No. 4 of "Hands Up." This contains a number of thrilling situations, the best of which is the scene where Hands Up tries to pull Echo up to the suspension bridge with a rope. This situation is staged very successfully. During the course of the instalment, Echo is captured first by a band of renegade Indians and then by border bandits. A good instalment.

OFFICIAL WAR REVIEW NO. 11 (Pathe), Sept. 8.—Further scenes from the Western front, where great guns roar in actual battle and men are shown caring for the dead and wounded. Streams of captured Huns are seen; close-ups of Haig, Balfour, Foch and Pershing are included. There is real war in this issue.

"GETAWAY" KATE (Astra-Pathe), Sept. 29.—A two-reel number, written by Frank Leon Smith and directed by George Seitz. This features Helene Chadwick as a supposed young lady forger, who escapes from a moving train and enters upon a series of adventures which hold the interest firmly. There is a murder mystery in the case. This is full of good, consistent action and makes a strong two-reel subject.

BEES IN HIS BONNET (Rolin-Pathe).—A typical comic number featuring Harold Lloyd, Harry Pollard and Bebe Daniels. The scenes occur in a millinery shop, where Harold is employed. Some laughable moments occur. The subject is a worthy successor of previous numbers.

WHEN NATURE SMILES (Post-Pathe Scenic).—A beautifully composed series of views portraying Nature in some of her bright moods through well-chosen glimpses of mountain, stream and forest. Poetic subtitles. Rivoli audience pleased. Reviewed in last week's issue.

Select Pictures Corporation

THE BURDEN OF PROOF (Select).—Based on a play by Sardou, this five-part picture is Marion Davies' second Select release. The story is an absorbing one. Julius Steger directed the production. The star is as beautiful as ever. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Triangle Film Corporation

MYSTIC FACES, Sept. 8.—Chinatown atmosphere prevades most of the scenes in this five-part picture, the clever Jap actor, Jack Abbe, having the principal character. E. M. Ingleton wrote the scenario and E. Mason Hopper was the director. The picture is interesting all through. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Universal Film Company

MODERN LOVE (Universal Special), Sept. 1.—A six-part number, written by F. McGrew Willis and directed by Robert Leonard, with Mae Murray in the leading role. This is a story of entangled love affairs with dramatic moments of the emotional sort. It is an entertaining number of its kind. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

PLEASE HIT ME (Star Comedy), Sept. 28.—Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran appear in this as two young men who make it a practice to get into automobile accidents and collect damages from the owners. This is only fairly strong as there is scarcely enough plot to bring it up to the usual standard of these performers. It makes an average number.

Feature Pauline Starke as Jennie and Harry Mestayer as Montague Booth.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Intensely Dramatic Disclosures of High Life in a Theatrical Boarding House.
Sidelights on Theatrical Life Enlivened by Thrills and Sensations.
Solving a Stage Mystery Is More Difficult in Real Life.
Photodrama Filled With Thrills for Lovers of Sensation.
Heroes in the Making Are Sometime Villains When Unmasked.
Photodrama of Impelling Interest Furnishes "Surprise Finish."

Advertising Angles: The public always likes behind the scenes stuff. Tell them that this gives back stage glimpses of the theatre and the medicine shows. From another angle tell that it is the story of a leading man who had the nerve to live beyond his stage career and prove himself a man. If you can get a glib talker, put him in a frock coat and let him sell Oldson's Death Defying Pellets in the lobby with a ticket to the show thrown in. The pellets can be jelly beans or similar candies in "pay" envelopes.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six sheets. Special process art heralds. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Photographs. Slides. Electros and mats. Triangle Magazine. Press sheet.

Released September 15.

"T'OTHER DEAR CHARMER."

World-Pictures Presents Louise Huff in a Dashing Story of a Society Girl Who Had a Jekyl-Hyde Sweetheart Who Proved Himself a Jekyl.

Cast.

Betty Hallowell.....Louise Huff
Tom Wentworth.....John Bowers
Captain Samuel Hallowell..Charles Dungan
Aunt Abby.....Eugenie Woodward
Anne Vanderhook.....Valda Valkyrien
Mrs. Vanderhook.....Grace Stevens
Harry Porter.....Jack Raymond
Doctor Bullock.....Ezra Walck
Treasurer.....Hubert Barrington
Butler.....Patrick Foy
Mildred Morton.....Florence Billings
Mrs. Wentworth.....Ida Darling

Directed by William P. S. Earle.

The Story: To make money for the Red Cross, Betty leases her handsome home for the summer. When a French maid is demanded by the new tenants and none is forthcoming, she masquerades as the maid to save the day. Tom Wentworth, son of the new tenant, falls in love with Betty as Bettina and later with Betty as her own self, and Betty, in each guise, accuses him of being false to the other, explaining that "Bettina" is a cousin. Finally Tom decides that he likes the maid better than the mistress and elopes with her, though it means being cut out of his father's estate, but explanations save the day and the money, and complete the humiliation of Betty's rival.

Feature Louise Huff as Betty Hallowell and John Bowers as Tom Wentworth.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Proving Whether or Not a Man May Love Two Girls at the Same Time—and Get Away With It.
Delightful Story of Blind Youth Plus a Thrilling Eye-Opener.
Louise Huff Presented for the First Time as Star of World Pictures.
Beautiful Scenery Blends Pleasingly With Sweet Love Story.
Romance of Youth, Love and the Delirium of Summer Moonbeams.
How a Love-Blind Swain Proposed Twice to the Same Girl—by Mistake.

Advertising Angles: If you have not had Miss Huff before explain that this is a new World star and refer to her previous connections with Paramount and Lubin. Tell that it is she who played with Jack Pickford in some of his greatest successes. Present the high lights of the story interestingly in your newspaper work, and play up portraits of the star. If you can get one of the Red Cross posters, The Greatest Mother in the World, you can hook up your advertising with this very profitably, also you can work in with the local Red Cross, possibly letting them sell tickets on a percentage.

Advertising Aids: Two one-sheets, two three-sheets, two six-sheets, two eight-sheets, and one 24-sheet. Eight 8x11 black-and-white, eight 11x14 colored, and two 22x28 colored lobby displays. One two-column cut, two one-column cuts. Slides, press sheets, and music cues.

Released September 16.

"HER ONLY WAY."

Joseph M. Schenck Presents Norma Talmadge in the Fascinating Story of a Girl Who Fortunately Found Her True Happiness in Time. Released Through Select Pictures Corporation.

Cast.

Lucille Westbrook.....Norma Talmadge
Joseph Marshall.....Eugene O'Brien
Paul Belmont.....Ramsey Wallace
Judge Hampton Bates.....E. A. Warren
Mrs. Randolph.....Jobyna Howland

Directed by Sidney Franklin.

The Story: Lucille Westbrook in vain tries to solve her problem, but when Jo Marshall bitterly tells her that the love of luxury stands between them, she tells him that she will marry Paul Belmont, the wealthy man. After the wedding Lucille is the neglected wife and finally her husband declares his intention of divorcing her for the sake of a society vampire, Mrs. Randolph, whose name has long been connected with his. Disgusted with life, Lucille decides to end it all, and after killing Belmont, shoots herself. When Belmont arrives for his answer, his ring awakens the girl, who has fallen asleep in her chair and has dreamed the story. Awake at last, Lucille tells Jo that he has always been the one.

Feature Norma Talmadge as Lucille West and Eugene O'Brien as Joseph Marshall.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Norma Talmadge Star of the Best Picture She Has Ever Presented.
Accepting the Only Way Between Love and Duty and Poverty and Riches.
An Absorbing Love Story With a Climax That Will Surprise You.
Be Prepared for "Something Different" in Motion Picture Plots.
Story of a World-Old Problem Given a Brand New Twist.
The Struggles of a Girl Brought Face to Face With Life's Problems.

The Marvelous PROJECTION of this greatest picture of modern times is synchronized accurately to the fraction of a second with the beautiful music and effects.
B. F. PORTER, 729 7TH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY, 11TH FLOOR

Advertising Angles: Play more to the personality of the star than to the story. Play up her personality and her screen appeal. Do not attempt to capitalize the closeness of the title to a sensational story. Make it clear that this is the story of a young girl's choice and that she makes the right choice in time.

Advertising Aids: Two one-sheets, two three-sheet, one six-sheet, one 24-sheet. Window cards, 14x21. Heralds. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14, 22x28. Slides. Cuts, two one-column, one one-half-column cut of star, and one one-column and one two-column cuts of star.

"A JAPANESE NIGHTINGALE."

Pathe Presents Fannie Ward in a Dainty Story of a Persecuted Japanese Maiden Who Finds a Refuge in the Arms of a Brave American.

Cast.

Yuki.....Fannie Ward
John Bigelow.....W. E. Lawrence

Directed by George Fitzmaurice.

The Story: Yuki, to escape the detested marriage to a roue Baron planned by her stepmother, runs away and takes refuge in a tea house, where she encounters John Bigelow, a chum of her brother, who is a student in an American college. The marriage broker, seeing his chances of a commission grow slim, follows her to the tea house and Bigelow determines upon an immediate marriage at the American consulate. The broker steals the marriage record, killing the consul during his theft. The brother returns and is told that Yuki is living with Bigelow. He demands the marriage certificate, which cannot be produced. The situation becomes acute when the broker, badly treated by the Baron, confesses and returns the certificate.

Feature Fannie Ward as Yuki and W. E. Lawrence as John Bigelow.

Program and Advertising Phrases: What Happened When a Japanese Girl of High Caste Ran Away to Avoid a Distasteful Marriage.

Fannie Ward Presented as Heroine of Gripping Oriental Photodrama.

Love at First Sight Brings Dan Cupid Into Japanese Tea Garden.

The Love Affairs of a Japanese Belle Tinged With American Grit.

How a Japanese Butterfly Found Happiness in the Land of the Free.

Beauties of the Orient Reflected in Sumptuous Photoplay Production.

Advertising Angles: Boom Miss Ward and contrast her work as the Japanese girl with her powerful performance in "The Yellow Ticket." Dwell upon the beautiful setting of this play. If you can borrow some Japanese miniature gardens you can use these as the basis for window displays. Concentrate on newspaper work and the use of stills. Perhaps your printing office has some stick material that can be used for atmosphere.

Advertising Aids: One one-sheet, two three-sheets, one six-sheet, one 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 11x14, both in sepia and color, also 22x28. Slide. Campaign book. Cuts.

"HE COMES UP SMILING."

Artcraft Presents Douglas Fairbanks in a Richly Farcical Story Based Upon the New York Stage Success of the Same Title.

Cast.

The Watermelon, Jerry Martin, Douglas Fairbanks
Mike.....Herbert Standing
Baron Bean.....Bull Montana
Batchelor.....Albert McQuarrie
Billy.....Marjorie Daw
John Bartlett.....Frank Campeau
The General.....Jay Dwiggins
Louise.....Kathleen Kirkham

Directed by Allan Dwan.

The Story: Jerry Martin, a bank clerk in a country town, has for his chief duty the care of the vice-president's canary. One day the bird escapes and Jerry gives chase. The pursuit takes him into the country, where he becomes fascinated by the care-free life of the hobo, and becomes a knight of the road. But the open road merely leads to the millionaire's palace and domesticity again, though not until a great deal has happened.

Feature Douglas Fairbanks as Jerry Martin and Marjorie Daw as Billy.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Douglas Fairbanks Brings to the Screen His Own Greatest Stage Success.

Gripping Drama Plus Thrills and Fairbanks Acrobatics.

If You Saw Fairbanks on the Stage Don't Miss His Screen Story.

What Happened When a Canary Bird Took One Good, Long Drink.

The Adventures of an Acrobatic Youth Who Became a Counterfeit Hobo.

How a Tramp Became a Hero and Saved a Girl for the Man She Loved.

Advertising Angles: The chief thing is to tell your patrons you are going to have a Fairbanks picture. Don't trust that they will find out. Go tell them. And add that he has a real story this time, taken from a successful stage play. Give stress to this fact to offset some of his recent efforts. Advertise in the local paper for a bank clerk who can cure for a canary, giving your theatre name. You can use a tramp to work the streets with a card, "I don't look it, but I'm Douglas Fairbanks. If you don't believe it, see me at (house) tonight."

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.

Released September 15.

The big guns at the front are mounted on money. Don't forget that! And they will hold the enemy back only so long as their foundations last. Don't forget that!

This war cannot be carried on on loyal sentiment and armchair strategy. It has got to be carried on with big armies, powerful guns and everything guns and armies need for continued action.

War Savings Stamps will furnish the money provided you retailers enlist your salesforce at full power to sell the stamps.

Some of you have more salespeople at your command than a regimental commander has fighting men. Just think a moment of the selling power of a store as big as that. Just think of the stamps it could sell if it worked only 15 minutes a day. And the smaller stores can do as well in proportion.

Put in a Thrift Stamp Department today if you haven't already done so. And then push the stamps!

is given a prison sentence. Don is liberated at a junction point by Julia's brothers and they beat a retreat to the Wharton homestead, whether Dorsey goes to get the prisoner again. A stranger who recently appeared in the town joins the defending forces and when the fight goes against them he reveals himself to Dorsey as the Governor of the state. Dorsey has gone too far and determines to kill the Governor too, but the Governor has sent for the militia and they arrive in time to rescue the besieged, while a friend of Don's rides in with the "murdered" man, who was "very much alive this morning, but plenty dead now," for he had been shot in self defense.

Feature Jack Richardson as Rufe Dorsey and Leotta Lorraine as Julia Wharton.

Program and Advertising Phrases: When the Law of the West Takes Matters Into Its Own Hands. Swift Justice Ensues.

Foiling the Arrogant Leader of a Western "Tammany Hall."

Proving That a Murder Is Not a Murder Unless Someone Dies.

Strange Outcome of a Mountain Mystery Solved by Fickle Fate.

Twice "Murdered" Victim Admits It at the Second Attempt.

Advertising Angles: Play up Richardson and tell that it is a vivid story of the West. Don't try to overboom the story, but make it plain that you offer a good, strong melodrama.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six sheets. Special process art heralds. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Photographs. Slides. Electros and mats. Triangles Magazines. Press sheet.

"THE KINGDOM OF YOUTH."

Goldwyn Presents Madge Kennedy in the Story of a Jealous Wife Who Took the Cold Water Cure and Got Over the Pangs of Suspicion.

Cast.

Ruth Betts	Madge Kennedy
Jimmy Betts	Tom Moore
Mrs. Ella Rice	Marie de Wolfe
Count Duval	Lee Baker
Aunt Sophronia	Jennie Dickerson

Directed by Charles G. Ladner.

The Story: Jimmy Betts and his wife, Ruth, are both jealous, he of Count Henri Duval and she of Mrs. Ella Rice, an elderly, but potent, charmer. Finally things come to a crisis and Ruth decides to go to the Count. He is in the harbor on his yacht and on the way out Ruth falls overboard. She is rescued by Jimmy and he and the Count agree that the man she turns to when she revives is the man of her choice—but what happens after that is too good to be told.

Feature Madge Kennedy as Ruth Betts and Tom Moore as Jimmy Betts.

Program and Advertising Phrases: What Happened When Love's Young Dream Really Came True.

Where Two Is Company and Dan Cupid Makes a Happy Crowd.

Thrills of a Secret Marriage and What Came of It.

The Story of a Never-Ending Honeymoon Shown in Beautiful Photography.

Great Victory for True Love in Triumph Over False Desires.

Madge Kennedy Entrancing Star of Immensely Appealing Photoplay.

Advertising Angles: Play up the personal draught of Miss Kennedy, using her pictures plentifully, describing her as the queen of the Kingdom of Youth. For your newspaper stuff work the jealousy angle and also try "The beautiful young wife lay unconscious on the shore. Before her stand her husband and the French Count of whom he is jealous. It is agreed that when she revives she shall have her choice. Which do you suppose she picked, a jealous husband, in love with a middle-aged charmer, or a polished man of the world who loved but her? For the answer, see "The Kingdom of Youth."

"KILDARE OF STORM."

Metro Presents Emily Stevens Supported by King Baggot in a Screening of Eleanor Mercein Kelly's Graphic and Powerful Novel of the Same Title.

Cast.

Kate Kildare	Emily Stevens
Basil Kildare	King Baggot
Dr. Jacques Benoix	Crauford Kent
Mahaly	Florence Short
Gov. Claiborne	Edwards Davis
Mrs. Leigh	Helen Lindroth
Mrs. Benoix	Maggie Breyer

Directed by Harry L. Franklin.

The Story: Basil Kildare, owner of the estate which gives him his title, marries Kate Leigh. Mahaly, a servant, believes herself married to him and to silence her he takes her child from her, promising to return it when he is assured of her discretion. Kate finds Basil a drunken, bestial brute, who at a stag dinner brags of how beautiful his wife is in her night robes and leads his guests to her room to feast their eyes. She turns to Jacques Benoix, the local physician, and Basil's actions literally drives her into his arms, but Benoix decides to leave, that they may not be tempted. Basil meets him and, goaded to madness, strikes him down. He is arrested for murder and sentenced, but the sentence is commuted. To him Mahaly confesses that she finished off Basil when she saw that he was reviving and, cleared of the stigma, Kate and Benoix find happiness.

Feature Emily Stevens as Kate Kildare and King Baggot as Basil Kildare.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Eleanor Mercein Kelly's Famous Novel Brought Delightfully to the Screen.

Advertising Angles: Play up the star and her lead. Both are popular and should be well advertised. Arrange with your bookseller to show at least one copy of the book, even if you have to promise to purchase it if there is no sale. Hammer on the story, playing up the incident of the nightgown as told in the synopsis, but playing it up without sensationalism, using it merely to show the character of the man a decent woman married.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten-minute novel. Slide. Heralds. Lobby displays, 8x10 sepia, 11x14 sepia, 22x28 colored. Cuts.

One night, hearing distant music and entranced by the beauty of the night, she steals into the garden and there dances in an ecstacy of pure happiness. She is overlooked by old West, who follows her to her room. Michael finds them there and blames her for his father's death, which follows his escapade. Lily, despairing, turns to the dance and becomes the talk of the town. She enslaves Reginald West, Michael's cousin, who shoots himself when he sees Michael embrace Lily, and a second time they are estrangeu. Despairing, Lily offers herself to the highest bidder, but the highest bid is a pot of lilies from Michael in token of his surrender

"HER COUNTRY FIRST."

Paramount Presents Vivian Martin in the Story by Mary Roberts Rinehart, of a Girl Who Did Her Bit and a Little More Than That.

Cast.

Dorothy Grant	Vivian Martin
Franklin Grant	John Cossar
Mrs Grant	Florence Oberle
Isabella Grant	Brydine Zuber
Craig Allison	J. Parks-Jones
Dr Barnes	L. W Steers
William	Lewis Willoughby
Henry	James Farley

Directed by James Young

The Story: Dorothy Grant, daughter of a munitions contractor, living in an inland town, is intensely patriotic. She forms a Girls' Aviation Corps and arranges for regular drills. She sees the sign, "Beware of Spies," on her father's plant, and observing that William, her father's new butler, cuts grape fruit the wrong way, she concludes that he is a spy. On the contrary, the butler is a Secret Service man hunting for spies and he goes to the rescue of Dorothy when she is imprisoned in the garage by the chauffeur, a German spy, and Lena, the cook, his confederate. They seek in vain to obtain from Dorothy the pass word to the munitions plant, and when William appears he is shot by the chauffeur and left for dead. Dorothy is bound and gagged and subsequently released by William, who revives. Help arrives, the spies are arrested and Dorothy falls into the arms of her sweetheart who, she fancied, was in love with her sister and not with herself. Dorothy is made a popular heroine, and all end happily.

Feature Vivian Martin as Dorothy Grant and Lewis Willoughby as William, the butler.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Vivian Martin In An Appealing Presentation of Her Latest Paramount Photoplay.

How a Girl's Aviation Corps Organized a Flight to Exciting Heights.

Spy Plots and a Girl's Bravery Work to the Glory of Uncle Sam.

Patriotism Theme of Timely Melodrama of Fire and Force.

How a Girl Put Love of Country Before Everything Else.

Society Girl Devotes Her Time to Serving Her Country's Colors.

Advertising Angles: Tell your patrons that this story is by Mary Roberts Rinehart, who did the Bab stories and innumerable others. Reach out for the people who know the author as well as for those who like the star. Work both angles. Use plenty of newspaper space. You might work in with grocers and fruit dealers on the grapefruit incident with a card reading "Do you know how to prepare a grape fruit?" and running into a short paragraph about the play.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. One 24 sheet. Rotogravure one-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.

Released September 22.

"THE EYES OF JULIA DEEP"

The American Film Co. Presents Mary Miles Minter in a Five-Act Comedy-Drama of a Man Who Sowed Wild Oats and a Girl Who Set Him to Better Pursuits.

Cast.

Julia Deep	Mary Miles Minter
Terry Hartridge	Alan Forrest
Lottie Driscoll	Alice Wilson
Timothy Black	George Periolat
Mrs Turnar	Ida Basthope
Simon Plummet	Carl Stockdale
Mrs Lowe	Eugenie Besserer

Directed by Lloyd Ingraham

The Story: Julia Deep is clerk in Timothy Black's office and the attic boarder in the house in which the star is Terry Hartridge, who is dispersing of the remnants of his heritage. Julia steals down into Terry's rooms while he is working in the wild oat fields and revels in his books. He finds her the first time the night he has spent the last of his patrimony and has determined to end it all. She leads him back to the right living, but not until many obstacles have been overcome.

Feature Mary Miles Minter as Julia Deep and Alan Forrest as Terry Hartridge.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Clean and Inspiring American Love Story Filled with Thrills and Surprises.

Romance of a Department Store When Dan Cupid Bought the Stock.

Dainty Mary Miles Minter in Refreshing and Entertaining Photoplot.

High Lights in the Life of a Shop Girl Who Loved and Triumphed.

How Love and Merchandizing Won a Victory with Cupid's Aid.

Advertising Angles: Play up the popularity of the star with posters and big type in your newspaper displays. Ask in your advertising if the reader has looked into the eyes of Julia Deep. For a teaser you might use three gothic M's with no copy in a small display, and then hook up after a couple of days by filling in the rest of the name with smaller type. Get up a set of stills in a box, and for peep holes use a drawn face or pair of eyes below which is lettered, "See the sights the eyes of Julia Deep have seen (date)."

Advertising Aids: One one-sheet, two three-sheets, one six-sheet, one 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 11x14, both in sepia and color, also 22x28. Slide. Campaign book. Cuts.

Educate Your Audience to Help Fight Censorship

Introducing a bill providing for the Censorship of Moving Pictures is a favorite indoor pastime in legislative halls throughout the country. Eternal vigilance is the price of the Exhibitor's mere safety if not his success.

Presented in the proper manner, the Censorship of Moving Pictures is just as obnoxious to the Exhibitor's audiences as it is to the Exhibitor. And public opinion aroused in behalf of moving pictures and against their unfair and discriminatory control is the surest weapon to defeat Censorship.

The Management of this Theatre desires the co-operation of its patrons in providing good clean entertainment. : : : :
We want no "legalized" censorship of moving pictures

We have prepared a series of nine different stereopticon slides which crystallize the argument against Censorship; one of the slides is shown herewith.

These slides shown repeatedly in any theatre cannot fail to influence public opinion in that locality against Censorship. They will line up the general public on the side of the Exhibitor.

You Ought to Be Showing Them Now! Legislatures Everywhere Are Convening

Set of Nine Slides, carefully packed, will be sent postpaid on receipt of $1.00.

PROJECTIONIST HUR—RAY

shouts for SIMPLEX, so does every conscientious operator who not alone has the interests of his employer at heart, but who takes pride in his work.

The success of your projection depends not alone on any particular part of the machine but on the finished product, the complete mechanism scientifically produced by real American brains, and not on a certain part of the movement copied from a foreign model. So Hur-Ray or hurrah for the SIMPLEX Machine, the one that supplants all others, but is never supplanted by any.

There are operators who like a machine because they are used to it, and some who accept presents in return for which they give testimonials, they are subsidized as it were but their recommendations mean nothing to sensible business men. The majority of operators, however, are men who think, who select a machine that together with their skill, will deliver the goods not occasionally but all of the time.

There are so many projectionists, Do, RAY, Mi, Fa, So, La, Si, Do. Which do you want? We can get any of them to sign a letter recommending anything you want recommended. If you'll take our advice however, when you want a motion picture machine, to avoid mistakes, select Simplex—ASK THE MAN WHO OWNS ONE.

This is the different kind of a supply shop. We do not offer prizes, parts of machines or complete ones for testimonials, and we won't pay money for them, they must be voluntary. We carry a most complete line of supplies. We are sole distributors in this territory for the SIMPLEX projector, Minusa Gold-fibre Screens, Keylubric, the perfect lubricant, Wertsner's silver screen, and offer for sale not that which shows us the greatest profit but that which is the best obtainable, regardless of price. We were the first to make a perfect motor equipment for Power No. 6A machines, and we have sold them all over the United States, and not a single one has fallen down.

Write, wire, phone or come to us. Let us convince you. We're selling repeat orders every day, our system is right.

SILVERTIP

FOR DIRECT CURRENT PROJECTION
THE COLUMBIA-SILVERTIP COMBINATION

The Columbia-Silvertip combination gives a light source that fills the bill in every particular. The Silvertip is a quality product that has been tried and tested by the experts of the motion picture industry. It has received the stamp of approval of the best operators in the country and is standard.

The Columbia-Silvertip combination gives:

1. High current carrying capacity. The Silvertip is heavily plated, making it capable of carrying the heavy currents used in projection without harmful heating.

2. A strong, flexible light. The arc can be varied at the will of the operator, according to the density of the film, within a reasonable limit of the rated amperage of the combination used. No two films are of the same density, and, therefore, true artistic presentation of a picture requires a flexible light source.

Note: Silvertips are for direct current only.

FOR ALTERNATING CURRENT PROJECTION

WHITE A. C. SPECIAL CARBONS give a pure white light of high intensity and flickerless illumination. No change of apparatus.

Simplex

Have you had this experience?

The projection isn't as good as it was, and day after day you watch it grow worse, until finally the pained expression in the faces of your audience leads you to order repairs.

Now, those repairs may not cost much; but the screen-results which showed their need were much more costly than the repairs themselves. For the people don't say "Never mind, the projection will be better next week, when the Machines have been repaired." Not on you life! They simply stay away.

We realized this from the beginning; and that's why we build the Simplex as nearly repairless as possible: a Machine that doesn't need the Projection Doctor.

And the thousands of Simplexes in use demonstrate that in place of Intermittently Perfect Projection we have created Permanently Perfect Projection.

Intermittently Perfect Projection may pay the P. D., but it doesn't pay you

Projectionist Ray says

"Give me a Power's Cameragraph and a good film subject and I'll show you the best cure for the blues, ever.

"I've been using this recipe for a great many years and as long as I'm 'above the green' I'll stick to it.

"The Projectionist is the man behind the gun; but unless the gun is all there, the best ammunition in the world can't make a bull's eye; just as the best film never scores a 'hit' without the right Projector to 'shoot it.'

"With a Power's I always hit the bull's eye of public approval and never fail to 'send 'em away with a smile.' WHY? Because

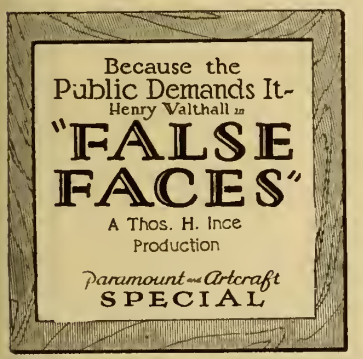
Paramount and Artcraft Specials



When We Say "It's a Special" We Speak Webster's Language

"THE HUN WITHIN," the first Paramount-Artcraft Special, has been received with tremendous acclaim at its first pre-release showing at the Rialto Theatre in New York City. It is one of a series of nine specials and is a sample of all nine.

When we use the word "special" we mean just what Webster's New International Dictionary means, namely: "Distinguished by some unusual quality; uncommon, extraordinary; especially distinguished by superior excellence, importance, power, or the like."

That describes Paramount-Artcraft Specials.

Each Paramount-Artcraft Special fills snugly the places that the wise exhibitor has reserved in his schedule for "something unusually big."

Comedies with "Self-Starter" Advertising

EVERY time you take a walk you are faced with the name of James Montgomery Flagg. You see it on magazine covers on every newsstand you pass. You see one of his Government posters every time you look at a billboard.

The exhibitor who shows the Paramount-Flagg Comedies cashes in on that advertising. All he has to do is to announce them, and click! this gigantic "self-starter" advertising will automatically send people to his theatre.

Remember they are not animated drawings. They are thoroughly funny satires on people you know. The first three are:

"Hick Manhattan"
"Romance and Brass Tacks"
"Independence B'Gosh"

Produced by Town and Country Films, Inc.

JACK EATON ELTINGE F. WARNER

Directed by Martin Justice

Released by

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORPORATION

THERE is a laugh in every sub-title of the Paramount-Flagg Comedies. Flagg is a humorist as well as an artist, and he wrote all the captions. Some specimens:

"A Pacifist sees pink until he's kicked hard enough to see red."

"I'm as independent as a man in Class 1-A."

"Independence is like your appendix. You don't know you have it until you've lost it."

"From now on I'm not even going to brush my own teeth if I don't want to."

"The Hun is saying things. But it's in a dying language, so we won't quote him."

"Romance in real life is so apt to take you out of your own class."

The comedies are as clever as the captions, and people are going to laugh at them. Will it be your people or somebody else's?

These Ad Cuts Say: "Come On In" And You Can Bet They Will

WHEN you show "Come On In," the first John Emerson-Anita Loos Production for Paramount, starring Shirley Mason and Ernest Truex, you will want to shout out the news to your whole town.

You will want to shout because it's the timeliest story in the world—it's a story of the training camps; and you know what that means to every mother, father, sister, wife and sweetheart in the country.

Because it was written by John Emerson and Anita Loos, and directed by Mr. Emerson.

Because it has as stars Shirley Mason and Ernest Truex. Because your people will want to see all the Emerson-Loos productions after they have seen "Come On In."

These ad cuts, free at your exchange, will do your shouting for you. Stick them in your local paper and they will attract as much attention as a town crier.

You don't need a megaphone when you have these ready-made ads.

Paramount and Artcraft Pictures

ARE NATIONALLY ADVERTISED IN THE NEWSPAPERS
IN THE MAGAZINES AND ON THE BILLBOARDS

NATIONAL advertising turns the glare of the spotlight on the product advertised, and on the place where that product can be obtained.

It makes the nation's millions want that product, persuades them to test it.

Advertising, therefore, shows up the bad points as well as the good ones.

Only a commodity that can stand every test, can afford to advertise nationally, for advertising forces the nation to make a decision as to whether the commodity is good or bad.

Advertising is the death of bad products. It is the life of good ones.

The National Advertising of Paramount and Artcraft Pictures has been a tremendous aid to America's exhibitors.

It is significant that the productions of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation are the only motion pictures that the nation has been urged to test.

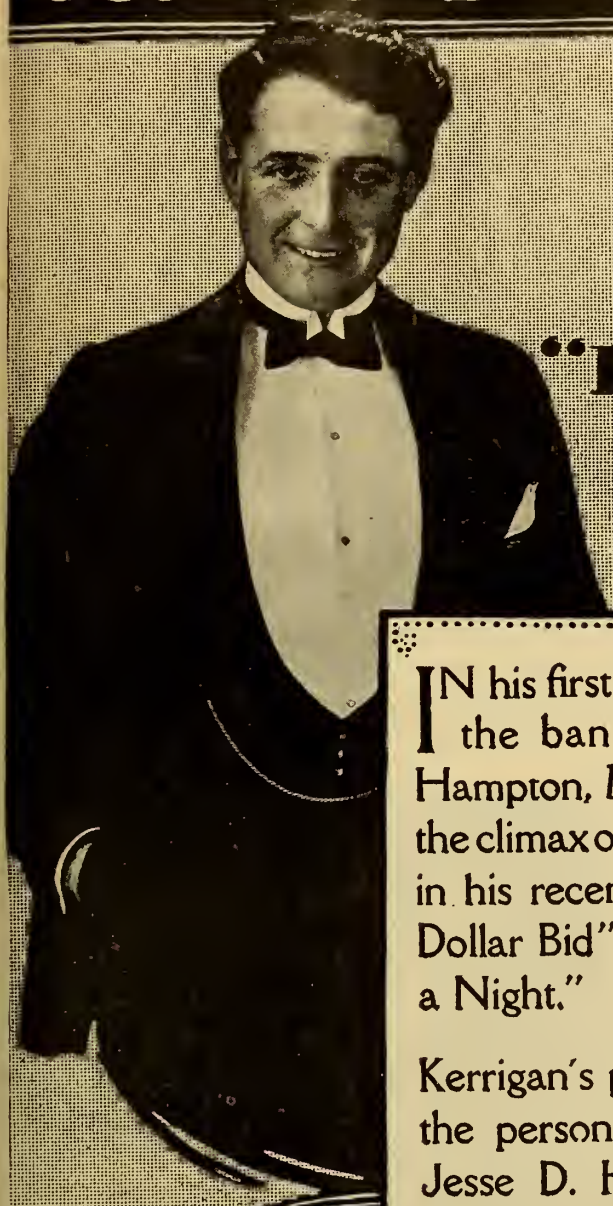
Jesse D. Hampton Productions



Jesse D. Hampton presents

J. WARREN KERRIGAN

in

"PRISONERS OF THE PINES"

by Kenneth B. Clark

IN his first production under the banner of Jesse D. Hampton, Mr. Kerrigan caps the climax of success achieved in his recent triumphs "One Dollar Bid" and "Burglar for a Night."

Kerrigan's productions, under the personal supervision of Jesse D. Hampton, will be the best possible under intelligent management, direction and production.

Kerrigan's name over your theatre entrance means that you are showing on your screen a picture that is clean in conception, clean in production and powerful in theme. Doesn't this mean something to you—and your audience?

Distributed by

W. W. HODKINSON CORPORATION

527 Fifth Avenue New York City

Jesse D. Hampton

ALL of Kerrigan's pictures are safe bets for every exhibitor. They are all clean, overflowing with romance, mystery and action, but never heavy or morbid. Kerrigan will send your audience away with a smile and a desire to see his next production. Facts which are of immense value to you under the present war conditions. Kerrigan as a young versatile player portrays the best in American life and backed by big stories from the pens of prominent authors, and produced under efficient and up-to-date management, they offer a profitable and good-will building program for the entire trade.

Jesse D. Hampton-Kerrigan productions will be released as part of Hodkinson Service. This in itself indicates the quality that must be in the productions as the Hodkinson Organization has definitely announced its policy of "Quality Pictures for Quality Houses," carefully selected to meet the needs of the exhibitor. Ask the Hodkinson Special Representative at your nearest General Film Exchange for full particulars on "Prisoners of the Pines" and coming Kerrigan Productions.

Hillaire's introduction to the lumber camp was in the role of a peace-maker—with his good right hand as a sturdy and effective argument. This is one of the many thrilling episodes in Kerrigan's new romance of the great woods . . . episodes that send the blood coursing a bit faster and make all lovers of pictures hold their breath.

The advent of a traveling clothing salesman among the rough men of the forest adds a delightful tone of comedy to this undeniably great screen product. Throughout "Prisoners of the Pines" there is an abundance of genuinely good comedy . . . the sort of comedy that compels laughter.

Hillaire's meeting with one of the dance hall girls was a momentous occasion in the life of the young French-Canadian and was destined to turn his hitherto peaceful life into another channel . . . here's a new style of screen "vamp"—and one that every person who sees "Prisoners of the Pines" will like.

W. W. Hodkinson Corporation

Productions, Los Angeles, Cal.

AS THE still photographs reproduced below show, "Prisoners of the Pines," Kerrigan's latest production is of an entirely different nature to anything he has done before, and gives him a most picturesque role, that of a French Canadian trapper, who later becomes a lumberman. The picture is full of interest and drama, including many big scenes, such as: The fight in the bar room and the thrilling episodes in dance hall and saloon in which Hillaire is robbed of his year's pay, almost within the proverbial twinkling of an eye.

The scenes depicted below give you an excellent idea of the general theme of the picture and the explanations accompanying each indicate how these various angles of the picture may be used to advantage in your advertising. Every exhibitor using "Prisoners of the Pines" in his house should give careful attention to the press book accompanying this production. The concensus of opinion of those who have seen it is that it is the best and most complete exploitation book of its kind ever put out. The advertising accessories accompanying all of Kerrigan's new pictures will be most complete and each will have a definite practical value. Material supplied will be designed from the exhibitor's viewpoint, rather than from the producer's desire to make something pretty.

There is a dare and a challenge in the eyes and on the lips of this fascinating young woman of the dance hall that makes Hillaire hesitate for a moment . . . until he quickly recalls his own little wife, Rosalie, so many hundreds of miles away.

During the long, weary winter nights in the woods, Hillaire and his accordion provide entertainment for the men who are shut in from the rest of the world . . . and Hillaire's plaintive voice chants the songs of his far-off country and makes for merriment.

The well dressed stranger with his enormous gold watch chain, inspires a new ambition in the heart of Hillaire Latour, and he makes up his mind that he, too, shall go to the lumber camp, as did the stranger, and also make his "leetle wad," and possess one of those wonderful gold chains . . . yes, and earn enough money to marry Rosalie, the prettiest girl in all that country.

THE GROWTH OF HODKINSON SERVICE SPEAKS FOR ITSELF

The continual expansion of Hodkinson Service represents the fulfilment of an aim and the achievement of promises made.

Mr. W. W. Hodkinson promised the exhibitors of the United States that through the medium of his Organization, he would select for them and continue to build up, a Service of quality product suited to their needs

The acquisition of product such as the Jesse D Hampton Productions advertised in the preceding pages, presents conclusive proof of the success of this policy That producers of the calibre of Jesse D. Hampton appreciate that the Hodkinson method is right is a proof of the foundational strength upon which Mr. Hodkinson is building.

Exhibitors of the United States will do well to watch the development of Hodkinson Service in the next few months with extreme care and prove for themselves, by actual experience, that the selective system under which Hodkinson Service is chosen is producing the results for which it was planned.

The best of O. Henry's whimsical fancies are being interpreted in picture form. They are full of that fine human quality which charms any audience. In New York, for instance, the O. PATHÉ SERIALS

Pathé believes, and the belief is based upon sound reasoning and FACTS, that Pathé serials have made MORE money for the exhibitors of the United States (and the entire world as well) than ANY pictures put out by ANY company.

Pathé believes that MORE persons have attended theatres with the primary object of seeing Pathé serials than ALL of the best advertised features put together. The very real gratitude expressed by thousands of exhibitors has convinced us of the fact.

Pathé knows that its serials are RIGHT; right in the star; right in the cast; right in direction; right in story; right in production; and right in box office value.

Pathé points with justifiable pride to "The Perils of Pauline," the three "Elaine" serials; "Who Pays?"; "The Red Circle"; "The Iron Claw"; "Pearl of the Army"; "Patria"; "Mystery of the Double Cross"; "The Seven Pearls"; "The Neglected Wife"; "The Fatal Ring"; "The House of Hate"; and many others, not to mention "Hands Up", now just started, and "Wolves of Kultur" soon to be released.

Pathé Knows Serials and Exhibitors Know That Pathé Knows Serials. Serial Success Means "Pathé"!

Pathé announces that the incomparable star

PEARL WHITE

is now engaged in the making of another serial sensation, the working title of which is produced by Astra, directed by George B. Seitz and written by Bertram Millhauser; the same unequalled combination of talent which made "The Fatal Ring" and "The House of Hate" such excellent attractions.

Miss White has starred in more serials, and more successful serials than any other player. Beginning with "The Perils of Pauline" every one of her serials has packed houses. Today she is admitted to be unsurpassed as a box-office attraction. The whole world has taken her to its heart!

It will be some time before we will be prepared to announce the release date BUT-

Bear in Mind "The Lightning Raider"

Unanimous!

Exhibitors are unanimous in their opinion of

OFFICIAL WAR REVIEW

as an attraction for their houses; their comments as taken from "What the Picture Did For Me" in the Exhibitors Herald, as well as other like columns, show that!

"The Official War Pictures are a good addition to a program and will draw new business. It's a patriotic duty to show them." R. L. Hensler, Bijou Theatre, Carollton, Ill.

"Everybody pleased. Good drawing card." G.W. Smith, Royal Theatre, Ashdown, Ark.

"These single reels are very good and show more than is expected... They please." Leo Peterson, Iris Theatre, Belle Fourche, S.D.

"Excellent pictures." H.B. McFarling, Tokio Theatre, Morehouse, Mo.

"Most interesting in all its scenes". M.C. Kellogg, Homestake Theatre, Lead, S.D.

We could quote many more along similar lines. Again we say - "every exhibitor should show the Official War Review!"

Are You A "Freak Picture" Success?

THE great American Circus did not become a big profitable institution through its "freaks" in the side-shows.

All circus successes have been created in the Main Tent. They have been built on feats of horsemanship, daring acrobatics, the love of Natural History, the laughable clowns with their burlesques of human nature.

Some motion picture exhibitors are content to be "freak showmen" seeking success through "freak pictures." Such exhibitors as these cannot be permanently successful.

The basic backbone of each and every successful exhibitor is the motion picture producer who makes clean, wholesome, powerful, appealing pictures.

In this crowded competitive picture field there are very few producing organizations building sanely and permanently for the present and future benefit of the sound exhibitor.

Of the few Goldwyn is unquestionably the leader —in stories, in production values, in stars who deliver the public into your houses; in refinement and quality.

An organization thinking ahead for your protection and competitive independence; not in a hurry for profits; making sane stories sanely and avoiding temporary freak successes.

This is why Goldwyn has more than 5,000 exhibitor-customers.

N. Y. REVIEW:

"Delightful story . . . . . Crisp action . . . . . Direct plot which builds with increasing interest to a well-timed and effective climax."

MOTION PICTURE NEWS:

"Fine laugh-maker . . . . Thrilling stunt climax . . . . Chances for laughs never let slip by."

EXHIBITORS' TRADE REVIEW:

"Snappy action, clever 'stunts' and farcical situations are the distinguishing characteristics of this production, with the additional charm of a plot which takes most unexpected turnings and keeps one guessing as to just what is coming next."

SUNDAY TELEGRAPH:

"Many novel details in story and development. Fans will agree that its entertainment value is greater than the average feature."

MAURICE TOURNEUR ONCE MORE REVEALS HIS CREATIVE GENIUS!!

THE NEW YORK TIMES, MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1918.

SPORTING LIFE' IS SHOWN AT RIVOLI

Maurice Tourneur's Racing Film Lets Audience Cheer Classic Derby of Drury Lane.

Few motion picture directors equal, and fewer surpass, Maurice Tourneur in the art of making scenes for the screen. By his work he stands out prominently, even among that small group of exceptional men who appreciate the peculiar powers of the camera, and know how to employ them in the production of a photoplay. Once more, and in some ways more than ever, he has revealed his creative genius in "Sporting Life," the featured film at the Rivoli this week.

The play is a melodrama, based upon the well-known Drury Lane product, and, as many will remember, it has to do chiefly with a young English Lord and his desperate efforts to re-establish himself financially through the successes of a pugilist in the ring and a racehorse, the phenomenal "Lady Love," in the Derby. There are abundant opportunities in the play for exciting scenes.

Mr Tourneur has not faltered before any of the big, comprehensive scenes, such as those of the prize fight and the Derby race, while in little incidents also he has done not only the obvious and expected, but the surprising. The spectators who viewed the picture yesterday afternoon were drawn into the excitement of the play's episodes, applauding and exclaiming at the succession of climaxes as people do only when they are thrilled by a sense of participation in what they see or hear.

At one point, as Lady Love dashed forwar dto the race, some one in the orchestra shouted "Go," and many of the spectators literally started forward from their seats. It all seemed real. But this effect was accomplished by the climax of an episode and each effect of the photoplay was similarly accomplished.

This is a Sample of What the New York Papers Said About

"SPORTING LIFE"

S. L. Rothapfel booked "SPORTING LIFE" without seeing it. His confidence in MAURICE TOURNEUR'S ability has been justified in his securing this sensational success that is now packing his Rivoli Theatre to the doors and establishing new records.

Definite distribution arrangements will shortly be announced it behooves every company and individual to practice economy.

Buy with a conscience.

Your purchases should be actual necessities.

One of the heaviest expenses a producing company carries, next to actual production cost, is advertising.

Economy in these days should be practiced in buying advertising.

The conservative buyer of advertising space insists on authorizing expenditures in the medium through which he can reach the greatest number of prospective buyers.

The medium which shows the largest trade circulation appeals to him stronger than it does to the fly-by-night company.

For more than eleven years the MOVING PICTURE WORLD has served the trade conscientiously. It has proven its worth, as is attested by the advertising it carries in every issue.

These advertisers, representative of the moving picture industry, know what they are buying, which is reason for their repeat orders.

The buying of advertising space in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD is the highest form of economy.

DENVER WINS PERSHING TROPHY

Grand Total of 3,749 Houses Booked Within Sixty Days for the First Government Release—Establishing New Record for Intensive Booking—Moving Picture World Plan Effective COMPARATIVELY few changes were made in the results of the Moving Picture World's Contest for the magnificent bronze trophy to be awarded to the exchange making the most intensive booking campaign for 'Pershing's Crusaders," the first release of the United States Government. The Denver exchange of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, of which Swanson and Nolan hold the franchise, still leads the list with a percentage of 49.58 or nearly half of the territory. This territory covers Colorado, New Mexico, Utah, Wyoming and that part of Idaho south of Idaho county. There are 591 houses in the district and contracts were made with 293 of these; a showing all the more remarkable when it is realized that it is not possible to keep the prints working continuously on account of the scattered houses and poor railroad connections.

On Thursday, September 12 (appropriately enough Draft Day), the Committee of Judges visited the offices of the First National and inspected and verified the contracts and reports on file; the latter from the State Committees on National Defense handling the film by prior arrangement with the Committee on Public Information, Division of Films. Their report follows:

The undersigned have examined the contracts and reports on file in the offices of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit and do certify that the appended table is a correct and complete resume of the same, according to which showing the Denver exchange of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit is declared the winner of the trophy offered by the Moving Picture World to the exchange booking the greatest proportion of houses in its territory.

Statement of "Pershing's Crusaders" Contest.

New York, Sept. 12.

It will be seen by the table that Minneapolis retains second place with San Francisco third with 30.81 per cent.

In all 3,749 contracts were made covering from one day to several weeks, and the entire bookings were completed within a period of sixty days; which makes the showing all the more remarkable. It is the record up to date and it may be that the record will stand through subsequent campaigns. All credit is due Swanson and Nolan as well as J. H. Ashby, the manager of the Denver exchange and C. Post Mason, who did the publicity. The latter made a whirlwind campaign by mail, and kept it up until the last moment.

The Division of Films, of the Committee on Public Information, also contributed materially to the final result by issuing the beautiful Victory Screen Pledge to each manager booking the film, and no small share of the result is to be credited the First National itself for the honor roll which ran during the contest. That honor roll was aptly named, for it lists the 100 per cent. exhibitors throughout the country.

However, the final touch was found in the trophy offered by this publication. Announcing the contest put ginger into the day's work. It held out an inducement to the various crews to do their best, knowing that their efforts would have a final and tangible result in the awarding of the trophy. Many offices were handicapped by local conditions but they all went to work with a will and it needs only a comparison of the first Roll of Honor with the announcements in succeeding issues to realize that the contest brought into the campaign the last ounce of energy that could be applied.

Examining the totals it will be seen that there are 16,922 theatres in the various districts, of which 3,749 have signed contracts to show "Pershing's Crusaders." This is 22.1 per cent or slightly better than one house in every five. Take into consideration the many houses in such direct opposition that it will not pay to offer the same attraction in more than one house, and it is safe to say that the feature has been presented to two third of the communities. It was clear last week that the 3,500 mark had been exceeded, but 3,749 is even better than we had hoped for.

It is a record to be proud of, a record in which the Division of Films, the First National and its component exchanges, each salesman and this paper may alike feel proud—and we are proud, every last one of us. We have not only put over the first issue to exceed all expectations, but the way has been paved for those to come, and that is by no means a small consideration.

The trophy will be shipped to Denver as soon as possible. It is a beautiful bronze eagle with a spread of wings three feet from tip to tip. It grasps in its claws the staff of a silk United States flag which gives it an extreme width of six feet. There is a bronze plate on which the name of the winning exchange will be engraved with a suitable legend. The design was prepared especially for this contest and is not a stock design. It is one of the handsomest awards ever issued by any publication and one of the most costly, as well. It is now being finished and engraved and soon there will be a report of a christening party from Denver.

HART COMMENDS

New York, September 14, 1918

Editor Moving Picture World,
New York.

Dear Sir:—We have just been informed that the bookings on "Pershing's Crusaders" have reached the astonishing total of 3,800 theatres.

This result has been due to a number of reasons: patriotism of the exhibitors, the enthusiasm and efficiency of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, the splendid co-operation of the Moving Picture World in offering a bronze trophy, the appeal of the picture itself, and last, but not least, the patriotic interest on the part of the great American public.

Appreciating your interest in this matter as well as your attitude of helpfulness at all times toward this division, I am,

Sincerely yours,

Chas. P. Hart, Director.

Farrar Starts Campaign for Loan in Washington

GOVERNMENT honors Geraldine Farrar and Goldwyn Pictures through an invitation extended simultaneously to the great screen and operatic star and Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn, on the eve of the fourth tremendous Liberty Loan campaign.

By invitation of Frank R. Wilson, director of publicity of the Treasury Department, Miss Farrar, accompanied by Mr. Goldfish and several of the noted prima donna's friends, leaves for Washington next Thursday night and on Friday Miss Farrar is to sing "The Star Spangled Banner" from the steps of the Treasury Building. This is the first time in any of the previous loan campaigns that such an event had been planned.

Miss Farrar and Goldwyn have just completed and delivered to the Government officials a splendid Liberty Loan film, "The Bonds That Tie," in which the noted diva plays the role of Columbia. This picture represents the joint contribution of the star and the Goldwyn company to the Government and was written by Harry R. Durant, directed by Reginald Barker and made under the watchful eye of the big Goldwyn organization.

Immediately upon its delivery in Washington by special messenger telegrams and letters of appreciation were dispatched by Frank R. Wilson to Miss Farrar and Samuel Goldfish, both of whom were invited to be the department's guests at a dinner on the evening of September 27 at the National Press Club to be attended by the entire membership of Washington correspondents of the nation's great daily newspapers and magazines and by many notables in American official and civil life, as well as by members of the foreign embassies and legations.

Director Wilson's letter is as follows:

"Dear Mr. Goldfish:—I feel doubly grateful to you for two very important favors which you have granted the Treasury Department. I refer to the motion picture which has come to us through your good offices, in which Miss Geraldine Farrar appears. I feel confident that this will be one of the important factors in the forthcoming campaign in behalf of the Loan.

"The other thing for which I feel under special obligation to you is your consent to permit Miss Farrar to come to Washington to sing in behalf of the Fourth Loan campaign, and to appear before the National Press Club on the evening of Friday, September 27. I want you to know that we will make most efficient use of Miss Farrar's art, and I know that her appearance will make one of the big nights in the history of the National Press Club.

"I want to accord to you a special invitation to come with her and be here on the occasion of her appearance before the Press Club. We are engaging an auditorium for that evening capable of seating about two thousand persons, and invitations will be issued to a number of distinguished people in Washington. We are expecting that Miss Farrar's audience will contain many notables."

LIBERTY LOAN SPECIALS IN REVIEW

Public Showing Given at Rivoli Theatre to Motion Picture Industry's Contribution to Fourth Loan Propaganda—Thirty-Seven Features by Leading Players—Government Officials Highly Pleased

THE public at large, or, more correctly speaking, that portion of the public which could crowd its way into the Rivoli Theatre on Tuesday morning, Sept. 17, obtained its first view of the part the motion picture industry is to play in the Fourth Liberty Loan Campaign, the occasion being the first public showing of the films made by the motion picture stars and producing companies as their contribution to the publicity campaign projected by the Treasury Department. Government, state and city officials, men and women leaders in public life, motion picture executives, newspapers, magazines and others interested in the coming campaign, were the guests of the Liberty Loan Committee of the Second Federal Reserve District at the special showing held by the courtesy of S. L. Rothapfel, managing director of the Rivoli Theatre.

All predictions as to the magnitude of the part the Motion Picture industry is to play in the Fourth Loan Campaign were more than verified by the committee's guests in the storm of approval that greeted each picture. The individual stars and players who contributed their services, the producers who collaborated in the making of the pictures, the Liberty Loan Committee of the N. A. M. P. I., and the other units of the industry who had donated their services to the Government to insure the success of the motion picture campaign, were given the highest praise and heartiest congratulations on the success of the tremendous undertaking.

All of the films made for the Fourth Liberty Loan drive by the industry's leading stars have been completed and the huge task of making the several thousand prints required to make possible the 100 per cent. distribution desired by the Government and the Liberty Loan Committee of the N. A. M. P. I., which has charge of the motion picture campaign, in co-operation with the Treasury Department, is now nearing completion. It was definitely announced by the committee's chairman, Adolph Zukor, that thirty-seven prints, ranging from 300 to 1,000 feet in length, would be used in the motion picture campaign. This does not include the large number of photoplays and educational films of a patriotic nature which will be available to the exhibitors, who wish to offer well rounded patriotic programs to their patrons during the period of the big drve.

Imposing List of Contributions.

Liberty Loan films which are to be distributed under the co-operation of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry by the various producing companies are as follows:

Metro Pictures Corporation—Harold Lockwood in "Liberty Bond Jimmy"; Emily Stevens, assisted by King Baggot, in "Building for Democracy"; Edith Storey, assisted by Joseph Kilgour and Frank Currier, in "Edith's Victory for Democracy," and Mme. Nazimova in "A Woman of France."

Vitagraph—William Duncan, in "The Decision"; Alice Joyce, in "The Choice"; Harry T. Morey and Betty Blythe, in "The Grouch"; Earl Williams, in "Bonds vs. Bonds"; Corrine Griffith, in "A Wise Purchase," and Gladys Leslie, in "Sylvia's Last Pledge."

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation—Douglas Fairbanks, "Sic 'Em, Sam"; Mary Pickford, in "100% American"; Marguerite Clark, "The Biggest and the Littlest Lady in the Land"; Wallace Reid, "His Extra Bit"; Elsie Ferguson, "The Spirit That Wins"; George M. Cohan, a Liberty Loan Appeal; William S. Hart, "A Bullet for Berlin"; George Beban, "When It Strikes Home"; Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle, a Liberty Loan Appeal; Enid Bennett, Charles Ray and Dorothy Dalton, Ince stars, in Liberty Loan Appeals; Mack Sennett's company, "It's a Cinch", and William Faversham and Lillian Gish, in Liberty Loan Appeals.

Select Pictures—Alice Brady and Norma Talmadge, in Liberty Loan Appeals.

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation—Pauline Frederick, Mabel Normand, Mae Marsh, Madge Kennedy, Tom Moore, Matt Moore, and others in an all-star film, "Stake Uncle Sam to Play Your Hand," and Geraldine Farrar, in "The Bonds That Tie."

Fox Film Corporation—William Farnum.

Universal Film Company—Mae Murray, in "The Taming of Kaiser Bull."

Pathe—Frank Keenan.

V. B. K. Film Corporation—Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, "Financing the Fourth."

First National—Charlie Chaplin, "The Bond."

Haworth Pictures—Sessue Hayakawa, "Banzai."

Sherman Pictures—Dustin Farnum, "Ready Money Ringfield."

Kalem All-Star—"My Country."

Exhibitors Urged to Make Bookings.

Exhibitors are being urged to make the fullest possible use of the large number of patriotic subjects which are being offered by the various producing and distributing organizations, in connection with the Liberty Loan Specials available through the exchanges of the organizations listed above. Many exhibitors, according to reports which have been received by the Liberty Loan Committee of the N. A. M. P. I., are planning to feature the Liberty Loan films during the period of the drive, a practice which is expected to become of wide vogue when the large army of exhibitors who are co-operating with the other departments of the industry become fully acquainted with the high quality of the Liberty Loan specials. Great stress is being laid by the committee upon the fact that each film carries a story which, for other purposes, could easily have been extended to five reels. Enough action and punch have been compressed into the few hundred feet allowed for these stories to give them the standing of regular features.

How Subjects Will be Handled.

Final instructions for the handling of these prints and the distribution arrangements have been sent to all of the exchanges concerned in the drive by the Liberty Loan Committee and Al Lichtman, in charge of the committee's distribution arrangements. Under the plan adopted by the committee at the suggestion of Walter W. Irwin, head of the Distributors' Division, each company will distribute the prints made by its own stars. Exchange managers have been instructed to see that no print lies idle, and that the time required for shipping prints to and from theatres is reduced to the minimum, in order that the greatest possible efficiency in distribution may be obtained. The committee is determined to obtain 100 per cent. distribution if possible, and exhibitors are urged to co-operate in seeing that all prints are re-shipped in the shortest possible time. The Treasury Department and Frank R. Wilson, national director of publicity for the Fourth Liberty Loan Campaign, the twelve Federal Reserve Boards and other Government agencies are lending the fullest possible co-operation to the motion picture drive.

Because of the hight quality of the Liberty Loan Specials and the electrifying and stirring patriotic appeals they carry, the Government has expressed the wish that every effort be made to obtain 100 per cent. distribution. Officials, who have seen the films, declare that they will be one of the most powerful agencies of publicity to be used in the campaign, and there is no doubt that the Motion Picture Industry has established itself more solidly than ever in the good opinion of the authorities as an essential war-time industry. This appreciation, film men declare, will be greatly enhanced at the conclusion of the motion picture drive.

Players Show Enthusiasm.

Enthusiasm and interest in the Liberty Loan Films has become highly contagious throughout the entire industry, and every branch of the industry has offered the heartiest and fullest co-operation possible in making the big drive, which, it is declared, will be one of the greatest accomplishments ever credited to the industry, the complete success desired by the Government. The list of films and stars co-operating in the making of the pictures under the auspices of the Liberty Loan Committee of the N. A. M. P. I., by no means represents the full extent of the co-operation offered the Government by the industry. Many other pictures would have been added to this list, had not the lack of time and pressing engagements prevented other stars from taking a part in the film drive. Many stars were away on location when the Government's invitations were received, and could not return in time to make pictures for the drive.

The last few days of the time allotted for the acceptance of Liberty Loan Specials was marked by a wild scramble by numerous stars to get their pictures completed in time. Many of them worked night and day, and still others abandoned all work upon important pictures to co-operate with the Government in the Liberty Loan Campaign. This spirit of sacrifice, enthusiasm and co-operation was to be found in every studio, and had the committee been able to extend the time limit for the receipt of pictures, there is no doubt but that many other pictures would have been available for Government use. Because of the tremendous task of making the thousands of prints required to obtain the widespread distribution desired by all parties, the committee was compelled to decline regretfully numerous offers by stars and companies to make special films for the campaign.

Government Gives Enthusiastic Approval.

Any vestige of doubt which may have been entertained as to the immensity of the part the Motion Picture Industry is to play in the Fourth Liberty Loan Campaign was dissipated on Friday with the receipt by Adolph Zukor, chairman of the committee, of a telegram expressing the Government's enthusiastic approval of the Liberty Loan films contributed by the industry. Frank R. Wilson, national director of publicity for the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign, declared in this telegram that the Liberty Loan films would be one of the greatest agencies of publicity which could possibly be used in the campaign. His telegram to Mr. Zukor is as follows:

John Flinn has just shown me a dozen of the Liberty Loan films, and I am frank to state that I am simply astounded by the cleverness of their conception and the bigness of their appeal. I am positive that they will be one of the greatest agencies of publicity and arousing patriotic enthusiasm in the forthcoming loan, and I take this opportunity of informally thanking you for the great burden of the work of putting this co-operation together for the Treasury Department.

Frank Wilson.

Government officials at Washington have been so delighted with the co-operation extended by the motion picture industry that plans are now being completed which will make use of every resource at the command of the Government and the industry to obtain the 100 per cent. distribution which the high quality of the films demand. All previous efforts made by the industry to co-operate with the Government in its Liberty Loan campaigns will be eclipsed by the showing which will be established during the period of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign. Government representatives and film men who have seen the Liberty Loan films unite in declaring that the motion picture campaign will exceed even the highest expectations of those who have been promoting the campaign.

LOUIS OSTLAND DEAD.

Louis Ostland, camera man of World Pictures, died last Monday as a result of an operation for appendicitis. Mr Ostland in point of service was one of the oldest camera men connected with the World Corporation. For the past six months he has been working in conjunction with Dell Henderson in making the Blackwell-Greely pictures. His last work was "The Road to France." Before he had completed the picture he was taken ill.

PAUL BRUNET DISCUSSES ESSENTIALITY

Vice-President of Pathe Exchange Says Picture Industry Is Essential Because It Can Help Win the War

PRESIDENT WILSON having declared the motion picture business to be an "essential industry," it is fitting that executives of the industry should give some thought to the part which we are destined to play in the great world war drama.

The word "essential" should be taken in its most literal sense by all persons engaged in the manufacture and distribution of motion pictures. This industry has been placed on the "essential" list simply and solely because it can assist in the great work of winning the war. It would ill become any employe to assume a license because his vocation has been declared essential; on the other hand, he should bend his every effort toward the "will to win the war" and not regard his employment as he did in pre-war days, merely as ordinary work, but as an integral and necessary part of the war-winning activities of the Allies. Any man or woman who takes advantage of the "essential" ruling and endeavors thus to escape his or her just obligation toward winning the war is just as much a slacker as he who deliberately evades military service.

The instructions we have given to all employes are to the effect that we must keep the slogan "Win the War" ever present in our minds. The House of Pathe in every Allied country is doing the same kind of work as we are doing here in America. Years before a state of war was declared to exist between the United States and Germany, Pathe was distributing Allied progaganda films in this country, and thus combating the insidious pro-German propaganda films then being widely distributed and financed under the auspices of the Imperial German Government. At that time it was impossible for America, as a neutral, to prevent pro-German films from being circulated, but Pathe's distribution of pro-Ally films did much to counteract the evil influence of the German propaganda.

Immediately upon the declaration of war between the United States and Germany, Charles Pathe offered to turn over the entire Paris plant to the U. S. Government, free of all charge, an offer which was gratefully accepted.

In Great Britain our English organization is co-operating most loyally with the British Government and lending all possible assistance in the way of circulating British and American propaganda films, furnishing pictures for the cantonments in both England and France, in fact, in all of the Allied countries.

Pathe's establishments in France, Italy, Spain, Australia, South America, China, and elsewhere scattered throughout the globe, have all received similar instructions from Mr. Pathe personally.

Every Pathe employe is 100 per cent. pro-Ally—that is a sine qua non of his continued employment under the famous Rooster banner—and the manner in which our branches, managers and salesmen have tackled the U. S. Government's weekly "Official War Review" is proof positive of their sincere loyalty. Although this single reel war special has been released for only seven weeks to date, more than half the motion picture theatres of America have already contracted for its weekly appearance on their screens—including over 3,000 days on the U. B. O. and Orpheum vaudeville circuits. Through the good offices of J. J. Murdock of the U. B. O., every vaudeville theatre from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to Mexico will shortly be featuring Uncle Sam's "Official War Review" every week.

In addition to this, Pathe is distributing a great variety of Official Government pictures for our French and British Allies, the two latest series of which are "Britain's Bulkwarks" and "The Far Flung Battle Line," each consisting of twelve weekly one-reel war specials showing military and naval activities in every clime.

Motion pictures are destined to play an enormous part, not only in winning the war, but also in the post-bellum period—they will do more than any other single agency toward linking together into one cohesive whole the nations now allied in the cause of democracy. Regardless of what tongue he may speak, every intelligent man can interpret motion pictures—the power of the eye is greater by far than the power of the pen or of the press, and the old saying that "the pen is mightier than the sword" must now give way to a new rendering—"Mighty is the power of the pen and the sword, but the screen is mightier than both!"

This industry is cheerfully giving up many of its best men to the various domestic film propaganda movements engineered by the Division of Films of the Committee on Public Information. Many of these men are making great personal sacrifices, both as regards remuneration for their services and in the breaking of family ties and home life—unhesitatingly volunteering for work in America of agreeing to visit Allied and neutral countries with a view to assisting in making the world safe for democracy. Pathe Exchange, Inc., has lent several of its home office executives to the great cause, men who are now located in England and Italy and France, and Pathe will willingly release other men whose services would be useful to Uncle Sam at this crisis if called upon.

There can be no question as to the essentialness of this industry. We are essential to the winning of the war. President Wilson has decreed it. The writer has supreme confidence that the Nation's Chief Executive will never have any reason to regret his decision. This industry stands as one man behind the President in undivided loyalty to the great task which confronts us.

PAUL BRUNET.

Caruso In "My Cousin" Oct. 20.

In deference to the insistent demand of exhibitors, reflecting the keen interest of their patrons in the forthcoming appearance of Enrico Caruso in Artcraft pictures, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation announces the release of "My Cousin," the operatic star's first photoplay production, October 20.

EXPOSITION TO SHOW WAR ACTIVITIES

Government Departments Will Join Motion Picture Interests at Madison Square Garden—Will Arouse Great Public Interest

INDICATIONS are that the Motion Picture Exposition scheduled to be held at Madison Square Garden from October 5 to 13, will be the most unique that the trade has ever given. Owing to the great part the trade is playing in the work of winning the war many of the exhibits will be along the lines of war activities. In keeping with this idea the United States Fuel Administration has taken one of the largest spaces in the Garden and is planning one of the biggest exhibits in the whole show. Besides making it impressive as to its size they also expect to make it one of the most interesting and instructive of all the highly interesting exhibits that have already been promised.

P. B. Noyes, head of the conservation division of the Fuel Administration stated when he arranged for this space that he was most enthusiastic about this War Service Exposition of the Motion Picture Industry. He said, "This exposition has the hearty approval and endorsement of the Fuel Administration. We believe in it all the way through and are only too glad to be afforded the opportunity to take space and to stage an exhibit. Coming as it does early in October there will be no necessity for heat of any kind and nearly all of those taking exhibits are located in or around New York so there will be no heavy demands on the railroads for transportation. This exposition fits in very well with our plans for starting a big educational campaign among the people for fuel conservation and I know of no better place to start it than at this motion picture exposition in the heart of New York City."

Joseph Johnson, publicity director for the Red Cross, is another who is enthusiastic about this exposition. When it was called to his attention by Frederick H. Elliot, executive secretary of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and general manager of the Exposition Company, he expressed himself as being heartily in favor of it and agreed right on the spot to take space. He immediately addressed a letter to his assistants in New York to select the space for the Red Cross Exhibit and gave them instructions as to the character and scope this exhibit was to take. As soon as these details have been completed they will be announced.

While in Washington Mr. Elliott visited the officers of the Food Administrations and received assurances from high officials of that department of the Government that they would be represented at the show. As soon as they can decide upon the form their exhibit is to take definite arrangements will be made to select a space of sufficient size to make the proper display.

Although it cannot be announced officially at this time it is very probable that this exposition will contain the largest exhibit of war relics taken from the battlefields of France that have ever been gathered together in New York. These relics were collected by the Allied Governments and have been loaned to the Liberty Loan Committee for use in the coming drive. In all there are about twenty-seven carloads of these relics and conferences that are to be held between Mr. Elliot and Frank R. Wilson, publicity director for the Liberty Loan Committee, will determine just how many of them will be placed on view at the Garden during the Exposition.

It is expected during the course of the next week that other important administrative departments of the Government who have expressed a desire to have space at this exposition will complete their final arrangements. These include the Aircraft Board, the Army, the Navy, the department of Agriculture, the Y. M. C. A. and the Allied war charities organizations and the War Savings Stamps Committee. Preliminary discussions have already been held with representatives of the department of Agriculture and definite assurances have been received that they will be represented among the Government space holders.

One of the most gratifying facts about this whole exposition is the manner in which the supply and equipment people are taking space. These include the Nicholas Power Company, The Precision Machine Company, The National Lamp Works, The National Carbon Company, The Westinghouse Lamp Company, The Cooper Hewitt Light Company, The National Carbon Company, The Edison Lamp Works of the General Electric Company, The United Theatre Equipment Company and J. H. Hallberg. Many inquiries have been received from other companies in the supply and equipment held and it is expected that they will sign contracts for space in the immediate future.

Madison Square Garden will be elaborately decorated for this exposition. The color scheme will naturally be red white and blue, as this is a war service exposition and the whole decorative plan will be worked out to impress this fact on the general public. Plans and sketches are now being drawn and it can be safely said that when the doors are thrown open to the public on Saturday night, October 5, that the motion picture industry will be proud of the work that has been done.

The floor plan of the Madison Square Garden is now on file in the offices in the Times buildings and space holders are urged to come in and select their spaces at the earliest opportunity. Owing to the rapid manner in which space is being disposed of, over half of the entire main floor of the garden has been sold, the desirable locations are being rapidly selected.

Owing to the difference in the shape of the Garden and the Palace there is both a difference in the arrangement and the size of the locations. It is therefore necessary for those who had contracted for space for the exposition which was to be held in the Palace to select other locations in the Garden. While an attempt has been made to keep the locations the same size as those in the Palace, physical difficulties, which could not be overcome, prevented this from being done. There is therefore a slight difference in the number of square feet in the locations in the Garden from those in the Palace, and space holders are urged for this reason to make their selection early, in order that all of the desirable spaces may not be snapped up by those outside the industry. From present indications there will be eight or ten concerns entirely outside of the motion picture industry who will have space at this exposition.

As soon as it is generally known that the war service exposition of the motion picture industry was an assured fact inquiries from these concerns began to come in, and solicitors are out now rounding up the contracts. These concerns realize the importance of this exposition as an attraction to the general public and are taking space for that reason.

Mary Anderson Joins Fred Stone's Company

MARY ANDERSON, or "Sunshine" Mary Anderson, as she is more generally known, will make her appearance in a new picture for the first time since the expiration of her contract with Vitagraph, as leading lady in Fred Stone's second Artcraft picture, "Johnny Get Your Gun." This does not mean that "Sunshine" Mary has been idle. As soon as she was through at Vitagraph, she went back east for a short visit. Upon returning to the west coast she was engaged by Harry Garson to play an important part in "The Hushed Hour" and immediately after this she went to the Universal studios for work in a special feature.

When Donald Crisp was getting ready to make "Johnny Get Your Gun," she was selected as the most perfect type to play opposite Fred Stone in that picture. "Sunshine" Mary has been a member of the western colony of film players since June, 1915, when she was transferred from the eastern studios of the Vitagraph to the west coast plant at the request of Rollin S. Sturgeon, who was at that time managing director of the Vitagraph forces in California.

Mr. Sturgeon went to New York in search of a leading lady, and was impressed with Miss Anderson's personality and ability after seeing her at work in the Vitagraph studio at Flatbush, and he arranged for her transfer.

Motion Picture Men Go to Washington

A LARGE delegation of motion picture men, headed by William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, and including nearly all the important producers and exchange men, with a sprinkling of exhibitors, left New York Monday evening, September 16, to appear before the Senate Finance Committee in Washington on the following Tuesday morning. There was a preliminary meeting at the Shoreham hotel in Washington Tuesday morning. It is said that the motion picture men have a very convincing argument as to the proper method of levying the tax on rentals which is to take the place of the old footage tax.

Trade Showing for "Ruling Passions."

The Schomer Photoplay Producing Company announces that there will be a trade showing of its first production, "Ruling Passions," on the New York Theatre Roof on Thursday, September 26, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Exhibitors generally are requested to attend.

HOW THE INDUSTRY CAN SAVE FUEL

Recommendations for the Conservation of Material and Electric Energy in the Theatres and Particularly in the Exhibition and Manufacture of Motion Pictures

By J. H. Hallberg

THE war demands economy on the part of every person and organization in the United States. Many changes can be made in the operating conditions of industries of all kinds, which will conserve an enormous amount of material useful in the conduct of the war.

It is the patriotic duty of everyone to take advantage of suggestions which are offered tending towards conservation. Economies effected now on account of the war will be of great value later on after the war has come to a close. The savings practiced during the war will bring about an unprecedented economic condition to the advantage of every person in the United States. Therefore, when the world's markets are again thrown open to all nations, the United States will be in prime condition to maintain its present powerful position, notwithstanding the strong competition expected to exist at that time.

The following recommendations are respectfully submitted for the careful consideration of and application by producers and exhibitors of motion pictures and stereopticon slides, and it is believed that the allowances made the various operating conditions are more than liberal and that many exhibitors can practice further economy by working on a considerably lower basis of current demand which will still render satisfactory performance.

For convenience, the various types of theatres and exhibitions have been put in classified sub-divisions so that any one interested can immediately find the recommendations for any particular class of performance.

Class "A".—Theatres seating 600 or more persons devoted to the exhibition of motion pictures and the rendering of a musical program, together with a lighting effect display which forms a part of the performance separate from the exhibition of motion pictures.

Class "B."—Theatres similar to Class "A" with the exception that the performance does not include the separate rendering of a musical and electrical effect display program, merely including the exhibition of motion pictures with musical accompaniment.

Class "C."—All regular motion picture theatres seating less than 600 persons, devoted exclusively to the exhibition of motion pictures with musical accompaniment.

Class "D."—All exhibitions of motion pictures and stereopticon slides not included in the foregoing classifications, such as in Y. M. C. A.'s, churches, schools, lodges, commercial institutions, and for general educational, home and traveling exhibitions.

Class "E."—Theatres seating 600 or more persons devoted to vaudeville performances in conjunction with the exhibition of motion pictures.

Class "F."—Legitimate theatres for opera, drama and comedy, with occasional exhibition of motion pictures.

Class "G."—Lecturers exhibiting motion picture and stereopticon slides necessary for the proper illustration of the lecture.

J. H. Hallberg.

Recommendations for Class "A."

Safety Exterior Entrance Lighting.—300 watts for each entrance.

Exit Lighting.—Not to exceed the smallest number and size of lamps demanded by local authorities for the safety of the public.

Lobby Lighting.—Not to exceed one watt per square foot of floor surface, measuring from the front entrance doors to the auditorium entrance.

Safety Interior Theatre Auditorium Lighting.—Not to exceed the smallest number and size of lamps demanded by local authorities for the safety of the patrons.

The above refers only to the lamps necessary during the exhibition of motion pictures.

Auditorium Decorative Lighting.—It is recommended that all decorative lighting during the exhibition of motion pictures be limited to that required under the foregoing paragraph covering safety interior auditorium lighting.

Scenic and Effect Lighting.—Where part of the performance consists of the rendering of a musical program in conjunction with special display of electric lighting effects, it is recommended that the manager limit the number of lamps, and the candle power of such lamps, to the lowest amount consistent with a reasonably satisfactory delivery of the performance, and that Tungsten highest efficiency lamps be used in all instances and wherever possible in spot-lights and other stage lamps.

General Auditorium Lighting.—For purposes of illuminating the auditorium and balconies during intermission, or while the theatre is being emptied and filled, it is recommended that the total lighting during such periods shall not exceed sixtenths of one watt per square foot of floor surface, and should be as much less as consistent with the safety of the patrons.

General Lighting of Rest Rooms, Offices and Work Rooms.—The illumination required for these purposes should be limited to that absolutely required, and decorative lighting should be eliminated, but the present fixtures may serve the purpose by reducing the number and the candle power of lamps now used.

Motion Picture Projection.

Screen.—In order to effect the greatest current saving, it is recommended that metallic coated screens be used in place of the ordinary muslin screen or painted wall.

The size of the picture should be as small as consistent with the seating arrangement and architectural construction of the theatre, but in no case should the picture be larger than 22 feet wide.

The smaller the picture, the greater brilliancy and the sharper the definition, and as a general rule the performance is more pleasing and more readily absorbed by the eye. Therefore, it is essential to use the smallest size picture practical under any given conditions.

Current Consumption.—It is recommended that not more than 6 k.w. of current be permitted for the operation of each moving picture arc for all distances above 125 feet.

For distances from 75 to 125 feet, the maximum current consumption for each projector should not exceed 5 k. w.

For distances from 40 to 75 feet, the current consumption should not exceed 4 k. w.

For the projection of lantern slides and scenic effects by means of projection apparatus from the moving picture operating room, the installation to be limited to a maximum of two arcs, each consuming not to exceed 3 k. w.

Carbons.—It is important that the correct size, style and quality carbons be used for all projection lamps so as to insure maximum efficiency with minimum current consumption.

The following sizes are recommended for the upper carbon:

25 to 35 amperes.... 5/8-in. diam. cored
40 to 65 amperes.... 3/4-in. diam. cored
70 to 90 amperes.... 7/8-in. diam. cored

For the lower electrode, use the carbon of the style and size recommended by the carbon manufacturer for the above mentioned sizes of carbon.

The foregoing carbon specifications apply where direct current is used for the arc.

Recommendations for Class "B."

For this class of theatres, the same rules apply as for Class "A," but no current should be used for scenic and effect lighting.

Recommendations for Class "C."

Theatres in this class may operate the following electric lamps, same as scheduled for class "A":

Safety exterior entrance lighting, exit lighting, lobby lighting, safety exterior auditorium lighting, general auditorium lighting, general lighting of rest rooms, offices and work rooms; except in the matter of current consumption for motion picture projection, the following recommendations are suggested:

For distances above 125 feet, maximum current consumption recommended for the operation of each moving picture arc, 4 k. w.; for distances from 60 to 125 feet, 3 k. w.

For distances below 60 feet, with d. c. at the arc maximum current consumption 2½ k. w.; with A. C. at the arc 2 k. w.

It is, however, recommended that, where the picture is not larger than 12 feet wide and where the distance does not exceed 70 feet, using the metallic coated screen, the Tungsten gas filled incandescent projector lamp be used, with a maximum current consumption of 1,000 watts for each projection machine.

Recommendations for Class "D."

Exhibitions under this heading are generally conducted in educational institutions, in the homes, and in public halls where performances are given by traveling exhibitors. Therefore, existing local laws generally govern the entrance, exit and general illumination for this class of performance.

It is recommended that, except in special cases the maximum allowable current for projection be limited to 1,000 watts for each projector when installed in Y. M. C. A.'s, churches, schools and lodges, and also in commercial institutions where exhibitions are given for the entertainment of customers and employes.

All other smaller performances should be limited to a maximum current consumption of 600 watts for moving picture projection and to about 500 watts for stereopticon projection.

Recommendations for Class "E."

Under this heading is included the large vaudeville theatre which exhibits motion pictures as a part of the performance.

The same rules which apply to the Class "A" theatre hold good, with the exception that additional spot lights and stage lamps may be necessary for certain acts, but it is recommended that each such lamp unit be limited to a maximum current consumption of 1,000 watts using the Tungsten gas filled lamp, except in special cases, where the arc lamp must be used for spot or flood light service, but not to consume more than 3½ k. w. for each arc lamp, and the number of spot light units to be limited to the least number consistent with a reasonably satisfactory presentation of the performance.

Recommendations for Class "F."

Under this heading is included the legitimate theatre, which will be subjected to the same rules recommended for Class "E."

Recommendations for Class "G."

This class is intended to cover the performances given by lecturers of national and international fame that should not be construed as referring to ordinary traveling lecturers who will come under Class "D."

For this class of service, the requirements for entrance, exit and general lighting for public halls and buildings is in effect and for the projection of motion pictures a maximum of 1 k. w. is recommended for each projector, and for arc stereoptikons a maximum of 2 k. w. is sufficient.

For this class of service however the Tungsten gas filled incandescent projector lamp can be used with a maximum current consumption of 1 k. w. for each projector where the distance is under 75 feet and for stereoptikon projection the incandescent lamp is recommended with a current consumption of not to exceed 600 watts.

Motion Picture Studio and Laboratory Recommendations.

When motion pictures are taken, artificial illumination is generally necessary. Several forms of illuminating units are used, consisting of Cooper-Hewitt tubular lamps, open arc lamps, and high efficiency day light Tungsten lamps. All of these units possess different characteristics, and for good effects are generally used combined together for the illumination of each stage setting. There is considerable difference of opinion as to the value of these different forms of illuminants, but the possibility of saving in current is great. Studio managers will do well to consult competent authority on the most economical and still satisfactory method for studio illumination. Besides a saving can be effected by turning out all lamps used for photographic purposes excepting during the few minutes when the camera is in action.

In the studio, as well as in the film printing plants, and in the showrooms of the various manufacturers and distributors of films, moving picture projectors are used. Many of these are still operating with powerful arc lights consuming from 3½ to 5 k. w.

It is recommended that the current consumption for all projectors for this class of service be limited to 1,000 watts, which calls for the use of the high efficiency Tungsten projector lamp, which has been found entirely satisfactory for this purpose.

It is also recommended that in all exhibition rooms of producers, distributors and film exchanges and film exhibition rooms of all kinds, the size of the picture be limited as much as possible (6 ft. wide is recommended) and that a metallic coated screen be used, so as to secure maximum efficiency. This will permit the use of lamps from 400 to 700 watts instead of 1,000 watts.

General Recommendations.

(1) Turn out every lamp when not required.

(2) Do not use tinted or colored or special incandescent lamps, except for stage effects. Keep all lamps, reflectors and shades clean and repaint reflection surfaces whenever necessary.

(3) Use the smallest number and wattage lamps which will answer the purpose, irrespective of what has been used heretofore.

(4) Keep all projection lenses clean and in proper adjustment.

(5) Be sure to set the carbons so that the crater will be fully exposed and feed the arc frequently, so as to maintain proper crater formation and high illuminating efficiency.

(6) Do not let your arc flame, which follows the use of a higher arc voltage than necessary. Energy is wasted when the arc is so long that it flames excessively.

(7) While a liberal allowance has been made in the maximum current consumption permitted, it is possible to give proper performances with about one-half of the energy above specified for each electric arc by using motor generators or suitable converters for the current instead of the wasteful and hot rheostat.

(8) Rheostats waste electricity and fuel; therefore, they are expensive to operate and detrimental and should not be used unless absolutely necessary.

(9) If two projectors are installed in one operating room, it is recommended that only one arc be burned at a time, but if it is absolutely necessary for the continuous exhibition of a picture to start the second machine before the first one is stopped, the second arc should not be turned on more than two minutes before the operating arc is extinguished.

(10) The highest efficiency incandescent lamps, the best quality projection and condensing lenses, the highest quality metallic coated screens, and the use of current economizing devices in place of rheostats for both the projector arc and for the projector incandescent lamps, are recommended as effective means towards conservation.

(11) In order to reduce the cost of investment for current economizing apparatus for projector arcs, it is recommended that the electric lighting companies modify their rules to the extent that, where now current of a certain ampere strength is delivered for a rheostat from one side of the three wire system, the same number of amperes will be delivered from one side to the three-wire system if a motor generator or other transforming device is installed.

(12) It is recommended that the electric light companies do not insist upon the use of starting devices for moving picture motor generators operating on A. C., because such motor generators are started only once or twice a day at the most, and when the load is light on the line. However, where starters are absolutely necessary for the motor itself or for the protection of the lighting company's system, the company will not insist upon, or enforce the use of starters with no volt release where other simpler and less expensive starting devices for the limiting of the current rush can be secured.

District Attorney Swann Following Film Thieves

AN impromptu conference was held between the members of the "Distributors" Division of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and District Attorney Swann Monday afternoon, September 9, relative to the prevalence of film thefts within the motion picture industry.

The District Attorney's office, under the immediate direction of Assistant District Attorney Tally, has been extremely active during the last two or three weeks in apprehending the ringleaders in the gang of film thieves who have been operating with great success for the past two or three years. These men, who have been arrested and indicted, have confessed, and have turned over to the Assistant District Attorney much valuable information as to the methods used by the gang in their nefarious practice. As a result of this, it is hoped that much progress will be made in stamping out these film thefts.

District Attorney Swann spoke to the representatives of the industry and called attention to the evidently lax conditions within the offices of the various companies which made thievery possible on account of the ease with which it could be accomplished. He stated that in every case where they had obtained a confession, the criminal had said the reason he became a film thief was because it was so easy, and no attempt was ever made to prosecute the offenders. The District Attorney also had information pending to show that the gang of film thieves was perfectly organized, and that they guaranteed to deliver any film from any office for which they could get an order.

He stated further that all the facilities of the District Attorney's office were at the disposal of the motion picture industry in stamping out this great evil and that they were ready and willing to cooperate in every way, shape and manner.

Among those present at the conference were Messrs. McBride, Hess, Pitman, Ineranty, Atkinson, Schaefer, Goldstein, Johnson, Bickerton, Eltonhead, and Executive Secretary Elliott of the National Association.

Douglas Fairbanks Preparing "Arizona"

What is considered the most important announcement of months from the Douglas Fairbanks studio is the statement that arrangements have been completed with Augustus Thomas to picturize his famous stage success, "Arizona," for Artcraft release. Augustus Thomas personally filmed this same play four years ago, but realizing the remarkable technical and photographic advancement during that time, selected Fairbanks to produce a new screen version of "Arizona."

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

Canadian Exhibitors Battle Against Combination

ACCORDING to Secretary Thomas Scott of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ctario, Inc., headquarters at Toronto, a nber of local exhibitors have been "h," and have been "playing into each ers' hands" for a long time without ilizing it. Mr. Scott recently cited a mber of cases, which he investigated rsonally, in which, he claims, that one hibitor has been played against the ier by exchange representatives in or- r to pry larger rentals out of them. e declares that some exhibitors have en trying to outbid a competitor for a rtain picture or serial when the rival s not been considering the release in estion at all.

Some of the members of the association have discovered how they have een handled by comparing notes at sociation meetings and elsewhere. He encouraging the local members of the ssociation to report to him any stories egarding high offers for pictures from ther exhibitors with a view to ascertaining if such bids were authentic.

Secretary Scott also declares that all oronto exchanges recently refused to ent pictures to an exhibitor when the atter had a dispute with one of the listributing companies. The exhibitor n question found it impossible, it is declared, to pay the price asked for a feature and asked for a reduction. A dispute followed and the house was dark four days because other Toronto exchanges would not supply him with pictures, before he reported the matter to the Ontario association. Officers of the association investigated the matter and found indications of an agreement among the exchanges to cover such a case, it is declared.

Secretary Scott declares that various members of the Ontario association had been counting upon the "independent exchanges" of Toronto for service instead of patronizing exchange companies which have been acquiring theatres in different parts of Canada. A meeting of the executive was held on Monday morning, September 9, however, to consider securing the control in Ontario at least of a number of releases so that the association, or an organized company, would be in a position to accept program bookings.

In addition to making an attempt to secure redress in the matter of the straight fifteen cents per reel per day tax imposed by the Canadian Government, the Ontario association has also taken steps to have the Ontario Government regulate the number of moving picture theatre licenses in various centres. The association has asked the Government not to issue any more new licenses for moving picture theatres in Toronto except in cases where the Ontario association feels that there is an opening for a new theatre. A definite request, in this direction was made to Hon. Mr. McGarry, the Provincial Treasurer, in view of the possibility of the erection of several more moving picture theatres in Toronto, according to an announcement by Mr. Scott.

War-Taxed Exhibitors Cite "The Last Straw"

THOMAS SCOTT, secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario, Inc., has issued the following official communique regarding the fifteen-cent per day reel tax which the Canadian Government is now collecting from all exhibitors in the Dominion. The statement reads as follows:

"The fifteen-cent reel tax which the moving picture exhibitors have been called upon to pay is the greatest injustice of all taxations because it is not equitably proportioned, and it is causing bitter feeling throughout Ontario. The attention of the Government has been called to this matter several times but, up to the present, nothing has been done to equalize the unfair burden. Every exhibitor in Canada realizes the seriousness of this great war and feels his high sense of duty toward the Empire while the moving picture industry has never been lacking in patriotism or loyalty toward the Government. The men of the business are ever ready to accept their full share of the burden.

"They have given their screens free of charge time and time again for war purposes, but this reel tax has meant the last straw to a number of exhibitors. In the aggregate, this tax alone amounts to $300 per year to each exhibitor, with the result that over thirty theatres in small towns already have had to close three or four days of each week. Many others are considering the same move in order to make the two ends meet.

"I believe that every member of Parliament is conversant, by this time, with the unfairness of this tax. Several have admitted that it is a grave injustice and that the situation could easily be remedied by the adoption of a sliding scale. Money invested in the moving picture business in Canada runs into the millions and should be protected as in the case of any other business. This is a very serious question and should receive full consideration on the part of every member of Parliament before many investors face absolute ruin."

Protests regarding the reel tax have been received by the Ontario association from a number of out-of-town exhibitors and the officers are aiming to secure an adjustment of the levy so that it will be fair to all.

Easy Stunt in Motor Advertising.

Paul Noble, the new publicity man for the Columbia, Portland, Ore., used his flivver to advertise Charlie Ray in "A Nine O'Clock Town," the attraction then at that house. He built a big grandfather's clock on the platform back of the seat, had the dial showing 9 o'clock and a head of Ray at the hour. The whole thing was attractively painted, and when not running about town it stood before the theatre. The Globe has dressed its ushers and ticket girl in the new Liberty Bell "Girluform" and they look quite natty. Carl Marquard, late with the Liberty, is the new manager of the Globe.

Playing "Uncle Tom" Like a Road Show

A NOVEL stunt in moving picture advertising was introduced by the Alhambra Amusement Company of Utica, N. Y., during the screening of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," featuring Marguerite Clark. Manager Hathaway, who has charge of the publicity stunts for the Alhambra and De Luxe theatres, both of which are controlled by the Alhambra Amusement Company, thought that it would be a good idea to introduce something new to attract the attention of the Utica public to the film masterpiece depicting Harriet Beecher Stowe's time-honored story.

The parade—for that was what it was, and as big and prepossessing a one as ever boomed a road show of the dramatic story of the old darky's suffering—made its way through the main streets of the city, and was highly commended and appreciated by the Utica public. A pony cart appeared in the parade with two of the main characters perched on its high seat. This was little Eva and the irresistible Topsy. The attraction of the parade was helped along greatly by the service of a local fife and drum corps and the theatre orchestra as a jazz band.

On the last float of the parade rode a bevy of characters. Lawyer Marks, George Harris, Cassy, Eliza, Aunt Orphelia and St. Clair, who are an indispensable part of the film drama, were represented. And was Uncle Tom forgotten? Not so you could notice it! Seated on a bale of cotton on one of the floats, singing plantation melodies, was the much abused darky character and his wife, Emiline.

Banners carried by small boys were scattered throughout the parade to advertise the purpose of the fine demonstration. A local quartet of youthful colored songsters were hired for the occasion and accompanied Uncle Tom and Emiline on their float.

TOM NORTH'S HUNDREDTH MAN

Crack Sales Manager Tells His Staff That the Good Man Is the One Who Gets the Signatures

NO matter who gets the loving cup that typifies the high water mark in the Tom North Loving Cup Contest in the Western division of the Pathe Exchange, all the branch managers are getting real lessons in selling, and in his latest ginger-letter the sales expert hits the nail not only on the head, but squarely between the eyes when he says that the only real salesman is the one who can get authographs on the dotted lines. All the theories of the psychology of salesmanship, all the ideas that can be had from the trade journals on selling narrow down to the one supreme test—the name on the ..... There are a lot of crack salesmen who can do everything to an exhibitor but sell him, and selling is what a salesman exists for. In his latest letter he writes:

It's when you get all through, have used all your arguments, shed forth all your personality, nursed your case along with all your skill and care, and come at last to the clincher, and lay your paper before him and hand him your fountain pen and say, "Sign here." There's the rub.

Will he sign? After all the nibbling will your fish bite? Are you going away with that contract in your pocket and glee in your heart, or with a sinking sense of defeat?

Many start; few finish.

You may know the rules of salesmanship and the arts of approach and the psychology of persuasion, but do you get what you go after?

This supreme moment of inducing your man to "Sign here" calls for your finest technique, it is the test of your ability; it is the nicely balanced issue that determines whether you are a success or a not-quite.

It not only calls for all your forces, but for an exquisite balance of them. For you must be convincing, but not too convincing, pleasant but not too pleasant, indifferent but not too much so, and insistent but just exactly insistent enough.

It's a great game In billiards the variation of your cue by a hair's breadth may cause you to miss. In golf you must bring to your stroke the finest gradation. In target practice you must have perfect accuracy if you would hit the bull's eye. But getting a man to "Sign here" calls for an even more careful mental balance, for the most delicate play of the feelings, for all your shrewdness, your nerve and your self-control.

Anybody can lead a horse to the trough; who can make him drink?

Many girls are experts in love-making; who can get him to pop the question?

It's easy enough to make the drunkard see the evils of drink—he is the tenderest-hearted of men—but who can cause him to stop drinking?

We can all argue and plead and talk and all that. What is wanted is one who can bring a decision.

This is the hundredth man, the man who can get his victim to "Sign here." It is he who is mysteriously promoted over his fellow salesman, it is he who forges ahead in business competition, it is he who rises to the top.

The prizes of this earth go to the fellow who can make people do things, and particularly things they don't want to do.

So if you've been wondering what's the matter with you, perhaps we've found it. You quit. You don't bring home the goods. You do everything except succeed. You are an expert bundle wrapper, but you can't tie a knot that will hold.

For it's a cold and cruel world, and it's not much interested in the story of your efforts, nor in your education and eloquence, if you can't get your man to "Sign here."

That's what Dr. Frank Crane says, and it is what I say.

How are you coming in the Tom North Trophy Contest? How much larger were your collections week ending August tenth over week ending August third? Please advise.

Lots of good luck. Keep up the "Pep"! Hurrah for each and every office and the Western Division.

Yours very sincerely,
PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.
Tom North, Western District Manager.

P. S.—How are your bookings on "Hands Up!"? Are you beating "House of Hate"? How are you smashing them with "Fourth of July in France"? I am expecting each and every branch in the Western Division to equal or exceed Child's performance in San Francisco. Are you? You bet you are. T. N.

Next week we hope to be able to give the results of the first period of the contest. Mr. North has been called back to New York and bigger things, but his heart always will be in the northwest even if it did go dry before the rest of the country, and the cup will be competed for until it is permanently won through having stayed in the same office for three consecutive periods. One point is certain. The biggest month in the history of the Pathe Exchange; the famous Brunet week will be eclipsed. A new mark will be set, largely through the use of letters and advice plus the added interest that comes from a contest, no matter how small, and that loving cup is by no means to be classed as small from its intrinsic value, and it stands for much more than the three-figure sum it would realize as bullion.

Memphis Censor Chairman Remains.

John M. Dean, chairman of the Memphis board of censors, is to continue in that office, for Mayor Frank Monteverde has declined to accept his resignation. Mr. Dean is a business man with broad minded views, who endeavors to eliminate preconceived notions of his own in his relations with moving pictures. He follows the reports of the National Board of Review largely in his work, being a member of the advisory committee of the Board.

Frances Marion, one of the most br liant and successful writers for t screen, who recently resigned from t West Coast scenario staff of the Famo Players-Lasky Corporation to engage war work, has just received notificati of her appointment to an important po abroad in connection with the moti picture activities of the Committee Public Information. Announcement the appointment was made by Chairma George Creel in Washington last week

Miss Marion is the second woman to b chosen by the Committee on Public I formation since the beginning of the wa for work abroad, the only other appoin ment being that of Mrs. Norman de Whitehouse as Commissioner to th Swiss Republic. Miss Marion left a Atlantic port for Europe last week, an will probably spend some time in Eng land, France and Italy.

Eubank in Signal Corps.

Victor G. C. Eubank, supervising di rector of the Essanay Film Manufactur ing Company, and a prominent figure i the film industry, has been commissioned first lieutenant in the United State army, and has left Chicago for Washington to report for his new duties. Because of his expert knowledge of the film business, he was placed in the Signal Corps, where his work probably will be in charge of some branch of the photographic division. Mr. Eubank has been connected with Essanay for five years and for the past two years has had entire charge of Essanay's production of pictures, besides having written many scenarios.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

By A. H. GIEBLER

Theatre Building Halted.

A REQUEST from the War Industries Board was received a few days ago by Alexander Pantages, theatrical producer, to suspend operations on his new picture and vaudeville theatre now being built at Salt Lake until after the war. Mr. Pantages announced recently that he would build a $1,000,000 theatre on the corner of Hill and Seventh streets, in Los Angeles. In probability the building would not be started until after the war, but as to the Salt Lake house, which is already partly finished, the loss would mean something like $200,000, Mr. Pantages claims, if the Government does not permit him to complete the structure.

"If the materials or labor used in the building of the Salt Lake theatre are needed by the Government, I will gladly stop and not attempt to finish it," Mr. Pantages said, "but the opposition may have been inspired by some of my business rivals, and pending further correspondence with Washington, which will contain full information as to true conditions at Salt Lake, I cannot state positively whether I will stop building, either in Salt Lake or in Los Angeles."

Grauman Surprises Audience.

Sid Grauman sprang a surprise on his audience at the Grauman theatre one night last week by projecting the new Liberty Loan film which has just been completed by Douglas Fairbanks for the coming drive. The audience heartily endorsed the sentiment in the film, judging from the enthusiastic manner in which they viewed it. After the picture was given the one showing, it was boxed up and sent to Washington to be formally released on the opening of the Loan Drive.

Metro Looking About for Studio Site.

Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro Pictures Corporation, James W. Rhodes, Joseph W. Engel and Count Cippico, members of the organization, who are now on the west coast on moving picture business and are looking about for a location on which to build a new studio, have several sites under consideration, and while they are still undecided as to which one to finally settle upon, have hied themselves to Catalina Islands for rest and quiet, and to debate the question away from all real estate agents and owners of property.

Big Ball at Vitagraph Plant.

A ball was given at the Vitagraph studio in Hollywood on the night of September 7 for the benefit of the Motion Picture War Service Association Fund, and incidentally to dedicate the new glass-enclosed stage that has been built at the plant for the accommodation of the extra companies that are coming from the Eastern studio to spend the winter in Southern California. One of the features of the ball was the wedding of Douglas S. Dawson, of the directorial staff, and Peggy Booth, a popular and pretty young ingenue of the films.

Between the dance and numbers various performers from the vaudeville and dramatic houses gave sketches, dances and other performances. Visitors from other Hollywood studios were the guests of the Vitagraph stars, among whom Earle Williams, Grace Darmond, Bessie Love, Antonio Moreno, Carol Holloway, Frank Glendon, William Duncan and others acted as hosts. The admission was one dollar, which was turned over to the M. P. W. S. A. to add to the Hospital Fund.

Little Thrills of the Week.

It was the morning after Claire Du Brey's little party at her bungalow on the beach. Claire stepped out of the front door with the intention of taking in the wicker chairs and tables that had been left out on the lawn over night. Instead of the familiar lawn, Claire saw the waves of the old Pacific chasing one another clear up to her doorstep, and her wicker furniture bobbing up and down like corks way out into the sea. Claire is now looking for artistic anchors with which to fasten her furniture down when she takes it out of doors.

A persistent rumor is floating around to the effect that Albert Shelby Le Vino is about to return to his former haunts in the West to engage in the intensive cultivation of the scenario at the Metro studio and the extensive cultivation of the bean, the beet, the bee and the Belgian hare at his ranch at Burbank.

While the Committee for the Suppression of Old Stuff was out last week with sawed off shot guns looking for the miscreant who revived the story about Bill Hart being a better actor than his brother Bret was a writer, somebody dug up the one about Sarah Bernhardt not being as good as her brother Sam, and blamed on poor long-suffering Bull Montana.

Fairbanks to Film "Arizona."

The film rights to Augustus Thomas' stage drama, "Arizona," have been acquired by Douglas Fairbanks, and production will begin on the feature immediately upon the completion of the propaganda film now being made by the star for the Canadian Government. "Arizona" has been filmed before, and by Augustus Thomas himself, but it was in the days of the short pictures, when the art had not progressed as far as it has today. The suggestion was made to Fairbanks by Mr. Thomas, and was eagerly seized upon as a fitting vehicle for a modern Fairbanks feature.

Brunton Returns from East.

Robert Brunton returned last week from New York, bringing back contracts from the Lillian Walker and the Kitty Gordon companies to make pictures at the Brunton studios on Melrose avenue, while these stars are on the West Coast. Mr. Brunton says that he has contracts under consideration with two other stars for studio room and facilities.

Preparing for Increased Forces.

W. S. Smith, studio manager at the western Vitagraph plant, says that several companies from the eastern plant in New York are expected in Los Angeles within a few weeks for the making of film productions. A new indoor stage and several dressing rooms are being built in preparation for the increased producing forces.

Milwaukee Firm to Build Ince Studio.

Arrangements have been completed with the Milwaukee Building Company to begin immediately upon the construction of the Thomas H. Ince studio on Washington boulevard and Shermay way, at Culver City. The site for the new studio comprises about eleven acres. Eighteen buildings are contemplated for the film plant, the cost of which will be approximately $150,000. The offices and administration building will have a frontage of 250 feet, and will represent a large Colonial mansion. There will be two glass-enclosed stages, shop buildings, dressing rooms, scene drops, property rooms and wardrobe buildings.

Wife of Theatrical Manager Dies.

Mrs. Ethel Bovyer, wife of Charles Bovyer, manager of one of the "Hearts of the World" companies on the West Coast, died in San Francisco a few days ago after an illness of eighteen months. Charles Bovyer was at one time manager of the Empress Theatre in Los Angeles.

"Kids" Night at Superba.

Thursday night was "Kids" night at the Superba Theatre during the week of the run of "The Yellow Dog." Antrim Short, juvenile hero of the filmed story, appeared in person at the show house and made an address to the boy audience, telling the youngsters just how to go about organizing Anti-Yellow Dog Clubs.

De Mille Has Narrow Escape.

When Cecil De Mille and his company were returning from Tajon Ranch, where they had gone to film a number of exterior scenes for "The Squaw Man," De Mille's car skidded on a narrow stretch of road on top of a steep embankment on which the adobe mud was abundant and sticky, and went over the side, the car landing on another narrow ledge. Mr. De Mille clambered out of the car unhurt, and with the aid of other members of the company, managed to drag himself and his car back to safety through boulders and bushes that threatened every moment to dislodge and send the whole struggling company and the machine to the bottom of the canyon.

Walthall Registers.

Henry B. Walthall was among the number of early registrants at Board 17 in Los Angeles because he would be on his way to New York on the day set for general registration, according to the new draft law, in the United States. Walthall is forty years old and is married, but he did not claim exemption, and hoped that he would get a chance to go over and take a shot at the Huns and avenge the death of his brother, Junius Walthall, who was killed in the battle of the Marne on July 15. Walthall will begin rehearsals for a new stage play immediately upon his arrival in New York. Newman W. Aronson, Walthall's manager, was also one of the early registrants.

A Birdman's Wedding.

Kenneth O'Hara, former newspaper and film publicity writer, now a budding aviator, was married at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Hollywood last week to Beulah Booker, a young film ingenue of the west coast colony. The wedding occurred during a short furlough granted the birdman before he is sent across to France.

Cut by Broken Glass.

Director Craig Hutchinson, of L-Ko, was seriously cut by broken glass when a bottle of peroxide exploded at the studio one day last week. The cut developed a case of blood poisoning, and Hutchinson had to be taken to a hospital. The film in course of production under his direction, "Work or Fight," was suspended until the director could be dismissed from the hospital.

Change Partners!

"Smiling" Billy Parsons, who has begun work on "You Know What I Mean," under the direction of Wilfred Lucas and Bess Meredyth, will have a new director, Louis William Chaudet, for his next production. Chaudet has been making a Billie Rhodes feature. Miss Rhodes' next picture, however, "The Wishing Ring Man," will be directed by Lucas and Miss Meredyth, which means a change of partners all around.

Australian Film Man in West.

C. B. Helmith, general manager of the Co-operative Film Exchange, Ltd., of Melbourne, Australia, was a visitor at the Christie studio during his recent stay on the west coast. Mr. Helmith's company was one of the first to handle the independent output of the Christie plant.

To Motor Across Continent.

Anita King McKnight, former film star, departed a few days ago for Washington, D. C., with the intention of making the trip across the continent in her motor car. Miss King wants to go to France to engage in writing and in entertaining the soldiers as soon as she can make the necessary arrangements.

Bernstein in New York.

Isadore Bernstein, who has just recently been elected vice-president of the National Film Corporation, left Los Angeles last week for New York, where he will arrange for the distribution of the Billie Rhodes productions, and attend to other business pertinent to the output of the National organization.

Studio Shorts.

Lila Lee, accompanied by her guardian, Mrs. Gus Edwards, and Kenneth McGaffey, publicity manager for Lasky, made a trip to San Francisco last week to make a personal appearance at the Imperial Theatre in the interests of the Red Cross and other patriotic benefits.

Because of the illness of his wife, who is in New York, William Farnum departed for the East immediately upon his return from Catalina Islands, where he had been making the final scenes for a new Fox production.

Jeanie MacPherson, Lasky scenario writer, has returned from Santa Barbara, where she has been reeuperating from a slight illness.

Pat O'Malley will play the leading masculine role in the new Priscilla Dean vehicle, "Dealing With Daphne," for the Bluebird program.

Jack Gilbert has been engaged to play opposite Bessie Love in a coming Vitagraph feature.

Billie Ritchie, of the Lehrman Sunshine Comedies, has moved into his beautiful new home in the Laurel Canyon district of Hollywood.

Louise Glaum has returned from Big Bear Valley, where she has been making scenes for her next Paralta Picture.

Dustin Farnum returned last week from San Clemente Island, bringing with him a big catch of swordfish.

Fielder Slingluff, art director at Triangle, received notice to appear before the examining board of the War Department and take examination for a commission as captain of engineers in the camouflage department.

Juanita Hansen is taking a month's vacation, after finishing her work in the Universal serial, "The Brass Bullet."

Bobby Vernon left the Christie studio on September 9 for service at the Submarine Base at San Pedro. Bobby's enlistment was one of the last to be accepted before the new draft regulations became law.

Lois Weber has begun work on the production of an original play written by herself, entitled "Home." In which Mildred Harris will be featured.

Merta Sterling, after several months' absence from the films, is back at work in an L-Ko comedy called "The Chef," with Harry Gribbon.

Marie Walcamp and her company have returned from the Big Tree section of California, near Santa Cruz, where scenes were taken for the coming Bret Harte story, "In The Carquinez Woods."

Frank Keenan has returned from the Mojave Desert location, which will be the background for a number of scenes in a coming Pathe feature.

Anthony W. Goldeway, former scenario writer for the American and Sennett, is now in charge of the scenario department at the L-Ko studios.

Clare Seymour, new leading lady in Christie Comedies, has been joined by her mother and brother, who will make their home in California. Miss Seymour's father is expected as soon as he gets his business affairs wound up in the East.

Since completing "The Man Who Couldn't Shoot," Harry Carey has been vacationing at his ranch at Newhall, California.

Before leaving for New York, Henry B. Walthall played the leading part in a feature play written especially for him and filmed at the studios of the National Film Corporation under the direction of Bertram Bracken.

Now that Henry Lehrman has used all the known varieties of wild and domesticated animals in his comedies, he has turned to insects to inject thrills into his comedies. The first insect to be trained was a bee, which has just been featured in a coming Sunshine.

Rainbow Comedies on General Film Progran

A NEW comedy brand is bein launched through General Fil Company as distributor by th United States Motion Picture Corpora tion of Wilkesbarre, Pa. Releases unde this brand, which will be known as Rain bow Comedies, begin at once. The firs release is "Nearly a Slacker," with Lil lian Vera and Eddie Boulden featured Rainbow Comedies are the product of the United States Motion Picture Corporation, and will be one-reel, high class, humorous subjects. The series on which distribution is now beginning consists entirely of what is termed "polite" stories, in which the leading parts are taken by sprightly young people in straight comedy action. Among the leads playing in these comedies are Eddie Boulden, famous as a light comedian in many screen releases, and Lillian Vera, a girl of winning personality and beauty. The direction is in the hands of Jos. Richmond, well known as a producer of comedies and features. The initial release "Nearly a Slacker" is already in the General Film exchanges

RUBBERNECKING IN FILMLAND

Los Angeles Correspondent Personally Conducts Our Readers Through the West Coast Studios

By Giebler

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, again we find ourselves in the suburb of Glendale and on our way to one of the historic spots of Movieland. As we traverse the streets of this bucolic bailiwick you will observe that the people living here have all of the blessings of progress, including banks, dentists, doctors, ice-cream parlors, a public library and a police station.

You will also notice that the Jitney Bus that descended upon the country like a beneficent plague a few years ago, still obtains in this place. The small cars you see scurrying hither and yon will convey you to the farthest confines of the village for the small sum of fifteen cents. Smaller sums are charged for shorter distances.

The studio buildings looming up on the horizon are our destination. These studios, my friends, are among the oldest on the Pacific Coast. It is here that the Kalem Company made many of their early films—here that Helen Holmes did some of the thrillingest of all her thrilling railroad stunts.

These studios are now occupied by the Diando players, who make films for the Pathe program.

The two gentlemen standing on the porch in front of the office are the head guys of the Diando Company. The tall man is John English, studio manager, and the other one is Frank Beresford, manager of productions—and incidentally, two of the friendliest folks of the films. You heard the kind words of Mr. Beresford when he tendered us the freedom of the place with the words: "Rubber around as much as you like."

But before we enter the large studio, a slight pause while we consider the character of the place we are about to visit will be beneficial.

My friends, this large building has been the scene of seething activities of the movies for lo! these many years. Rivers of tears have been generated here—big moments and thrills that have shaken the movie multitudes from stem to stern have been planned and carried out beneath this roof.

Hundreds of peerlessly beautiful heroines have been persecuted, hectored and badgered by bold, bad men who sought to rob them of the papers, the deed to the old home place, and the honest love of tall young gents wearing sport shirts and white spats and other hero make-up.

Plots of the most diabolical nature have been hatched and almost carried out. Frail young things have battled against the brutal blows of villains, while strong young heros butted their shoulders against the unyielding property walls waiting for the director's word to bust through and end it all with a close-up.

We will now step inside. Here you are afforded a treat in being able to see one of our most prominent directors engaged in doping out a situation. This scene is one from a drama called "The Coming of the Law," in which George Larkin and Betty Compson play the leading parts.

The chap in the chair with the shoulder straps is George. The girl with the pup in her arms is Miss Compson. The man with the dark glasses is Director Stuart Paton, and the fellow with the whiskers, fur cap, mackinaw and boots, a costume affected by all movie characters of Canada and the Northwest, is Robert McGowan, who measures six feet seven inches in height.

We will leave these people to their problem and give our attention to the stage just ahead where Roscoe Arbuckle is at work.

Mr. Arbuckle is not a member of the Diando players, but as the studio is very large and Fatty is no infant in size it naturally appealed to him when he was looking around for a place after he left the Balboa studios at Long Beach. He has been making his comedy screams here for several months.

Mr. Arbuckle, as you see, is his own director. He not only tells the other players what to do, but gives himself tips on how to be funny and gets away with both propositions.

The set represents a school house, and the beautiful blonde at the teacher's desk is Mildred Reardon. Among the bad boys in the seats you will readily recognize Al St. John, known wherever people laugh themselves sick at Arbuckle comedies, which is equivalent to saying—everywhere.

By stationing ourselves here in this no-man's land between two sets of movie mummers, we can, by using the swivels in our necks, see what is going on in the Arbuckle set as well as observe the scene to the right, where Director William Bertram and his company are working out a series of scenes with the infant prodigy, Baby Marie Osborne as the featured player.

This remarkable child, ladies and gentlemen, although only six years old, is a star in her own right and draws down more salary than the president of many a bank.

A drama called "The Sawdust Doll" is being made today. The scene of the bedroom shows you the little star being posed for a close-up.

Over to the right another set is being made ready for the same drama, and represents the humble home of a blacksmith.

The lady in the blue dress is Claire Du Brey, who plays the part of stepmother to Baby Marie Osborne; and Jack Connelly, now in the uniform but formerly the blacksmith, is the father.

The chap who is stamped beyond recall as the villain of the piece by the small but wicked looking mustache is William Quinn. The young lady farther back in the set is Julia Seymour.

Bert Ensminger, the assistant director, is putting the finishing touches, and the camera cranker who is moving his machine over in position to take the shot, is Tom Middleton.

No, lady, the piece of scenery that just fell from the roof of the set and struck Miss Du Brey on the head was not written down in the script, that was one of the accidents that will happen now and then in the best-regulated studios, and shows that there are many perils in picture making that the public wots not of.

Did you notice the agile manner in which Director Bertram jumped to the rescue and received the worst of the blow on his strong right arm? This will teach you that all of the heroic things do not get in the films and that there are stout hearts beating in other bosoms besides the hero's.

Your attention is now called to one of the most remarkable players in the country.

Folks, meet Ernest Theodore Roosevelt Morrison, or Sunshine Sammy, the youngest Afro-American actor in the movies.

Little Ernest Theodore is just five years old and has been shining on the screen for over two years. To give you an idea of how important this chap is, he is taking part in two plays at the same time. He has a role in "The Sawdust Doll" with Little Miss Osborne, and at the same time he is supporting Fatty Arbuckle in the comedy being made on the stage we just looked at a minute ago.

The elderly colored lady is Sunshine Sammy's grandmother and chaperon. She is very proud of her grandson and wants him to be a preacher when he grows up.

D. H. BERG REPORTS PACIFIC COAST BOOM

After Fifteen Weeks' Trip He Finds Conditions Generally Improved—Interior Towns Have Suffered

DOUGLAS H. BERGH, traveling personal representative for George Kleine, returned to the city September 9, after a trip to the Pacific Coast which lasted fifteen weeks, during which over 8,000 miles were traveled.

Mr. Bergh's first stop was made at Salt Lake City, on his way out to Seattle, and he found it in a more prosperous condition than it has known for years. All the moving picture theatres on Main street—and there are nine of them—were doing well, as that is the great highway for business. The American, owned by Wm. H. Swanson and managed by George Mayne, is the leading picture theatre in the city. It seats over 2,500 people and offers excellent programs at good prices. Manager Mayne is a very capable showman and is equally affable and popular.

Speaking of Seattle, Mr. Bergh said: "The situation there is just as Tom North described it in the interview with you which appeared in your letter of September 14. Tacoma is having the greatest boom in its history, and Portland is in about the same condition. Large shipbuilding yards are in full swing and, as in Seattle, there is a great dearth of skilled workers and laborers.

"San Francisco, Los Angeles and Long Beach, in California, are all enjoying a great tide of prosperity, shipbuilding being the principal industry just now. Picture theatres in all the Pacific Coast towns named are flourishing as never before. But, while this is the case, it must not be overlooked that business in the interior of Washington, Oregon and California is suffering—I mean the moving picture business. This is due to the fact that while at first the draft was severely felt in the coast cities named, the great influx of men and women from interior points far more than made up for the depletion, while the high wages paid placed in circulation a great deal more money than had been known before.

"Such was not the rule in the interior towns. They not only lost a great number of their young men, but also many thousands of skilled and unskilled workers and the families of those people, in addition, who moved to the booming coast cities.

"Some idea of the inflated wages paid in the coast cities just now can be formed when I tell you that coal-heavers in San Francisco, at the present time, are making as high as a minimum of $80 per week, and in some cases the men are paid as high as $110 and $115 per week. It must be understood that the men are engaged in job or piece work, for the number of tons handled by them, per day. The skilled workers have come from as far east as Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and Arizona, many of them bringing their families and this has caused a great slump in the receipts of moving picture theatre owners in the interior towns."

Mr. Bergh spent over two months of his time in San Francisco and Los Angeles. Quite a number of exhibitors were seen in both cities, and, without exception, all reported splendid business. Several exhibitors from the interior towns were also seen and they substantiated the statement already made by Mr. Bergh concerning such towns. In addition, these owners of picture theatres reported considerable loss this past summer owing to the exceedingly hot weather in the interior valley towns.

Mr. Bergh came East by way of Denver, where he stopped over for five days. He found business was good in all the moving picture theatres on Curtis street—and there are nine of them. Of the remaining fourteen houses in the city, those in outlying neighborhoods, as a rule, were doing well.

Speaking of George Kleine features, Mr. Bergh said that "The Unbeliever" had made a big hit wherever shown on the Pacific Coast, and that a great many owners of theatres are repeating it after an intermission of from 30 to 60 days. "The Unchastened Woman" has been another success on the coast. Carefully reviewing his trip, Mr. Bergh is of the opinion that there is a general improvement of conditions on the Pacific Coast, in the moving picture business.

"The Common Cause" Under Way.

During Convention week some very realistic scenes were enacted at Superior street and Fairbanks court, under the direction of J. Stuart Blackton and his assistant, Jack Martin, for the filming of situations in the patriotic picture, "The Common Cause." The first scene showed the British tank forging over the hills of France and crashing through the German lines. The other scenes represented the Yanks in the trenches and the British tanks leading over and across "No Man's Land," driving the Huns out of their fastnesses.

A large crowd of spectators gathered to see the scenes enacted and among the interested spectators were noticed Mr. and Mrs. George Kleine, and their daughter, Helen, in their automobile. It seemed quite like old times to witness Mr. Blackton's energetic direction and see Herman Rottgers handling the effects. Mr. Blackton was in Chicago nearly all the week making arrangements with the authorities to take these pictures, and to gain permission for the use of the British tanks and the employment of the soldiers, who were engaged at the War Exposition held here at the time for the production.

Ten Years as Booker of Films.

R. C. White, who has seen ten years' service in the booking department of the General's Chicago offices, recently resigned to take charge of the bookings of the Chicago office of the Select Pictures Corporation. Mr. White was first with the General's Calumet office in Masonic Temple, and when it was merged in the office at No. 117 North Dearborn, under Fred C. Aiken's management, Mr. White was transferred to that office. Later, when that office moved its quarters to the City Hall Square Building, Mr. White still held the position as head of the booking department, and continued to retain it after the General's Chicago office was finally fixed in the Business College Building, on Wabash and Adams street.

Goldwyn Star Series Very Popular.

Ike Van Ronkel, manager of Goldwyn's Chicago office, says that the Star Series is going over big and that nine salesmen are now working in Chicago and adjoining territory. Reports arriving from exhibitors, who have run "The Turn of the Wheel," show that exceptional business attends its showing everywhere in tributary territory to Chicago.

Victor Eubank to Signal Corps.

Victor Eubank, who for sometime past has held the position of assistant to the president of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, left September 12, for Washington, D. C., to report to the U. S. Signal Corps, to which he recently received his appointment as first lieutenant. Lieutenant Eubank has the best wishes of a host of Chicago friends, and we all hope he will return with laurels to take up the duties of his old position when we have won the war.

M. J. Cohen Talks About "Frisco."

M. J. Cohen, manager of George Kleine's San Francisco office, and Mrs. Cohen were registered at the Hotel Sherman last week and, when seen, Mr. Cohen looked just as young as he did 12 years ago, when he was connected with Bill Swanson's forces in Chicago.

Mr. Cohen has been in the moving picture business for over 20 years. He started with the old Vitagraph Company in New York, at 116 Nassau street, when he was publicity man and manager of road shows under the special supervision of "Pop" Rock. In Chicago he was a member of Swanson's exchange force, having charge of publicity and the Swanson circuit of theatres in Illinois, which showed vaudeville and pictures. He also managed the old Swanson Theatre at 39th street and Cottage Grove. He opened that house with Selig's production of "Monte Cristo," the presentations being made memorable by the fact that lines in the play of the name were spoken by several well known theatrical actors and actresses behind the screen, while the pictures were being projected. This was Mr. Cohen's own idea and attracted much attention and raised many a laugh at the time. Moving pictures presented in this manner gained the title of "Swanson's Talking Pictures." Space forbids recounting Mr. Cohen's succeeding experience in the business, except that he has been manager of George Kleine's San Francisco branch for a little over a year.

During our conversation Mr. Cohen drew my attention to a San Francisco organization which is solely devoted to the combined interests of exhibitors and exchange men. It is known as the United Motion Picture Industries of Northern California. The executive committee and the president and vice-president of the organization take care of all matters pertaining to the welfare of the moving picture industry in San Francisco.

Exhibitors Well Organized.

The members meet every alternate Wednesday at luncheon, in the Palace Hotel, and during these luncheons the secretary draws attention to any matter that merits discussion. The luncheon hour has been chosen for such discussions, because that is the most convenient time for both exhibitors and exchange men, as it does not interfere with their work.

The members meet on call only when something of unusual importance comes up, or when an address is to be delivered by some prominent speaker. If a matter affects the exchange men only, then exhibitors need not attend, and vice versa.

The organization has no politics and its operations must positively be conducted in the interests of all and not of the few.

The dues are $5 per month for each exchange and the larger houses. The smaller theatres in the city and nearby pay $2.50 per month each. The receipts are devoted solely to the interests of the organization and a handsome sum is now in the treasury. Many cases of need, in the cases of employes, during sickness, or resulting from accident or death have been cared for by the organization.

Officials Represent All Interests.

Following are the names of the officers: President, Louis Reichart, manager Metro exchange; vice-president, Eugene Roth, manager California Theatre; treasurer, Sam Levine, owner of a chain of houses, and Norman Eisner, an attorney, secretary, on salary.

On the executive committee are: Jack Partington, manager Imperial Theatre; Howard Sheehan, manager Rialto; Herman Wobber, manager Paramount-Artcraft exchange, and M. J. Cohen, manager George Kleine exchange.

Mr. Cohen drew my attention to the fact that U. S. official war films are handled differently in California than in any other section of the country. The films are purchased outright by the State Council of Defense, and Governor Stevens, who is a great friend of moving pictures, has appointed a film division of the State Council of Defense to handle the distribution of the films and to arrange prices.

Sol Lesser is chairman of the film division, and the other members are: Herber, M. J. Cohen, Wm. Sproule, f the So. Pac. R. R. and Morleishacker, president of the And nd American bank.

division has a publicity de, the members of which are newspaper men and critics. M. ohen is director of the department or the state, and all publicity matter connected with U. S. official war films is sent broadcast throughout the state, to every section.

A significant patriotic act, which in future years will prove invaluable to Californians now unborn, is being faithfully observed as each successive official war film is issued—the State Council of Defense is filing a copy of each with the State Librarian at Sacramento. This is a splendid thing, and the state of Illinois should at once see to it that future Illinoisians shall have at Springfield a copy of every one of these pictures, so that they may look upon the mighty and inspiring efforts of their forefathers in the Great World War.

During the run of "The Unbeliever" in San Francisco, the U. S. Marine Corps of Mare Island heartily co-operated, with the result that recruiting was greatly stimulated. Afterwards, in order to show George Kleine's appreciation of their efforts, Mr. Cohen arranged concerts and benefits for the Marine Band, and for an athletic fund, as well as for the Junior Marine Scouts. In recognition of Mr. Cohen's efforts, he was recently appointed a major in the American Junior Naval and Marine Scouts.

He now wears the button emblematic of his rank, and is as proud of it as the boy who wears his first pair of pants for the first time.

Opening of the Chicago Pantheon.

The Pantheon, the latest and the most pretentious picture theatre on the Lubliner & Trinz circuit, was opened Wednesday evening, Sept. 11. It is located on Sheridan Road, near Wilson avenue, one of the most preferred sites in Chicago.

Many thousands of people clamored to get in before the opening hour, and although the Pantheon seats 2,950 people and that three shows were given to literally packed throngs, many more thousands were turned away. The occasion was a record breaker in this respect for Chicago, and it also afforded undeniable proof that moving pictures are held in higher estimation than ever before in the field of entertainment.

Messrs. Lubliner & Trinz received numerous congratulations on the big event and about 80 beautiful floral pieces expressed the good will and congratulations of the senders.

"The White Lie" (Paralta), with Bessie Barriscale, was the leading feature of the program, and Madge Evans, of the World Film Corporation, was present in person to grace the occasion. A splendid orchestra of 30 pieces under the baton of Alexander Zukowski, and a magnificent Kimball organ, played by Miss Stozil, furnished the music.

The Pantheon is the ninth house on the Lubliner & Trinz Chicago circuit. The others are: The Vitagraph, Biograph, Paramount, West End, Oak Park, Michigan, Knickerbocker and the Covent Garden. The last named, which seats 2,500 people, has been put in second place by the Pantheon, with its 2,950 seats.

The admission charged at the opening was 22 cents, including the war tax, but it is expected that the price will be raised. Daily shows will be given from 2 p. m. till 11.30 p. m.

Big Success of "America's Answer."

"America's Answer," the second official United States war picture, has been enjoying a prosperous run during its first week at Orchestra Hall. The management, however, finds that the United States War Exposition in Grant Park, close by Orchestra Hall, has militated against its normal success, as the exposition grounds have been the mecca for great multitudes all last week. The remaining two weeks of the run will tax the capacity of the big hall, from all indications. The Chicago dailies, without exception, have praised "America's Answer" very highly. May Tinee, in the Tribune, writes of it:

"The film is a whirlwind of fact. There's a thrill in every episode of this war picture. There's a fund of information in every episode. There's action, punch, reality in every episode.

"There are many remarkable closeups in this production and on the opening night there was wild excitement several times when some one in the audience recognized friends or relatives.

"The picture could not fail to be as devastating to patriotic lassitude and tentative pacificism as a sweeping forest fire."

Irving Mack in Indianapolis.

Irving Mack, of Universal's Chicago publicity department, was in Indianapolis the week of Monday, Sept. 9, doing advance work for "Crashing Through to Berlin," which opened a run at the English Opera House Sunday, Sept. 15. Mr. Mack informs me that the Indiana metropolis is a fine showtown this season.

J. B. Koppel Will Manage Riviera.

J. B. Koppel has been selected as manager for the new Riviera Theatre, at Broadway and Lawrence, this city, by Messrs. Balaban & Katz. Mr. Koppel has had long experience in theatre management, and his knowledge of moving pictures dates back to the days of the small 5-cent houses. Mr. Koppel at one time managed the North Shore Theatre for Finn & Hyman and opened the Calo for the Ascher Brothers in 1915. After a successful term at that theatre, he opened the new Adelphi for the same firm. Under his guiding hand, the Adelphi showed to prosperous business.

Rose and Alcazar Theatres Leased.

E. F. Keebler & Company, representing Harry C. Moir, have leased to a local syndicate operating moving picture theatres, the Rose Theatre, at 63 West Madison and the Alcazar Theatre, at 69 West Madison, for a term of ten years, dating from May first last. The total rental for that period, for both houses, is $200,000, and it is said that the lessees will spend about $100,000 in remodeling and renovating the houses.

Frank B. Rogers on Business Trip.

Frank B. Rogers, manager of Pathe's Chicago office, left the city Friday evening, September 13, on a trip through Chicago territory in the states of Illinois, Indiana and Iowa. During his tour he will stop over in all the "key" cities in that territory, including Davenport, Dubuque, Clinton and Muscatine, Iowa; Rock Island, Moline, Peoria, Rockford, Aurora, Bloomington, Champaign, Danville, Decatur, Elgin, Ottawa, Freeport, Galesburg, and Joliet, Ill., and Fort Wayne, South Bend, and Elkart, Indiana.

The Ascher Brothers have appointed Miss Sarah Maxon as manager of the Peerless Theatre, on their circuit of houses in Chicago. This is the first lady manager thus far engaged by this firm. Miss Maxon was formerly a singer on the theatrical stage. She intends introducing community singing at the Peerless Theatre and thus enable the spectators to join in singing patriotic songs with the proper spirit and dash.

F. I. L. M. Club Asks Co-operation.

The F. I. L. M. Club of New York announces, commencing October 20, in order to complete satisfactory service for exhibitors, that they may receive their film in time for morning and matinee performances, that all film delivery companies will be required to return exhibitors' shows at night. Certain companies have been complying with these rules, but as others have not, it causes considerable delay in getting shows to customers in time for their daily performances.

In order to facilitate this service and help customers, it is hoped that they will co-operate with the F. I. L. M. Club. Unless this is accomplished—owing to the shortage of help—there will be many delays which cannot be overcome by the exchange. This is an acute situation and needs the co-operation of all concerned. Exhibitors who need their shows early in the day can appreciate the situation, and if the exhibitor will insist upon his messenger living up to the requirements, a satisfactory conclusion will be the result.

F. I. L. M. Club Opens Season.

The F. I. L. M. Club of New York held its first fall meeting Wednesday, September 4. From now on it will meet regularly every Wednesday. Many subjects of importance were taken up for consideration that will be beneficial both to the exhibitor and the exchange.

The Grievance Committee, Samuel Eckman, of the Goldwyn, secretary, meets every Wednesday at noon in the Goldwyn office, where all complaints from exhibitors are given serious consideration.

There has been appointed an Entertaining and Benefit Committee for the social part of the Club program. John Hammell, of the General, is chairman, and it is planned to give many pleasant affairs of social importance during the coming year.

The Graphic Film Corporation has an addition to its long list of members. Henry Siegel, of Select, is chairman for the membership committee.

Robert Helms Now With Fox Corporation

FRIENDS of Robert Helms, in the Atlanta territory, will be glad to learn that he will be with them again. He has accepted a position with Fox Film Corporation, Atlanta branch. Previous to his accepting this position he was with Metro Pictures Corporation, and has lately been connected with the Universal Film Exchange of Charlotte.

Metro Has Youthful Actor.

Gordon Griffith, juvenile actor, has been cast for an important role in Bert Lytell's latest picture, which is as yet unnamed. Although only twelve years old this clever young player has had a long and varied screen career, and has appeared in many productions. It was he who played the child Tarzan in "Tarzan of the Apes."

HALL USES GENERAL FILM OUTLET

Important Territory in South and West To Be Served at Established Offices with Twelve Extra Attractions on the $10, $20 and $30 Plan

GENERAL Film Company announces that it has just made a cooperative arrangement with the Producers' Distributing Corporation, Frank G. Hall, president, by which the big special pictures of Producers' will be served to exhibitors in the South and in the West through General Film exchanges. This deal adds another extensive distributing organization to those already employing the General Film system of film exchanges, and solves at one stroke the question of reaching the market in the South and West without a duplication of exchange facilities.

Some months ago General Film Company threw open its facilities to other distributing concerns, as well as to any and all manufacturers seeking an exchange outlet. The contract closed with the Producers is one of the most conspicuous instances of distribution pooling to have followed this initiative. Economy for all concerned and the restriction of overhead expenses to a minimum is the end striven for in the arrangement.

The Producers' Distributing Corporation came recently into the field with an attention-compelling project to supply exhibitors everywhere with high class product at fixed prices, namely $10, $20 and $30 per day. It aroused further interest with an announcement of twelve most powerful extra attractions at these prices, and already has booked up impressive time for them, including Loew, Mastbaum, Keith and Moss houses. The first release of the series is that of Evelyn Nesbit in "Her Mistake."

"Her Mistake" and the other special productions of the Producers will be available to exhibitors at the following General Film exchanges. Atlanta, 111 Walton street; Dallas, 1924 Main street; St Louis, 3010 Olive street; Kansas City, 921 Walnut street; Omaha, 1508 Howard street; Minneapolis, 909 Hennepin avenue; Denver, 1533 Welton street; Seattle, 2023 Third avenue; Portland, 390 Burnside avenue; San Francisco, 255 Golden Gate avenue; Los Angeles, 738 S. Olive street; New Orleans, 343 Baronne street.

An official of General Film Company states that the intensive sales campaign of Producers' Distributing Corporation will be given every service aid at these exchanges, and that everything is in complete readiness there for the physical movement of the product

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch"

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has just obtained the motion picture rights to "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," the famous story and play, from the authors, Anne Crawford Flexner and Alice Hegan Rice, through Sanger & Jordan. This story will serve as a starring vehicle for Marguerite Clark.

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" was dramatized by Anne Crawford Flexner and was first presented on the stage of the Savoy Theatre, New York, September 3, 1914, by Hugh Ford, who for some time past has been prominently identified with the producing department of the Famous Players-Lasky organization. Produced in London by Mr. Ford, this play met with sensational success there as well an in other foreign cities at which it appeared.

The comedy was in three acts and consisted of the high spots of Alice Hegan Rice's famous story deftly woven into a connected plot, which, however, centered about the parentage of Tommy, the youngster which "Lovey Mary" brought along with her when she unceremoniously left the confines of the orphan asylum.

The homely humor and the unusual heart interest made it one of the most successful plays in many seasons, and following its run in New York it enjoyed equal popularity on the road. Madge Carr Cook appeared in the role of Mrs. Wiggs and Mable Taliaferro was Lovey Mary. Edith Storey, who has since become even better known in pictures than Miss Taliaferro, was cast as Australia, while Thurston Hall, now a popular leading man of the screen, appeared as Mr. Bob. "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" will be a Paramount Picture.

September 16 Attractions At the New York Theatres

RIALTO.—Frank Keenan in a screen version of the famous play, "The Bells," was the leading attraction at the Rialto the week of September 16. The star gives a powerful impersonation. Fatty Arbuckle in one of his funniest comedies entitled "The Cook," the Animated Magazine, Official Allied War Review and a select scenic were also shown. Gaston Dubois and Leeta Corder were the soloists.

STRAND.—Mary Pickford in a new Arteraft picture, "Johanna Enlists," by Rupert Hughes, headed the Strand bill. It has a number of impressive military scenes. A new Outing-Chester scenic, the Official Allied War Review and the Strand Topical Review completed the pictures. Grace Hoffman and Yon Collignon were the vocal artists.

RIVOLI.—Maurice Tourneur film version of "Sporting Life," the famous Drury Lane melodrama, is the feature attraction at the Rivoli. A companion play to "The Whip," the picture has been finely produced and given an excellent cast. Willette Kershaw plays the lead. The Animated Pictorial, a scenic and a cartoon comedy were also shown. Greek Evans was the soloist.

EIGHTY-FIRST STREET.—First half, Bessie Barriscale in "The White Lie." Latter half, Dorothy Dalton in "Green Eyes."

FORTY-FOURTH STREET.—Griffith's "Hearts of the World."

BROADWAY.—Dorothy Phillips in "The Talk of the Town."

General to Release United Subjects.

It is also announced by the General Film Co. that it will handle the subjects released by the United Picture Theatres, Inc.

PLENTY OF ROOM FOR EXPANSION

Sunset Motion Pictures Corporation, Directed by Frank Powell, Has Been Offered the Whole State of Texas to Use in Making Series of Southwestern Stories

By Edward Weitzel

THERE is nothing like keeping an eye on the future. In selecting the biggest state in the Union the Sunset Motion Pictures Corporation, directed by Frank Powell, has made sure of plenty of room to grow up in. Texas is not likely to cramp the organization for space, when it is deemed advisable to enlarge the plant. At present the studio occupies five acres of land on the outskirts of San Antonio, and has an open air stage 80x100 and the hearty good will and co-operation of Governor Hobby and the rest of the population of the state. When Director Powell needed a band of real Indians and found that the few left in Texas were entirely too civilized, he told his troubles to the Governor and the obliging official gave him a letter of introduction to the Governor of Oklahoma. That gentleman, equally as courteous as his friend, the Governor of Texas, promptly furnished the required number of braves, squaws and papooses, and added a postscript to the effect that if the necessity arose he would at once send on twelve hundred more. In Director Frank Powell's opinion Texian geniality is one of the largest and finest of her products.

Before leaving for San Antonio last week Frank Powell found time to give a few of the reasons why he is glad he selected the Lone Star State when he decided to make a series of pictures, to be released by W. W. Hodkinson and put on the market at the rate of six a year. The Lamb's Club was the scene of our interview.

"My main reason for picking out Texas," said Director Powell, after he had made sure that his cigar was going to burn to his liking, "was because the stories I intended to produce are all of the Southwest, and I wanted the local color to be the genuine thing. There is a subtle ability about the exact location to carry conviction that can be obtained in no other way. Persons who have never seen certain parts of this country know instinctively when they are shown the real places. Strangers to Texas think of it as one vast stretch of prairie, unbroken by trees or any irregularities of landscape. Portions of it are just the reverse, and offer the picturesque views of mountain and valley that add so much to the merits of a western picture."

"You have finished the first of the series, I understand, Mr. Powell?"

"Yes. 'The Forfeit.' It was taken from a story by Ridgewell Cullum. House Peters and Jane Miller were cast for the leads. Here's where another reason for selecting Texas comes in: Half of the characters are Westerners; the others are from the East. I am just half way between the two bases of supply. My casts are all special ones. I engaged the western actors in Los Angeles; the eastern actors in New York. Each is best in his natural character."

"What is the name of your next picture?"

"'Good Indian.' It is a comedy, adapted from a story by the well-known writer of cowboy life, B. M. Bower. Jane Miller and Robert Elliott have the principal parts. I started the picture before coming to New York. This one called for a band of Indians, and Governor Hobby sent me to his friend, the Governor of Oklahoma, who offered to supply me with twelve hundred. Everybody is wonderfully obliging in Texas. All we have to do is intimate we would like to use this public building or that private estate and it's ours for the asking.

"I needed a handsome ranch house in one of the pictures, and was advised to look over the King Ranch at Kingsville. This is the place belonging to Mrs. Captain King, the richest woman in Texas. When I reached there I found the same readiness to be accommodating to a stranger that seems to be second nature to the people of the border state. But the ranch house overpowered me. It is a mansion, with interior decorations by Tiffany, and every comfort and luxury that money can buy. The Kings' first home in Texas was a Mexican hatch with hardly the bare necessities of life. To contrast it with that stately palace set down on the plains where only a few years ago even the herds of grazing cattle were unknown, is to realize something of the meaning the word opportunity implies."

"Do you care to tell the Moving Picture World about any more of the stories you have chosen for the series?"

Before Mr. Powell could reply, a hand was laid on his shoulder and one of his business associates warned him not to forget that his train went in an hour. Still undisturbed, the San Antonio booster settled himself back more comfortably in his chair and remarked, with true southwestern consideration, he was quite sure he could spare another fifteen minutes.

"The third picture we intend to make is called 'The Children of the Desert,'" he explained. "Lewis Dodge is the author. Eagle Pass figures in many of the scenes. Some of the action takes place in Mexico."

"You have started on this picture, I understand, Mr. Powell."

"Yes. We have been able to get the locations called for without spending a small fortune on railroad tickets."

"How are the atmospheric conditions in San Antonio?"

"Ideal. We have been able to take scenes as late as 8.15 in the evening. We shall need lots of local color in the third picture. Speaking of being able to obtain the genuine article in that line, there is one episode in 'The Forfeit' that comes about as near to being just what the doctor ordered as any reasonable director has the right to expect. There is a lynching scene in the picture, and I was naturally bent on getting it correct. Never having taken part in one of these social events, even in a minor capacity, I asked my leading cowboy if he knew the proper way to go about it. His answer was reassuring.

"'I reckon I orter know how,' he drawled; 'I've bossed th' job mor'n once.'

"'All right,' I replied. 'Pick out four men and show me how it's done. I'll watch while you rehearse them.' My newly appointed assistant shut one eye, then winked at me and grinned. 'The boys I pick out wunt need no rehearsin' special. We're ready when you are.'

"I took the scene the next day, and it is one of the most realistic in the picture. Those five men went through the lynching in a business like manner that showed they were experts. I have every confidence in its local color. Another touch they gave me added an interesting detail to the picture. A bad man kills one of his enemies; shoots him down, then starts to walk off. It was rehearsed that way at first, but the business did not satisfy me.

"'How do you know he's dead?' I asked of the cowboy who did the shooting.

"'I'll show you,' he remarked confidently. Taking a match from his vest pocket, he reached down, picked up his victims' right foot, struck the match on the sole of his boot, and watched for the slightest sign of life as he let the limb fall to the ground. Satisfied with the way the actor did his share of the work, the bad man calmly relighted a half smoked cigarette and tossed the match aside."

"Good piece of business, wasn't it?"

"I thought so. At any rate, I put it in the picture."

"ONCE TO EVERY MAN"—A PRIZE FIGHT

Tranquillity of Amity Street Sundered by Moving Picture Bout in Flushing

SO—This Is Flushing." The sign is there, right by the bridge, and beyond the bridge is, indeed, Flushing, home of commuters and famed for its moving picture studios. Here it is the Frohman Amusement Company is represented by a commodious factory for making "movies" and on the evening of September 11 the Frohman establishment was alive with action, commuters, invited guests and a battery of prize-fighters.

The call had issued from the office of William L. Sherrill that fight fans could travel to Flushing in a sea-going bus if they arrived at the Times Building early in the evening. Many were called and, as in other important movements, few were chosen; Freddie Schader and ten others going out to conquer Flushing in a sight-seeing vehicle that would hold ten times their number.

But developments proved that Mr. Sherrill's telephone number was 4— Flushing when the bus reached Amity street—the Frohman studios were crowded and the small delegation of Cook's tourists who unloaded at the door were but a sprinkling "among those present." That a fight was to be held in Amity street surprised nobody—it was "good motion picture incongruity," as Joe Lee so cleverly remarked.

Flushing fight fans filled the place. There were fans in arms, fans in hand, fans youthful, fans feminine and fans of all ages and sizes—for the word had gone forth that Flushing was at bat and community pride in Flushing's picture importance rose to majestic heights and tumultous expression. Backing Flushing's local interest came commuters from many other R. F. D.'s on Long Island, such as Bayside, Elmhurst, Brooklyn and Long Island City.

When T. Hayes Hunter was ready to begin directing he gazed upon a noble array of flushers from Flushing and leaders in the Fifth Industry. There was Harry Reichenbach, who stopped in on his way to Europe, where he goes to see what seventeen Reichenbachs are doing with the Allies; Fred Beecroft, who scented advertising from afar—as far, indeed, as Bayside; Joe Lee, who came to bid in the rights on the Sherrill picture for the State of Flushing; Freddie Schader, as has been mentioned, who came in the dual capacity of actor and daily newspaper reporter; Harry Rapf, who came purposely to rap Reichenbach, the actor; Larry Evans, who wrote the story that carried the prize fight that was then to be filmed—and oodles of others even better known to the trade.

"Once to Every Man," the Evans story, scenario by Anthony Paul Kelly, directed by T. H. Hunter, with George Kline his assistant, and E. A. Palmer, cameraman, will star Jack Sherrill and Mable Withee when the Frohman Amusement Company, of which William L. Sherrill is "the works," is ready to distribute. The prize fight promises to be a feature in the feature—for it will be the "real thing," supervised by Kid Broad, the most serious and self-possessed actor in filmdom.

Despite the remark, by Harry Rapf, that "the Kid had been in more pictures than prize fights," the Kid was "there" in every acceptance of a very slangy expression. Likewise was T. Hayes Hunter. With golden voice and plenty of it; gestures that included the full routine of setting-up exercises in an army camp, and a personality that made Flushing rise in its seats and yell and wave hats and hands at his command, Mr. Hunter directed as good a prize fight as moving pictures are likely to ever possess.

And when Jack Sherrill, after having sparred through two rounds, in which he worked off the "dope," the villain had injected into his morning eggs; when Jack had put in jeopardy thousands of dollars that Reichenbach and Beecroft had bet on him—and then, in the third round, put across the "old haymaker" that sent his rival, the champion of the world, senseless to the canvas, all Flushing and Flushing's visitors declared that a good time had been had by all.

Roswell Dague in War Camp

Roswell Dague, until recently assistant scenario editor of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has gone to Camp Zachary Taylor, Louisville, Ky., where he is training for a commission in the Army in the Field Artillery Officers' Training School. Mr. Dague had been trying for some months to get into an officers' camp, and it was several weeks before the passage of the new draft law that he received word that his application had been passed upon favorably.

Roswell Dague.

Mr. Dague was at one time an assistant dramatic critic on the New York Tribune, and before that did drama for the Oakland, Cal., Tribune. He is a graduate of the University of California and of George Washington University, Washington, D. C. He came to the Famour Players-Lasky Corporation under Hector Turnbull, leaving the assistant editor's desk of the New York Tribune.

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is proud to add his name to its roll of honor.

Larry Trimble Winning Film Cutting Contest

DIFFICULTIES into which the Washington Motion Picture Corporation has found itself resulting in asking for a receiver are rapidly being unraveled, according to F. K. McBroom, receiver, and Allen Meisenheimer, president of the company, who was interviewed by our Spokane, Wash., correspondent.

Larry Trimble has won the first round in his difficulties, as one may term them. He was formerly managing director and was chosen to cut and edit the first picture which was completed by the company the night before a receiver was requested. There was a report current that C. J. Ward, general manager, and Harold Hooker, secretary, were opposing Mr. Trimble and favoring that Philip E. Rosen edit the film.

The decision was made by Mr. McBroom after he had wired several prominent producers relative to this line of work with which he was not familiar. The film is the largest individual asset the company has, and two copies of it were placed in a bank vault for safe keeping. Mr. Trimble places the value at between $50,000 and $100,000, and it has been said that it could probably be disposed of for as much as $125,000. The fact that Mitchell Lewis is the star is considered one of the main assets of the picture.

President Meisenheimer said that S. L. Rothapfel, manager of the Rivoli and Rialto theatres, New York City; C. A. Parson, manager of the Vitagraph-Selig studio; G. D. Baker, manager of productions for the Metro Company; Madam Olga Petrova and H. O. Davis, of Los Angeles, had all sent communications indorsing the work of Mr. Trimble and urging that he be permitted to cut and edit the picture.

JOSEPH RINEHART CALLED.

Joseph Rinehart, chief technician of the Screen Telegram, the Mutual's twice a week news reel, has been called by the Fort Lee, N. J., draft board and inducted into military service at Camp Dix, N. J. Mr. Rinehart in all probability will be assigned to important photographic work for the military establishment. He joined the Screen Telegram staff coincident with the removal of the editorial offices of the release from Chicago to New York. He is particularly well known as an expert in the laboratory side of the motion picture industry, being an expert on electrical installations, lighting, developing and cutting. He is the originator of a number of important processes for the production of double tone effects in positive film.

Prior to his service with the Screen Telegram Mr. Rinehart was associated with the Hearst news reel enterprises, and later with Paragon Films, Inc., and the American Red Cross, under the film administration of Ray L. Hall, now with the Division of Films Committee on Public Information.

STANLEY CORPORATION IS ENJOINED

Federal Trade Commission Issues First Order in Motion Picture Field Against Unfair Methods

THE Federal Trade Commission, after exhaustive inquiry, has ruled in the motion picture case, issuing a formal order requiring the Stanley Booking Corporation, of Philadelphia, to discontinue the following business practices, held to be "unfair methods of competition." The corporation is a film booking concern; and the case the first of its kind. The order prohibits the following practices:

(a) Procuring the cancellation of contracts for the exhibition of moving picture films made and entered into by and between its competitors and the producers of moving picture films.

(b) Procuring moving picture films which have been announced and advertised for exhibition and display by its competitors and exhibiting and displaying the same in advance of the dates so advertised and announced by such competitors at theatres in the neighborhood of those of such competitors, where the procuring of moving picture films and exhibition of same is done to hinder, harass and embarrass competitors.

(c) Making and entering into contracts for the leasing and sale of moving picture films on the condition, agreement, or understanding that the lessee or purchaser thereof shall not exhibit, use or deal in moving picture films produced, handled, or dealt in by a competitor or competitors of respondent.

(d) Making threats and employing methods of intimidation to induce and compel owners and operators of moving picture theatres to pay it, the respondent, a sum equal to ten per cent. of the cost of moving picture films booked directly from the producer of said films or the film exchanges, or to pay to it, the respondent, any sums whatsoever on moving picture films booked directly from the producer of said films or from the film exchanges.

(e) Making threats against independent exhibitors of moving picture films that unless such exhibitors booked through this respondent their supply of moving picture films will be cut off.

(f) Threatening producers of moving picture films and film exchanges with the withdrawal of this respondent's patronage in order to induce the said producers and film exchanges to cease supplying certain of their competitors with moving picture films.

Mary Pickford to Begin Work.

Wellington Wales, manager of the Mary Pickford Company, with offices on the second floor of the Citizens National Bank Building in Hollywood, says that Miss Pickford has selected two stories and a cast is being chosen for the first picture, which will be put in production within a week or ten days.

Mr. Wales denies all of the stories that have been circulated concerning Miss Pickford's affiliation with various concerns, and says that while no definite plans for distribution has been made, the organization aims to get right ahead with productions and arrange release details later.

Mark Larkin, former City Editor of the Los Angeles Record, has been appointed head of the publicity department for the Mary Pickford Company. Mr. Larkin was at one time with the Balboa Corporation.

Clarence G. Badger.

Clarence G. Badger Makes His Mark as a Goldwyn Director

A PRE-RELEASE showing of Madge Kennedy's "The Kingdom of Youth" makes clear to Goldwyn executives that in Clarence G. Badger the corporation enjoys the services of an uncommonly able director. Ever since Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn, brought him from the coast he has proved his mettle by the increasing success of the productions of which he has had charge.

"The Floor Below," starring Mabel Normand, happened to be Clarence G. Badger's first assignment, and reports from exhibitors and the public confirm Goldwyn's estimate of the box-office value of this feature. "The Venus Model," with the same star, next came under his directorial guidance, and the story received full value in his hands. Goldwyn wishing to test the measure of his skill in directing Madge Kennedy, found a quick answer in that piquant comedienne's "Friend Husband," the play which has firmly placed her among the royal ladies of the screen. The amusing story was handled with rare discretion, and, more than ever before, her director demonstrated the infinite variety of which Madge Kennedy is capable.

No sooner had this production been finished than the wisdom of continuing the alliance became apparent to Goldwyn. Accordingly the scenario of "The Kingdom of Youth," written by Charles A. Logue for Madge Kennedy, was entrusted to Mr. Badger. How well he has acquitted himself, and with what emphasis he has justified the confidence imposed in him, was proved when the play was seen for the first time in advance of its date of release, September 23.

"Camp Fire Girls" a Bray Subject.

In nearly every city and town in the United States there is a branch of the organization known as the Camp Fire Girls of America, and for this reason the September 15 release of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph, "the magazine on the screen," should hold intimate interest for audiences throughout the country. Each summer finds the Camp Fire Girls encamped out in the open. Thrown entirely upon their own resources, they gain independence of thought and action and a fitness for the tasks that the war has opened up for all womanhood, tasks heretofore reserved for their brothers now fighting for Uncle Sam. The Pictograph shows how they are learning the meaning of the word "service."

Goldwyn Ships 224 Liberty Loan Prints.

Goldwyn is bending every effort, in compliance with the request of the Government, to insure 100 per cent. distribution of two special motion pictures made by its stars to boost the Fourth Liberty Loan. One hundred and twelve prints of "The Story of the Biggest Game Ever Played," which enlisted the services of an all-star cast, and of "The Bonds That Tie," Geraldine Farrar's contribution to the drive, have been made and are on their way to the twenty Goldwyn branch offices in various sections of the United States.

Goldwyn Gives Titles and Release Dates of Four More Star Series Productions

GOLDWYN'S first ten productions are now known to exhibitors, four additional noteworthy productions being announced this week, together with their dates of release. These new productions comprise another broad comedy story for popular Mabel Normand; an engaging and speedy drama from a well known playwright for Tom Moore; a successful play that was a big stage success for Madge Kennedy, and still another big emotional drama for Geraldine Farrar. The productions announced are:

October 21—Mabel Normand in "A Perfect 36," by Tex Charwate; directed by Charles Giblyn.

October 28.—Tom Moore in "Thirty a Week," by Thompson Buchanan; directed by Harry Beaumont.

November 4.—Madge Kennedy in "A Perfect Lady," by Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf; directed by Clarence C. Badger.

November 11.—Geraldine Farrar in "The Hell Cat," by Willard Mack; directed by Reginald Barker.

These four productions come in direct succession after Geraldine Farrar in "The Turn of the Wheel," September 2; Mabel Normand in "Peck's Bad Girl," September 9; Tom Moore in "Just for Tonight," September 16; Madge Kennedy in "The Kingdom of Youth," September 23; Rex Beach's "Laughing Bill Hyde" with popular Bill Rogers, September 30, and Mae Marsh in "Hidden Fires" on October 6.

Ten production of such power and calibre have been responsible for a tremendous volume of business taken on by Goldwyn at the outset of its second releasing year and its first season of its sales policy under the star series system.

FRANK HUBER MAKES GOOD FIGHTER

Former World Pictures Employe Captures Ten Germans and Is Recommended for Distinguished Service Cross

WORD comes from across seas that Frank Huber, of Company C, 125th regiment, thirty-second division, of the American Expeditionary Force, has been recommended for the Distinguished Service Cross as a fitting recognition of valorous conduct during the fight that culminated in the capture of Cerges, following the drive beginning at Chateau Thierry.

Frank Huber was, prior to volunteering his services to his country, in the employ of World Pictures. He began in the film room and worked up through the poster room until he became assistant cashier of the New York Exchange. He was promoted to the position of booker and salesman and was transferred to the Detroit office. The day the United States went into the war he enlisted in the Thirty-first Michigan National Guard, at Detroit.

The story of Huber's bravery in the face of the murderous fire of the Fourth Prussian Guard, the Kaiser's favorite regiment, is best told in the words of one of his commanding officers, who has lately returned to this country.

"After the first assault at Chateau Thierry, we went right ahead. There was no stop. You see the American idea is to take the fight right up to your man. No laying back to wait for him to come on. Having been brought up on this kind of fighting diet, it is hard to change your method. It was a case of man against man. The Yanks did not wait for the artillery, they went right in and right on. The only time we opened our ranks was to let the prisoners through, to go back to the rear. For days we kept on looking ahead for the objective point. We came to Cerges. It was a veritable nest of machine guns. The Huns would fight until they saw it was no use to go any further and then they would throw up their hands. This is the hard part of observing the international rules of warfare. To see a bunch of men shooting down your friends and comrades and then get away with it scott free by yelling 'Kamerad' is pretty tough. Fighting in the streets of Cerges was a man to man fight. Slowly we mopped them up until we came to a turn of the main street and faced a church with Red Cross flags flying. Instantly a storm of machine gun bullets swept our way and we lost twenty-three effectives. Huber and a couple of other men darted around to the other side and shortly the church was ours with Frank Huber bringing back ten of the Boches.

"For his work Huber was taken out of the ranks and sent to the officers' school, where he is now studying, and if he passes his examinations he will be given a commission."

Exhibitor Cuts His Own Features.

From the house program of the Star Theatre, Modesto, Cal., we clip this reference to the proposed showing of Dorothy Dalton in "The Unfaithful" (cut to two reels), and William Russell in "The Marriage Bubble" (cut to three reels) on the date mentioned.

"Note the program for August 13 and 14. Here is what may constitute a program in the future. Instead of five slow reels, here are two different five-reel features, reduced to three and two reels respectively. Whether the public will find the shorter subjects of more interest remains to be seen. This is the first time that a program of this nature has been introduced here and we're interested to see how 'it gets over.'"

WESTERN CANADA LIKES RE-ISSUE FILMS

Winnipeg Exchange Manager Claims Revivals Come to Canadian Public As Features They Have Not Seen

THAT re-issues are sure to go big in Western Canada is the opinion expressed by H. L. Nathanson, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, former manager of the Regal Film branch in that city. Mr. Nathanson visited Toronto for the first two weeks of September, prior to visiting New York and then enlisting with the United States army.

Mr. Nathanson, who is a brother of N. L. Nathanson, of Toronto, managing director of Regal Films, Limited, explains that pictures now being re-issued have never been seen in the Western Provinces in many cases, and if they were ever shown it was at a time when the business in the territory was very young and but little supported. In addition, the stars have made big names for themselves since making their early pictures and the re-issues have better drawing power, in his opinion, than when they were first screened. A few years ago moving picture theatres in Western Canada were comparatively few and far between.

It is also the opinion of Mr. Nathanson that it is a mistake to release new subjects simultaneously in all parts of the country. He believes that Western Canadian exhibitors prefer to be a little behind in release dates so that they can be guided by reviews in making their choices and also may have a chance to study the manner of presentation of certain pictures in the East. This applies particularly to special stunts, musical programs, etc.

Mr. Nathanson recently travelled over the whole territory from Winnipeg to Vancouver and found conditions very prosperous. The exhibitors are enjoying good business and many of them are making extensive improvements in their properties. Some sections of the country have suffered a partial failure of crops and these districts may have a temporary setback.

Winnipeg's downtown theatres cannot be beaten for matinee business, in the opinion of Mr. Nathanson. The Lyceum Theatre, for instance, is crowded every afternoon and there are many people in the house even around the noon-hour. The Lyceum opens at 10 a. m. Winnipeg exhibitors were up against it financially a year ago, but conditions have been reversed.

Mr. Nathanson has been succeeded as manager of the Winnipeg Regal branch by Harry Price, formerly of Toronto. He reports that many nice bookings are being secured in the Western territory. Mr. Nathanson will join the U. S. army at Minneapolis, his old home.

ECONOMY WITH CENTRAL DISTRIBUTION

According to Allan Rock, Who Gives Figures to Prove His Claim, Citing Cleveland As Example

THE Affiliated Distributors Corporation's recent announcement to the effect that its productions would be physically distributed by the exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation is indicative of the Affiliated's policy to minimize overhead and cut down waste. "Contemporaries of the Affiliated on the co-operative booking idea, who originally started out to establish and organize their own exchange, are now discovering their error," says Allan Rock, "and are accepting the Affiliated policy of distributing through some already organized channel as being the best way to eliminate the tremendous overhead which is ultimately charged to the exhibitor in his rentals."

"Being business men," Mr. Rock continues, "the men associated with the Affiliated realize that this business must come through a single physical distribution channel eventually, as in every other commodity there is a definite line of demarkation between sales and physical distribution. That this conclusion is inevitable may readily be seen by noting the following figures:

"The average cost to operate an exchange is approximately $600 per week, or approximately $15,000 per week for the twenty-six exchanges now being operated in Cleveland. There are approximately throughout the United States some forty recognized distributing points with a total expense, using the city of Cleveland as an example, of $624,000 per week, or approximately $32,000,000 per year as an estimated expense for distribution throughout the United States.

"This, as compared to an efficient system of distribution, is an amazing waste, for all the films now handled in the territory served from the city of Cleveland can be distributed from one or two offices at an expense not to exceed $2,000 per week, and allowing for an increase in the number of distributing points throughout the United States from forty to fifty, giving theatre owners a more efficient distribution with shorter shipping distance than is now in vogue, the cost of such distribution would be reduced to $100,000 per week as against $624,000 per week, or $5,200,000 per year as against $32,448,000.

"In addition to the above savings of monies, a system of distribution based upon war conservation would release to other essential industries a veritable army of man power, together with sufficient building and floor space to meet many of the crying needs of the Government for war purposes.

"The Affiliated Distributors Corporation will devote itself toward this end and support any movement inaugurated by the National Association or other Associations to bring about the elimination of this or any other waste in the motion picture industry.

"The preliminary arrangement, covering the progress of Affiliated's initial release 'Lafayette, We Come!' (Pershing '17)," Mr. Rock concludes, "indicates that the exhibitors have also accepted the Affiliated policy. It affords increased opportunities for co-operation between exhibitor, producer, and distributor which have heretofore been equaled."

Harry Edel Becomes Aid to Edward L. Hyman.

The official news service of the Theatre Division, Commission on Training Camp Activities, announces that Harry Edel, managing director of the New York Strand, has become an aid to Edward L. Hyman, Director of Picture Divison. This work will not interfere with his continued management of the Strand.

Porter K. Johnston will relieve Henry Schoenstadt as Dallas Representative of the Picture Division. Mr. Johnston is a well known film man having been connected with the Cincinnati office Famous Players-Lasky for a considerable length of time.

In Re. "No-Cancellation" Contract.

A very interesting point has been raised with the exhibitors of Detroit, Mich., as to whether or not there is such a thing legally as a "no-cancellation" contract. A well-known Detroit attorney, who has been consulted on the proposition, contends that no producing company can force the issue giving the exhibitor no right to cancel unless that same provision is made on the part of the producer. One of Detroits leading downtown exhibitors makes the statement that a non-cancellation contract will never hold in a court of equity, as far as Michigan is concerned, unless both parties have the same rights as to cancellation.

Giving Exhibitors Special Show.

Gordon & Mayer, the new film firm which have Charlie Chaplin and Anita Stewart under contract, have established a novel way of selling their productions. The Majestic Theatre, in Boston, was hired for a special private production of two of their latest features: "Smashing Through to Berlin" and a two-reeler burlesque, "The Geezer of Berlin."

They expended money lavishly in advertising in daily newspapers for exhibitors and their friends to attend the private showing. An exhibitor's card was good for admission for himself and friends. As a result of the advertising and the interest in the new firm's productions the theatre was crowded.

There was much enthusiasm over both productions. Salesmen mingled among the exhibitors and scores of bookings were immediately made. The management was much pleased with its success.

Claim "Equal Rights" for Audiences.

An appeal from the decision of the Maryland Board of Moving Picture Censors, of which Mrs. Marguerite E. Harrison is the secretary, refusing the right to show the moving picture, "Birth," to an audience of male adults with no females present, was made to the City Court of Baltimore on Monday, September 9, by Samuel Cummins, the owner of the picture. It is stated in the petition, which was filed through attorneys Milton Dashiell and John J. Pratt, that the board has permitted the picture to be shown to an audience of adult females, with no males present, and there is no reason why it should not be shown to an audience of only males. Judge Bond signed an order which requires, at the hearing of the case, the production of the film.

House Organ Is Strongly Favored by Exhibitors

Many expertly prepared and cleverly edited house organs issued regularly by Goldwyn exhibitor-customers in the interests of the motion picture "fans," and for the purpose of converting the 50-50 patron into a one hundred per cent. theatregoer, have been received by the Goldwyn Service Department. An innovation in a combination house program and organ is issued each week by the management of the beautiful Majestic Theatre, Detroit, Mich.

For the first time in motion picture history, so far as Goldwyn can determine, a house program is devoted almost in its entirety to photographs and reviews of a coming attraction. The Majestic Theatre organ contains eighteen pages, with cover.

Page one prints the foreword, with a general forecast of productions to appear on the Majestic screen. Beginning with page two and extending throughout the booklet are entire pages containing cuts of scenes from "Friend Husband," Madge Kennedys' surprise Goldwyn comedy-drama, which is to appear at the Majestic at an early date. Photographs of Miss Kennedy are also shown on various pages and a double spread in the center of the program contains an announcement of Madge Kennedy in "Friend Husband," with a brief synopsis of the story of the play.

Interesting briefs clipped from Goldwyn's press sheet on "Friend Husband" appear in abundance and there are many feature stories on Madge Kennedy and her play. The current program of the Majestic is covered in space occupying two pages. The attractiveness of the make-up and the quality of the paper stock combine to insure its individuality and power. The idea of telling all about a coming feature production is an exceptionally good one. Motion picture devotees like nothing better than to read about their favorite stars and their plays and such a generous use of space cannot help but sharpen the appetite of the fans.

Another forceful and attractive organ is issued by C. F. Marquis, owner of the Martha-Ellen Auditorium, Central City, Neb. The organ is called the Martha-Ellen Screen Magazine, and one glance proves its claim to being a miniature "magazine."

The work has twelve pages, with cover, and is filled throughout with up-to-the-minute news and comments on late productions, together with the usual calendar of coming stars and their plays. In the issue of August 27 Mr. Marquis devotes the entire front cover to an elaborate announcement of Mae Marsh's appearance in "The Cinderella Man," one of Goldwyn's successful first-year releases. Cuts of other Goldwyn stars and advance notices of their coming productions are arranged prominently throughout the magazine.

Free tickets of admission to those who discover a word spelled backwards, is featured as a circulation booster.

SERGEANT CALVERT GOES "OVER THERE"

Friends Say Goodbye to Noted Creator of Ideas for Staging of Film Shows—Is With Signal Corps

A PARTY of friends that included Vice-President Hammons of the Educational Films Corporation visited one of the nearby camps week before last and said goodbye to Sergeant Calvert, a Signal Corps "non-com" who went abroad with his fighting unit immediately thereafter. Sergeant Calvert is none other than our old friend Manager Lowell V. Calvert of the New Garrick, Minneapolis, and the New Garrick, St Paul. He has gone across to help in "effects" that will keep Mr. Hun very busy and to stage "battle-pieces" that can't be worked with horse-galloping machines, musketry rat-tat-tats and big drums. Calvert left Minneapolis and civilian life on Jan. 15. After some preliminary training at Fort Leaveworth, Kan., he was promoted to a sergeantcy and admitted to the Signal Corps Officers' Camp at Leon Springs, Tex. He declares that military science is the biggest "educational" that he has ever tackled. After six months of intensive training, he and his fellow students were brought up to an embarkation camp in the East, whence they and their commands sailed for Europe.

Lowell Calvert has long been regarded by experts as one of the half dozen creative leaders of motion picture exhibition in this country. The following is the tribute paid to him by Mr. Hammons.

"Calvert added value to motion picture entertainment that marked him the great creative artist. In the future annals of the art his name will appear alongside Rothapfel, of New York; Roth, of San Francisco; McGhee, of Detroit; Tally, of Los Angeles; McCormick, of Indianapolis; Myrick, of Portland, in the roster of originators and leaders. The phenomenal success of the New Garrick houses in the Twin Cities was due to him. He combined music, staging, effects and pictures in a new art-form of which the Educational was an integral part. He early realized the need of scenic, travel and scientific films, he was among the first (if not the first) to exploit them properly and when occasion justified to play them up above the fiction feature. Indeed the triumph of Calvert's policy at the Garricks was largely founded on his clever handling of the instructive films. As a representative of the best tendencies in American motion picture exhibition he will be sorely missed, but it is his wish as well as his privilege to be over there doing his bit in the supreme cause of the future of civilization."

Hodkinson Appointments Cover All Territory

THIS week sees practically every territory in the United States covered by Hodkinson Special Representatives, states an official of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. Among the latest appointments are W. A. Ratz to the Indianapolis territory. Mr. Ratz is a well known figure in the Hoosier territory and has a host of friends. Moreover, he is a thorough believer in the Hodkinson policy of an equitable and fair deal with the exhibitor.

Graham R. Sirwell, formerly with the General Film Company in Kansas City, has been appointed to the Los Angeles branch, while E. A. Crane, formerly sales manager for the Moon Merchandising Agency, has taken over the Washington section. Mr. Crane is a very high class executive and salesman with an enviable record in the merchandising field he has just left.

W. J. Hanley, who has taken over the Wilkesbarre territory, is also a man eminently fitted for the section of the country he is handling, being well acquainted throughout this northern section of the Eastern States and well equipped to give the exhibitors complete service.

The Hodkinson Corporation points to the organization and installation of the above sales force in such a short space of time as No. 1 on their list of achievements and fulfillment of promises made the exhibitor. These representatives will draw the contact between the Hodkinson Organization and the exhibitor very much closer than heretofore. The results of the representatives who have been in the field the longest are already beginning to become evident in the closing of first run contracts in Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Kansas City, Butte, Denver, Minneapolis and many other points of importance.

C. E. Shurtleff, General Sales Manager, who has just returned from the Chicago Convention, is enthusiastic over the situation as a whole and adds that No. 2 of the Hodkinson achievements lies in the fact that the Hodkinson Service has now made available one release a week to the exhibitors, fulfilling the promise of a fifty-two pictures a year program made some time ago.

P. N. Brinch, Western Division Manager for the Hodkinson Organization, wires from San Francisco that Frank J. Bailey of the American Theatre, Butte, has become a Hodkinson Co-Partner and will also be the first run account in that territory for Hodkinson Service, including the various units of Jesse D. Hampton, Lillian Walker, Paralta and Plaza productions.

John A. Stevenson, who is handling the Southern territory in the capacity of Division Manager, reports that Frank Hawking, whom he put in charge in Cincinnati, and J. Shannon in Kansas City, both of them high grade merchandising men totally unfamiliar with the film business, are making rapid strides in the organization of their respective territories.

Mr. Stevenson, who made an enviable record for the Alexander Hamilton Institute, and later became General Sales Manager for Paramount, is a firm believer in the infusing of new blood into any industry, and because of this he greatly desired to employ Mr. Hawking and Mr. Shannon to prove that his theory is right.

Special Stage Setting for Farrar.

An unusually large attendance was on hand to see the first showing of Geraldine Farrar in her latest success, "The Turn of the Wheel," at the Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia, where Frank W. Buhler, managing director of the Stanley Co., had prepared a new and artistic surprise. Instead of the usual colonial stage setting, a beautiful palatial interior effect of sufficient transparency to allow lightning effects, greeted the patrons who arrived in large numbers for the opening of the regular season.

Placed along the entire space in front of the footlights was a solid row of sweet peas which blended harmoniously with the new scenery. Several new members had been added to the Stanley symphony orchestra thereby establishing the largest musical organization of any theatre in this city.

WAR INDUSTRY AIDED BY PICTURES

Plimpton Epic Pictures Produces War Work Episode That Has Awakened Interest at Stamford

THE Citizens' Committee of Stamford, Connecticut, acting in co-operation with the U. S. Employment Service, Edwin S. Blodgett, Superintendent, are conducting a campaign to increase Stamford's output of war munitions and material. Perhaps the most important part of this campaign is the appeal to women to go into industry, replacing men in the lighter jobs and thus releasing them for heavy work which women are physically incapable of doing. To bring the facts effectively before the public a motion picture has been prepared which is now being shown extensively in the theatres of Stamford and its vicinity.

The movement is an important one and is likely to be followed in other communities. The picture is about 800 feet long, tells its message clearly, and is being very well received in the theatres in Stamford and the vicinity. As it was produced with the co-operation of a branch of the Government it is necessarily free from advertising of any description. The two parts of John and Emma Hines were played by Mr. and Mrs. George E. Reehms, formerly with the Eastern Film Company of Providence, Mr. Reehms having been previously a director under Griffith at the Biograph. They are now both employed in a large plant in Stamford and were glad to get a little taste of picture work again.

As a guide to others who may like the idea, the synopsis of the picture is printed in full:

The picture shows John Hines, a worker in a war plant, leaving his pretty little house in the morning. Emma, his wife, reads the war news to him from the local paper and, turning the page, her attention is attracted by the full page advertisement of the U. S. Employment Service outlining the campaign. They read it together. Her patriotism is aroused by the appeal to women and she tells her husband that she believes she could do work such as he is doing and thus help their country win the war. But he scoffs at the idea. She do a man's job! She will not be talked out of it, however, and explains to him how, in this way, the country would have two war-workers instead of one. In his obstinacy he becomes somewhat irritable and, kissing her hastily, he strides down the road on his way to work, leaving her gazing after him—a little hurt by his conduct.

With the applicants going into the office of the U. S. Employment Service that morning we see Emma, determined to secure accurate information. She pauses a moment to look in the window, where are displayed some of the articles made by Stamford as its war contribution, then goes in. Her mission being explained she is ushered into the Superintendent's office and receives a courteous greeting. She is told that her viewpoint is correct and that if all able-bodied women in Stamford felt as she did the city would attain an efficiency in war work of which it could well be proud. Leading her to the front window the Superintendent explains the manufacture of several war articles to her, telling her what work women can do and what they cannot do. Through dissolving views as he talks to her we are shown scenes in the laboratory where gun cotton is tested, a most ingenious device for exploding at the correct moment a shell fired several miles and the casting and rolling of the brass from which shells are made.

Meantime John has been thinking things over. He is employed in a plant where Government signal wire is insulated, his job being to cut rubber into strips and feed them into a hopper-like machine, from which they emerge ground and covering the wire. Plainly work that women could do as well as men, and as he thinks of this his abstraction calls forth a sharp reprimand from the foreman. At lunch time he makes up his own mind to investigate and thus, in the U. S. Employment Service office runs squarely into Emma, just finishing her talk with the Superintendent. There is mutual amazement and a very sheep-faced explanation on the part of John—that perhaps she was right and maybe she could get a light job and he could take a heavier one. The Superintendent looks on with some amusement and a great deal of interest. He congratulates John on the possession of such a wife and tells them both that he will see that matters are adjusted.

And they are. We see John in the casting room where the lurid glare of the molten metal lights up his face, begrimed but shining with the consciousness of filling a man's job. And we see Emma at a lathe doing the work that she can do and doing it well. So together they do their bit to keep our boys overseas supplied with material to fight a winning war.

The picture was produced by Plimpton Epic Pictures, Inc. Horace G. Plimpton, president of the company, wrote the scenario after a study of the conditions in Stamford, and personally directed the production.

Bromhead Returns from War With Honorable Discharge

ALTHOUGH employees of the Gaumont Company have been leaving almost weekly for war service, only one has so far returned. Realizing that England needed the services of all her sons, Bernard H. Bromhead, a British employee of the Gaumont Company, at Flushing, N. Y., went to Canada in 1915 and enlisted as a private in the 148th Battalion. He was soon made a corporal, and after six months' training was sent to England, where he was drafted into the 42nd Battalion, Royal Highlanders of Canada.

After many months of distinguished service in France, during which he was in several sanguinary battles, Mr. Bromhead was severely wounded during the fierce fighting on Paschendaele Ridge, in Flanders, on November 3, 1917, and taken to No. 12 General Hospital, at Rouen. As soon as it was possible for him to travel, he returned to his home in England, anxiously awaiting the time when he would be able to return to active service. But although he practically regained his former good health, it was found that the bones of his left shoulder were so badly fractured that his return to fighting would be impossible. Therefore, he was sent back to his point of enlistment in Canada, where he received an honorable discharge.

Many other members of Mr. Bromhead's family have also seen service in this year, his brother, Col. Alfred C. Bromhead, managing director of the British Gaumont Company, having been decorated by the king for distinguished service in Russia.

Mr. Bromhead has been spending the past few weeks renewing old acquaintance and visiting his many friends in and around New York City. He expects to return to London within the next month, to assume an important position with the Gaumont Company, Ltd., of England, of which another brother, Reginald C. Bromhead, is secretary.

Chaplin's "Shoulder Arms" Will Be in Three Reels

THE majority opinion from four thousand exhibitors who have booking contracts with the First National Exhibitors' Circuit for the Charlie Chaplin comedies has decided that the next Chaplin release, "Shoulder Arms," will be in three reels instead of six.

Questionaires were sent out by officials of the First National several weeks ago, advising every exhibitor holding a Chaplin contract that there was an abundance of strong comedy material in the completed negative for "Shoulder Arms" to make a five or six reel special of it. Inasmuch as the Chaplin contracts call for subjects of not less than two reels, nor more than three reels, it was felt that the release of a six reel Chaplin comedy, which would necessitate cancellations of other feature bookings, shelving, and probable complete disarrangement of programs, should first be submitted to exhibitors for opinion.

Eighty-seven per cent. of the total number of exhibitors with Chaplin comedy contracts declared themselves in favor of the release of "Shoulder Arms" in three reels.

"Shoulder Arms," in three reels, will, of necessity, be comedy fast and furious in view of its condensation from a negative footage equivalent to six reels. It is said that the situations offered in the story—a plot based on trench life and the humorous phases of soldiery both on active duty and off—afford the greatest single gathering of possibilities for the utmost in Chaplin comedy portrayal that he has ever found in any one subject.

Rambles Round Filmtown

With WALTER K. HILL.

How Wellington Cross, Poet, Enjoyed His Week Triangling

HALTED in his mad career as an Orpheum Circuit headliner, Wellington Cross fell for the siren call of "the movies" and worked a week at Culver City for Triangle, toying with "The Grey Parasol," under direction of Lawrence Windom. When he reached Salt Lake City, under direction of Martin Beck, various applications of Tod's liniment had him limbered up to his usual suppleness. Grasping his Blick, "The Duke" slipped the dope to THE RAMBLER in a manner thus:

I'm as nutty as a squirrel, since I've tried this "movie" whirl,
It keeps me jumping and bumping all day long.
(I want to say it's got me.)
I could never have a thrill out of any job until
I made this try, I think I'll die, I'll tell you why:

I gotta climb a cliff or jump a lake 'n Everything.
I gotta smile no matter how I ache 'n Everything
The little flies all gather round
When my make-up face they've found.
With Sampson's powers, I juggle towers 'n Everything
I gotta pose out in the boiling sun 'n Everything.
I gotta lean a couple of villuns with a gun 'n Everything.
I'm on the job at six a. m., indeed this life's a perfect gem
Until you lose a leg, an arm, or neck—'n Everything.

I usta think that vaudeville looked real good to me until
I met a guy whose game was introducing "movie fame."
(I want to say he got me.)
Then I ditched the Orpheum time and took some chances with my spine.
And now it's black and blue and this I'm telling you:

I gotta grab a gat and gotta guy, 'n Everything.
I gotta love and lure and leer and laugh 'n Everything
I gotta cop that Chaplin step, I gotta get that Fairbanks pep
I work for hours and get hit with showers of pies, 'n Everything
I gotta have that swagger Bushman style 'n Everything
I gotta nail that Fatty Arbuckle smile 'n Everything
But if I hit my "movie stride," you just watch my millions glide;
I'll buy a bunch of cars and bevo and bonds 'n Everything.

The Title of It Is "'N Everything."

Recently we dared Betty Blythe to tell another story. Betty took the dare and here's the result:

"Around the studio there are always many girls on the lookout to land jobs and they pester all of the players that come out of the yard. That's why I've had a camouflage costume made.

"It is built on the same principle as the decoration on ships, the colors running from the bottom of the skirt to the top and continuing through the hat. In this way it is hard for the job seekers to see me and I avoid much annoyance."

Exposing to View "T. B.'s" Record.

Thomas Bedding, the author of "Suspicion," the new M. H. Hoffman six-reeler which is making 'em talk outside the Godfrey Building, holds several film records. He has been writing about the movies since 1885 (the year that H. H. Van Loan honored by being born in).

He was the first publicity man in the game, the first editor, the first producer and director, having made short length subjects as far back as 1897 when he also wrote a history of the industry.

He has made the emulsion that goes on the celluloid; he has photographed, developed, acted, cut, edited, titled and sold pictures.

And with it all, "T. B." is only just outside the draft age! The secret of it is that he took up photography and authorship when he was a boy at school. He has written plays, short stories, novels and has edited over twenty newspapers and magazines.

Opening of the Film-Title Season.

LABOR DAY saw the advent of no fewer than twenty-six film titles. These titles now read differently in the advertising pages of New York dailies for the reason that they are attached to plays. When they "go into pictures," as many of them probably will, the dramatic offerings that have started the 1918-19 Broadway season will be titled somewhat after a manner thus.

"Mr. Barnum" . . . "The Seeley Dinner"
"Watch Your Neighbor"
"The Surge of Suspicion"
"Double Exposure"."Secrets of the Studio"
"The Woman on the Index"
"Scandal's Harvest"
"Maytime"....."The Price Women Pay"
"Where Popples Bloom"..."Justice Denied"
"Why Worry"
"The Corridor's of Vengeance"
"He Didn't Want To Do It"
"Hinges of Hate"
"Under Orders"...."Following the Flag"
"The Blue Pearl"...."The Grip of Prussia"
"A Very Good Young Man"
"Vengeance Is Mine"
"She Walked In Her Sleep"
"The Hun Hunters"
"Keep Her Smiling"..."Tottering Thrones"
"Allegiance"....."Safe for Democracy"
"Eyes of Youth"..."Love's Surging Tide"
"The Man Who Stayed At Home"
"His Wife's Jewel"
"Penrod"....."Boys Will Be Boys"
"Fiddlers Three"....."Triple Discord"
"Daddies"....."Strategic Justice"
"Head Over Heels"....."Love Lingers"
"Tiger Rose"....."The Zone of Jealousy"
"Blind Youth"....."Heedless Passion"
"Going Up"....."Stepping Heavenward"
"Friendly Enemies"."The Clutch of Crime"
"Three Faces East"...."The Taint of Sin"
"Lightnin'"....."Speeding to Perdition"

To be sure none of the foregoing titles have the slightest thing to do with the case. Just for that they will prove all the better for picture purposes. Broadway knows what they mean.

May Allison's Golden Opportunity.

The following letter accompanied a manuscript in its voyage to the Metro scenario department, the story was especially written for May Allison by an unknown author. Here's the very note:

"This is a good story. Their is a submarine in it and that makes it very tragical. But there is a great laugh about the submarine when you find out that instead of a german submarine it turns out to be one of the alleyes.

"The heroine is a detective. She is also a spyess, which gives her a chance to double up and in the big scene she is shown taking herself prisoner. Of course, it is her double which she has to arrest."

Goldwyn Presents Tom Moore.

TOM MOORE, under the stress of high speed mimeographing, is now a full fledged Goldwyn star, and states that he has not acquired a limousine with a crest on the doors nor even a valet.

He says that he needs neither, and even if he found the dignity of stardom required those luxuries he would scorn them both as non-essentials to be done without until after the war.

Thomas has occupied a distinguished position on the screen for years, yet never has he found it necessary to have a private presser of trousers or to dash up to the door of a studio on four wheels. In his unassuming way, with a glint in his eyes, Tom says that walking does him good anyway.

The Playboy of the Screen.

If he has a fault to find with his present routine it is that the big Goldwyn studios in Fort Lee are too far away from the ferry to reach by foot. So much for the possibility of his acquiring a motor.

The idea of a personal servant embarrasses him. Tom says that his simple needs are best taken care of by himself, and he would hate to trouble an able-bodied man to bother with his clothes. He knows that the most arduous duty of many a valet is to strike a match for his master's cigarette, and the Goldwyn star's sense of humor would stand in the way of asking a human being to do that.

So what would there be for a valet to do? asks Tom.

Those Endearing Young Charms.

Sincere and totally lacking in the desire to attitudinize, Mr. Moore is the same today as he was years ago when he came from Ireland. He remained the same when he was a popular leading man in stock companies in Bridgeport, Hartford, Kansas City, and elsewhere.

When he scored his first success on the screen and became not only one of the most favored leading men, but a director as well, he continued with the same point of view. Now, when he finds himself a star in company with Geraldine Farrar and the rest of the Goldwyn galaxy, the center of attraction in productions more lavish than any he has ever known, does Tom Moore give way to an impulse to be just a little of the conventional self-loving player?

Not in the least.

Tom Moore is eternally modest and forever, as someone has recently called him, "the playboy of the screen."

Worst Aid to Exhibitors.

In its "division of helps" one of our esteemed trade newspaper friends remarked under the general caption, "For the Program," in a manner thus:

"Swat the Fly" (Fox-Excel Pictures). "Do you? If you don't you really ought to, because you've probably been told and perhaps seen all the horrible things that flies can do when they are allowed to live. We can't imagine anybody more qualified to go after flies than those irrepressible imps of mischief, Jane and Katherine Lee, and we rather imagine that this is what Carl and Lena thought, too, after their series of thrilling adventures at the hands of the baby grands."

"Broncho Billy's Conscience" was being boosted by Essanay. The "gasoline" conscience of that same Anderson is being tested these Sundays.

"The Battle of Waterloo" was being boosted by the well known cinema. Looks as though old Bull Hunzollern was preparing to meet another and bigger one in the same general neighborhood.

J. Warren Kerrigan was heralded as Jacques Le Grand in "For the Crown" by the American Film Co. Goodness, how these actors change around!

"Who Killed George Lambert?" was the great question with Gaumont; that little matter concerning Billy Patterson having, evidently, been settled.

"High Treason," George Kleine distributing, was vogue then. It was in two acts: Act I: Commission. Act II: Execution. In regular war time there is quite a lapse between the first and second act.

Let's see what Vitagraph is doing. Here it is: "When Women Go on the War Path" in two parts. Now they are voting in two parts—husband and the boss!

The editor of the World was giving the very devil to the mayor of Cedar Rapids for stopping exhibitions of "Quo Vadis" and "Satan." Now Cedar Rapids is sending bully boys abroad to stop the exhibitions Satan has been giving "over there." "Happily such mayors as he of Cedar Rapids are few and far between," said ye ed. But there's still a lot of 'em rampant according to current tell.

"Motion Pictures Ridiculed on the Stage" was a headline referring to "Kiss Me Quick." The name of Lottie Briscoe was used to program one of the principal characters. Lottie slapped an injunction onto the whole lot. We don't find "Kiss Me Quick" still listed among shows current—but we do remember "The Squab Farm."

Weber and Fields were announced for pictures. Roy L. McCardell was billed to do the scenario for "Meyer and Mike Around the World." Guess that's where the feature is now.

"Sol. Lesser in New York" was among the headlines. "Out on the coast we are building larger picture theatres than ever," Sol said. The reason why may be found in the procession of big features this Lesser man soon storted coastward. Now he feels the pulse-beat of "Hearts of the World" as far East as "The Father of (Scrubbing) Waters."

"Doomed to Die or the Vial of Wrath." Even titles like that couldn't kill the business, it would seem.

Director Huntley and Operator Wycoff were credited with revolutionizing the business of "night life," when they photographed Los Angeles after dark. The feot promised "to make the silhouctted sky-line of Los Angeles famed the world over." Truly prophetic!

Joe Brandt, publicity man for Universal, sailed for London to interest himself in Universal's affoirs on the "tight little isle." Carl Laemmle was ot the wharf to see that Josephus didn't weaken; a crowd of Screen Club cheerers were at hand, and thus Joe sailed away.

Our Historian in Action.

IN AN article detailing the moving picture career of a prominent star occurs this remarkable historical puzzle:

"Perhaps you'd like to know that the first part played by Miss Young in the movies was as the ill-fated 'Anne Boleyn' of 'Cardinal Woolsey,' which was an adaptation of 'Richelieu.'"

It must have been a curious sort of story. Cardinal (one o) Wolsey died in 1530, and Armand Jean Duplessis, later Cardinal, Duc de Richelieu, was not born until 1585. How any of the facts of his life or the scenes from the play founded on his career by Edward George Earl Lytton Bulwer were utilized in a scenario dealing with the great churchman of Henry the Eighth's time and one of that fickle monarch's many wives is a trifle confusing to any one not familiar with the picture in question.—Edward Witzel.

Jasper B. Voyages in a Brig.

COL. JASPER EWING BRADY, of Metro's scenario department, began life as a "devil dog." Through the training and experience thus gained he was able to formulate the practical advice he has been able to give his two sons now in service, First Lieutenant George K. Brady, of the U. S. Ambulance service, and Jasper Ewing Brady, Jr., sergeant of M Company, 312th Infantry.

"It was a good many years ago," said Col. Brady. "I had much to learn—and I learned it. I enlisted in the Marine Corps, and reported at League Island, Philadelphia. I hadn't yet been served with my uniform, when a husky sergeant, whose name was Gallagher, came along and hit me a resounding whack on the shoulder.

"'Here, you recruit, come along and shovel some ashes,' he ordered.'

"I replied to him in language more forcible than polite that I didn't propose to shovel ashes for anybody. 'I didn't enlist to shovel ashes,' I told Sergeant Gallagher.

"That was all I remembered at the time. Something landed on me—it was Sergeant Gallagher's mighty right. When I woke up in the 'brig' I was taken to the commanding officer, Capt. Forney. My offense was explained to him, and in answer to his question I told him what I had told the sergeant, that I did not enlist to shovel ashes.

"'You surprise me,' said the commanding officer. 'May I ask what you did enlist for?'

"'To see the world,' I told him. 'That's what the posters said.'

"'Well, you're going to see a part of the world you didn't anticipate. Five days' bread and water, in irons.'"

Bill Hart Rattles a Rattler.

In the cast of the new picture scheduled to be started soon at the William S. Hart studio, one of the leading "heavy" roles is alloted to a rattlesnake. After scouring the country for a suitably villainous-looking one, it was finally located —for $20—and brought to the studio.

The rattler stayed around in a big box waiting its call to make up for nearly twenty-four hours, and everyone who had ever been scared by a snake came to the wire-covered box and took out his grudge on the helpless reptile. The result was that the morning after it was brought to the studio it gave evidences of something between St. Vitus' dance and an old-time deathbed scene, and Mr. Hart decided to take it out on the lot, shoot the necessary scenes, and then shoot the snake.

He got out his "forty-five," loaded up and went to the lot with a cameraman and the rattler. Mr. Hart got the gun ready in case it was needed unusually quick, and the snake was let out in the grass.

It had the right idea—it knew it was cast as a "heavy," but it made a mistake in the sex! It tried to be a vampire—and to charm Bill by looking him in the eye! But Bill refused to be vamped, and then the snake, Cleopatra-like, turned and bit itself, and died without a single exciting scene.

When History Failed to Repeat.

George Seigmann was talking to Jack Ford about George's enlistment in the photographic branch of the signal corps.

"It's great to be photographing history," he said. "Just think how wonderful it would have been to photograph Washington crossing the Delaware; Lincoln signing the emancipation proclamation, or Lee surrendering his sword to Grant."

Ford rasped his bewiskered chin and said:

"Yeh; but that was mostly all night stuff. Still it wouldn't have been bad—why didn't you make it?"

Bray Studio Aids Armenians in Great Relief Campaign

UNDER the title "The World's Greatest Tragedy," the Bray Studios have included in the 137th release of the Pictograph an animated diagram and several interesting scenes in aid of the American Committee for the Armenian and Syrian Relief. This takes practically the form of a donation, and is one of many efforts on the part of the moving picture industry to help the cause of liberty.

The animated diagram gives a clear idea of the particular part of the Turkish empire from which the Armenians have been driven or deported under German rule, thousands perishing from starvation and disease in crossing the desert. Scenes are also included which give an insight into the work being done by the committee which were photographed by a cameraman sent there for the purpose. Wheat lands of Persia which have been purchased by the relief committee for the benefit of these persecuted peoples are also indicated on the animated drawing.

The work which is being done by the American Committee for the Armenian and Syrian Relief which will shortly be incorporated under the title of Committee for Relief in the Near East, is a remarkable one and one which should be warmly supported. According to statistics at least 1,000,000 Armenians and Syrians in Turkey have perished during the past two years from massacre, deportation, exposure, starvation and disease. Two million are now homeless and in dire distress, and 400,000 of those in need are orphans. Little children scarcely able to feed themselves live absolutely alone in deserted homes. Seventy-five thousand children under twelve years of age are starving in Syria and Lebanon alone; and in the Lebanon district sufferers have been dying at the rate of 1,000 a day. It is also stated that $30,000,000 will be required for this winter's needs, and $5.00 per month will save a life.

The address for the American Committee for the Armenian and Syrian relief is 1 Madison avenue, New York City. This includes the work of the Armenian Relief, the Persian War Relief, and the Syrian-Palestine Committees. Communications and contributions sent to the treasurer, Cleveland H. Dodge at the above address will be thankfully acknowledged.

A Couple of Post-Pathes.

The Post-Pathe travel and scenic pictures are rapidly gaining favor because of their many excellent qualities. One of the most beautiful of these exhibited at the Rivoli during the week of Sept. 8 was entitled "When Nature Smiles." The poetic idea voiced in the title was interpreted by scenes which fittingly illustrated verses chosen from among the works of poets of nature. If one stopped to criticise or compare it might be decided that the picture was not unlike other scenics, but if we decide on the contrary to give ourselves over to the pleasure of merely being entertained we will find our senses responding to the beauty of thought which the picture symbolizes. "Curacao," an interesting travel subject, consists of views novel and unusual, taken on an island of the Dutch West Indies. The town of Willhamstadt is shown with its architecture of quaint, attractive Dutch type. The various phases of native life are interesting. The sidewalk vendors do a thriving business and the native industries are worth studying.

"Y.M.C.A. Training School" (Universal).

At the Y. M. C. A. College at Lake Massasoit, Springfield, Mass., the men who volunteer for Y. M. C. A. work are given free physical training. The manner in which this is done is shown in the 89th issue of the Universal Screen Magazine. Also views of the college's interior and exterior are shown including its magnificent library. The physical training embraces all the standard exercises, including boxing, and also games.

"The Succulent Cantaloupe" (Universal).

In the 89th issue of the Screen Magazine will be found a good illustration of what the cantaloupe industry means. In the Imperial Valley, California, thousands of acres are cultivated to supply eastern tables. The cultivation, harvesting and crating of the cantaloupes is shown in the picture.

Famous Marble Fields of Carrara, Italy.

In the 137th release of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph the story of the marble industry of Carrara, Italy, which dates back to the twelfth century is graphically told.

High on the slopes of the Apuan Alps in Italy lie beds of the finest marble to be found anywhere in the world. This marble is specially well fitted, because of its hardness and beauty, for sculpturing, and when, in the twelfth century marble came into great vogue for architecture, the little town of Carrara lying in the very center of the marble fields, became the scene of great activity and its name has since been applied to all of the marble coming from that district. The quarrying of the marble and the methods of transporting the great blocks of stone down the mountain trails to the railroad is picturesque in the extreme and, except for the use of explosives, these methods differ not at all from those employed long centuries ago. The entire work entailed in getting the marble out, cutting the blocks to size, bringing them to the railroad and carving them into works of art, is followed in this picture.

"Official War Review, No. 11" (Pathe).

Grim war has not smoothed its wrinkled front in this number. Here are actual scenes from the battle of Chateau Thierry, with enormous guns blazing on a wide front and streams of Hun prisoners making toward the rear. Pictures of widespread devastation, the capture of German tanks, and care of the dead and wounded, are also features. Some excellent close-ups of Haig, Balfour, Foch and Pershing are shown.

sition that proved one of the greatest attractions of the Exposition. This was made possible by the splendid cooperation of the film exchanges and the Motion Picture Operators' Union. Following is the list of pictures used, and which were ranked as "better films" by the Cinema Club: "Masks and Faces" (World), which is an all star picture and is contributed to the Red Cross by the eminent actors of England; "Ace High" (Fox); "Tarzan of the Apes" (First National Exhibitors'); "The Marionettes" (Select); on Congress of Mothers' Day, "His Mother's Boy" (Paramount) was shown; on Americanization Day, "One More American" (Beban-Paramount); Civic Day, a Judge Brown story and an O. Henry (General Film); D. A. R. Day, "American Withal" (Fox); Women's Federated Clubs' Day, "Mrs. Slacker" (Pathe); Cinema Club, "A Tale of Two Cities" (Fox); Animal Protective League Day, "The Puppy's Diary," "The Collie Market" and an O. Henry story (Vitagraph and General Film); W. C. T. U. Day, "The Enemy" (Vitagraph); Labor Day, "Hit-the-Trail Holliday" was screened. The motion picture tent was packed to the doors between three and four hundred people attending the showing each evening. Food, Red Cross, "Children's Year" and other propaganda trailers and slides were used daily.

Practical Kentucky Community Plan.

A number of citizens of Monticello, Ky., says the September issue of the Bulletin of the Affiliated Committees for Better Films, have organized a stock company to operate the local picture show in their community, the county seat and only sizeable town in the county. Their object is that of controlling the selection of the pictures. This method of conducting the exhibitions in a relatively small community where there is room for only one theatre, should be observed with interest.

The motion picture is an admirable form of entertainment for small localities. Unfortunately for the success of an exhibitor, he must use low priced pictures. The citizens of Monticello who have undertaken to run the theatre are doing so in the hope of raising the quality of the pictures presented. They do not plan to show new releases, but will rely upon older pictures. Their project should be practicable. There are many pictures entirely satisfactory which can be obtained at low rentals. It will therefore be of interest to discover what this committee of citizens can accomplish.

Just a Few of the Best.

The following are longer dramatic pictures for the family and for young people which have been used successfully for special programs in theatres: Famous Players-Lasky: "Say Young Fellow," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "How Could You, Jean," "Firefly of France," "His Own Home Town," 'Sandy," "Shark Monroe," "Bound in Morocco," "M'liss"; Fox: "We Should Worry," "Western Blood"; Goldwyn: "Beloved Traitor," "The Service Star"; Metro: "The Demon," "No Man's Land," "Pay Day," "Opportunity"; Mutual: 'Ghost of Rosy Taylor"; Pathe: "Little Sister of Everybody"; Triangle: "His Enemy the Law"; Vitagraph: "The Girl in His House"; Universal: "The Eagle"; First National Exhibitor's Circuit: "Pershing's Crusaders."

SELECT ATTAINS COMMANDING POSITION

List of Leading Houses Using Product Shows Strong Intrenchment in Picture Field

HAVING just crossed the threshold of its second year Select Pictures Corporation claims for itself a commanding position in the picture theatres of the United States. This fact is substantiated by a list of the very biggest and most important theatres playing Select Pictures, covering the largest cities in each territory, which will be briefly given here. Perhaps the full significance of this list will be apparent only to those who are thoroughly conversant with the situation as regards moving picture theatres throughout the country; but even a casual reading of it must impress the well-informed with the fact that Select Pictures have been received into the very best homes of the motion picture everywhere.

The fact that Select Pictures has reached and been able to maintain a very strong position is also attested by the fact that for the new season just opening Select managers have written their largest percentage of renewals of contracts. These renewals have come from exhibitors of the highest grade throughout the country, who, having played Select's First Series of Star Pictures have come back eager to contract for the second year's supply.

Today Select Pictures finds itself in the wholly gratifying position where there is a greater demand for the Select Service than the corporation is able to gratify. General Manager Arthur S. Kane reports that he is in daily receipt of complaints from big exhibitors who do not get Select Pictures and who try to bring pressure to bear to force the service to their theatres. Mr. Kane says that it seems as if everyone is anxious to get Select Pictures, and some of his old friends have given him some hard knocks because he could not supply them with series contracts.

The following are some of the larger houses in which Select Pictures are being shown:

New York City—S. L. Rothapfel's Rialto and Rivoli Theatres, and in Marcus Loew's extensive chain of houses.

Boston—Marcus Loew houses.

Buffalo—Shea's million dollar Hippodrome.

Philadelphia—The Stanley Theatre, which is the heart of the renowned system of playhouses established by the late Stanley Mastbaum.

Washington—Harry M. Crandall's splendid new Metropolitan Theatre in the heart of Washington's downtown district, and Crandall's beautiful white marble auditorium, the Knickerbocker, Washington's neighborhood house de luxe.

Pittsburgh—Harry Davis' splendid new Grand Opera House.

Cleveland—Marcus Loew's Stillman Theatre.

Cincinnati—Strand, Walnut and Family Theatres.

Detroit—Madison Theatre and Broadway Strand.

Chicago—Ascher Brothers' great chain of theatres, the Lubliner & Trinz Circuit, Balaban & Katz's group of theatres and Sig Faller's comparatively small but widely patronized Bijou Dream.

Minneapolis and St. Paul—Lyric in Minneapolis and the Garrick in St. Paul.

Kansas City—Liberty.

Omaha—Rialto.

Dallas—Jefferson Theatre.

Atlanta—Criterion Theatre.

New Orleans—Loew's Crescent.

Denver—Talbot's America Theatre.

Los Angeles—Tally's Broadway.

San Francisco—California Theatre.

Seattle—Coliseum and Liberty.

MANITOBA CONDEMNING PICTURES.

The Manitoba Board of Moving Picture Censors is again in the limelight. It has condemned several big productions and has changed its mind on one or two others. "Toys of Fate," starring Nazimova, has been condemned, as was "Cheating the Public." Last spring the Board condemned "Old Wives for New," but the decision has been rescinded and the feature was shown for a week at the Gaiety Theatre, Winnipeg.

The Ontario Board of Censors has also been acting up a bit. The Ontario body recalled "The City of Dim Faces" after it had been presented by a number of Toronto theatres. Toronto exhibitors declare that the real test for a picture is to "get by" a certain suburban theatre without the censors receiving at least one letter about it. It is declared that the patrons at this house are more critical than all the others put together.

DACEY JOINS PATHE.

J. J. Dacey, sales manager for George Kleine, a New York office, has resigned to accept a position with Pathe. Mr. Dacey's resignation is to take effect September 21. He came to Kleine's with William E. Raynor five years ago and has handled all of New York City, Brooklyn, Bath Beach, Staten Island and Long Island. Mr. Dacey is to be associated with Mr. Raynor, who is Pathe's New York branch manager, and will have charge of all the big circuits of new York and Brooklyn.

GENERAL'S SMILEAGE CAMPAIGN.

In a recent circular letter from W. F. Rodgers, Sales Manager, the exchange officials of General Film Company were urged to participate in the drive for Smileage Pledges, which is being conducted by the Commission on Training Camp Activities of the War Department. Blanks were distributed among all the branches of the General organization along with the letter. Appreciation of this action has come in a letter to Mr. Rodgers from L. J. Meyberg of the Commission. Replying, Mr. Rodgers assured the commission that no effort would be spared to aid in the success of the drive.

BROWNELL A MUTUAL MANAGER.

H. H. Brownell has been selected by Mutual as branch manager at Portland, Ore., succeeding F. M. Hamburger, who has resigned to take the management of a big Portland theatre. The new branch manager is known to every exhibitor on the coast, where he has been affiliated with the film industry for many years. Aside from his executive ability he has made a reputation as an expert cameraman. Ted L. Serr will assist Mr. Brownell as chief road man.

FACTS AND COMMENTS

IN this issue of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD is announced the award of the trophy in the booking contest on "Pershing's Crusaders," which closed September 1. The contest was a remarkable one. In the first place more than 3,700 bookings were reported, and in the second place it was completed in sixty days. The records of the motion picture business do not reveal an equal achievement for any single production in any particular, and we predict that it will be some time before the record thus established is passed. Undoubtedly considerable is due to the fact that this was a patriotic picture and that the picture theatre owner felt it was his duty to open his house to it; but the booking of 3,700 individual houses by the managers of the First National Exhibitors' exchanges was accomplished in sixty days speaks of the application and industry of those managers, many of whom had to cover wide and difficult territory, as in the case of the winning team at Denver. Then, of course, we will be pardoned if we mention the influence exerted by the MOVING PICTURE WORLD's trophy, which had the effect of spurring the boys to do their best work.

THIS brings us to mention of the second war feature, "America's Answer," which the Division of Films is putting out through the World Pictures Exchanges. The campaign for the distribution of this most interesting story of our achievements for the prosecution of the war will commence shortly, though upon a somewhat different basis than that adopted for "Pershing's Crusaders." D. J. Sullivan, manager of distribution for the Division of Films, has devised a plan by which he hopes to make the price of rentals for the second feature fit the house in which it is to be shown. For this purpose representatives of the Division of Films will arrange the terms of rental with exhibitors in such a way as to obviate all criticism on the price question. As a war subject "America's Answer" is superior to "Pershing's Crusaders" and should draw wider patronage. Exhibitors who made money with the first subject offered them cannot fail to be successful with the second. That the terms offered by Mr. Sullivan will be equitable, those who have had business relations with him in the past will have no fears. His chief desire is to place the pictures at a rate that will not require an increase of admission prices, and we believe that his plan will work.

IT may be too soon to brag about what the motion picture can do to sell Liberty Bonds, but we feel obliged to say now that the propaganda pictures contributed to the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign by the motion picture producers and their stars, as shown at the Rivoli Theatre last Tuesday, are well nigh incomparable. It was a tremendous task that the committee of the National Association undertook, but it was accomplished in a thorough manner in so far as production was concerned. In the list of thirty-seven subjects there is power potential to coax billions from the pockets of the public if it can but see them.

LEST any one should get a mistaken idea about the "essentiality" of the motion picture business, it may be well to remind everyone that nothing is essential that does not serve some definite, essential purpose in winning the war. Government officials have discovered that motion pictures can be of great assistance to them in the work they have on hand, provided that motion picture men co-operate with the Government in the matter of spreading information that will help sell bonds and War Saving Stamps, or assist in raising funds for other war activities. If the motion picture interests should fail to measure up to what is expected of them along those lines the question of the essentiality of our great business would become debatable. We might even lose our present standing with "the powers that be" and become unessential. As much has happened to trades as great as our own, so that such an event is not impossible. There is but one way to insure our position before the Government and that is to make ourselves so thoroughly essential that our services cannot be dispensed with.

WHICH WAY ARE WE HEADED?

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

THERE are two distinct classes of men engaged in the production and exploitation of moving pictures —progressives and conservatives—one in favor of change, the other antagonistic to it. It may be admitted that both are sincere. The conservative mind is disposed to retain and maintain what is established, and it has powerful supporters among business men who are cautious about experiment and opposed in a general way to innovations of almost any kind in the artistry end.

The conservative mind is largely guided by precedent.

What is once accepted gives validity to what follows.

Hence the numerous adaptations from novels and stage plays.

Let us, however, consider the form in which we are presenting our subject matter. Love, romance, mystery, adventure, will never lose their charm, and this is true of the story, transposing as it does the affections and mental characteristics of interesting beings like ourselves from one situation to another quite different. This interest is awakened by skilled creative work, method of telling and treatment, all of which should be suited to the times and to the medium in which it is expressed. It is otherwise a mere makeshift.

At first directors patched up stories in studios.

This costly process has been largely replaced by a system.

Continuity writers are paid to perfect a working scenario.

Then comes a step which will some day be regarded with good-natured amusement, a policy which is now taken seriously. There are agents who have copyright novels to sell, at all prices, from one thousand to twenty-five, wholly irrespective of the novel's subject matter and of its suitability for screen presentation, and these agents are doing an active business. The idea is that whatever has succeeded in print will have a like success on the screen, no matter whether or not it is old stuff, in which people of today are no longer interested. It is not common sense to produce the unsuitable—it is not even conservatism.

Why are those novels not sold to theatrical producers?

The theatrical producer is in close touch with his audiences.

The finest modern dramas are not monuments of printed fiction.

The successful play may, like the novel, be concerned with our individual evolution and our social regeneration, but its interpretation of vital phases in our struggle onward is a human one. Human beings utter the word, and they, with the settings, are the word. Form, style, treatment, quite as well as the subject matter, must be suited to stage requirements, and it must all be alive.

Why do not publishers go to the screen for stories?

All they need to do is to purchase the rights and hire a novelist to write out the literary "continuity."

Such precedents in established arts can be easily counted.

It is not a question of producing what has succeeded in some other medium, but of producing what will succeed in our own.

We can conserve all that is good in our New Art and yet move onward to where literature and the drama now stand. In those arts it is well known that the people must be entertained with what is new, that most stories have a short life, that few are worth reviving when their novelty is worn off, and we are neither progressing nor conserving in motion picture production if we fail to recognize those facts. There is an overripe flavor to constant reproduction and imitation, "decayed fruit" as it were, when even storekeepers know enough to hold their trade by the carefully selected fresh article.

We are all in the midst of a new vitality, of a marvelous national harmony of feeling, a spiritual solidarity of human thought. The screen would under such circumstances gain in dignity and greatness as our spokesman and interpreter.

People will not go to the picture shows as they should unless we respond intelligently to the urge of our times. Whatever may be done in business, there is only one conservatism in art to be thought of, preservation of its finest examples. We must progress with the people, and we will not lose by going a step beyond careful commonplace to the highest beauty and the strongest vital interest moving pictures can attain.

THE FOURTH LIBERTY LOAN

By Robert C. McElravy.

INTERESTING plans on the part of film manufacturers for the forthcoming Liberty Loan campaign have been announced by Adolph Zukor, chairman of the special committee appointed by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. No better proof could be given of the essential work being done by the films in this great crisis in the history of the world.

One has but to read over the list of producing companies that are turning out patriotic subjects, with the special view of helping out this gigantic loan, to gain an insight into the far-reaching effort to be made. Previous loans have found the industry prepared to help, for it was already instinctively working along patriotic lines, but it was not prepared in any such way as it will be this time, and, we hope, for subsequent loans.

A high sense of service animates the producers who are making these films and also the artists who will appear in them. War has been made the motive now of many hundreds of subjects and is likely to be the dominating theme for some time to come. There is scarcely a home in America that has not been touched by the great conflict in some way. Moving pictures possess the power of bringing our people near to the scene of action. They will be eager and anxious to see these new subjects when they appear. Exhibitors are therefore making their plans accordingly, and when the gong sounds for the new drive there will be no false starts in getting under way for the big race.

The sale of Government bonds to citizens is something new to America, and it is a commendable practice from every point of view. Begun as a matter of necessity at a time when the people's earnings are needed to press forward the battle for liberty, it may be that in future years other Government issues will be made for various purposes. The custom is frequently employed in France and other European countries, where the smallest individual from a financial point of view is yet able to invest in his country's bonds. There is no doubt but that it makes for general loyalty and solidarity.

In this country, since the war started, the contents of the melting pot have been thoroughly melted. The scum has risen to the top and is being cast aside, leaving the clean, white-hot metal of Americanism beneath. We have a united country, fighting valiantly for the principles of democracy. We have no foreigners with us today. Any man or woman who comes clean through this ordeal has won a place in the great heart of America.

Our men have traversed the high seas and are fighting by the hundreds of thousands on the fields of France. More are following, and yet more will follow, until the final blow destined to crush military autocracy has been struck. When that moment shall come we little know or care. The feeling in America is simply that it must come. The ranks of the enemy are already cracking, and there are indications that soon a false cry of peace will be raised. The great bully of Europe, finding the fight going against him, will try tears and supplications. He will ask for a peace conference, where he may sit in conference with better men, trying by further lies and trickery to hold a part of his spoils. But in this also he seems likely to be defeated.

Meanwhile, it is up to Americans at home to buy more bonds. The war must be financed and the men on the battlefields supported in their efforts. The moving picture industry is preparing to do its share.

TIME AND THE REISSUE

By Edward Weitzel.

AN interesting question in both its artistic and its commercial aspect is how the moving picture public are going to receive a series of contemplated reissues of once highly successful photoplays. One was shown to the reviewers last week, and they agreed unanimously that the greatest merit of the picture was to demonstrate the improvement in story, continuity, unanimously that the greatest merit of the picture was direction, lighting and acting for the screen that has taken place in the last four years. The contrast is startling and gives rise to the question as to whether the screen will be obliged to follow the stage, when it wishes to revive some past success, and have everything belonging to the production brought strictly up to date.

Familiarity with the present standard of screen art must put the best examples of only a few years ago in an exceedingly bad light. It is so easy to excite the ridicule of the spectator by showing him the artistic errors that have been overcome in the making of moving pictures, and by drawing his attention to the undeveloped state of the shadow stage when its technic was so little understood, that putting out reissues without remaking them is a matter for serious consideration.

One feature of the matter is its effect on the actor. To have his artistic sins rise up and confront him, to permit his public to contrast an almost amateurish attempt at acting modeled strictly after the method of the spoken stage with the comparatively matured art of today can benefit neither him nor his profession.

Elusion is the genius of the actor's art and the veil that separates it from a harsh and uncompromising reality is very fragile and easily destroyed. To break down in the slightest degree the high regard he has won for himself and for the artistic standing of his best rounded impersonations is to invite a sneer from the shallow mind and a feeling of deep regret from the judiciously inclined.

Scenario writer, director, cameraman, all come in contact with the same danger, the same opportunity for good natured amusement at a once serious undertaking or the open ridicule of those only too ready to scoff.

Group of War Releases from Red Cross Bureau of Pictures Powerfully Dramatic

WITH the forecast of another American and Red Cross picture called "Of No Use to Germany," three war subjects, each of one reel, form the initial group of releases from the organization's Bureau of Pictures. W. E. Waddell, director, announces the latest subject is entitled "Of No Use to Germany." It deals with the human wreckage that came out of Belgium, citizens too old or too ill or too young to toil at tasks set by the invader. How they are taken care of by the American Red Cross is graphically shown with many scenes that discount the attempted realism of imaginative war photoplays. This release will follow "Soothing the Heart of Italy" which is already being routed to the public through General Film exchanges which are co-operating with the Bureau of Pictures by physical distribution of the film.

Headed by the remarkably popular initial release "The Historic Fourth of July in Paris," which opened with a pre-release run at the Rivoli in New York and at hundreds of Keith, Proctor and affiliated U. B. O. houses outside of New York, the American Red Cross has at this time three single reel subjects at the exchanges, or ready for release, with posters and slides.

The Bureau of Pictures is preparing, with J. T. Kelly as editor, a sheet descriptive of these releases, which will be available to exhibitors to guide them in heralding the pictures. These sheets will be sent to the exchanges.

The current release "Soothing the Heart of Italy" presents scenes from the timely dash of American relief to the homeless people driven before the big enemy advance which occurred about the time America declared war against Austria. Food was scarce and the people were in a panic, not knowing how far south the invaders would come. It was an hour of fear and Italy was actually prostrate. It was at this moment that the blessed processions of Red Cross trucks began rolling into the country with food, medicine and warm clothing, and the people were inspired to new hope. A touching evidence of its effect was the tribute paid to Henry P. Davison by children in the villages during his tour of inspection of the work done. A complete story is told of this period of the war in Italy by the film.

Commissions for Three Lasky Men

L. M. O'Connor and Ed Morrison, two of the cameramen from the Lasky lot in Hollywood, have just completed a course at the School of Aero Photography in New York, which is part of Columbia University, and have been awarded commisions in the photographic division of the army, where they will carry the standards of Paramount and Artcraft photography into the service of their country. Lieutenant Roy Marshall is another Lasky boy who has quickly won his way to a commission. Marshall, who was assistant director with George Melford, enlisted as a private some time ago, and worked up to a non-commissioned officer's job, later receiving his commission.

COLTON TO DO STORIES FOR KANE.

John Colton, the author and dramatist, has been employed by the Gail Kane Productions to write scenarios for the remainder of the pictures of the present series now being produced by Miss Kane for release through the Mutual Film Corporation. Mr. Colton's first story for Miss Kane, the third of her series is now under way at the Biograph studios. The final title has not been decided upon. Mr. Colton is an ex-newspaper man and critic, as well as a dramatist and magazine writer. On the completion of his college course at Columbia University, he went to Minneapolis, Minnesota, where he became dramatic critic for the Daily News. Later Mr. Colton returned to New York. He became an associate editor and subsequently a contributing editor on Every Week.

Lila Lee's Screen Debut as Seen by a World Man

By Edward Weitzel.

THE introduction of the Famous Players-Lasky star, Lila Lee, to the New York public took place at the Rivoli Theatre the week of September 1. Most of the daily papers pronounced the debut of the young actress an unqualified success. S. F. Rothapfel sent the following message to the Paramount office: "The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is to be congratulated upon the acquisition of a new star. Lila Lee is beautiful, vivacious, and what is more, possesses that absolute essential to success—intelligence. 'The Cruise of the Make-Believes' was accorded an excellent reception at the Rivoli, and if that vehicle may be regarded as a criterion of the future pictures in which Miss Lee is to appear her popularity is assured."

The Evening Mail—She is of the stuff from which celluloid stars are made; she is beautiful to a marked degree and it is quite evident that her pretty little head is crammed full of intelligence. She has "arrived" with her first picture.

The Globe—She has youth and a certain dusky prettiness, but more than that she has imagination, humor and screen magnetism. There is no doubt she has successfully passed the danger of arriving as a mere "discovery."

The Morning World—Spectators at the Rivoli Theatre yesterday witnessed the advent of a new and surprisingly talented motion picture star who, unlike her long line of predecessors, is not a recruit from the legitimate stage.

The Telegram—The young actress is beautiful, has the charm of youth, is most graceful and attractive. She promises to become a strong favorite.

New Star's Unique Personality.

Lila Lee is unlike any other screen star. Her personality is unique in motion pictures. Setting aside her extreme youth and the training she received on the vaudeville stage, where she was known as "Cuddles," it is quickly made manifest that the spectator is going to become very fond of this calm-eyed, frank appearing girl for the same reason that he admires the sweet and wholesome things of life—the breath of a spring morning in the country, the candor and the happy laughter of a little child.

After watching Lila Lee for a few moments, it is easy to understand why she was given the nickname of "Cuddles." Her ability to creep into the affections of all who came in contact with her is still apparent. This qualification is beyond art. Lila Lee will find it her most valuable endowment.

Every successful screen star has something distinctive in personality and method. Mary Pickford wins by the arch innocence of the heroines she impersonates and the impish goodness of her smile. Marguerite Clark has the daintiness and exquisite art of a bit of Dresden ware. Lila Lee does not take the onlooker by storm either by her physical charm or by brilliant flashes of acting; but watching her soon brings the gratifying conviction that back of her pleasant young face is a deeper beauty—beauty of character, the freshness and fascination of a nature that is open and generous and without guile.

Technically she still has considerable to learn. She will advance rapidly, however—the progress she has made already indicates that—and her place in the heart of the screen patron will be won quickly and firmly. "The Cruise of the Make-Believes," her first Paramount release, gives her a character in key with her most responsive impulses. The story has humor and romance; but in adapting it to an American locale a strong flavor of the original English atmosphere and the Dickensesque nature of its characters has been permitted to remain, a condition that works somewhat against the picture's ability to convince.

Theatre Opened at Naval Training Station

A THEATRE with a seating capacity of about 500, designed especially for the entertainment of incapacitated lads at the naval training station at Mare Island, Cal., was recently opened. This was built and equipped by the naval hospital corps under the direction of Medical Director Aman Farenholt, United States Navy, and W. S. Burr, amusement officer, much of the work being done by the boys in training. A feature of the arrangement is the level loges on either side, where forty-eight wheel chairs can be accommodated. Moving pictures are being shown here every night, these being given by San Francisco film exchanges, while once a week vaudeville is added, talent being donated by Bert Levey.

Early in August a benefit entertainment was given at the Columbia Theatre in San Francisco, and $2,000 was raised for the furnishing of this new home of recreation. The entertainment was in the form of a musical comedy composed by E. G. Dickenson and was arranged by a committee of film men consisting of Louis Reichert, chairman; Bert Levey, Phil Frease, Meyer J. Cohen, Newton E. Levi, William J. Citron and Sam Loverich. The publicity work was cared for by Ralph Pincus and Lester Fountain. Many film exchange men and exhibitors attended the opening of the new theatre, the Government supplying a tug to bring them back to San Francisco.

Arthur Jacobs to Manage Talmadge Film Corporation

Arthur H. Jacobs one of the best known men in the producing end of the film industry has just accepted the position of general manager of the Norma Talmadge Film Corporation and studios. He is particularly well fitted for his task through a wide and varied experience; having been an independent producer for a long term, as well as president of the Triumph Film Corporation, during which period he personally supervised productions for such stars as Helen Ware, Julius Steger, Lenore Ulric, Jane Grey and others equally well known. After selling out his interest in this corporation, Mr. Jacobs became an independent producer bringing out such features as "The Flower Of Faith," "Her Fighting Chance" and "When My Ship Comes In."

Mr. Jacobs will make his offices at the Norma Talmadge studios, No. 318 East 48th street.

Rivoli Illustrates German Frightfulness.

If anyone had failed to conceive of the utter wantoness of the German predilection for destruction he had only to attend the Rivoli Theatre, New York City, during the week of September 6 and imbibe the story of the devastation of France by her retreating enemy, as told in the Creel Committee's Official War Review. The dirgeful music with which the orchestra accompanied the scenes of ruin enhanced the sensation of outrage which the spectator felt at the awful destruction that cannot be looked upon as being other than criminal even in a time of war. Orchards deliberately sawed down, farmers' houses, implements, carts and fodder burned and broken. Shell-wrecked villages are to be expected; but the columns of smoke betokening the wreaking of an insane Hun vengeance rising in the direction of the German lines as they destroy all useful articles in a hurried retreat is bound to arouse anew in the hearts of good Americans a loathing for all methods employed in German warfare.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Here's Your Chance.

APPARENTLY this is going to be a poor season in theatricals. Railroad costs are high, and transportation is uncertain. Companies cannot carry heavy loads of scenery, and casts and choruses will be held down as much as possible. If you have theatrical opposition now is the time to make capital of the fact. Point out that there has been no reduction in the mounting of photoplays because the elaborate sets do not require to be transported. Show that the pictures alone will continue upon the same lavish scale. Drive home these facts, and when the playgoer tires of scanty productions he will turn more and more to the picture theatres. If your house is located in a town without traveling combinations you can also make capital of the present conditions by pointing out that even in your town you offer high class actors and sumptuous productions, where the dwellers in the cities have to turn to pictures for adequate mountings and competent casts. Point out that your own little cross roads town is getting precisely what the cities get, and contrast this with the condition before the pictures came, when a few repertoire shows and an occasional "Tommer" was the extent of the entertainment. Today the greatest stars can be found in the smallest towns, and they give the same careful performance that they give in the cities because it is precisely the same film. They do not offer a cast of tryout understudies or feel that it is not worth while to exert themselves for the yaps. They concentrate all their art in a single production, knowing that on this one performance their reputation must stand or fall. Make your people realize that the pictures offer the fullest amusement value.

A New Kaiser.

The Sunset, Portland, Oregon, used a single drawing for the displays for "The Kaiser." They did not use the cut provided by the company, but had a special drawing which was made in different sizes and used with changes of copy. The illustration shows three advertisements, two, three and four columns wide, all done from the same drawing and mortised for the type announcement. The work has been well done and the advertisement stands up well in competition. Only one cut was supplied with "The Kaiser" the idea being to make this a sort of trade mark, but for a special display this idea is better, we think. We do not like the doggerel verse in the larger display. It is too cheap.

Three Advertisements Varying from Two to Four Columns Using the Same Drawing.

The Right Spirit.

Evidently the Hill, Newark, N. J., has found opposition, for in the last issue of the program there is this greeting to the newcomer:

EDITORIAL

We congratulate ourselves, our foresight was good, the "HILL" is entitled to the best movie plays produced. We were the first to see this view, others are following the "HILL," they are coming on the HILL. But remember (list: a secret), the "HILL" always will show the best before the rest.

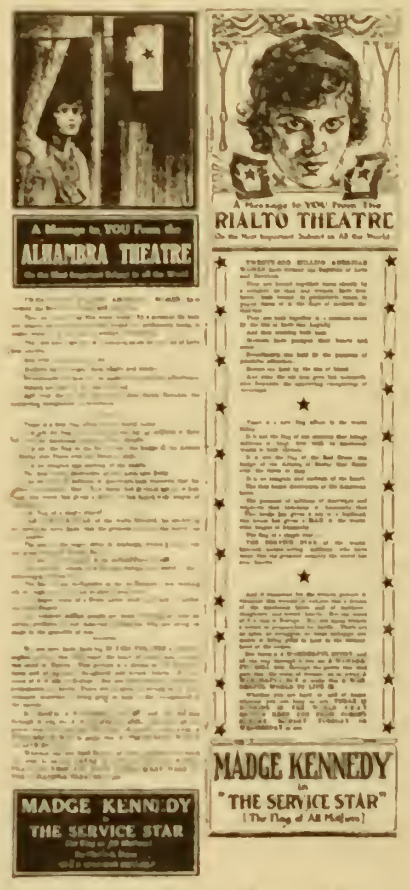
We welcome our new neighbor, we wish its management success. There is room for all of us, the more the merrier. But the "HILL" is your playhouse, and we have many surprises in store for you. Very cordially,

A. JOHNNY MACK,
Directing Manager.

We are glad to see that Mr. Mack has taken to the full signature for his editorial matter, but would suggest that "Managing Director" is more fluent than "Directing Manager." It takes nerve to write a story like that when opposition moves into territory you saw and developed, but we think that it will help the house hold its patronage.

Two Editorial Ads.

Here are two displays of the same editorial advertisement issued by Goldwyn. One is two eighteens and the other two nineteens. The copy is changed from the original in the Rialto advertisement, and we think that some of the strength is lost, but there is a compensating gain in the use of the full-faced type, which is generally used for the editorial copy in the same vein, and the use of the star border gains attention. The lefthand display is the straight Goldwyn copy, set as suggested by Goldwyn. That on the right shows what can be done to gain individuality. It is an interesting comparison, and it emphasizes the variety to be gained by different styles of composition that applies to other subjects than this. It is not merely a matter of writing copy and sending it to the printer. Study type faces and borders, and work until you can get the most effective display for any particular style of copy you may write. Know everything that the printing office has in the line of ornamental material, and use this sparingly, but intelligently. That star border can be supplied by almost any printing office, even in the towns, and it reduces the art expense to the top and bottom cuts. It looks as though it had been specially drawn for this frame, and perhaps it was, but you can have it duplicated from stock material, for every office now has star and flag border material. If you will give the foreman of your office a season pass he'll work with you, and if you'll be generous with your passes to those who actually set your advertising, you'll get still more service, and the passes will not cost half as much as art work will and often you can get the same results or at least reduce the cost of the art work. It pays to study on these little things, for they will result in an effect that will be worth while, and an attractive advertisement will invariably pull harder than one poorly set, for more persons will read it and the message will sink deeper if there is a message there. Cut-work will never replace selling talk, but it can present selling talk in the most attractive form, and that helps. This is not an argument for fussy-looking advertisements, merely for attractive displays,



Two Displays of the Same Advertisement. One is Two Eighteens and the Other Two Nineteens.

For the Fourth of July.

Sending in a nice layout for "Old Wives for New," Harry E. Gardner, of the Princess, Colorado Springs, adds a stunt he worked on the Fourth of July. As to the advertisement he writes:

> I am enclosing a copy of a curiosity arouser that I ran on "Old Wives for New" that proved a very good experiment. I followed it up Monday and Tuesday by one-by-twos scattered through the pages, with catch lines: "Sure Your Husband Loves YOU Best," "Are YOU a Good Wife," etc. The big one is not just according to lay-out.

The advertisement was a four fives, with the display in the first column and the selling talk net three oolumus wide. It is a nice way to get room for the sellink talk.

"Old Wives for New" has a big human appeal; it deals with intimate phases of marriage and divorce, every phase and humor of woman is in it."
"It is a real object lesson for wives; the human note is self-sacrifice and renunciation, tho the ending is satisfactory. It gives a wonderful chance for gorgeous costuming and scenes with wide diversity."

A Nice Arrangement Where Much Selling Talk Is to Be Used. The Space Is Four Fives, Used by the Princess, Colorado Springs.

The second advertisement referred to was for the Fourth of July showing. The copy was not sent to the printer until too late for the other theatres to "jump" the idea. It announced that the President's Fourth of July oration delivered at Mount Vernon would be read from the stage at both afternoon and evening performances. It might be explained that for the convenience of the newspapers the speech was sent out ahead and held for release at a certain time, saving telegraph tolls and ensuring prompt delivery. Mr. Gardner probably arranged to get the speech on release, and it was delivered almost at the time the President was speaking the same words. To build up on this Mr. Gardner adds:

> I had fifteen special slides made showing a "Cycle of Democracy" opening with that famous painting, "The Spirit of '76," to the strains of "Yankee Doodle" followed by a slide copy of the big painting, "Siege of Vicksburg" (couldn't find a Gettysburg), quoted the final lines of Lincoln's Gettysburg speech, and showed Lincoln. Appropriate music, of course. I got a good hand on every change, but when I introduced "1918, 'Over There'" and showed a smashing big picture of a U. S. Marine on a background of Old Glory the din fairly made the lights flicker. And at that moment I had nearly 200 people in line who could not crowd into the house. Aside from the business and applause it was well worth the trouble, as quite a bit of favorable comment has floated in since then.

Mr. Gardner gives the real answer when he says that the chief return was in the appreciative comment that followed the showing. Getting your theatre favorably talked about is one of the most profitable forms of advertisement.

Another Double Pager.

Here is another double-page for "Pershing's Crusaders, this time from the Grand theatre, Faribault, Minn. The space was contributed by the merchants whose names are given at the bottom. If you have already played this first Government film you can work the same idea with "America's Answer" or later issues. There will be a number of these issued, so keep the idea in mind. It is best to get in touch with the advertising manager of the newspaper and let him approach the merchants with the argument that they should come in to help the Government—and it does help, for in no other way can the American public be kept so fully informed as to what is being done. The house also takes a two tens in the same issue for the remainder of the bill, and below the house signature is, "Hurry! Hurry! Hurry!"

Steve Stunts.

Steve Farrar of the Casino, Eldorado, Ill., and the Orpheum, Harrisburg, seems to be hustling harder than ever now that he has to handle two houses. One of his late stunts is in imitation of K. C. B. Take your good average these days, especially for a small town man. His stuff has the twang of the big city style, and he keeps business going even at advanced prices, because he picks his shows more carefully, gets better runs and then advertises for patrons in a way that gets the extra coin to pay for the extra expense. He has a lot more nerve than some of the big town exhibitors who think a fifteen-cent top will ruin their business. And you'll notice that he is playing the big stuff two days instead of one. That's one reason why he can advertise. He can keep the film long enough to make money on it.

So Far—

Lately we wrote W. T. Howley, of the Star, Concord, N. H., that his little house organ, Star-light, was all to the good if he could keep it up, and to prove that he can keep it up, Mr. Howley made a whole page of copy over the fact that we forgot to sign the letter. We think he qualifies in the newspaper stakes all right after that, for it is a slim foundation for several hundred words, but he got away with it. He lets page three of the program talk about the plays. The rest of the space is trade ads and talk, and he romps all over the space that is not taken up by the trade advertisements. And we're inclined to think that the Star-light will bring the outsiders better returns than the daily paper, because it is more apt to be studied. Mr. Howley is getting up an orphan's day and letting his patrons contribute toward the expense, and he is also working on a locally produced picture; and if he can run one of those contests and still turn out a cheerful program we'll know he has the mark on him. As a taste of his style here's the way he announces an addition to the staff.

> Mr. David J. Adams has agreed to enter the employ of our concern and will be actively engaged in promoting theatricals during the coming season. His advice in regards to various matters pertaining to the "show business" should prove valuable, and he will have a free hand to place before you the best that the market affords in the way of vaudeville, musical comedy, repertoire shows, etc., etc. We hope that what we don't know—he does—and P. S.—If he does—he'll know a whole lot.

We think that Mr. Howley is getting almost as much fun out of the sheet as are his patrons, but he's welcome to our share of handling the amateur players. We got fed upon that years ago. Perhaps Mr.

Howley will send you a sample program if you send him a stamped envelope for the return. He has the right idea of how to get out a program that is not wasted.

Bleich Displays.

George A. Bleich, of Owensboro, Ky., sends in another batch of his work. One example is a neat arrangement of his Sunday advertisement, with each day in a shaded panel. It's attractive, but we think his old style recently shown, gives his regular readers a better idea of the coming program. It is good for a change, but we like the old style better. Another Sunday advertisement is different because Mr. Bleich wanted to make a spread for "Pershing's Crusaders." He split his advertisement, taking four twelves for Pershing and three nines for the rest of the bill. The printer has set the general advertisement too full. Fatty Arbuckle, for example, is so close to the house signature that the value of the name is lost. It would have paid to set the name in type two picas smaller, using the two picas thus gained in white space above and below the name. This is something printers never will learn. The other names get a chance to fight for their lives, but the top name is obscured. The Pershing advertisement is very much better. It is nicely displayed and gives full value to the text. Through the week smaller spaces were taken, the third cut showing a four-inch space cross page. This is rather more than Mr. Bleich's average week day display, but he has from two to four and even more advertisements each week day for the three nights he manages, generally the current attraction and the midweek. All through the Pershing campaign he took space, because he knows that the Government desires to give the fullest publicity to this picture and Mr. Bleich is head and front of the propaganda in his town. He serves on all committees and does his bit in other ways.

Poor Program Copy.

There is no use paying for the printing of a program unless you make it work for you. We are looking at a sightly four-pager that stops being good looking when you start to read, for some of the stories are not stories at all, and instead of attracting you to the film make you wonder what there is in the yarn to make it worth while going to see. For example, Vitagraph's "A Game with Fate" is given this announcement:

> Apparently Harwell has lost his fortune. He seeks aid from both Dawson and Shields, but is refused. Meeting the men at a dance, Harwell's fiancee, Elaine, notices the coldness of his reception and asks the reason for it. Harwell tells her that he cannot tell, but asks her to believe in him no matter what happens. That night Dawson disappears, and within a short time Harwell is arrested for murder.

There is nothing in that to make the reader desire to see the story. Indeed there is no story here, for the story of the play is all that follows the promise here printed. It is one of the best stories the Vitagraph has had in a long time—a tricky succession of thrills which very nearly cause an innocent man's death, yet the bald statement given is merely the opening of the story. The editor took a synopsis and cut when he had enough matter to fill the space. In the same way Pathe's "The Mysterious Client" is cut off just when it begins to become interesting in this fashion:

> Harry Nelson, a young attorney, waits vainly for clients. Boris Norjunov offers him money if he will perform an unethical legal service for him. Harry refuses. Suddenly, Jeanne Darcy dashes into the office and begs Harry to protect her until she can put an envelope into a safety deposit box. The appeal moves Harry to accept, but he is attacked in the street and the envelope stolen.

Here again the cut was made when the necessary seven lines were gained without regard to the pull of the selling talk. It is a waste of time and money to put out a two-color program with no more punch than this. Better no program at all than one which convinces the reader that the stories are poor and not worth while.

Ruff Stuff.

Ralph Ruffner sends in a four fulls used by him for "The Kaiser's Shadow." The display is large enough to stand the use of the shaded letter, but we do not like them, no matter how large they may be, but the space is shown in reproduction because of a characteristic Ruff touch. At the bottom of the panel you will notice the Hooded Terror carrying off a helpless maid. The text reads: "If Dorothy ever went after this gun, he'd never have a chance." The serial runs the latter part of the week, and this is a Saturday display for a Sunday showing, but Butte is engrossed in the Pathe serial, so Ruff found a chance to get a laugh and he knows the value of a laugh in an advertising space. In the Thursday advertisement the serial was referred to as "Butte's favorite indoor sport," and that got another laugh. Audiences laugh at the strenuosity of the serials, but they like them none the less, and Ruff, knowing this, plugs away at the serials to get all the good he can from them. As a rule the serials are very poorly advertised. Managers are too apt to take it for granted that the first episode will pull for the entire run of the story. They take pains to get it started right and then let it run with some such casual mention as "And the 15th Episode of 'The Lure of Laura.'" They never seem to think of making capital of the serial every week, but permit their audiences to forget. Every single item on a bill should be exploited, not in an inch or two of space, but with cleverness. Keep up the interest if you want the serial or the short stuff to bring in money.

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be indorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

An Entirely New Scheme.

Frank Munz, Minot, North Dakota, submits two very badly burned lugs, photograph and drawings of an invention of his, together with the following letter:

First of all, kindly understand that the lugs are not from the lamps I am in charge of. Will you kindly give me an estimate of the resistance offered by each of these two. One was removed from a Power's, without the use of any tool at all, the other from a Motiograph, which had only run 200 hours, though the lug may have been used longer. In each case current was taken through Ft. Wayne compensarc; 60 amperes; 48 volt arc.

I am including photo, drawings and full data concerning a soldered contact, an invention of my own which is covered by letters patent. Photo shows actual condition after 221 hours actual use (since May 4, 1918), pulling 40 amperes D. C. Am also sending a lug tested in connection with this invention for one-half hour at 75 amperes. There was some heat, true, but it was because I was unable to get a proper alloy for the upright bars and had to use copper, which is a great conductor of heat. As you will see from the lug and attached wire strands, not much heat was carried to them. I am fully convinced that with this device the renewal of lamp leads would not be necessary during the life of the lamp. Aside from the great saving thus effected, a perfect contact is maintained at all times and there is no waste of current through resistance due to burned lugs and wires. Besides this, the device has other good points. It eliminates the wires hanging out of the back of the lamphouse, which is especially advantageous when two machines are operated from a center position, or where the projection room is too small. I have also seen the back of a lamphouse bent out of shape by opening the lamp wide to put in long carbons. With this device the lamp works just as freely wide open or closed, as though no wires were attached. It allows of free adjustments in all directions intended by lamp manufacturers. It costs so little that it will very quickly pay for itself. When properly made it consists of two brass bars and a few pieces of asbestos board. I fully believe that if shown its advantages, any theatre manager would do as did my own employer, who said: "Put it on the other lamp." "That will cost you ten bucks," was my reply, to which he responded: "I don't care what it costs! Put it on." And I did. Condemn it F. H. if you see fit to. It has stood every test.

Why the last remark, Brother Munz? In the first place I could neither condemn nor commend a device such as this without first having reports on practical tests made by projectionists. In the second place, I do not condemn things just for amusement. My impressions are, however, as follows: First, it would interfere with the vent pipe which every lamphouse should have, leading to the main vent flue or to the open air, but that could be gotten around quite handily. Second, the conductor attached to the lower carbon arm would be subjected to pretty high temperature, which would inevitably act to raise its resistance if copper were used. Whether or not this would hold true with an alloy I do not know; nor have I the necessary book here to determine the point. As to its efficiency in saving lugs and wires there can be no manner of question. From the photograph our readers will be able to judge of the device just as well as I can. I would suggest that when you get them on the market you give the names of several projectionists using them. My own opinion will be based on what they say. As to the amount of resistance the lugs you submit would develop, I could not even make an intelligent estimate. In the one case it would be very heavy indeed and it would be heavy in both. I had thought the type of solid ivory top who lets his lugs and wires get into such utterly wretched condition was about weeded out. By the way, why do you refer to the device as a soldered contact? There does not appear to be any solder connected with it, so far as I can see.

Wise Wisdom.

Recently a New York City projectionist sent in details of a trouble which the editor was unable to solve. It was a very peculiar case and we referred it, by way of experiment, to the Board of Motion Picture Examiners of New York City and Boston, asking them to submit such solution as might seem to fit the case.

Boston comes in with the following; signed by J. J. Carey, Deputy Chief:

> Your communication July 22, addressed to the Board of Motion Picture Examiners, has been referred to this department (Inspection Dept. Ed.). The matter on which you desire information has been referred to the examiners, and from your statement in relation thereto it would appear that a great many causes could be advanced for the trouble to which you refer and statement for the cause of your trouble from the examiners would be merely a guess. Under these circumstances it would appear that this matter would have to be gone over very carefully on the job to arrive at even a fair conclusion, or a remedy to correct the trouble. I will state for your information that each examiner advanced several reasons for the trouble and pointed out cases where almost similar conditions prevailed, and in each case the cause was different.

Um, jesso, jesso! A bit strange, though, that with my somewhat extensive experience I am myself not aware that there are so very many reasons for a D. C. arc persisting in climbing up the back of the carbons.

Later: We are just in receipt of the solution offered by the New York City board of examiners, as follows:

> Regarding trouble experienced by projectionist cited in your communication of July 22, advise that tests be made to determine whether any heat is developed at contacts on main fuse blocks, especially at main fuse connections. The statement of conditions is not complete (It is as complete as it was given me.—Ed.), but we presume the two projectors are connected on opposite sides of a 3-wire D. C. system; that it is the neutral fuse which blows; that the projectionist sets his carbons at an angle to each other, and that the trouble does not occur every time his second arc is struck. The reason his arc climbs the back of the carbon is that the arc voltage is too high, caused by loose connection at main fuse giving him the voltage of the two outside wires (same reason I advanced for this part of the trouble, except that I surmised it was due to a ground.—Ed.), when the second arc is struck. His fuse would not blow when both projectors were in operation, but would blow from the combined heat of the loose connection and the current taken through it when using one side of the line only.

This letter is signed by George R Brown, Inspector in charge of Sub-Division of Licenses. I like friend Brown's letter. There is side-step to it. He may be wrong, but has supplied such information as the information seems to warrant, exactly as this editor does nearly every day of his life. If he is wrong it is no disgrace to him or his colleagues on the board, who doubtless considered the matter with him. As he says, the information supplied is not complete. Personally I believe his explanation is the correct one, though that particular explanation had not occurred to me.

The theatre is the Windsor, 823 Third avenue, New York City, Ben Friedman, projectionist. By Brother Friedman's consent I will ask Mr. Brown to send an inspector up to the Windsor, if he will, to verify the conclusion he has reached, or to give us the correct dope.

A Highly Meritorious Action.

John W Quinn, Cambridge, Mass., tells us of a most commendable act on the part of Cambridge Lodge of Elks, as follows:

> Am submitting the following as of possible interest to your readers: Cambridge Lodge of Elks propose installing a Power's projection equipment and asbestos projection room in the Cambridge City Home (Poor House), Sunday, September 8. The committee, John W Quinn, Chairman, Wm. Haserty, Secretary, Thomas Sullivan, Treasurer, Edgar MacDougall, Joseph F. Noonan and Joseph Sully, with view to doing something really worth while in the Big Brother movement, solicited the members, raised the price of the apparatus and had enough left over to give a show and luncheon on the day of presentation.

Now here is something really worth while. This committee showed judgment of high order when it purchased a projection apparatus, because they have supplied something which will provide interest and smiles, for years to come, to the sad hearts of those who have failed, possibly through no serious fault of their own, in the long pull up life's oftime stony hill. Few have been their joys and many their sorrows. We who have fought the battle and won, or believe we have, in so far as actual fear for the future be concerned, are all too apt to forget those who in their declining years face naught but a dreary, drab existence, such as the forced acceptance of "charity" inevitably entails, especially when it comes through open acknowledgement in a "City Home."

I well know this is not exactly a fit subject for this department, but the letter reached my drawer, probably through error in mail distribution, and I cannot refrain from comment on the splendid act of the Elks Lodge and its committee. It was a real Big Brother act, if ever there was one.

Rectifier Connections.

J. L. Casey, Clarendon, Texas, indites the following:

> Guess you don't hear much from we small-town rubes. However, being a regular reader of the department, which is great, I will butt in anyhow. Myself and friend boss own all three editions of the Handbook, which are the best ever, also I own set of Hawkins; excellent books for the projectionist. My projection room is 6½ feet floor to ceiling, 6½ feet wide, and 9½ feet long. Too small, yes! And now for a question. Am running two Motlographs, which I think are as good as any made (trust the Enterprise Company will not get angry with me for letting that get into print. If they wont, I promise not to print the one previous to it—Ed.), but am running one of them off a compensarc and the other off a G. E. Rectifier. What I want to know is, how may I connect both lamps to the rectifier so as to not burn out the tube.

Connect your second lamp to the rectifier secondary leading to the first lamp anywhere between rectifier and machine table switch. This will have the effect of placing the two lamps in multiple. You will not be able to burn both lamps at once, but you can "steal" the current from one to the other, thus: When ready to start the second lamp close the machine table switch and freeze the carbons of the idle lamp. The other arc will go out instantly, and you must separate the carbons to strike the arc very quickly, because while the carbons are frozen (in contact with each other) the resistance of the arc is cut out and the tube overloaded. The plan has disadvantages, as follows: It gives the tube a rather severe "jolt" every time the second arc is struck; it prevents the burning in of new carbons while the show is on, and it requires considerable practice to steal the current from one lamp to the other without losing both arcs. I cannot recommend the plan. Better either get another rectifier or a motor generator of sufficient capacity to allow of burning both arcs at once for a limited period. This department is just as much for the smallest small-town man as it is for the city man. The name of your town brought a smile. I fired an engine on the old Denver and Ft. Worth (now the Colorado Southern) when Clarendon was merely a sidetrack, store, two or three dwellings, a hotel and two saloons. Over the hotel desk was the following legend: "Six miles to wood, six hundred feet to water, six feet to hell. God bless our home." I have myself viewed the foregoing card many times, for Clarendon was the end of a freight division at that time. That was about 1880, I think.

QUESTION BOX

Questions Answered Without Publication of Name or Address.

From a correspondent comes the following:

> Have been a department reader for three years, and have secured therefrom much valuable information. Now I am in an argument and want the right dope. Have two Power's 6-A projectors working at 50-foot throw. They now propose adding twenty feet additional distance of projection. My boss, who is a new man in the game, claims we can still use A. C. and get the same results; also there is a film exchange man (they know it all anyhow) who says the same thing, whereas I claim it cannot be done.

Your boss is in error. You will not "get the same result." Other things being equal, you will get a better one. That you have read the department is good, but I am afraid you have not studied it and the handbook to very good purpose. I have told you many times that within reasonable limits the distance of projection makes no difference in screen illumination provided the lens system of your projectors be properly matched up. This applies equally regardless of kind of current. Assuming a picture of ordinary size, say 12 to 18 feet, very short throws make for poor definition because they make necessary projection lenses of very short focal length. This also may bring the shutter position inside the lens barrel, compelling the use of a shutter blade wider than would be necessary could the dissolving point of the light ray (areal image of condenser) be reached, and this, in turn, makes for a badly balanced shutter and added flicker tendency. Very long throws, say more than 125 feet, with picture of ordinary size makes it very difficult to avoid excessive waste of light because of long back focus of projection lens. As between 50 and 70 feet you will find no difference to speak of in screen illumination, always provided you match up your lens system intelligently, and your definition will probably be somewhat improved, the improvement depending on size of picture you are using, and assuming its size will not be changed. You see, brother, these are some of the things involved in technical knowledge of projection. Knowledge of them and kindred problems marks one difference between the mere "operator" and the projectionist. Those who take pride in their profession and wish to be respected therein will set their brain working and get into the latter class. I am sorry, but your "boss" and the exchange man are in the right and you are in error. Assuming an amperage of 60 A. C. you should have the following, which will not be changed by the added throw, but will be changed by any considerable change in amperage: Two 6½ condenser lenses so set that their apexes are not to exceed 1/16-inch apart, with about 18½ inches from centre of condenser combination to aperture, using plano-convex lenses. Projection lens diameter for 3, 4, 5 and 6 inch back focus, respectively, should be 1.56, 1.84, 2.1 and 2.3 inch. If you use m bi-c condenser lenses then use 6½ meniscus and 8½ bi-convex, with 21 inches from centre to aperture; projection lens diameter requirements essentially the same for equal back focus.

Frank A. Ruth, Chicago, arises to remark:

> In August 24 issue, Brother V. Wood, of Local 330, Ft. Worth, Texas, lays claim to the invention of change-over signal device, also gives warning of intention to protect all rights thereto. Well, Brother Wood is just a bit out of luck; also, perhaps, some coin of the realm. If he will journey to Chicago, we will undertake the contract of showing to him where his device has been in use for more than a year; also we will not only show him the kind he believes himself to be the inventor of, but so many other kinds that he will wonder where they all came from. I have also seen more than a dozen different kinds of automatic cut-offs for rewinders.

I have myself examined a great many kinds of automatic cut-offs for rewinders, and I guess Friend Wood had better investigate before taking any action, legal or otherwise.

Will Keep Posted.

Our old friend G. A. Yager is with the colors now. Says he likes it fine, and his only fear is that the war will be over before he is. Asks that the Moving Picture World be sent to him at Call Field, Witchita Falls, Texas, so he can keep posted even though temporarially out of the game. Says Y. M. C. A. puts up good projection with a single projector and very poor films. Says if he goes through New York City on his way "over there" he certainly will look us up.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by GEORGE W. BEYNON

The Small Showman Seeks for Surer Service from the Producer

WE MAY dwell upon the wonders of our Rialtos and Strands, talk of the big picture presentations in legitimate theatres, where the "Hearts of the Worlds" draw packed houses, stand with mouth agape and in joyful anticipation when we hear of the million dollar picture palaces promulgated, but—every film manufacturer still loudly, and we might say boisterously, acclaims the little man as "The backbone of the industry."

Now the question arises regarding the proper interpretation of this trite, but true saying. Does the producer purposely raise his voice that the little fellow may hear and pat himself on the back, strengthening a further inclination to do business with him—his bosom friend and philanthropist? Is it an insincerity both polite and politic that calls forth these kindly words without any real feeling in the matter?

"By their good deeds shall ye know them!"

The producer who, in all good faith, firmly believing in the general growth of the picture industry, conscientiously solicits the business of the little fellow, not because he is legion, but from a desire to foster his growth, can rightly claim the best of intentions. Good intentions are praiseworthy, but unless they be carried out, become but a barren field. It is said "Hell is paved with good intentions" and we believe it.

It is not within our province to enter into a discussion involving the general film service offered to the exhibitor. Music is our field and its fences give more than enough room for roaming. Hence to our subject!

The music service offered to the exhibitor is a joke. The intentions of the producer no doubt are the best in the world but his ignorance regarding its importance or essentials is colossal. Would he detail a person to get out his publicity service and then go away and forget all about him? Would he wait for the exhibitor to tell him his service was poor? Would he permit his publicity man to work in his own way, when it suited him and be engaged in similar occupations for others or other occupations for himself? Would the producer never study the publicity question for himself nor familiarize himself with its basic principles?

No, all these things he would not do. To think lightly of the publicity service of his business would spell ruin, yet that is the way he thinks regarding music service. He knows music is important. He knows his pictures either stand or fall by music. He knows that exhibitors help to fill their houses by the added feature of good music. He knows that these same exhibitors pay thousands of dollars yearly to maintain an orchestra and their large music library. Singers of the best type are engaged to enhance the program. These cost money. He knows that his music cue sheets are not used in the large houses because they are in no way adequate nor helpful. He knows that because of this inadequacy he must send a print to the projection room of the big theatre in order that it may be "Screened for music." And, lastly, he knows that the service refused by the big fellow because it is worthless he foists on the little fellow and calls it music service. If it is not service for the big show, we cannot see where it can be used in the smaller theatre to foster growth. If a retrograde movement be desired, this service will certainly help.

Until the producer sees the wisdom of appointing a competent musician on his staff, and regards the question seriously enough to closely follow it, making comparisons, developing new ideas, and inculcating a unity of purpose between his picture director and music director, "the back-bone of the industry" is going to continue his sufferings.

Musicians who take upon themselves the duty of arranging cue sheets merely to obtain extra cigar money cannot be relied upon to put forth any unusual energy either mental or physical to make the cue sheets productive of good results. It is a side issue in their young lives. Beside the publicity and picayune they derive from it, there is no incentive to greater endeavor.

Those arrangers, subsidized by publishing firms, cannot give service for their scope is limited. Each cue sheet prepared by them has a strange similarity of suggested selections. It is to their advantage to place before the buying directors all those numbers which they desire to popularize and of which they wish to increase the sale. In other words, the producer is paying to advertise the wares of certain publishers. This is not conducive to good music service for the exhibitor.

Suggested musical selections are a vital necessity. Without them, the cue sheet would be abortive, but unless they be chosen without prejudice or favor, and for the sole purpose of interpreting the scene affected, no results can be expected. Loyalty to the interests of producer should be always paramount. Service to the exhibitor should become the foremost thought, followed by concentration upon the technical part of the work. Variety of music is needed. New numbers and up-to-date "Hits" are called for. The musical leader of every picture thatre should be made to feel that he can depend upon the service submitted to him by the film manufacturer.

Dr. Riesenfeld Praises Department.

THE RIALTO, Times Square.
THE RIVOLI, Broadway at 49th st.

September 6, 1918.

Office of the Musical Director.

My Dear Mr. Beynon:

I am much interested in your new department, "Music for the Picture." There is indeed much that can be improved and done to give atmosphere, and not enough can be said or written on the subject. I cannot express any opinion on the performances in other moving picture houses over the country, as I unfortunately never get a chance of hearing them. I can only tell you that my experience is that I find a fresh riddle to solve with each picture we present, and I am sure this must be the case with other conductors and managers, who will greatly appreciate the help you will be able to give them.

Please let me wish you good luck in your new undertaking and let me assure you of any assistance in my power.

Very sincerely yours,

Hugo Riesenfeld.

"John Brown's Body" Marching Song.

Practically all patriotic songs have been created in a period of national stress. A song to fit the time is notably true of "John Brown's Body," which bears the reputation of being the most stirring march-song of the anglo-saxon race.

The simple little ditty had a most humble origin. The tune is supposed to have been composed by William Steffe, a writer of many Methodist hymns. It was used as a camp meeting song long before the civil war, and was very popular with the negroes of the South.

Most of us have clung fondly to the idea that the "John Brown" mentioned in the song was the great emancipator of Harper's Ferry, who died for and because of his convictions. But there is no place in history for sentiment, and we are disillusioned in the most practical manner.

At the outbreak of the Civil War, the melody was launched on its way by a batallion of Infantry occupying Fort Warren in Boston. The company seized upon the old melody as a medium of relieving the tedium of work. The religious nature of the words did not suit the men and they soon began to improvise. There chanced to be in the company a good-natured Scotchman, named John Brown. The name had an appeal, and around him the song centered. It voiced its way into the hearts of the brave and reckless boys and became their marching song on their way to the front.

In December of 1861, Julia Ward Howe was in Washington. One day she saw a skirmish between troops near the city. There she heard for the first time the song which had become so popular among the Northern soldiers. She went home and wrote the lyrics beginning "Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory of the Coming of the Lord," and her composition has come down to us as "The Battle Hymn of The Republic."

It would be impossible to conceive of a greater contrast than existed between the inane jingle of the army and the stately words of Mrs. Howe. But the music answered a two-fold purpose in the complex life of a soldier. He could march weary miles chanting the former, and could lay down his life for his country, breathing the faith voiced in the latter.

The surprising popularity of the song is attested by the fact that it has been made the marching song of Great Britain. It was sung with great enthusiasm by Kitchener's soldier's in the Soudan, and by Robert's troops in South Africa. It was discarded by our men in the Spanish war, where the North marched shoulder to shoulder with the South. That was indicative of good-taste and delicacy of feeling. All felt that the "John Brown" words were too reminiscent of days long dead. None of the splendid body of fighting men of the now ideally merged United States cared to resurrect a sentiment that was better burried in the ground along with the Scotch John Brown and the great man of the same name who gave up his life for an ideal.

Interesting Music Heard at the Rialto.

The Rialto program for the week commencing Sunday, Sept. 8, opened with the Overture, "Solonelle" by Tschaikowsky. Mr. Riesenfeld and his orchestra fairly outdid themselves in this number. The audience showed their approval by giving both conductor and orchestra an ovation.

The musical setting for the scenic, "Punting With Sugar," followed out the Rialto standard for detail—even to sweet melodies.

Annie Rosner, soprano, made the most of a song called "Mine" by Solman. The gentleman conducting the orchestra seemed to have a little difficulty in following the singer. Whether it was the singer's fault or the fault of the conductor, it was hard for us to judge.

The "Prologue from I Pagliacci was given by Desere La Salle, baritone. Just why the aria was not finished, we do not know. Possibly because the average audience has the wrong idea of where the ending of the aria really is, and applauded too soon. But we would suggest that an aria should be finished and in time patrons will realize their mistake.

The feature, "The Law of the North," afforded an atmospheric musical setting, which was admirably done. It is very unfortunate that the number following the feature is alweys spoiled by so many of the audience leaving. As a suggestion —why not hold up this number a bit as at any concert, until the new arrivals are seated. It will surely be appreciated by those remaining. These two charming numbers "Irish Tune From County Derry" and "Shepherd's Hey" were absolutely lost. Even the men in the orchestra were affected and did not play as carefully as usual under Mr. Riesenfeld.

The comedy "His Wife's Friend," followed by "Marche Religeuse" by Guilmant with Arthur Depew at the organ, closed a very delightful program.

Rosey Hits Added to Belwin Catalogue.

Belwin, Inc., again, in the short months of its existence, is proving to the musical world that it intends being an important factor in the industry. Much progress has been made in its catalogue. Its latest scoop is to secure the entire catalogue, with the exception of his albums, of George Rosey, the well known publisher, composer and arranger.

Among the many hits may be mentioned, "Valse Divine," a most impressive waltz; "Valse Moderne," the captivating hesitation waltz of the day; "Golden Youth," a charming characteristic valse lento; "A La Mode," a characteristic French one-step; "Savannah," a thrilling one-step, which has an unusually catchy melody; "Sachem," a sensational Indian one-step, just the kind for dancing and pictures; "Military Tactics," which will hereafter be known as the representative favorite for patriotic music; "A Selection of Favorite Melodies," a medley arrangement of excerpts from famous and standard works.

Within a few days, an important announcement will be made of a unique and special offer to musicians. This offer will last only for a limited time, so we advise everyone to take advantage of this opportunity to secure such valuable additions to his library.

Sacha Votichenko Revives Forgotten Art.

Sacha Votichenko, the eminent Russian musician, came to America in the early part of July, 1917, bringing with him the Royal Tympanon, one of the most unique instruments in existence. Indeed, to him, this tympanon is of priceless value, as it descends to him lineally from his famous ancestor, Pantaleon Hebenstreit, who near the end of the seventeenth century was one of the greatest musicians of his time.

King Louis XIV. presented Hebenstreit with this large gold tympanon as a wedding present, thus it holds cherished memories.

It is difficult to describe the fascination of this wonderful instrument. When Sacha Votichenko stands before it in the dim light of his beautiful New York studio, in the Hotel Des Artistes, he appeares to be a spirit of ancient times. He believes that the tympanon can be heard to the best advantage in a small theatre or studio. All of his concerts, therefore, are of a personal and spontaneous kind, in which the hearers are almost as important as the performer and the conventional gulf between the stage and the auditorium is bridged by community interest and effort.

Of late, Mr. Votichenko's compositions all show the marked influence of the World War. They have the pathetic appeal which it is impossible to describe. Of his playing one may truthfully say, that seldom is it possible to hear anything more beautiful, more mystical, or more comprehensive of all the perfections of vocal and instrumental technique.

It is the human element that stands forth most prominently in this artist's work. His methods, therefore, are worthy of careful and analytical study. There is not a singer or player of ordinary instruments who may not learn much from him.

Rivoli Presents Perfect Performance.

Hats off to S. L. Rothapfel. He has called us "finicky." We accept the appellation. We expect a high standard of music from his theatre orchestras, but it is a pleasant surprise to be offered a perfect performance. Again we say, "Hats off to S. L. Rothapfel."

Erno Rapee conducted the "Southern Rhapsody Overture" opening the show of September 8. He excelled himself in the difficult interpresentation of this quaint number. The orchestra put into it everything they possessed in the way of music, and never have we heard them to better advantage. The audience thought so too.

"Carmen Overture" was used for the educational film, "A Modern Mexican Hacienda." It fitted every inch of it, especially the bull fight. And—there was perfect synchrony.

"Temple Bells," an oriental song from the Indian Love Lyrics," by Woodforde-Finden, was well sung by Riccardo Bonelli, a baritone.

Seated upon oriental rugs with the incense pots dreamily smoking, cigarette between his lips, he languidly began the first verse. Beyond him the Sahara sky glowed in stars, the azure blue setting off in relief the red of Persian tapestry. Gradually his ennui disappeared as he became more earnest in his song. Throwing away his cigarette, he plunged into the third verse and brought the large audience to its feet by his mighty finale. It was a real touch of the Orient.

The Animated Pictorial received a fine setting, the chief number being "La Forza del Destina Overture." Here again was perfect synchrony.

The orchestral prelude to "He Comes Up Smiling" was a number called "Smiles." Every layman caught the significant connection by the titles and it made a strong appeal. The picture was lightly fitted, but held a dignity in keeping with the policy of the Rivoli. We congratulate "Roxy." He can play a comedy without the use of clap trap, cat calls and other cheap effects.

The organ solo closed the finest bill we have seen since "Blue Bird" was shown in the same theatre.

New Idea in Music Service Exchange.

Changes of industrial conditions always bring into existence new lines of business enterprise. Probably no new industry has had such a following of auxiliary companies in its wake, as the moving picture estate. We have seen the countless numbers of accessory firms spring up like mushrooms. New publishing houses for handling bills and posters have vied with the music publishers to catch some of the picture money. As the picture business has advanced so have these satellites prospered.

Music is now the great cry of the industry and the far seeing backers of the Music Service Exchange have caught the significance of the cry. Leaders situated in the large cities of New York, Boston, or Chicago, find little trouble in filling their musical needs, but those who guide the musical destinies of the small theatre in outlying districts find it almost impossible to procure a suitable library.

It is for the purpose of serving these unfortunate one, primarily, that the Music Service Exchange has been formed. This firm plans to sell to the leader any music he may need at no increase of price. It guarantees immediate shipment and speedy service. It will keep in close touch with the picture playing game, and if necessary, will select as well as buy if requested to do so. It will not publish any music nor ally itself with any publisher. It will always be a house of service in the strictest sense of the word.

Here is the chance for musicians and theatres to place themselves upon a standing order list that they may receive every new number as soon as it is placed on the market. There should be no excuse in the future for playing antiquated music, nor will the leader escape on the plea that his dealer cannot procure the music desired. Music Service Exchange will get it for you if it is in print.

We have investigated this company and find that it is all that it advertises to be. We extent to those connected with it our best wishes and feel free to say that they are a splendid acquisition to the moving picture industry in general and to the picture playing musician in particular.

MUSIC SERVICE EXCHANGE

507 Fifth Avenue, New York

ITS POLICY.

We do not and will not publish any music nor ally ourselves with any publisher. Service is our middle name and we serve to please.

ITS PURPOSE.

We will select or buy music of all kinds from any publisher for the benefit of musicians who cannot come to New York or for those who through lack of time cannot write for small orders to many and various firms. For this service we charge no fee.

ITS OPERATION.

Send us your order for music with a deposit cheque, showing good faith, and we will procure your music from the various publishing houses, ship it as one consignment on the same date of receipt of the order, charging you the usual retail price less your deposit.

ITS MEANING TO YOU.

Quick action, accuracy in filling your order, a retail store at your door, a saving of carfares and postage and a service that you have long needed.

EXHIBITORS—

Avail yourself of this opportunity to build up a musical library for your theatre.

LEADERS—

Send in your lists of music wanted. If suggested in any cue-sheet, indicate the name and the number and we will do the rest.

THANK YOU!

Leaders' Service Bureau.

Questions Asked—Suggestions Offered.

Q. Can you tell me the name and address of the organization which looks after music for the camps? I have been told there is such an organization in New York which supplies sheet music of popular and marching songs for the cantonments at cheap rates. One of the drafted men from our office has written me as editor of the music column to find out the name of such an organization. He is at Camp Devens and says there is a woeful lack of music there. Any information you can give me on this subject will be appreciated.

A. It is understood that the "Raymond B. Fosdick Commission on Training Camp Activities" is collecting sheet music for distribution among the camps in the United States, but as this commission is located in Washington, D. C., there would have been more or less delay in communicating with it. Therefore, we telephoned directly to the following music publishers of New York, stating the need of Camp Devens. In every instance the answer was at once: "We will be pleased to send music." So the thanks of the "boys" at Ayer can be given to Shapiro, Bernstein & Co., 226 West Forty-seventh street; Joseph Stern, 102 West Thirty-eighth street; J. H. Remick & Co., 219 West Forty-sixth street; Leo Feist, 235 West Fortieth street, and M. Witmark & Sons, 144 West Thirty-seventh street.

The generosity of the musical profession generally is most gratifying to those connected with it. There has never been an appeal sent out for music, musical instruments or for singers and instrumentalists to take part in entertaining the soldiers at the camp, but what a ready and instant response has been received. It is hoped that Camp Devens soldiers will enjoy the contributions of music which they will shortly receive.

Q. I am a leader working in a picture house and supporting a family of three. I fall within the draft age. How does the law effect me?

A. You are working in what is considered an essential industry and you can claim exemption on that ground. The fact that you have a family wholly dependent upon you is a further reason for your exemption, and we believe that your local board will hardly expect you to go to the front.

Q. Our director is continually balling me out in front of the others and I feel that it is unjust. What can I do?

A. Get a new job or find out the real reason behind his actions and govern yourself accordingly.

Q. I receive much benefit from reading the Leaders' Service Bureau. Perhaps this question will not properly come under that head, but I am most anxious to know what becomes of the royalties on the German-owned Grand Operas in this country now that we are at war with that country. Can you tell me?

A. A great number of German-owned Grand Operas, Operettas, Plays, Songs and Books have been very successful in this country and have yielded splendid royalties. Only a few weeks ago, A. Mitchell Palmer, alien property custodian, took over the American rights to all such property which had been reported. The royalties in payment of these American rights are being collected and will be invested in Liberty Bonds.

Q. "I am preparing my next season's program and wish some songs which appeal to the public. I like 'The Women of the Homeland,' but it is a patriotic number. Is the public tiring of this kind of music? What would you advise.

A. No one is tired of patriotic songs. "The Women of the Homeland" is a good song, with a pronounced heart appeal. Mme. Schumann-Heink includes it regularly in her repertoire and this fact alone proves the worth of the composition.

Q. "Exactly what does libretto mean? Have operas always had librettos? Is an interesting libretto essential to an opera?"

A. Libretto is the diminutive of the Italian word, "libro," book, and means "little book." Time and use have modified that definition, however, for now the word libretto is, technically, "the book of the opera." In France, much interest centered around words of the opera and in French operas, the story is always interesting—with an appeal to the understanding of the audience. In light opera, it is essential that the words shall be understood, that the comedy may not be lost, but in grand opera, bad diction has been responsible for the fact that the public often listens to the music with no understanding of the plot of the opera. In the seventeenth century, Metastasio was a celebrated librettist. The "Father of French Opera," Abbe Perrin, with Cambert, produced the first French opera, "La Pastorale," which was first performed in 1659. Scribe, Barbiere, Meilhac and Halevy wrote the librettos of the nineteenth century. W. S. Gilbert, to whom Sir Arthur Sullivan was indebted for his librettos, is one of the most recent famous men. Planche was the author of Weber's "Oberon." Verdi was indebted to Boito for his "Otello and Falstaff." This will serve to give you a faint idea of the value of this form of composition.

HONOR ROLL

LAD O'ER THE SEA

By

GERTRUDE WILSON

Published by Harold Flammer
New York

This plaintive little ballad is one of the best we have heard. Filled with sentiment, it has the true heart interest that will appeal to your patrons. Beautiful in melody, it makes an admirable theme. Get it.

Oscar Spirescu Passes Away Suddenly.

It was with deep regret that we learned the sad news of the passing of Oscar Spirescu, Symphony Director of the Strand Theatre, New York.

Mr. Spirescu had endeared himself to orchestra and patrons by his musicianly ability and kindly manner. Coming into the picture playing field after a wide experience in Grand Opera and Symphonic works, he rapidly forged to the front, quickly grasping the new elements that go to make pictures popular.

The Strand has sustained a distinct loss through his death and many thousands of his unknown friends will miss his genial presence. We extend to those bereaved our heartfelt sympathy, assuring them that Mr. Spirescu lived not in vain. His influence and character have stamped the industry indelibly.

Metro Announces Its Quartette of October Releases

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION announces four superb production for the month of Octover, in its All-Star series, in addition to the great Nazimova production, "Eye for Eye," and the Screen Classics, Inc., superfeature, "Pals First," starring Harold Lockwood. Two new stars are included in the quartette of luminaries of the month's release.

"Secret Strings," introducing Olive Tell as a star in the Metro constellation, heads the list for the month. Miss Tell scored heavily in "To Hell With the Kaiser," in which she was featured, Lawrence Grant playing the name-part of the Kaiser. "Secret Strings" provides an idea vehicle for her beauty and histrionic gifts. Kate Jordan is the author of this story, which appeared originally in Ainslee's Magazine. June Mathis has prepared it for Miss Tell's use in five absorbing acts. It has been directed by John Ince.

"Secret Strings" is the story of a master-crook and how he was outwitted by master-detectives, with the aid of a clever woman. The finish of the story contains a surprise. Mystery is one of its principal elements and the action is spirited.

Miss Tell in the role of Janet Newell is surrounded by a distinguished cast. She has practically two leading men, William J. Kelly and Hugh Thompson. John Daly Murphy is seen as the man who poses as Richard de Giles. Marie Wainwright, who was long a star in Europe and America, plays Mrs. de Giles. Hugh Jeffrey, John A. Smiley, Edward Lawrence, Barbara Winthrop and Bert Tuey are also in the cast.

Second on the list, and released Oct. 14, is "His Bonded Wife," with the favorite little star, Emmy Wehlen. This picture provides Miss Wehlen with a vehicle of wonderful attractiveness. The part of Doris Morse provides Miss Wehlen with every opportunity, and should make her even more popular than ever in Metro's All-Star Series. Miss Wehlen is famed for the perfection of her gowning, and in "His Bonded Wife" there is a contrast in simple and elaborate raiment.

"His Bonded Wife" has scenes of surprising novelty and charm. One of the most interest shows an al fresco entertainment at the Newport villa of the heroine. Another scene shows the rush hour in the neighborhood of Herald Square, New York, with employees pouring out of Macy's, Saks', and Gimbel's and the Hotels Martinique and McAlpin in the distance. These scenes have been skillfully handled by Camerman Bergquist.

Creighton Hale heads the cast surrounding Miss Wehlen. He has the role of Philip Hazard. Warda Howard, William Frederic and John Terry also are cast in excellent parts.

Lois and Arthur Zellner wrote "His Bonded Wife," which was adapted for the screen by June Mathis, and Charles J. Brabin has directed it.

Hale Hamilton will be introduced as a Metro star in "Five Thousand An Hour," which will be released Oct. 21. It is a picturization of the story by George Randolph Chester of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" fame, published by Bobbs, Merrill & Co. Mr. Hamilton apepared opposite May Allison in "The Winning of Beatrice," and wrote for Miss Allison "The Return of Mary," her September release.

"Five Thousand An Hour" was directed by Ralph W. Ince, assisted by W. W. Cohill, and photographed by William Black. June Mathis has made the scenario version. Mr. Hamilton has the part of Johnny Gamble, who achieves wealth by a series of clever and amazing financial adventures. The part shows Mr. Hamilton at his best, with the contagious good-nature, daring and vigor that characterize that actor's best work.

The picture shows the actual races of "the season" at Saratoga, and both the Saratoga and Belmont race tracks are shown. Some brilliant people have been chosen to surround Mr. Hamilton in his first Metro vehicle. Lucille Lee Stewart, as Constance Joy in "Five Thousand an Hour," has a totally different type of part from that of her first Metro picture, "Our Mrs. McChesney," with Ethel Barrymore, in which she plays a chorus-girl bride. In the Hale Hamilton picture her own charm and beauty have full sway. Gilbert Douglas plays Paul Gresham, a villain. This is Mr. Douglas's first appearance in pictures, although he has been prominent in Broadway productions. Robert Whittier, well known on both stage and screen, plays another villain. Florence Short, also a Metro favorite, plays Constance's chum, Polly Parson. Her most recent picture was "Kildare of Storm," starring Emily Stevens. Other clever people in the cast are Robert Middlemass, Charles Edwards, Warren Cook, William Frederick and Isabel O'Madigan.

"The Testing of Mildred Vane," with May Allison as the star, will be the month's final release, coming Oct 28. This picture is from the pen of Charles T. Dazey, the author of "In Old Kentucky," and it has been adapted for the screen by George D. Baker, production manager of Metro's West coast output. Wilfred Lucas, who also directed Miss Allison in "The Return of Mary," has directed "The Testing of Mildred Vane," and William E. Fildew is the cameraman.

Spiritualism is the theme of a portion of this story, and the power of heredity is cleverly linked with it to form an absorbing picture. Unscrupulous people make use of these mighty forces, in the photodrama, to attempt injury to innocent persons, and for a time Mildred Vane (May Allison) is in dire straits. Science adds to the tensity of the clever scenes in this five-act feature, and there are also vistas of great scenic beauty.

Darrell Foss again, as in "The Return of Mary," plays opposite the star. His part is that of Albert Moreland, a young professor. George Field plays the villainous Dr. Miguel Hernandez. Fred Goodwins has the picturesque role of Ralph Jeffries, a man with a wrong viewpoint of life. Nigel de Brulier plays Matthew Vane, Mildred's father. "The Testing of Mildred Vane" affords Miss Allison a wonderful opportunity to show her dramatic powers.

Maxwell Karger is manager of productions of the New York output, supervising every detail of the preparation of pictures, and George D. Baker is in charge of the Hollywood, Cal., plant.

Anita King, Smuggler's Daughter.

In "Whatever the Cost," Anita King's next picture for distribution by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, the Outdoor Girl of Plaza pictures is seen as the daughter of the leader of a gang of whiskey smugglers. She is supported by an able cast consisting of Stanley Pembroke, Patrick Calhoun, Corenne Grant, Bruce Smith, Charles Dudley and Gordon Sackville.

Scene from "Three Wounded Men" (Universal).

Powerful Story for Hayakawa's Second Special

SESSUE HAYAKAWA'S second special production, "The Temple of Dusk," made by the Haworth Pictures Corporation, for release through Mutual, is built around a story of Japanese devotion and ideals that culminates in supreme sacrifice.

Frances Marion in constructing this tale for Hayakawa has built a story that contains the elements permitting luxuriant settings and exceptional situations. Miss Marion feels that she has created a work that equals her most famous photoplay successes, which include "The Foundling," "The Daughter of the Sea," "The Feast of Life" and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

In "The Temple of Dusk" Sessue Hayakawa interprets the role of a chivalrous young Japanese poet of a proud old Samurai clan.

Hayakawa has been surrounded with a brilliant cast. Jane Novak and Sylvia Bremer, two of the best known young women in pictures, who have appeared in numerous successes, play leading parts. Lewis Willoughby, an English actor who has a reputation in this country as an artist of distinction, interprets a prominent role. Henry Barrows, who has both a wide stage and screen experience, is prominently identified with the cast. Mary Jane Irving, the four-year-old child actress, plays an important role.

In addition to these there are a number of Japanese actors numbering among them twelve Geisha girls who were former members of the Imperial Dramatic Company of Tokio, in which Hayakawa was formerly starred.

The picture was made under the direction of James Young, whose screen work is well known. His long association with pictures has placed to his credit a large line of successes.

Elinor Field in Many Characters.

Elinor Field, the winsome high school girl star of the Strand-Mutual comedies, is called upon to play a great variety of characters in her latest production, "All Kinds of a Girl," which will be released by Mutual on September 17.

This is perhaps the first time in her young career that she has been called upon to interpret so many different characters in one picture, a feat that would be worthy of someone of longer experience. She interprets the demure, quiet little girl knitting for the Red Cross who is of a retiring nature and always industrious, seeming to have no time for frivolities. Then there is the little domestic girl who loves to potter about with pots and pans, working over steaming kettles, constantly applying the dust cloth and broom. As the sporty girl in riding habit she handles a horse, drives a car and is constantly active in an athletic way. As the vampire she charms both old and young, but uncle, with his gray hair and nose glasses, seems to fall hardest.

Miss Field is enjoying an ever increasing popularity in the smart little comedies in which she is starring. Her youth and personality lend them a fresh and cheering wholesomeness.

Animated Weekly Shows World Series.

The latest Animated Weekly release of the Universal includes big scenes from the world series games between the Cubs and the Red Sox. The presentation of a world series game on the screen as a news event represents one of the big achievements of the present day film production.

There was a time when the filming of such a contest was only accomplished through the payment of thousands of dollars for the privilege, and the picture was shown in those days as a feature attraction. Nowadays the world series has become a mere incident among more essential news incidents on the screen.

Scene from "Vive La France" (Famous Players-Lasky).

Dorothy Dalton in Ince Subject, "Vive La France"

That Dorothy Dalton's forthcoming Paramount picture, "Vive La France!" released September 15, will be one of the most thrilling war films of the day, is the confident belief of the producer, Thomas H. Ince, who has supervised personally every foot of the film.

The story of "Vive La France!" was written by H. H. Van Loan and C. Gardner Sullivan did the scenario. R. William Neill directed with the assistance of Bert Seivel, while John Stumar, assisted by George Barnes, is responsible for the camera work. It is Barnes who went aloft in an aeroplane to get scenes of an aerial conflict, obtaining results said to be startling in the extreme.

Supporting Miss Dalton as leading man is Edmund Lowe. He is a newcomer to the Ince forces, but it is said that his acting is distinctly superior in quality and that he is certain to find favor with the film-going public. Frederick Starr and Bert Woodruff are also in the cast, which apparently is of uniform excellence. The production is said to have been staged with a lavish hand.

"A Japanese Nightingale" Heads Pathe Program

The Pathe program for the week beginning September 22 is headed by the first of the Extra Selected Star Photoplays, "A Japanese Nightingale," from the popular romance of Onata Watana. Miss Ward's artistic work in this play has earned her enthusiastic praise, and there is a sure appeal in her big dramatic moments. With skilled direction, George Fitzmaurice has placed the story in the most exquisite settings, and for sheer beauty some of the scenes have never been equaled.

The sixth episode of the swift moving Western serial, "Hands Up," featuring Ruth Roland, is called "Flames of Vengeance." Echo, the heroine, is saved from the blazing Inca sacrificial pit by the timely arrival of her cowboy friends.

Toto, the irresistible clown-comedian, is in one of his funniest acrobatic moods in going through his adventures in "The Great Water Peril," a characteristic Rolin creation.

No. 15 of the Post Travel series is an excursion into the Dutch West Indies, and one beholds the complete transportation of a bit of Holland into the tropics. To those who find poetry in the taste of that delicious liquor the settlement of Curacao will have a peculiar interest. It is a unique part of the Carribean, which is full of odd and unusual places, as these little journeys show.

No. 4 of the "Far Flung Battle Line" will appeal to the patriotic interest of everyone who sees the pictures, for they show the American troops on furlough in France—one of the lighter sides of the great war in which there are smiles, good humor, good fellowship and sight seeing.

No. 13 of the Official War Review for variety of scene and information is one of the most interesting of the series thus far. It shows many points of the great struggle, and is a comprehensive lesson in pictures. The popularity of this feature is growing enormously, and Pathe expects that soon it will not only be shown in the 3,000 vaudeville houses when it was booked in a single contract, but in every one of the 15,000 picture houses of all classes.

Harry Carey in Dramatic Situation.

"Three Mounted Men," the special attraction featuring Harry Carey, Universal's ace among the western actors, which will be released October 7, presents an unusual twist in dramatic action. The spectacle is given of a prisoner being rescued from a posse by the same outfit which previously had captured the man and turned him over.

Harry Carey, cast as Cheyenne Harry, is a prisoner in solitary confinement, the victim of a conspirator, when suddenly he receives a pardon and the order to go out and get the man who has caused his misfortune. The situation is one of those tense emotional happenings, the like of which form the vital germ in the world's greatest literature.

How the suddenly freed man went about his task, and how he soon found the love of a girl rising in his path to defeat the task that gives him freedom, further sustain the suspense of the film. "Three Mounted Men" was switched on Universal's special attraction schedule to take the place of "Vanity Pool," featuring Mary MacLaren, which now will be released October 21.

"Jack" McGowan, Assistant Director.

John McGowan, playing opposite Viola Dana in Metro's forthcoming production, "Oh, Annice!" recently became assistant director for a day. Albert H. Kelley, assistant to John H. Collins, who directs the Viola Dana productions, was unexpectedly called away. McGowan asked Director Collins whether he might not be his substitute. Collins assented and it was soon found that McGowan had all the making of a director. For instance, he put a pencil behind his ear, took off his coat, rolled up his sleeves and made notes of the scenes taken. Director Collins had nothing but good things to say about his "assistant for a day."

Paramount Comedies for Coming Year Include One Two-Reeler Each Week

For the first time since starting the issue of two-reel comedies, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation now announces that it will release one comedy a week for a full year. This is made possible through the fact that arrangements have been perfected for the production and distribution of exactly fifty-two two-reel comedies during the production year 1918-19, which began September 1.

All these comedies will be released under the Paramount trademark, the list including twenty-six Paramount-Mack Sennett comedies, sixteen by James Montgomery Flagg and ten starring Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle. Accordingly, a complete schedule of releases has been made out for the year, a Sennett comedy being set for every other week, with the Flagg and Arbuckle products appearing on the alternate dates. The complete schedule follows:

September 1, Flagg; 8, Sennett; 15, Arbuckle; 22, Sennett; 29, Flagg. October 6, Sennett; 13, Flagg; 20, Sennett; 27, Arbuckle. November 3, Sennett; 10, Flagg; 17, Sennett; 24, Flagg. December 1, Sennett; 8, Arbuckle; 15, Sennett; 22, Flagg; 29, Sennett. January 5, Flagg; 12, Sennett; 19, Arbuckle; 26, Sennett. February 2, Flagg; 9, Sennett; 16, Arbuckle; 23, Sennett. March 2, Flagg; 9, Sennett; 16, Flagg; 23, Sennett; 30, Arbuckle. April 6, Sennett; 13, Flagg; 20, Sennett; 27, Flagg. May 4, Sennett; 11, Arbuckle; 18, Sennett; 25, Flagg. June 1, Sennett; 8, Arbuckle; 15, Sennett; 22, Flagg; 29, Sennett. July 6, Arbuckle; 13, Sennett; 20, Flagg; 27, Sennett. August 3, Flagg; 10, Sennett; 17, Arbuckle; 24, Sennett.

With this sequence of releases the desirability of booking the entire output of Paramount comedies for the year becomes apparent to exhibitors. For not only is each series distributed through the twelve months' schedule as evenly as possible, but the alternations are such as to make the sequence perfectly balanced. It is possible, moreover, for exchanges to retain this same sequence in second and third-run bookings as well as those in the first-run houses, affording all exhibitors an opportunity to secure a perfectly-balanced schedule of comedy releases for the entire year.

Carmel Myers Cheerful War Worker.

Carmel Myers, who is starring in "One Bright Idea," her newest Bluebird photoplay, is one of the hardest little war workers on the Bluebird lot. She has been made godmother to two outfits of our military forces, she has under her supervision the collection of tinfoil at the studio, and has appeared at many Red Cross and War Relief benefits. But her best work was accomplished after her return to California from her recent eastern trip, where she made her appearances at six of the large eastern cantonments. At each of these camps she closed her talk to the soldier boys with the statement that she would be more than glad to take back to California any message from the boys who had relatives there.

Many hearts have been lightened around Los Angeles way by Carmel's messages of cheer, for to those who wear service pins the next best thing to having the dear one back is to speak to somebody who actually saw him thousands of miles away from his home. And Miss Myers is delivering these messages.

England Gets the Profits From Official War Serial

IN ARRANGING for the distribution of the seven-episode serial, "Fighting for Freedom," composed of official British war pictures, the Universal has undertaken to turn over all profits to the British government. The contract provides only a moderate percentage to the film company for service and cost of handling the picture.

"Fighting for Freedom," as judged by its reception at the opening in New York, is certain to take its place as one of the leaders among patriotic films. It is an authentic revelation of the British war forces on the ground, in the air, and on the sea in action. The production will be released in regular weekly installments, with all the elements of a dramatic serial. The first release is set for October 1.

Following are the titles of the episodes, each conveying an idea of the character of unusual scenes depicted: "Admiral Beatty's Fleet in Action"; "Bomb Dropping from Aerial Submarine Destroyers"; "The Sensational Capture of Bagdad"; "Thrilling Feats of the Royal Flying Corps"; "Repairing War's Ravages"; "Chinese and African Workers Trailing the Hun," and "Britain's Battling Bull Dog—the Navy."

Montagu Love and June Elvidge are being co-starred by World Pictures in "The Quickening Flame." Work now progressing is being directed by Travers Vale.

World Pictures for October Led by "Road to France"

"The Road to France," the picture starring Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley, which is built around the wartime activities in American shipyards, features the World Pictures releases for the month of October. "The Road to France" is released on October 14.

First on the list of the month's releases comes "The Appearance of Evil," a decidedly different picture, starring June Elvidge. This will be released on October 7. Appearing with Miss Elvidge are Frank Mayo and George MacQuarrie. Others prominent in the cast are Clay Clement, Nora Cecil and Inez Marcel. Lawrence Windom directed the picture. The story is by Horace Hazeltine, and Clara S. Beranger made the scenario.

"The Road to France" is by Harry O. Hoyt, and it is in six reels. Dell Henderson directed it. It gives the most striking and interesting views of shipyard activities, and includes the launching of a big freighter named "The Liberty," which was christened by Mrs. E. H. Gary, wife of the steel magnate. Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley have strong, effective roles. "The Road to France" is a big "special" in every sense of the word, and it is released on the regular World program.

Third in the month's releases comes "Just Sylvia," starring Barbara Castleton and Johnny Hines. Travers Vale directed it. Prominent in the cast are Eloise Clement, Tony Merlo and Jack Drumier. "Just Sylvia" is released on October 21.

The month's final release comes on October 28, and it is "The Grouch," starring Montagu Love. "The Grouch" is remarkable for the beauty of the scenes filmed in the bayous of South Carolina, for the strength of the story and the power of Mr. Love's acting. Forest Halsey wrote the story. Oscar Apfel directed the picture. Prominent in the cast are Dorothy Green and Margaret Linden.

Work Resumed at Keeney Studio.

After a brief lull of activities during the late summer and early fall work has been resumed by the Frank A. Keeney forces at the studios recently purchased by Mr. Keeney at 308-12 E. Forty-eighth street. The first picture is entitled "Her Family's Honor," and will feature Catherine Calvert, who has been starred in all the Keeney pictures thus far. "Her Family's Honor" is by E. Lloyd Sheldon, who has contributed many successes to the screen, as well as to the stage and the pages of the magazines.

Miss Calvert will be supported by an exceptionally strong cast. The story was especially written for her, and gives her a role which admirably fits her winsome personality. Her popularity as a screen artist has been amply demonstrated in the great success of the two Keeney pictures thus far released, "A Romance of the Underworld" and "Out of the Night." The third picture, "Marriage," is to be released shortly. It is expected the date will be announced within a few days.

Marie Walcamp in Five-Reeler.

Marie Walcamp, a Universal star who has figured in serials, is playing the lead in a photodrama that Colin Campbell is directing. The feature is adapted from Bret Harte's story, "In the Carquinez Woods." Lanier Bartlett prepared the screen script.

Director Campbell has taken the company to the redwood forests near Santa Cruz, Cal., and the picture will be on the identical location mentioned in the original story. Al Whitman, formerly with the Vitagraph, is playing opposite Miss Walcamp. Other members of the cast are Alfred Allen, Frederic Starr and Lilly Clark. This is Miss Walcamp's first five-reeler since she played in Bluebird's "The Flirt."

Viola Dana Does "Souse" Scene.

Viola Dana, for the first time in her theatrical career, was recently given a scene in "Oh, Annice," her new Metro picture, which she found difficult to grasp. She was called upon to do a "souse" scene. Annice, while wearing the garb of a boy, pretends to be intoxicated, in order to gain admittance to a sanitarium where the hero is being wrongfully held prisoner. The star tried again and again to play the scene, but the effect was not realistic.

Director John Collins could think of but one way out—to have someone with worldly experience train her. A kind-hearted actor, whose name is withheld for obvious reasons, volunteered to do the teaching. Up and down the studio floor he staggered reminiscently, Miss Dana following in his footsteps, much in the manner of Leon Errol giving a dancing lesson in the Follies. She almost gave up hope of ever getting the true "I won't go home until morning" look, and was heard to regret that she had no experience of her own to draw upon. However, it was not long before she had the art down perfectly, and those viewing "Oh, Annice!" on the scene will be able to testify not only that Miss Dana is an apt student, but also that she had an excellent teacher.

Vivian Martin in "Her Country First."

Exhibitors who book "Her Country First," the Paramount picture starring Vivian Martin, which is released September 22, are assured of a timely, patriotic picture, which has a mixture of comedy and dramatic thrills, and which is one of the popular little star's best vehicles, according to the producers' announcement. It was written by Mary Roberts Rinehart, and the name of that famous authoress is proof of a story of unusual excellence and drawing power.

The picture concerns the adventures of Dorothy Grant, a pretty and winsome heroine, who is determined to do something for her country. Vivian Martin is said to be at her best as the determined little Dorothy Grant, and she receives excellent support from John Cossar, J. Parks-Jones, Florence Oberle, L. W. Steers, Louis Willoughby, James Farley, Lillian Leighton and Jack McDonald. Director James Young has done himself proud, according to reports, in his excellent blending of the comedy and dramatic elements. Frank E. Garbutt's photographic effects are well above the average, it is said, and establish the pictorial excellence of the picture from the beginning. Edith Kennedy wrote the scenario from Mrs. Rinehart's story.

"Battle Cry of Liberty" After "The Common Cause"

ALTHOUGH J. Stuart Blackton has not yet set the release date for "The Common Cause," the superfeature he is now completing under the auspices of the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission for Vitagraph distribution, he is, nevertheless, not halting in his plan to work steadily on special productions to be offered the exhibitor as up-to-the-minute attractions of propaganda as well as entertainment value.

In line with this plan, therefore, he has just announced that after "The Common Cause" is launched he will immediately begin work on "The Battle Cry of Liberty," the story of which is from the collaborated pens of Charles T. Dazey and Commodore Blackton himself. "The Battle Cry of Liberty" is destined to be the successor of "The Battle Cry of Peace," which will be remembered as the forerunner of war specials of propaganda nature produced by Commodore Blackton four or five years ago for and distributed by the Vitagraph Company, of which he was one of the founders.

William Farnum Scores in "Riders of the Purple Sage"

WILLIAM FARNUM has scored the greatest success of his career in the dramatization of Zane Grey's novel, "Riders of the Purple Sage," according to an announcement made this week by the producer.

First run houses everywhere report a tremendous business, says the statement, and the William Fox policy of utilizing only novels and plays that have achieved definite success as works of literature or from a financial standpoint is assured continuation throughout the 1918-1919 season.

Emphasis is laid on the assertion that improvement in motion pictures from this time forward must come through better and bigger stories. With the growth of the motion picture's popularity among all classes there has also developed a finer discrimination on the part of patrons until today the motion picture lover demands something better than the film fare given him only comparatively recently.

It is in recognition of this demand for big stories that William Fox has shaped his production policy. "Riders of the Purple Sage" is only one of many big books and stage plays which he has bought for production this season, and its success is taken as complete justification of his stand.

The run of "Riders of the Purple Sage" at Los Angeles may be taken as an example. The engagement in that city was at the Kinema Theatre, and because of the experience of this theatre with male stars since its opening nine months ago the success of "Riders of the Purple Sage" is especially gratifying. The manager of the Kinema says that he has played numerous male stars since he opened his theatre, but all of them had proved failures. William Farnum in "Riders of the Purple Sage," however, opened on a Sunday to a record crowd. Moreover, the crowds continued throughout the whole week, capacity houses being the rule at every performance. The manager reports that he did the biggest business he has ever done with "Riders of the Purple Sage."

This is only one instance of many that have been brought to the attention of the Fox Film Corporation.

Louise Glaum in "Goddess of Lost Lake"

LOUISE GLAUM, who has done nothing but heavy dramatic roles, will surprise her admirers when they see her light comedy acting in "The Goddess of Lost Lake," her next picture, a Robert Brunton production to be distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. In the role of a quarter-breed Indian girl, Miss Glaum graduates from college with high honors and takes her refinements of dress and manner back to her tribe. W. Lawson Butts, as the hero, passes through the country, and the girl mischievously decides to pretend to be a stolid, ignorant squaw and win his love with brilliant feats of horsemanship, faithfulness and childlike love.

The amusing complications which arise in the love affair while, meantime, an exciting plot unfolds about an ancient Indian legend of gold, make of "The Goddess of Lost Lake" a story crammed with human interest, thrills and real drama—all enacted against the mighty pines and crags and canyons of the San Bernardino mountains. Wallace Worsley directed the picture, which was photographed by L. Guy Wilky.

Thrilling Scenes in "Official War News."

It is a grim, thrilling picture that is shown in the thirteenth issue of Pathe of the "Official War Review"—the rain of busting shells that fall just in front of the advancing men. Here, indeed, one sees the spirit and feels the throb and vibration of the great conflict and realizes the enormous sacrifices in flesh and blood. And yet this wonderful martial panorama is not without its sunny side, for it is shown that, even in the shadow of sudden death, men may laugh and make merry.

This, one of the most interesting and inspiring of the series thus far, will be released the week of September 23. It shows how, as the Hun lines bend back, thousands of eager soldiers, fighting for the democracy of the world, press on to join the fighting; the building of pontoon bridges, over which the armed men pass like a great stream. There are other views of no less interest and historical value in the "Official War Review," which covers all points of the conflict, and which is viewed each week by increasing thousands of patriotic Americans.

Edna Goodrich in "Treason."

"Treason," the Edna Goodrich special production, which will be released by Mutual on September 29, was written especially for her by Henry R. Durant. Together with Miss Goodrich he drafted the high spots of the story, covering the various situations and developing the plot along lines that would permit this gifted actress the widest latitude.

Mr. Durant has a great number of successful stories to his credit which have appeared in fiction form in the various successful magazines. Several of his more important offerings have been converted into motion pictures. "Treason," however, was written by him for Miss Goodrich's use.

In "Treason" Mr. Durant has injected human interest, suspense, love, patriotism and some happy ingredients which have made a well rounded out story, not only adaptable to motion pictures, but suitable to Miss Goodrich's individual style of acting.

The story revolves about a young wife whose happiness is centered in her husband and child, but feels her husband is neglecting her. When the final test comes, however, she proves herself a true wife and patriot.

Hayakawa Strong in Chicago.

E. H. Duffy, manager of Mutual's Chicago office, reports that bookings on the Hayakawa Productions have broken all Chicago records for feature productions of Mutual.

"Practically every representative house in Chicago has booked the Hayakawa pictures," said Mr. Duffy, "the majority of them booking for two and three days. I have never heard so many complimentary remarks from exhibitors as I have had on 'His Birthright' after the trade pre-view. One thing that has impressed the trade favorably is the advertising and publicity aids given in the special press-book issued on this production. I predict that the box-office returns will justify the statement that the Hayakawa Productions are the best 'buy' on the market today."

Flash Knives in "The Velvet Hand."

Authorities on wrestling will see much to make their eyes sparkle in the fight scene of "The Velvet Hand," the Bluebird scheduled for September 30. The players who enact the struggle were carefully trained for the scene, and some unusual tricks of attack and defense are revealed. The fighters are Eugene Corey, in the part of Russino Russelli, and Wedgwood Nowell as Prince Viscomte.

Russino, finding the prince in company with the woman whom Russino loves, attacks the prince with a knife. The latter skillfully wards off repeated blows of the flashing knife and swings his adversary around several times with a wrestling manoeuvre of science. Fritzi Brunette is star of the film.

Cumulative Advertising Pushes "The Romance of Tarzan"

ADVERTISING past advertising" will be one of many unusual features of the exhibitor-to-the-public publicity campaign on "The Romance of Tarzan," soon to be released by First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

Apart from the novelty appeal of the sequel to the celebrated "Tarzan of the Apes" is the insistent possibility of a direct and strong attack in the advertising and publicity for "The Romance of Tarzan" on the tremendous amount of general advertising which has been given to this phenomenal fictional character of story and screen by the sale of more than three million books of the Tarzan stories by Edgar Rice Burroughs, and its subsequent publication in six thousand newspapers, and the translations into fourteen languages.

This record-breaking amount of publicity paved the way for the success of "Tarzan of the Apes." Then the showing of the vivid picturization of his experiences as a child of the jungle, nursed at the breast of a wild mother ape, and reared in the tree-tops, piled up to tenfold its former volume the popularity of the character of Tarzan.

The cumulative effects of this world-wide publicity in books, newspapers and on the screen has created what is described by officials of First National Exhibitors' Circuit as the greatest ready-made market that has ever awaited any feature production.

Exhibitors will be urged, by representatives of the distributing company, to focus their advertising for "The Romance of Tarzan" on this popularity so that there will be no chance of a misunderstanding by patrons of the fact that the sequel story is the concluding chapters in the pictorial version of the weird life and strange experiences of the original Tarzan.

Virginia Hammond to Support Louise Huff.

The engagement of Virginia Hammond by World Pictures to support Louise Huff in "The Crook of Dreams" registers the screen acquisition of one of the best known leading women of the legitimate stage. Before going upon the stage Miss Hammond was a teacher in the public schools in Chicago. Her first appearance on the stage was when she became a member of E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe's company. She stayed with this organization for several years. When Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe separated professionally Miss Hammond was elected to the position of leading woman to Mr. Sothern. She appeared with this eminent star in "If I Were King," "The Proud Prince," "Lord Dundreary," "Hamlet" and other plays in which Mr. Sothern's name is indissolubly linked. Upon Mr. Sothern's active retirement from the stage Miss Hammond married. Last season she again made her re-entry in the profession, playing the leading role in "What's Your Husband Doing" at the 39th Street Theatre, New York. Many times in the past Miss Hammond has been approached by picture companies with a view of securing her services, without success. Her engagement with the World company was brought about through the personal friendship between her and R. B. McIntyre, the casting director of the company.

Mae Marsh in Dual Role.

The unusual opportunity to do something she had never before attempted is responsible for the delight Mae Marsh feels in her newest Goldwyn picture, "Hidden Fires," in which she plays a dual role, which not only exploits her versatility, but it is part of an uncommonly strong story.

As is usually the case, the two girls are widely different in character. One is Peggy Murray, who dispenses newspapers, magazines, cigarettes and candy from a hotel stand. The other is Louise Parks, daughter of a wealthy woman, who has been caught in the whirlpool of Bohemia and sunk to the depths. Her mother is pining away for the sight of her when her physician is struck by the resemblance to the lost girl he sees in the face of little Peggy Murray. After much persuasion, he induces Peggy to take the place of Louise in order to save the life of the mother. Much against her will, Peggy consents to the pardonable deception, and the mother accepts her as her long-lost child. It is at this point that the real drama begins.

Emmy Wehlen's Picture "Sylvia on a Spree"

WORK has been begun at Metro's Sixty-first street studio on Emmy Wehlen's forthcoming feature, "Sylvia On A Spree," an original photoplay by E. Forst, which has been adapted for the screen by June Mathis.

The opening scenes in this attractive production, which is being directed by Harry L. Franklin, are laid in the "den" of a clairvoyant, a woman of the type patronized by the ignorant and credulous. Francesca Ward has been engaged to play the clairvoyant in question, Madame Claire St. Clair. Miss Ward has had her own act in vaudeville, but the role of Madame Claire St. Clair so appealed to her that she cancelled some bookings in order to accept it.

W. L. Percival will play Jack Bradley, the part opposite Miss Wehlen. Mr. Percival recently appeared with Ethel Barrymore in Metro's production of "Our Mrs. McChesney," in the role of the traveling salesman, "Beauty" Blair. He is American born and bred, hailing originally from Philadelphia, and having spent most of his life in New York. He has played for all the leading managements of the American stage, including Klaw & Erlanger, Lew Fields, Charles Dillingham, Florenz Ziegfeld and the Shuberts.

Not all the cast of "Sylvia on a Spree" is complete as yet. However, Frank Currier has been engaged to play Prof. D'Aubrey, the old actor, and Eugene Acker will be Walter, Sylvia's brother. Mr. Currier has been in so many Metro pictures that he has almost stoped counting them. One of his latest appearances was as Prof. Munroe, the father, in "To Hell With the Kaiser" the great Screen Classics, Inc., patriotic feature.

Fred Warren will assist Mr. Franklin in directing, and Arthur Martinelli will preside at the camera. Beautiful exterior scenes will be photographed in connection with "Sylvia on a Spree," and the locations of these will be announced at an early date.

"Winning the War" Series Released by Pathe Oct. 20

The first of the "Winning the War" series showing the activities in America toward assisting in victory of democracy on the battlefields of Europe will be released by Pathe the week of October 20. It is called "The United States Boys' Working Reserve Solves the Great Farm Problem."

Divisions of Films, Committee on Public Information, some time ago arranged with Pathe to produce a series of one-reel pictures from scenarios furnished by the committee and to be known under the announced title. At that time it was believed possible to make a regular monthly release, but, owing to the many restrictions regarding the photographing of Government work, the releases cannot be fixed by schedule. They are therefore booked on a contract basis.

The second picture is well on the way, and will be released about November 17, while it is planned to release the third on December 15. They will prove to be some of the most interesting revelations of the war, for they show us just how thoroughly the peaceful part of the nation is throwing all of its energy into the war. The big note was sounded with the first picture—a note to service and to patriotic duty!

Cavalieri in a "Woman of Impulse."

Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the internationally famous beauty and star of grand opera, will make her next screen appearance in "A Woman of Impulse," which will be released on the Paramount schedule September 29. In this photoplay, adapted by Eve Unsell from the stage play by Louis K. Anspacher, which was produced with great success in 1909 at the Hudson Theatre, much of the story of Mme. Cavalieri's own career is said to have been reproduced. Moreover, it is said to afford the celebrated diva a role even more dramatic than those she essayed in her two previous Paramount successes, "The Eternal Temptress" and "Love's Conquest."

Edward Jose, who produced both of Mme. Cavalieri's two former pictures for Paramount, directed the star in this production. The cast was carefully chosen and is said to be of uniform excellence. Raymond Bloomer is leading man and the supporting players include Robert Cain, Gertrude Robinson, Ida Waterman, Leslie Austern, J. Clarence Handysides, Corinne Uzell and Mrs. Matilda Brundage.

United Theatre Equipment in St. Louis.

During the past year the United Theatre Equipment Corporation has executed plans for the handling of its constantly growing business. For the St. Louis territory the United Theatre Equipment Corporation has appointed the Church & School Motion Picture Co., 109 N. Ninth street, St. Louis, Mo., under the management of Mr. Geo. N. Dobson. A large stock of U. T. E. apparatus and specialties has been placed in St. Louis.

The stock includes a large number of Power's No. 6-A and No. 6-B Cameragraphs, for which the U. T. E. Corporation is the exclusive distributor in 26 states. The Church & School Motion Picture Co. have also taken steps to install several Hallberg motor generators, electric economizers and incandescent lamp mazda regulators for both A.C. and D.C. and Mr. Dobson reports a big demand for the Velvet Gold Fibre Screen and other U. T. E. specialties.

Exhibitors in the vicinity of St. Louis will find it to their advantage to communicate with our representative, the Church & School Motion Picture Co., because Power's loan mechanism can be had while repairs are being made on worn machines, and besides a regular service station is maintained for the purpose of taking care of the troubles, if any are experienced, or where improvements in the projection is desired.

Mr. Dobson is an expert and will put at the service of the exhibitors the entire projection engineering department of the United Theatre Equipment Corporation.

Bluebird Makes Change in Title.

The title of "Vendetta's Daughter," the Bluebird scheduled for release September 23, has been changed to "The Velvet Hand." Fritzi Brunette is the star of this film. The picture is based on a story by Edith Barnard Delano. F. McGrew Willis wrote the scenario and Douglas Gerrard was the director. The scenes are laid in Italy.

Miss Brunette is cast as Gianna Russelli, the daughter of an old violin maker.

Blackwell-Greeley Filming "Allies."

Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley, under the direction of Dell Henderson, are at work on "Allies." This photoplay was originally published in the Saturday Evening Post under the title of "The Hudge Black One-Eyed Man."

June Elvidge
In "The Appearance of Evil" (World).

Mutt and Jeff Cartoon "The Kaiser's New Dentist"

As an example of the policy now almost exclusively followed utilizing big news events as the themes of the Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoons, an announcement this week calls the attention of exhibitors to the current release, "The Kaiser's New Dentist." Besides showing Captain Bud Fisher's famous characters in an exceptionally humorous situation, this cartoon is declared to have the benefit of the great advertising accruing from the serial story published by the New York World and nearly a hundred other papers throughout the country. This serial was written by Dr. A. N. Davis, an American, who was the Kaiser's dentist for fourteen years, and who only recently returned to this country. Dr. Davis' story, recounting his personal relations with the German War Lord, created a sensation wherever it was published, and, it is understood, it will soon be issued in book form.

In "The Kaiser's New Dentist," Mutt and Jeff, like the shrewd business men and the true patriots that they are, take advantage of the fact that the Kaiser is in need of a good dentist, and, through a ruse, get to Berlin and open an office. First, they prevail upon the Crown Prince to become one of their patients, and their treatment of him is so effective that the greatest long-distance fighter in the German Army persuades his father, the All Highest, to sit in the new dentists' chair. That is what the dentists are waiting for, and shortly after Mutt gets the forceps on the Kaiser's pet molar the audience in any given theatre will be allowed to stand up, and in slow, measured tones chant that ditty: "Good-bye, Kaiser Bill!"

Metro Cameraman Has Submarine Tank.

Frank Williams, camerman for the latest Bushman and Bayne Metro picture, "Little Miss Moneybags," has patented a tank for photographic under-water sea effects which will be used in Metro productions at an early date. This device is said to make it possible to photograph undersea scenes without the blurs and shadows which formerly seemed to be a necessary evil in connection with such pictures.

Mr. Williams was chief cameraman with the Keystone Company for Mack Sennett and for "Charlie" Chaplin, and he photographed "Mickey" with Mabel Normand. He was sent abroad by the Pathe company to take scenes for their weekly news pictorials. He worked for Universal, Mutual, World, and when Bushman and Bayne began their joint screen career he ground the camera for a number of the pictures in which they appeared.

Expert Advertising Aids Save Money for Showmen

AN EXPERT on such subjects in the Universal estimated the other day that the advertising service provided by that company for its Special Attractions amounts to an annual saving of about $200,000 a year for the exhibitors. He based his calculations on the fact that every exhibitor using Special Attractions who intended to advertise the pictures adequately in the local newspapers would have to hire special talent to make the drawings and lay out the copy, etc., if the Universal did not do this for him. Universal sends out complete matrices of scientifically prepared advertising and elaborate press sheets for every Special Attraction.

An average of three high class advertisements is provided for each Universal Special Attraction. Preparing the press sheets for these subjects keeps a formidable staff busy all the time. But this staff would be a corporal's guard compared to the number of persons employed on the campaign if each exhibitor had to use his own resources.

The expert figured that more than two hundred writers would be required to make the chief exhibitors their own advertisers. Each writer would have to study the pictures for his ideas, and each would get different ideas. Then there would be a vast outlay for material. Drawings and plates costing thousands of dollars would have to be produced, only to be scrapped when the pictures finished their run in each town.

Thirteen special attractions will have been released by December 30 since July 1. Every one is declared to be what its trademark implies—a film of special attractiveness. The films represent dramatic stories of strong values. An exhibitor without special training would have a tremendous task in studying the stories and getting the vital advertising thoughts out of each.

Following is the list of current and pending releases of special attractions and the stars who are featured in them: "Hell Bent," Harry Carey; "Her Body in Bond," Mae Murray; "The Mortgaged Wife," Dorothy Phillips; "A Woman's Fool," Harry Carey; "Bread," Mary MacLaren; "Modern Love," Mae Murray; "Talk of the Town," Dorothy Phillips; "Vanity Pool," Mary MacLaren; "Three Mounted Men," Harry Carey; "Danger—Go Slow," Mae Murray; "Kiss Or Kill," Herbert Rawlinson; "Till We Meet Again," Dorothy Phillips; "The Big Little Person," Mae Murray, and "Boiling Over," Harry Carey.

Pathe Advertising for "Wolves of Kulter"

In addition to the country-wide poster campaign, announced by Pathe, for the exploitation of the patriotic serial, "Wolves of Kultur," made by the Western Photoplay Co., the serial will have the most extensive advertising helps that Pathe has ever given to a similar feature.

Pathe's Publicity Department has been busy at work for the last two months on the preparation of helps of all description. Every exhibitor in the United States will receive an attractive booklet to which he may turn for information and direction concerning every angle of the serial. It will be composed of thirty pages with a complete cover design in five colors, a reproduction of the splendid 24-sheet by Burton Rice, whose previous work for Pathe has evoked commendation from all over the country.

There have been prepared a special line of attractive ad cuts and mats, portrait cuts of many sizes of Leah Baird, the star, Sheldon Lewis, and Charles Hutchison, for use on programs and advertisements, and cuts on each of the first three episodes, so as to give the story a big initial momentum.

In addition to the regular lobby display furnished on all serials, there is to be issued a sepia, 22x28, scene photo on every episode. These scenes were selected with special care both for their pictorial and dramatic value as showing the biggest moments of each episode.

Having abundantly demonstrated the success of banners, Pathe will in a generous measure apply the scheme to "Wolves of Kultur," reproducing the 24-sheet in five colors, thus gearing up the banners with the billboard campaign. Many exhibitors have found this arrangement productive of the best results.

Cameraman Rides "Sausage" for Screen Telegram

At Omaha, where the government conducts the largest balloon school in the world, Harold P. Brown, staff cameraman of the Screen Telegram, secured the first motion pictures ever taken from an American observation balloon at this school. These pictures have been passed by the Committee of Public Information and are shown exclusively in the Screen Telegram Number 53.

These "eyes of the artillery" are perhaps only second in importance to the airplane as an observation medium. Mr. Brown has secured some exceptional views of the workings of the balloons. His efforts were not confined to the air. He obtained intimate pictures of the detailed ground work necessary to the launching of one of these "sausages," showing them ascending and descending. He also shot scenes showing their peculiar construction.

The photography of these pictures is clear and clean-cut. The city of Omaha, punctuated with its many houses, thoroughfares and big buildings, as seen from above, stands out clear and distinctive. Other balloons at their stations dot the sky, giving an idea of how these observers go about the business of detecting enemy activities.

"Treat 'Em Rough," New Tom Mix Play

THE motto of the United States Tank Corps, "Treat 'Em Rough," has been chosen as the title of the new Tom Mix picture, it is stated by the Fox Film Corporation. The picture, which is an adaptation of a novel by Charles Alden Seltzer, "The Two-Gun Man," was completed last week at Prescott, Ariz., where Mix and his company spent four weeks on a ranch. The company had to go to Prescott to find a ranch big enough for the setting of "Treat 'Em Rough," which demanded real Western life and actual cowboy acting. One of the stunts Mix has to perform was what is known among cowboys as "bulldogging the herd." To do this it was necessary to stampede a large herd of cattle.

Confident in Mix's ability to break up the stampede, the foreman of the ranch readily assented to Director Lynn Reynolds' request that the herd of cattle be stampeded. A fusilade of revolver shots among the animals soon had them started on a mad rush across the prairie. Mix, while all the cowboys of the ranch looked on admiringly, rode through the thundering herd until he got to the leader. Then, still on horseback, he worried the steer until it fell, thus breaking up the stampede. Directly in the path of the cattle were Jane Novak, leading woman in Mix's company; the camera man, and Director Reynolds.

Had Mix's horse fallen the star would have been trampled to death beneath the hoofs of the frightened cattle, and Miss Novak, Director Reynolds and the camera man would have been in great peril of death.

World Pictures Keep Hotel Help Contended.

J. J. Sweeney, manager of White Face Inn, a summer resort hotel located on Lake Placid at White Face, N. Y., and also proprietor of Highland Park Hotel at Aiken, S. C., has arranged with World Pictures to supply him with a weekly program, because he has, in a great measure, solved the help question through the use of moving pictures. Mr Sweeney has found that help around hotels want amusement as well as the guests, and if you keep them in good humor you can retain their services. "Moving pictures is the best medium," declares Mr. Sweeney. "I devote two evenings each week to pictures, and give the cooks, waiters, chambermaids and bell boys plenty to talk about, thereby throttling their wandering spirit. The ideal program consists of a five-reel feature, a two-reel comedy, and a one-reel travelogue."

Film Benefits by Changed Title.

In changing the title of "The Bargain True" to "The Lure of Luxury," Universal plays up the big idea in the Bluebird picture. The film was adapted by Fred Myton from a story by Nalbro Bartley. Elsie Jane Wilson is the director. The picture will be released October 7.

By the lure of luxury, Philip Leswing, a wealthy man, tries to wean Dale Aldis, the daughter of his dead friend, from the love of a country boy. Leswing invites Dale to New York, introduces her among grand persons and into the dazzling circles of the city's upper life. His efforts to conquer the girl with luxury and the strong emotional conflict that travels through the story proves interesting.

Shirley Mason in First Emerson.

The first John Emerson-Anita Loos production for Paramount, "Come On In," in which Shirley Mason and Ernest Truex will make their first appearance as co-stars in Paramount pictures, has been scheduled for release September 22. The play, which was directed by John Emerson, was written especially for the diminutive stars by Mr. Emerson and Miss Loos and is said to be perfectly suited to their distinctive talents.

Doris Kenyon,
Heading her own company, De Luxe Pictures, Inc., in her latest successes, "The Street of Seven Stars," "The Inn of the Blue Moon," and "Wild Honey."

Doris Kenyon Starts Making "Wild Honey"

DORIS KENYON'S next picture, "Wild Honey," by Louis Joseph Vance and Vingie E. Roe, will be made at the Biograph studio. Following the arrangement made by Theodore C. Deitrich, president of De Luxe Pictures, Inc., with William L. Sherry for eight pictures a year beginning September 1, work will be started this week.

It is probable that all of the Doris Kenyon pictures during the year will be made at the Biograph studio, either in New York or California. Mr Deitrich has made arrangements with Thomas A. Persons for studio space at the Biograph. If the coal shortage prevents continuation of the work in New York Miss Kenyon and her company will immediately leave for the Biograph studio in California.

The exteriors for "Wild Honey" will be made in the Adirondacks and on Staten Island. A town, consisting of two streets, is now being built at the latter place and will be used as the principal set for the production. As soon as these scenes are taken, the entire company will be sent to the Adirondacks, where the mountain scenes will be filmed.

"Wild Honey" will be by far the most pretentious production yet made by De Luxe Pictures, Inc.

A Younger Marsh on the Screen.

Screen fans will be interested in knowing that Mildred Marsh, the baby sister of Mae and Marguerite Marsh, will be seen with Gail Kane in "The Daredevil," the second feature of the present series Miss Kane is making for the Mutual Film Corporation. Little Miss Marsh is sixteen years old, and has been spending her vacation away from convent in New York with her sisters and mother. She will leave in September for school in San Francisco, and the motion picture studios will not know her again until her next vacation.

Mildred Marsh hopes to become an all-the-time screen actress when she finishes school.

Farrar Has Dramatic Role in "Hell Cat."

Geraldine Farrar's second Goldwyn picture, "The Hell Cat," announced for release November 11, is not alone a powerful story. It provides the star with a colorful, highly dramatic role as well—a character, Geraldine Farrar declares, which is more like her famous "Carmen" of the opera than any she has ever had.

William Russell Clever in "Hobbs in a Hurry"

WILLIAM RUSSELL'S latest picture, "Hobbs in a Hurry," is an avalanche of pep, ingenuity and applied humor and is being booked by representatives of the American Film Company, Inc., with great success throughout the thirty-odd selling territories of the corporation. The picture is the first one of a series of eight made by William Russell Productions and handled by the American and through Pathe Exchanges.

Not only because it is a side-splitting story, but because it bristles with surprising athletics and much wholesome comedy, the picture is exceptionally well received. Unlike some of the productions abounding in "stunts", this picture does not become tiresome and the onlooker does not become over-fed with explosive and unjustified exhibitions of somebody's being a "helluva feller." On the other hand Russell's story justified the clever work of the star of ever growing popularity because the many hair raising situations are the consequence of the story and the story was not written around the tricks.

Hobbs is always in a hurry and sweeps the rest of the action and cast with him into a maelstrom of laughter. It is a veritable cataract of surprises. Russell's work on top of a fast train and on horseback should make the stunt specialists, the world famous riders, sit up and take notice.

After the picture "Hobbs in a Hurry" has gone the rounds it will be evident that Russell's versatility is far greater than any of his former subjects would indicate.

Film Comedian Victim of Thugs.

Charles Inslee, an L-Ko comedian, is recovering from injuries received recently when he was beaten and robbed by automobile bandits. Inslee was accosted on a lonely road near the L-Ko studio by a party in a passing automobile.

They offered to take him back to Los Angeles when Inslee entered the machine and was taken to a deserted part of Huntington Park and suddenly attacked by the two men and the woman who were in the machine. He was stripped of his valuables and left unconscious on the road.

Goldwyn Signs Cella and Tate Theatres.

Goldwyn Pictures will have their first run in St. Louis at the big Columbia Theatre, chief of the Cella and Tate chain of houses and subsequent runs in the Shenandoah, the Kings, and the smaller theatres of this great organization. Negotiations for the signing of the biggest picture combination in St. Louis were conducted between Frank N. Tate and Charles Cella and representatives of Goldwyn and their signing for the complete annual output of Goldwyn for all of their houses is a signal indorsement of the position that Goldwyn has attained in the industry.

Changes Titles and Release Dates.

Universal has announced this week changes in the title and release dates of several Bluebirds and special attractions. "The Society Sensation," formerly called "The Borrowed Duchess," will be released September 23. "The Velvet Hand," formerly entitled "Vendetta's Daughter," will be released September 30. "The Lure of Luxury" is the new title for the picture formerly called "The Bargain True." It will be released October 7.

Hart in "The Border Wireless."

William S. Hart's next Artcraft appearance will be in "The Border Wireless," which is announced for release October 6. This picture is an adaptation of a story by Howard E. Morton, and the task of fitting the picturesque Ince star and his Western rig into a strictly modern tale, one which required no little ingenuity, was entrusted to C. Gardner Sullivan.

Rogers a Big Surprise in "Laughing Bill Hyde"

APPEARING nightly before several thousand persons, being seen in the last three years by several million, sought by the picture magnates without being persuaded to enter the motion picture field, a personality who in a fortnight will prove to be one of the big surprises of the cinema in years, makes his screen debut.

The personality is Will Rogers, and his first picture is the Rex Beach Goldwyn success, "Laughing Bill Hyde," one of Mr. Beach's popular stories that demanded and required the presence of a definite and unusual personality. The famous wit and lariat thrower from the Texas Panhandle is a retiring and modest genius, much given to under-rating himself. "I don't believe I'd amount to much in the movies," Rogers would say in the same slow drawl that thousands have chuckled over in the theatre.

It can be announced with certainty that Will Rogers was all wrong about himself. He is an instantaneous success on the screen; a human, lovable fellow with an abashed smile; with a deep well of pathos.

"Just say, he is the most human man I have ever seen on the screen," says Rex Beach by way of interjection and assurance, and a Rex Beach appraisal ought to be good enough for anybody.

"Laughing Bill Hyde" is a gripping, human drama of redemption by a master story-teller; a story that has just been waiting for the ready-made personality to put in an appearance.

"From the crown of his head to the soles of his feet Will Rogers is 'Laughing Bill Hyde,'" says Mr. Beach. "When I look at him off screen without make-up I feel as if my character had stepped right out from between the covers of the book."

Metro Will Screen Novel by Anne Warner

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION has acquired for the use of Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne the screen rights to "The Gay and Festive Claverhouse," one of the most brilliant stories of the late Anne Warner. Little, Brown & Co. published this fascinating story, which fits the well known co-stars as if it had been originally written for them. June Mathis and Katharine Kavanaugh are adapting the Warner story into a five-act motion picture.

Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne will begin work on this as soon as they complete Elaine Sterne's story, "Little Miss Moneybags." Charles J. Brabin, who has directed "Little Miss Moneybags," will also have "The Gay and Festive Claverhouse" in charge. J. Bernard Durning will be his assistant and Frank Williams will be cameraman.

Francis X. Bushman will play the part of the Hon. Ernest Claverhouse. The scenes are laid in England and on the "Continent," and range from quiet rural communities to the most frivolous gaming centers of the idle rich. It will be given an elaborate production. The cast to support the co-stars in this attractive offering will be announced soon.

James Assisting Lockwood's Directors.

Eddie James is now assisting both Edwin Carewe and Henry Otto, the alternate directors of Metro features starring Harold Lockwood. He acted as right-hand man to Mr. Carewe in the making of "Pals First," soon to be released by Metro as a Screen Classics, Inc., and is now aiding Mr. Otto, who is putting on "The Great Romance," a romantic drama written especially for the star by Finis Fox.

James has been identified as an assistant director with Mme. Petrova's company for years, and previously was associated with World, Selig and Universal.

Chinese Scenes in Talmadge Picture Completed

NORMA TALMADGE last week completed the Chinese scenes which make up the first part of the Chinese feature, "A Tale of the Forbidden City." She is now working on the second half of the picture with scenes laid in the Philippines. Reed Hamilton has been engaged to play the role of Lieut. Philip Halbert in this portion of the big feature. Most of the work will be done in Miss Talmadge's studio at 318 East 48th street, but one or two location "shots" will be required for the action showing American soldiers suppressing a rebellion of the natives.

The Chinese settings designed by Willard M. Rineck, Miss Talmadge's technical director, are declared to be especially fine and will reproduce accurately such scenes as the Emperor's palace in Pekin and a wealthy Mandarin's home. Sidney A. Franklin is directing the picture and Edward Wynard and H. Lyman Broening are photographing it. The story is by George Scarborough and scenario by Mary Murillo. "A Tale of the Forbidden City" will be released about November 1.

Laemmle Suggests Idea to Boost Fourth Loan

AN ADDRESS written by Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal, entitled "Keep the Home Fires Burning," which he intended to distribute only to Universal exchanges and exhibitors, has made a hit. The Liberty Loan officials of the New York district liked the speech and the suggestions accompanying it so well that they intend now to ask other employers to deliver similar statements to their workers.

The film manufacturer's written statement calls upon employers to appear before their employes when the drive opens and make a personal appeal for their support to the Loan to the last limit of their resources. Mr. Laemmle outlines the things the employer should say to his men. He tells what it means to put men on the other side and to "keep the home fires burning." He concludes with the following counsel to the employers:

"After you've made your little speech about fires, fire any employe who doesn't prove his pure Americanism till it hurts and pinches."

Steps are being taken to have professional speakers visit the factories and other establishments where large numbers of workers are employed and deliver addresses on the day the drive starts, along the line suggested by Mr. Laemmle. It is expected regular Liberty Loan speakers will help to carry out the suggestion.

"Hobbs in a Hurry" Is Fast.

William Russell is seen in "some picture" in "Hobbs in a Hurry,' 'the first of a new series of eight productions by the William Russell productions and presented by the American Film Company, Inc. A human whirlwind, transacting business and making love all at the same speed, Hobbs, Jr., son of a conservative and aristocratic father, does all but overturn the universe. The story is from a magazine narrative of George Lee McCandless, and the cast comprises Winifred Westover, as the much wanted ingenue; Carl Stockdale, as the Scotch and therefore canny heavy, and Hayward Mack, who does an unusual double role, but not the timeworn dual characterization of twin brothers.

Mary Miles Minter Plays the Woman.

A unique picture is the coming Mary Miles Minter subject, "Rosemary Climbs the Heights." It is the second of a series of eight Minter productions by the American Film Company, and really the first story in which Miss Minter goes above the "flapper" age.

As Rosemary, she is suddenly transplanted from an ancient and sleepy village into the sophisticated life of metropolitan artists. Though unspoiled, she became entangled in the meshes of intrigue and is the target for the revenge of a woman scorned. The village girl, having a remarkable talent for doll carving, becomes famous, and is on the verge of disaster when things take a sudden turn and everything ends happily. The story is by Bernard McConville, and the picture is directed by Lloyd Ingraham. The unrivaled scenery of Ben Lomond was used for most of the exteriors.

Louise Huff, having completed "The Heart of Gold," is now working on "The Crook of Dreams." Oscar Apfel is Miss Huff's new director. This makes the fourth picture contributed by Miss Huff to World Pictures releases.

United States Senate in "The Burden of Proof"

The United States Senate in action serves as a prominent detail for a photographic drama occurring in Marion Davies' forthcoming Select picture, "The Burden of Proof," which has just been released. This remarkable scene was made during a session of the Senate when an important piece of legislation was being voted upon. It was obtained through the effort and influence of Julius Steger, Miss Davies' director, and is only one of the astonishing scenes of official Washington that appear in this picture.

Although there have been shown at various times in news reels and other special features scenes of official Washington at work, including a picture of the President reading his war message to Congress, this is believed to be the first time in the history of the country that the members of the Senate have allowed themselves to be photographed in action to provide "copy" for a photoplay.

Vangie Valentine Coming in Binney Productions

VANGIE VALENTINE is now being presented by Harold J. Binney in a series of feature pictures which will be released through the William L. Sherry Service. The vehicles in which Miss Valentine will be seen will be prepared from established successes and original writings by George Edwardes Hall, who will be remembered from his long association with Herbert Brenon and who has had film experience in the leading European studios as well as in those of this country.

No expense will be spared to make these offerings unsurpassed by any. Particular attention will be paid to the sets, and the latest styles of celebrated interior decorators will be used in an effort to make the Binney productions distinctive. Players of achievement will be seen in even the minor parts.

All of the Binney productions will be released through the Sherry Service.

"Triumph of Transportation" by Pathe.

"Triumph of Transportation," to be released by Pathe the week of October 6, is a picture inspired by the prodigies being accomplished in the conduct of the great world war, and, though it deals with animal power and with mechanism, still, in relation to big things accomplished, it has the charm of real romance—the romance of gigantic achievement. With America at war, the transportation problem, both at home and in Europe, has become more and more vital.

How a gigantic industry, in which America leads the world, is being operated, principally for the benefit of Uncle Sam, is shown in minute and engrossing detail. Motor trucks are turned out literally by the thousands and have come to play an important role in our war, especially to free railroads for troop movements. Those who see this picture will understand more clearly the regulations made necessary by the demands of war.

Universalites at Work and Play.

Having completed "The Brass Bullet," an eighteen-episode serial directed by Ben Wilson, Juanita Hansen is to take a months vacation, earned through continuous day and night work and scores of hazardous feats she was required to perform.

Harry Carey, Universal's ace of the saddle, is vacationing at his log ranch at Newhall, California, after finishing "Rolling Over," under the direction of Jack Ford. In the meantime the Universal scenario department is casting about for another vehicle for their outdoor star.

Dorothy Phillips and her company are now at Bear Valley for the Canadian scenes of "Till We Meet Again," Universal's war drama, which is being made under the direction of Allen Holubar. This spectacular production will be completed within a month. William Stowell is again Miss Phillips' leading man.

Timely Events Shown in "U" Animated Weekly

The reminder of that Italian victory is going to poke its nose into every port of the seven seas. One of the cameras from the Animated Weekly department of the Universal took pictures of the reminder the other day when the victory message carrier slid into the water at Kearny, N. J. The scene was the launching of the freight ship Piave. This vessel will be, as its name implies, a symbol of what the Italians did to the Austrians in the fight for humanity.

The launching of the Piave is only one of the eleven remarkable news subjects covered in the latest Animated Weekly. The scenes include: Y. M. C. A. men meet big guns at Washington; Lads in training practice the art of smashing the Hun; Cubs and Red Sox clash in world's series; Chicken and Egg Day at Petaluma, California; Argentine cadets guests at Annapolis; How the horse takes the place of gasoline and New York automobiles on Sunday; American power boat wins at Detroit; How nation honored memory of Lafayette; The Army Medical Department reviewed before departure for "over there."

Mary Pickford's Next Deliciously Humorous.

For genuinely delicious humor and timely interest, it is said that Mary Pickford's latest Artcraft picture, "Johanna Enlists," from a story by Rupert Hughes, scenarioized by Frances Marion, is the most pleasing offering of the year and in many respects one of the most novel vehicles for the charming star. September 29 is the release date.

A point of unusual interest is that the scenes showing the American troops encamped were supplied by the 143d Regiment of Field Artillery, of which Miss Pickford is Honorary Colonel. The troops encamped at Universal Ranch where the shots were made, so of course, they will be absolutely realistic, even to a court-martial carried out in real style. Miss Pickford is said to have been supplied with a role that, while entirely different from anything she has previously done, is certain to bring her many new admirers as well as satisfy to the last degree all those who have declared her "America's Sweetheart."

Wm. D Taylor directed the production, assisted by Frank Richardson. Charles Rosher photographed the picture and the settings are declared to be most excellently arranged. A cast of real excellence has been supplied, with Douglas MacLean as leading man.

Victoria Theatre's Departure.

Manager John J. Farren, of the Victoria Theatre, Rochester, has announced a departure in the policy of his theatre. Beginning with this month the Victoria will show Fox pictures, the first being Peggy Hyland in her initial Excel Picture release, "Bonnie Annie Laurie."

In connection with the showing of "Bonnie Annie Laurie," Mr. Farren launched a special advertising and publicity campaign. The day before the showing he ran a two-column, eight-inch advertisement which was a combination of an advertisement supplied by the Fox Film Corporation and an idea of his own. The name of the theatre, as if it were on an electric sign, was at the top, and from two chains lettered "Vaudeville" and "Photoplays" was suspended a large cut with the billing and containing the pictures of Peggy Hyland in nurse's costume and a wounded soldier. The Victoria advertisement dominated the page it was published on in every paper.

The Whole Town Joins In Making Hokum Film

EDDIE LYONS and Lee Moran could be expelled from the Motion Picture Makers' Secret Society for the things they do in "Frenzied Film," the latest Lyons-Moran Star Comedy. This picture throws all the secrets of the film game to the four winds.

The story is that of how a small town went into the film business. Here is the yarn: Everybody in the town of Hokum is a stockholder in the Hokum Motion Picture Company. Joshua Spinach, editor of the Hokum Sentinel, is the author of the scenario; Si Perkins, justice of the peace, postmaster, feed store proprietor, is the director; Jud Weatherby, town photographer, is the crank grinder; Hi Hawkins, constable, is the assistant director, props and a few other things; Nancy Squibs, the deacon's daughter, is heroine of the drammer.

Dance Dedicates New Vitagraph Stage

The new Vitagraph stage at the Hollywood studio was formerly dedicated with the holding of a dance on the night of September 7. Tickets were one dollar a couple, and the proceeds were given to the Motion Picture War Service Association for the benefit of the Base Hospital which this association aims to build in Los Angeles. Marguerite Whistler, head of the property and wardrobe department of the Vitagraph plant, had the affair in charge and was assisted by other members of the Vitagraph company.

Kathleen Clifford in Tense Drama of Divorce

The injustice to children when parents follow their own selfish desires in seeking a divorce is the subject of "The Law That Divides," a Plaza picture starring Kathleen Clifford and distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. Prominent in the supporting cast are Kenneth Harlan, Stanley Pembroke, Patrick Calhoun, Gordon Sackville, Ruth Lackaye, Corenne Grant and Mabel Hyde.

Film Star Selling Hats.

Madge Evans, the famous World Pictures star, who has just completed "The Latch String" under the direction of Tefft Johnson, has proved that she is not alone a great motion picture actress, but also a clever and enterprising business woman.

Madge is cashing in on her tremendous popularity by embarking into the hat-selling business, and she is introducing the hats by making personal appearances at the leading department stores in the bigger cities. Recently she personally introduced the hats to admiring throngs in a big New York department store—the throngs nearly swamping the store. Before this she appeared in Brooklyn, and will also go to Philadelphia, Boston, Cleveland, Buffalo and other points.

Many Simplex Installations.

The Hollis-Smith Company, 1201 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., exclusive distributors for the Simplex projector in the states of West Virginia and Western Pennsylvania, has reported to the Simplex Company forty-four sales of Simplex projectors made within the last four weeks.

The installations included machines placed in the Grand Amusement Co., Johnstown, Pa.; Pastime Theatre, Lewiston, Pa.; Olympic Theatre, Latrobe, Pa.; Bellevue Theatre, Bellevue, Pa.; Temple Theatre, of the Harry Davis Enterprises, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Sagamore Theatre, Sagamore, Pa.; Avelon Theatre, Avelon, Pa., and the Lowrie Theatre, Troy Hill, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Many Interesting Subjects in Gaumont News Reels

IN honor of the Italian victory over the Austrians, one of the largest of the recently launched American ships has been named the "Piave," and in No. 25 of the Gaumont News, released September 10, the christening of this vessel by Countess di Cellere in the presence of thousands of other enthusiastic Italian-Americans is pictured.

This number of the News is so full of important happenings that it is not possible to enumerate all of them in this brief article. War Service Day at the Harvard Stadium; the celebration in the nation's capital of Lafayette Day and the victory of the Marne; the final good-byes and cheering messages which the Cabinet and prominent officials gave Y. M. C. A. officials leaving for overseas; Uncle Sam's call for women to be trained for wireless work, and the graduation of the first class of civilian sailors for our new merchant marine are some of the subjects covered. There are two "food" subjects: the celebration of National Egg Day, and the surprising way in which it is possible to grow a years' supply of potatoes in a 6-ft. frame full of rich earth. This last subject, alone, should prove of international interest.

Gaumont Graphic No. 25 is released September 13, and its principal subject shows what our boys are doing in France. We see the immense commissary buildings which are being constructed, and the enormous supplies of all kinds which are being stored for the needs of our overseas army. In one pile there are $700,000 worth of automobile tires, and this is only five per cent. of the number on the way.

Among the other subjects in this number of the Graphic is shown the final review by the Secretary of the Navy of 4,000 members of General Butler's "Fighting Marines," who are now ready for the fray; Uncle Sam's new "chow gun," which can fire 1,500 square meals every two hours; millions of pennies collected to provide milk for war babies, etc.

Louis Wiener Joins the Manx-Man Company

SALES DIRECTOR J. L. KEMPNER, of the Manx-Man Company, announces the acquisition of Louis Wiener, formerly of World Film Corporation, for the force of "Manx-Man" special representatives operating from the Goldwyn exchanges in co-operation with the Goldwyn branch managers.

Mr. Wiener entered the motion picture field with the Kinemacolor Company, where he was also associated with Mr. Kempner. He will explain the special publicity campaign and merchandising possibilities of "Manx-Man" in the New England territory.

The New York Goldwyn office reported ten "Manx-Man" bookings for the week commencing September 9. Up state the feature opens shortly at the Strand, Buffalo, with eight bookings at local houses. The film showed at the Washington, Detroit, last week, and is now playing "follow" dates at Grand Rapids, Lansing and Bay City.

Special Representative Leon Schlessinger, in a four-day flying trip through Iowa, visited Dubuque, Mt. Vernon, Clinton, Cedar Rapids, Lyons and Mechanicsburg, and booked "The Manx-Man" to exhibitors in all of them.

Julia Arthur Is Featured in Edith Cavell Picture

AN important acquisition to the screen is the announcement of the engagement of Julia Arthur to play the leading role in Anthony Paul Kelly's screen production, "The Woman the Germans Shot." Owing to previous contracts, Messrs. Plunkett and Carroll, who are handling this feature, were unable to announce earlier the engagement of this prominent American actress for the role of the martyr nurse. Miss Arthur has been working for weeks under the direction of John G. Adolfi.

The American public has a real affection for Julia Arthur, and a profound respect for her magnificent talent. Her most recent successes include "The Eternal Magdalene," "Seremonda" and "The Flame of Liberty." Miss Arthur is supported by a strong screen cast, and Director Adolfi is said to be making this story of the death of the British Red Cross nurse, who, because she followed the instinct of a god-fearing human woman and dared to love her country, was deliberately murdered by a conscienceless military system—one of the real big propaganda messages the screen has offered.

Arrow Makes Many Sales

THE Arrow Film Corporation continues to be very active in the sale of territorial rights on feature productions, and announces that the following sales on the pictures they are marketing have recently been consummated: "The Hun Within Our Gates," to the Hun Within Our Gates Film Exchange, for New York City and northern New Jersey; "Her Aviator," to R. D. Marsdon Attractions, for New England States, and to Day Film Corporation for western Pennsylvania and West Virginia; "Accidental Honeymoon" and "Struggle Everlasting," to Exhibitors' Film Exchange for Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia, Virginia and North Carolina; "Finger of Justice," to Alfred Gilligham, for Michigan, and to Frank Magnam, for New Jersey; "Perfect Model," to Harry Samwick, for New York City and northern New Jersey; "Sunset Princess," to Day Film Corporation, for western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, and "Hand of Vengeance," to Arrow Film Exchange, for eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey.

Masterpiece Films To Continue in Ohio

MASTERPIECE FILM ATTRACTIONS will continue to make a strong bid for business in the Cleveland and Cincinnati territory, according to Sol L. Lesser, president, who made the announcement recently in reference to the enlisting of his partner, Leon D. Netter, in the service.

Mr. Lesser states that he has no intention of withdrawing from this field, in which he is definitely and permanently established, and that the high standards in quality and service of the past will be carefully maintained and improved upon, where possible.

George Jacobs is manager of Lesser's Ohio branches. Mr. Netter's interest is still intact though he is now in the service of Uncle Sam.

Sol Lesser's invasion of territory East of the Rocky Mountains has met with great success. In his twenty-five companies, touring Western and Middle Western states with D. W. Griffith's "Hearts of the World," he is establishing the nucleus of a distributing service that may eventually reach from coast to coast.

In New York Lesser maintains headquarters at 418 Longacre Building, with M. S. Rosenfield in charge. Other offices are: Chicago, 1205 City Hall Square, George Davis, manager; San Francisco, 191 Golden Gate avenue (main offices); Los Angeles, 514 West Eighth street.

Many Sales Announced for "The Master Crook"

HARRY RAVER announces the disposal of considerable territory for his newest production, "The Master Crook," a mystery play in which Edmund Breese enacts the title role, with Alma Hanlon playing the principal female lead. "The Master Crook" was written by Edmund Breese, who portrays eight different characters in the story. Burton King directed the production. The picture is in five reels. Among the exchanges that have recently closed contracts for the purchase of territory are The First National Exchange of Pittsburgh, Yale Photoplay Company of Kansas City, Celebrated Players Exchange, Chicago, Standard Film Exchange of Cleveland, Cincinnati and Detroit, Modern Feature Photoplay Company of New York, Boston Photoplay Company of Boston, and the Independent Theatre Supply Co. of Montreal.

Harry Raver is now arranging for the disposal of the remaining territory.

Screencraft Now Making Plans for Distribution

MESSRS. FLECKLES AND WEINBERG, of Screencraft Pictures decided that they would give Director Frank Reicher a free hand in filming the screen version of Edith Barnard Delano's Harper's Magazine story "Flaming Ramparts." The director was not interferred with in any way and it is said that it is one of the best photodramas that this well known director has made.

A market has already been established. For some time Mr. Fleckles has been busy perfecting exchange arrangements for, and Screencraft's twelve annual releases. A complete list of the exchanges through which bookings can be made will be announced within a very few days. Every territory has been covered and the distribution will be complete so that exhibitors will have the opportunity of showing these "features of distinction."

Throughout the making of the initial picture great care was taken to have it as nearly perfect as possible and it is announced that the same method will be followed in all other films made by Screencraft. The picturization of Miss Delano's Magazine story is said to give the makers every right to the claim that they are manufacturing film dramas of more than ordinary merit.

The first offering of Screencraft Pictures, Inc., will present Mary Boland and Lucy Cotton in an absorbing drama of every day life. The magazine story has been prepared for the screen by Eve Unsell who is credited with a number of successful pictures.

Sales of the Week

ARROW FILM CORPORATION announces the sale of considerable territory on "Huns Within Our Gates," "Her Aviator," Accidental Honeymoon," "Struggle Everlasting," "Finger of Justice," "Perfect Model," "The Sunset Princess," and "The Hand of Vengeance" in an article in another column of this issue.

Announcement of sale of territory on "The Master Crook" is made by Harry Raver in another article in this department.

Pioneer Film Corporation announces the sale of the following rights on "The Still Alarm": To First National Exhibitors Circuit, Denver for Wyoming, Utah and New Mexico. To Specialty Film Company for Oklahoma Texas, Arkansas and New Mexico, and to First National Exchange Seattle for Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana.

• • •

The Bee Hive Exchange, Chicago, will handle the Ford Educational Weekly in northern Illinois, southern Wisconsin, northern Indiana and eastern Iowa for the Griever Distributing Company.

Julia Dean Featured in "Ruling Passions"

THE Schomer Photoplay Producing Co., Inc. is about to offer on the state rights market 'Ruling Passions," the six-act photodrama written and directed by Abraham S. Schomer, author of "To-Day," "The Yellow Passport," "The Inner Man," etc., with Julia Dean in the role of Eveline Roland, one of its star parts.

Born in Minneapolis, Miss Dean felt a call for a histrionic career while pursuing her studies in the private schools of Salt Lake City, to which place she had removed with her parents. She attracted the attention of the late Joseph Jefferson and became a member of his company, and is said to have been the youngest artist, other than the children who played with him, who ever appeared in his company.

Miss Dean has had many important engagements in vaudeville and on the legitimate stage. She supported Nat Goodwin in the "Altar of Friendship," appeared with Kyrle Bellew and Eleanor Robson, was the feature player of "The Little Grey Lady," added greatly to her fame in "Paid in Full," and created the role of Virginia Blaine in "Bought and Paid For."

She is a member of the Daughters of the Revolution and has charge of many of the dramatic entertainments of that organization.

Mr. Schomer selected Miss Dean for the part of Eveline Roland because of his belief that she possessed to the full the wide sympathy and high talent necessary for the part that bears many of the burdens of 'Ruling Passions."

W. H. Offers a New Series

W. H. Productions Company announce that they will in the near future release a new series of Keystone one-reel comedies, featuring Mabel Normand and Ford Sterling. Also a series of Kay-Bee two reel Western dramas.

Due to the success of its former re-issues, W. H. Production Company expects that this latest series of subjects will also meet with the approval of the State Right buyers, exhibitors and the public.

Novel Press Book for "Hun Within Our Gates"

THE Arrow Film Corporation, releasing the six-part feature, "The Hun Within Our Gates," in which Derwent Hall Caine, son of the well known author, Hall Caine, and Mademoiselle Vaikyrien are starred, are issuing a novel press book in connection with this production. The pages, instead of being the size of an ordinary letterhead or larger, only measure three and a quarter inches in width by six and a half inches in length, about the size of a herald folded.

Notwithstanding the difference in size, this campaign book is said to contain approximately the same amount of material as the ordinary press book. Each page is devoted to a sample "ad" or cut and is printed only on one side. The size permits of the book being carried conveniently in a pocket or mailed in a small envelope.

The twenty-four sheet stand for this picture is also out of the ordinary, as the main picture, printed in the centre, covers twelve sheets, with other characters on the other two six sheets, so that if desired the twelve sheet may be used alone.

William Duncan Appears in New Vitagraph Serial

Director-Star William Duncan is missing again from the Vitagraph studios in Hollywood, but no one is alarmed. W. S. Smith, studio manager, says that he doesn't know where Duncan is, but wherever he is, he's working like a "bear-cat." Duncan has started work on a new fifteen episode serial, "The Man of Might," in which he will be supported by an all-star cast, including Edith Johnson and Joe Ryan.

Originality and Vim in "The Better Half"

Originality, vivacity and genuiness, unsullied by the mark of the ordinary artist, are the outstanding features of Alice Brady's forthcoming Select picture, "The Better Half," which will be released during the current month.

"The Better Half" is a story of twin sisters, Trixie and Louise Thorley. The twins are as different below the surface as they appear alike above.

Barbara Castleton's New Picture.

Barbara Castleton is being starred by World Pictures in "What Love Forgives." Perry Vekroff is in charge of the direction. Prominent in the cast are John Bowers, John Hines and Muriel Ostriche.

"Wives of Men" Announced for State Right Market

FLORENCE REED in "Wives of Men" closed at the Casino Theatre last Saturday a box office and artistic success and is now offered to state rights buyers. All territory is available, with the exception of New York and New Jersey, which is retained by the Pioneer Film Corporation. The exploitation given "Wives of Men" in the New York dailies will prove valuable to exhibitors and state rights buyers. A complete line of advertising matter and elaborate posters has been prepared, and every help will be given exhibitors and state rights buyers in their exploitations of "Wives of Men."

Nathan Hirsh, president of the Pioneer Film Corporation, announces that "Wives of Men," starring Florence Reed, has been booked by Marcus Loew for all his theatres for a total of seventy days beginning October 28. Mr. Hirsh further reports that his office has been flooded with inquiries for state rights, and that all indications point to a rapid disposal of all territories.

ASK REGULATION IN THEATRE LICENSING

Toronto Exhibitors Association Protests Plans for 2,000 Seat House at Danforth and Broadview Avenues

By W. M. Gladish, 33 Wineva Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

REPRESENTATIVES of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario, Inc., waited upon Mr. McGarry, Provincial Treasurer, at Toronto, on Wednesday, September 11, to make formal protest against the granting of moving picture theatre licenses to any more Toronto theatre enterprises unless with the knowledge and consent of the Exhibitors' Association. This move was taken because of a plan to erect a large suburban theatre at Danforth and Broadview avenues, near which intersection an important viaduct is shortly to be opened. With the opening of this bridge considerable traffic will be turned into the Danforth avenue district.

The association took the stand that the granting of a Provincial license to a new theatre in this district would be very detrimental to the interests of the three exhibitors already on the ground, the three houses directly affected being the Model, Iola and Playtorium. Officers of the association declare that the investments of the moving picture business in Toronto, when licensed and regulated as they are, should be protected by the Government by refusing to grant new theatre licenses indiscriminately. It is felt, however, that nothing can be done if new interests secure the license of an existing theatre and use it for a brand new house.

It has been announced in Toronto that the plans for the proposed new theatre call for a structure with a seating capacity close to 2,000 and there will also be accommodation for the parking of many cars. It is also intimated in official circles that the Loew interests were negotiating for a site for a new theatre directly opposite to the proposed picture house.

The proposed new theatre would be right next door to the Playtorium unless the latter is included in the area. The Playtorium was recently taken over by a new manager who secured a two-year lease on the premises. The owner of the Playtorium is one of those, however, who has been protesting against the erection of the new house. The upper floor of the Playtorium has been used by the Ontario Board of Censors for a number of years. The Board is preparing to move to downtown quarters, however, a portion of the Provincial Government's building on Richmond Street West having been reserved for censorship purposes.

A real estate man is actively engaged in making preparations for the establishment of the proposed new house, but it is generally declared that he is acting for a Toronto exchange. Incidentally, there is hardly an exhibitor in Toronto who will not admit that he has received offers for his interests and theatre valuations have taken a sudden jump.

Peck To Be Called January 1.

Ray Peck, of Toronto, formerly service manager of the Canadian Universal Film Company and editor of the Moving Picture Digest, has been exempted from service with the Canadian Expeditionary Force until January 1. Peck recently visited his old home in Chatham, Ontario, and also visited the large theatres of Detroit and other cities.

Exhibitor Goes Into Auto Business.

R. S. Slesinger, of Toronto, formerly owner of the Royal Alexandra Theatre at Lachine, Quebec, is now engaged in selling "Flivvers" in Toronto for Parkdale Motors, Limited, and is also publishing the Ladies' Wear Bulletin, a semi-monthly paper.

Gets Canadian Rights on More Features.

Charles L. Stephenson, general manager of the Exhibitors' Distributing Corporation, Limited, Toronto and other cities, has announced that his company has secured the Canadian distributing rights for "Berlin, Via America," the Canadian franchise for which is controlled by Thomas Conway, of Montreal. Mr. Conway was formerly the manager of the Gayety Burlesque Theatre, of Montreal.

The Exhibitors' Distributing Corporation has also secured the Canadian rights for "Nine-Tenths of the Law" and Arbuckle single-reel re-issues. Arrangements are also being made for the early release of "The Still Alarm," the Canadian rights for which the company holds.

The Winnipeg office of the new company is now in full operation under the direction of Manager Hill.

Opera House Has Successful Opening.

William Dineen, the well-known exhibitor of Toronto, had a very successful opening of the Grand Opera House, Peterboro, of which he is now the manager. The theatre was redecorated and refurnished under the direction of Manager Dineen, who has been responsible for artistic effects in a number of Canadian theatres. The theatre was reopened on September 2.

Appeal Board Stops Paramount Film.

After being shown in several Toronto theatres, "The City of Dim Faces," a Paramount picture, starring Sessue Hayakawa, was condemned by the Ontario Board of Appeal on the complaint of the Chinese Consul of Toronto. The picture was not recalled by the Ontario Board of Censors, as previously reported. Objection was taken to the depiction of Chinese underworld life.

Sherman Theatre Raises Prices.

W. B. Sherman of the Sherman Theatre, Moose Jaw, Sask., has made a slight increase in admission prices in that house, the new prices going into effect on Labor Day. Afternoon prices are now 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children; evening prices are 50 cents and 25 cents, respectively.

RESUMES SUNDAY SHOWS FOR SOLDIERS

War Camp Committee Perfects Plans for Entertaining Enlisted Men on the Sabbath in Philadelphia

By F. V. Armato, 144 North Salford street, Philadelphia, Pa.

ARRANGEMENTS were completed last week by the Committee on Recreation of the War Camp Community Service for the resumption of Sunday evening entertainments at various theatres for the enlisted men in the army and navy. Through the efforts of O. F. McCormick, chairman of the committee, all the organizations contributing their services and their properties to these entertainments will give them this winter absolutely free. Frank W. Buhler, managing director of the Stanley Corporation, controlling the Stanley, Palace, Arcadia and other theatres, has agreed with Mr. McCormick to open the company's houses when requested. The Musician's Union Local No. 77, A. F. M., Adolph Hirshberg, president, and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes Local No. 8 of Philadelphia, Benjamin Harrison, president, voted unanimously to permit their members to contribute their time and talents to the War Camp Community service for this purpose without renumeration. Actors, actresses, ushers and other employes of the theatres, owners and managers through the Managers' Association all told Mr. McCormick that they would be glad to give their services and their properties to help entertain the enlisted men who will be in Philadelphia on Sunday evenings this fall and winter with time hanging heavily on their hands. The five theatres selected for these entertainments are Keith's, Globe, Forrest, Grand Opera House and the Broadway, Broad and Snyder avenue.

Milligan's Propaganda Film Approved.

M. E. Milligan, of the Metro Exchange, Philadelphia, who is the author, director and producer of the propaganda photoplay "Peace with Power," which he made for the American Talking Picture Corporation, is being congratulated upon its success, especially as it has been recommended by the officials at Washington, D. C., who have viewed the picture to have it shown at all the community theatres and army and navy centers throughout the country.

Pennsylvania Theatre Notes.

Walter Candner, of the Grand Theatre, Reading, recently took over his partner's interest there, assuming entire ownership to the theatre.

J. Jefferies, of the Roxborough Theatre, has resumed operating his theatre every day of the week and is experiencing an excellent increase in the business.

M. E. Commerford Amusement Company has purchased the old Younis Theatre in Providence, and after extensive repairs will reopen it as the Rivcli.

M. Steifel has added the Montgomery Theatre on East Girard avenue to his chain of theatres.

NETS BIG SUM FOR SICK BENEFIT FUND

Ball Given by San Francisco Operators at Exposition Auditorium August 31 Brings Big Receipts

By T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Cal.

THE sixth annual movies' ball in aid of the sick and death benefit fund of the Moving Picture Operators' Union of San Francisco was held at the Exposition Auditorium on the evening of August 31 and netted a handsome sum for this fund. The general ball committee having charge of the affair included the complete list of officers, in which several changes have recently been made. These are: M. Goodman, president; C. Sweeney, first vice-president; A. Cohn, second vice-president; A. L. Noriega, third vice-president; H. L. Berry, fourth vice-president; A. L. Bennett, fifth vice-president; A. F. Howell, secretary; Peter Boyle, business agent; C. R. Jones, treasurer, and T. Brown, sergeant-at-arms. Mayor James Rolph, Jr., was chairman of the evening, and the reception committee consisted of six city and county judges. The entertainment committee included the following: Eugene H. Roth, of the California and Portola theatres, chairman; E. Bruce Johnson, of the Turner & Dahnken Circuit, A. M. Bowles, representing the American Film Manufacturing Company; Louis R. Greenfield, of the Kahn & Greenfield Circuit, and N. K. Herzog, of the Silver Palace Theater.

In addition to dancing a high-class entertainment was provided, including moving pictures furnished by leading exchanges, and the latest illustrated songs. One page in the official program was donated to the local chapter of the American Red Cross by sixty-one operators, with $40 contributed by them. The service flag of the organization was displayed at the ball, this containing thirteen stars representing J. M. Barnett, George Bauman, M. L. Britt, John Ford, Jr., Phil Garcia, B. Hilman, A. Lavell, M. Munter, C. B. Paden, C. Steinfield, J. A. Shinn, E. M. Schwarz and R. M. Wilson.

Sign Contracts for Exclusive First Runs.

Eugene H. Roth, managing director of the California and Portola theatres, has closed contracts for the exclusive first-run showings during the coming year of all Douglas Fairbanks, Elsie Ferguson and D. W. Griffith pictures, all Artcraft-Paramount specials, all Ethel Clayton, Dorothy Dalton, Clara Kimball Young, Norma Talmadge, Constance Talmadge and Alice Brady productions. He has also arranged for the Allied Official War Weekly, the Gaumont News, the Gaumont Weekly and the Hearst-Pathe Weekly. Arrangements have also been made with the local Gaumont representatives, Blaine Walker, and Ralph Earle, formerly with Pathe, for the latest local subjects. He has also contracted with Marion H. Kohn for all the scenics and special De Luxe releases of the Educational Film Corporation. Mr. Roth has left for New York with Herbert Rothschild, president of the company which conducts the California Theatre, to attend an important conference. Herman Heller, formerly conductor of the Palace Hotel orchestra, has assumed charge of the California Symphony orchestra and is contracting for many leading artists.

Paramount and Artcraft Week a Success.

The management of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is delighted with the manner in which exhibitors flocked to the banner on National Paramount and Artcraft Week, the showing in this territory being considered remarkable. Among the houses in the Greater San Francisco district that showed these productions all week were The California, the Imperial, the Portola, the Royal, the New Mission, the New Fillmore, the Clement, the Hayes, the Unique, the Odeon, the Kinema, the Chimes, the Strand, the New Piedmont, the Lorin, the Hamblen and the Sequoia. The management of the New Fillmore Theatre not only booked Paramount and Artcraft pictures exclusively for the first week in September, but will devote the entire month to this service.

Film Men Help Tom Gilboy.

Through the generosity of film exchange men and exhibitors a fund amounting to about $400 has been raised for Tom Gilboy, a special film messenger, who was run down a short time ago by an automobile on Film Row and seriously injured. It has since been found necessary to amputate his left foot and in addition he is suffering from bruises and internal injuries. Louis Reichert is treasurer of the committee of film men handling the fund.

Poster Rentals Advance.

The increased cost of paper, labor and materials has compelled the Western Poster Company to make a slight advance in its rental prices and six cents a sheet is now charged for posters instead of the old rate of five cents. This concern is now handling advertising matter for nineteen film manufacturers and distributors and has recently added to the list the Parex, the General Film Company and the Universal.

Crawford Opens Theatre Supply House.

A. B. Crawford, for more than ten years with the Turner & Dahnken Circuit, has severed his connection with this firm to enter the business field on his own account. He has taken over a store at 120 Golden Gate avenue and has opened a music roll exchange and theatre supply establishment under the name of Crawford's. A large stock of new music rolls has been secured and special attention will be made to the music roll exchange business. Mr. Crawford has been succeeded at the Turner & Dahnken Circuit by M. Newman.

Film Folks Interested in Club House.

The moving picture fraternity throughout California is taking an active interest in the club house being erected on Market street for the use of enlisted navy boys. This is a four-story structure, the ground floor of which is given over to club purposes and the upper stories to sleeping quarters where about three hundred can be accommodated at a time. Many moving picture stars have given beds for this club house, and these are distinguished by brass plates bearing the name of the donor. The expenses of the club house will be met in part by the profits of the Red Cross tea room maintained on the mezzanine floor of the California Theatre by the Navy and Marine Auxiliary of the Red Cross. Prominent moving picture stars and leading stage folks serve tea here and the place has become very popular.

San Francisco Jottings.

The Consolidated Film Company is now in its new home at 90 Golden Gate avenue, where one of the finest exchanges on Film Row has been fitted up. The E. L. C. Company, of which Rueben Cohen is manager, also maintains offices here.

The Coliseum Theatre, being erected by S. H. Levin, will be ready for occupancy about November.

W. W. Kofeldt, formerly manager for Pathe at Seattle, but more recently manager of the Majestic Theatre at Portland, is now scouring the seas for Uncle Sam and was here recently on his way to Manila.

I. P. Arnold, at one time with Pathe at Salt Lake City, arrived here recently to accept a position with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

GASOLINELESS SUNDAYS FILL THEATRES

Auto Ban Creates Increased Patronage for Louisville Picture Houses—Some Unable to Handle Crowds

By Ohio Valley News Service, 1404 Starks Building, Louisville, Ky.

SUNDAY business in Louisville is rapidly developing and improving each week under the Gasolineless Sunday movement. On Sunday, September 8, several theatres were unable to handle the afternoon and evening crowds, turning back many people, and having long lines waiting for admission. Such a rush of business has never been known in the Louisville theatres, during either the best fall or spring rushes, and unusual pictures are not necessary either to bring out the people.

Sunday Closing Question Up Again.

Another chapter of the Sunday closing agitation in Lexington will be written by Magistrate Bodkin's court in the county on September 25, when the case of the Commonwealth against the Berryman Realty Company, operators of the Ben Ali Theatre, will come up again. The company is charged under the old Blue Laws with employing persons to work in the theatre on unnecessary work on the Sabbath. The result of the first trial was a hung jury, that being about the middle of August, after the early trials of the houses for operating on the Sabbath were settled favorably for the exhibitors. It is believed that the exhibitors will secure a favorable decision from the jury in this case, and that Sunday shows will go ahead, although steadily bothered by the efforts of the churchmen.

Barkley Fights for Sunday Opening.

A. B. Barkley manager of the Georgetown Opera House, Georgetown, has started a war against every concern in that city that operates on Sunday, in an effort to close up everything, and make it so uncomfortable that the authorities will permit him to operate on Sunday. Mr. Barkley has sworn out warrants for the arrest of Thomas B. McCann and Louis Fava, confectioners, on a charge of operating thir places on the Sabbath, charging violation of the old Blue Laws, the same laws under which he was hailed into court. At the present time a case is pending in the circuit court against Barkley for operating on Sunday.

Knox Theatre Company Incorporates.

The Knox Theatre Company, Louisville, capital $500, has been incorporated by Charles Koch, Fred J. Dolle and Henry Reis. These men are all connected with the chain of theatres operated by the Broadway Amusement Enterprises. Mr. Koch being at the Rex; Mr. Dolle at the Alamo, and Mr. Reis at one of the downtown houses. The new company plans to operate a theatre at Camp Knox, a new cantonment extending from Stithton, Ky., to West Point. The company secured options on land adjoining the cantonment several months ago, when the first rumors came out concerning the location.

Hosick Visits Louisville.

J. R. Hosick, manager of the Liberty Theatre, Rockport, Ky., and a prominent banker of that district, was in Louisville last week attending the annual convention of the Kentucky Bankers' Association.

Howe's Travel Pictures at Macauley's.

Macauley's Theatre, Louisville, is again showing the Lyman H. Howe Travel Festival, this house having shown these pictures for the past several seasons to advantage while short of stage attractions in the early season.

MONTREAL THEATRES RAISE ADMISSIONS

Climbing Cost of Operating Forces Six Managers to Charge Twenty-five Cents Including War Tax

By W. M. Gladish, 33 Wineva Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

ADMISSION prices at six of the leading theatres of Montreal, Quebec, have been raised, following a number of conferences by the exhibitors at which the matter was fully discussed. The increascs went into effect on Sunday, September 15, and the six theatres in line are the Connaught, Strand, Holman, New Grand, Tivoli and Regent. All but the last-named house are located on St. Catherine Street West and in the downtown shopping section. Manager Mills of Loew's Theatre declined to enter into the plan for the present.

The apparent increase is five cents, making the general admission for evenings twenty-five cents. But the new rate includes the war tax of two cents so that the patron is required to pay only three cents more.

The decision to make the increase was brought about by the steadily advancing costs in operating the houses. One manager declares that the operating expenses are now eighty per cent. more than at the start of the war. The various federal, provincial and municipal taxes make up a considerable portion of the increased cost. The Dominion reel tax of fifteen cents per day amounts to $8 per week for the average Montreal theatre or about $400 per year. The total revenue during a year from Montreal theatres alone is estimated at $30,000 by the Inland Revenue Department.

A tax of 85 cents per seat is collected yearly by the city license department and one of 50 cents per seat is also collected every year by the province. The total seating capacity of Montreal's moving picture theatres is 42,000 and the city therefore gets $35,700 a year in taxes and the Province $21,000.

The managers of the six theatres above named contend that they have been deriving no profit on the capital invested for some time.

Operators' Union Holds Shortest Session.

The Moving Picture Operators' Union of Toronto, Ontario, held the shortest meeting in the history of the local on Sunday, September 1, when the mere formality of opening and closing the session was gone through by President Dentelbeck. This is interesting in view of a statement appearing in a Toronto newspaper to the effect that the local operators were preparing to ask for a substantial wage increase.

Griffith Film Closes Six Weeks' Run.

"Hearts of the World," a Griffith film, closed a six weeks' solid run at $1.50 top prices in Toronto, on September 7, after which the show went to the Majestic Theatre, London, Ontario, for a week and later to the Temple Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, for three weeks. Another "Hearts of the World" company also opened at Allen's Regent Theatre, Ottawa, on September 16 for two weeks, while still another print of the Griffith production was used to open the new Allen Theatre in Westmount, Quebec, on the same date.

The fourth print of "Hearts of the World" now being used in Canada started a long run at the Dominion Theatre, Winnipeg, on Labor Day, September 2, and it will go to Brandon to be presented in the Allen Theatre in that city at the end of the Winnipeg engagement. Next on the Western Canadian circuit will be Moose Jaw and Calgary.

Canadians Observe Paramount Week.

Vancouver, B. C., was the one city in Canada to observe the National Paramount-Artcraft Week formally and officially. Vancouver newspapers ran one-page announcements about the week and a number of local theatres featured Paramount or Artcraft releases. The Rex Theatre had "Say, Young Fellow"; the Dominion Theatre presented "A Desert Wooing"; the Broadway Theatre showed "Rimrock Jones"; the Globe Theatre had "A Doll's House," and the Kitsilano Theatre featured "Stella Maris."

Canadian National Announces Releases.

The Canadian National Features of Trenton, Ontario, the Canadian film producing company which went into the hands of the receiver some months ago, has been resurrected insofar as the marketing of its pictures is concerned for the present.

The company's first release, "Power," was given its premier presentation at a trade showing in the Strand Theatre, Toronto, recently.

Manager G. W. Brownridge, who has charge of the handling of the affairs of the company, announced that the foreign rights had been disposed of to a considerable extent.

The company's second release, "The Marriage Trap," featuring Marguerite Snow and others, was also shown a few days later in Toronto. These are the most pretentious photoplays produced in the Dominion so far.

Palace Theatre Reopened.

The Palace Theatre, Greenwood avenue and Queen street East, Toronto, was reopened on Labor Day with "God's Man," at 5-cent and 10-cent prices. This house was originally known as the Woodbine Theatre and has been closed several times.

Dineen Opens Opera House at Peterboro.

The Grand Opera House at Peterboro, Ontario, was reopened as a moving picture theatre on Labor Day under the management of William Dineen, a prominent Canadian exhibitor and a former resident of Toronto. The house was crowded for every performance on the first day. The theatre had been renovated throughout and the equipment had been considerably improved. Mr. Dineen himself was responsible for the artistic effects secured. It will be the policy of the house to reserve seats for all evening performances.

New Policy at the Strand.

A new policy for the Strand Theatre, one of Toronto's finest downtown theatres, has been announced by Manager Clarence Robson, to start on September 30. There will be no change in admission prices, which range from 5 cents to 35 cents, and program will be changed twice weekly, as heretofore, except in unusual instances. The open booking policy will be dropped, more or less, however, and Goldwyn and Select attractions will be featured. Special attention is to be paid to orchestral accompaniment and one of the changes will be the placing of an increased orchestra in a stage pit. The Strand was originally Shea's Vaudeville Theatre and the orchestra has always been found on the audience side of the footlights. The stage proper will be eliminated, however, under the new order of things. Mr. Ernest Knaggs will continue to be the orchestra director.

Manager Robson has also decided to open the theatre at noon each day instead of at 11 a. m. The de luxe program each day will also include, in the future, an orchestra number consisting of some special selection. This will be given at 4 p. m. and 9.20 p. m. This also is an innovation at the Strand.

Loew Contributes to Sailors' Campaign.

Loew's Theatre, Toronto, turned over a day's profits to the Sailors' Week Campaign, which was held in Toronto during the week of September 2.

SAY LIGHTLESS NIGHTS AID EXHIBITORS

Cincinnati Theatre Man Declares Fuel Order Results in Better Distribution of Business

By Kenneth C. Crain, 307 First National Bank Cincinnati, Ohio.

CINCINNATI.—Lightless nights, which bid fair to remain in effect for the remainder of the war, are not injuring business, according to downtown exhibitors, who might be expected to rely more upon the advertising value of big electric signs than the suburban theatres. The absence of the signs has probably resulted in a more even distribution of business, however, in the opinion of a West Fifth street exhibitor. "Without the signs to proclaim from afar the attraction at each theatre, people tend to go to the first that they come to that looks good," he pointed out. "Rather than wander around looking for something else, they stop and enter the nearest house; and the result is that everybody gets a fair share of the business of the night crowds when the lights are off, instead of having the bulk of the crowds drawn to the houses where some one of the more popular stars may be showing, or a well-known attraction may be on exhibition."

Liberty Theatre Company Organized.

The Liberty Theatre Company has been organized for the purpose of taking over and managing the Liberty, one of the Cincinnati's popular outlying houses, by Frank and John Russ and others. The company has a capital stock of $10,000.

"Salome" Plays to High Prices.

The spectacular Fox production of "Salome," with Theda Bara in the title role, had a splendid engagement at the Grand at higher prices than any that prevailed during the summer season, running up to 75 cents in the evenings, and 25 and 50 cents at the matinees. The Grand scheduled "Hearts of the World," the Griffith production which has already been seen across the river, for its Cincinnati premiere following the engagement of "Salome," and thousands who did not care to go to the Kentucky theatres to see the picture will undoubtedly serve to make its Cincinnati engagement highly successful.

Brevities from Spokane

By S. Clark Patchin, E. 1811 Eleventh Avenue, Spokane, Wash.

"To Hell with the Kaiser" Approved.

APPROVAL of the production "To Hell with the Kaiser" was given by Spokane picture fans, who appeared in throngs to witness the production at the Casino Theatre, where it ran five days.

Fair Draws Many to Pictures.

People from sections within a radius of at least 150 miles gathered in Spokane to attend the Interstate Fair and crowded the picture houses when not at the fair grounds or shopping, which meant that there was almost always a crowd in all of the picture houses during the week of September 1.

Short Items.

W. Potter, manager of the Universal exchange reports good success in inland Empire towns and that some houses which had closed were opening up.

P. L. Carroll, manager of the Pathe Exchange, announces that pictures of his company are taking well with patrons of theatres throughout the district.

Arrangements have been made to show pictures to the soldiers at Fort George Wright weekly.

KANSAS CITY EXCHANGE BUSINESS GROWS

Universal Takes Another Print of "For Husbands Only"—Select Engages More Men—New Mutual Orders

By Kansas City News Service, 115 Railway Exchange, Kansas City, Mo.

MANAGER L. B. DOUGLAS of the Kansas City branch of the Universal Film Exchange, has just returned from a week's business trip in Southern Missouri, having made stops at Springfield, Joplin and Webb City, as well as other points in the territory.

The Liberty Theatre will show "For Husbands Only" beginning the week of September 15. Mr. Douglas states that his bookings on this subject have made it necessary for the Universal here to purchase another print.

H. C. Robertson, brother of Richard Robertson, manager of the Kansas City exchange of Goldwyn Pictures, Incorporated, is back from covering the Kansas territory for Goldwyn. Mr. Robertson went into service some weeks ago, but owing to the fact that his call has been deferred for about a month and a half he is again back at work.

Mr. Dean, of the Educational Distributing Corporation of New York, is making a tour of the states and stopped in Kansas City for a brief visit.

The Kansas City branch of the Select Pictures Corporation has recently added two men to its sales force. Joe Fox, formerly with Paralta, is now covering Kansas for Select, and R. D. Fairchild, who has been selling films for the General Film Company, is making the Oklahoma territory.

Whitney Young, manager of the Kansas City branch of the Fox Film Corporation, has just returned from a several days' trip to Tulsa, Oklahoma.

W. E. Truog, manager of the Kansas City office of the World Film Corporation, has just returned from a week's visit to the home offices in New York. Mr. Truog announces that the seven-reel feature, "The Road to France," starring Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley, will be released early in October.

C. W. Eckhardt, district manager for the Fox Film Corporation, with headquarters in Chicago, is in Kansas City this week.

W. S. Wessling, southern district manager for Pathe, is in Kansas City. Mr. Wessling, whose headquarters is Cincinnati, Ohio, has been in Chicago attending the convention of the American Exhibitors' Association. At the same time a Pathe convention took place between F. C. Quimby, general sales manager, and all the district managers. Mr. Wessling stated that the month of August had proved to be the biggest month in the history of the Pathe by a large margin.

Miss Helen C. Steinbeck, formerly with the Mutual Film Corporation, is now with the Equitable Film Corporation as secretary to C. W. Harden.

Paul Elliott, new vice-president and general manager of the Hodupp-Towne Photoplay Corporation, has been in Kansas City during the past week. Mr. Elliott was arranging to exploit the special production, "The Deemster," for which he has purchased the rights in this territory.

I. F. Mantzke, manager of the Mutual Film Corporation, in Kansas City, was in Wichita for several days this week closing contracts with the new $150,000 theatre for all his future releases, including the Sessue Hayakawa productions and the Screen Telegram. Mr. Mantzke is making a tour throughout the states of Kansas and Missouri calling on every exhibitor in order to determine what the conditions are in the territory.

E. J. Peskay, salesman for the Equitable Film Corporation, has gone to Chicago for the purpose of spending some time with his relatives before entering the service. Mr. Peskay has been associated with W. H. Bell in his various enterprises for several years.

J. M. Campbell and W. H. Bell, of the Equitable Film Corporation, have returned from their vacation, spent at Lake Okoboji, Iowa.

The Equitable Film Corporation is taking a number of experienced salesmen out of other commercial lines and breaking them in as road men. The salesmen have made arrangements to use Ford cars to cover the territory after it is apportioned.

J. A. Stevenson, district manager of the W. W. Hodkinson Enterprises, has returned to Cincinnati, Ohio. Mr. Stevenson expects to return to Kansas City in about two weeks.

The Mutual Film Exchange at Kansas City has closed contracts with the new Isis Theatre for the Chester Outings and Screen Telegrams.

Foland Is General's Kansas City Manager.

J. E. Foland, recently salesman out of the Kansas City office of Pathe, has been made manager of the General Film Company at this place. He succeeds C. S. Edwards, Sr. "Jim" Foland has made one of the really notable successes in the film business in this territory. For one thing, he made the remarkable record of two and one-half years on one job in one territory—perhaps the longest that a salesman has served in one territory. And nearly every month showed a gain in business—with the future still looking up, despite conditions. Foland brought to the moving picture industry, when he entered it a few years ago, talents of publicity and salesmanship that he had exercised on big affairs, with large success. He brought also three qualities that every friend of his appreciates, which were even more important in his progress than his talents. These were an appetite for knowing all about any business he engaged in, a fidelity to his job and his employer that absorbed all his physical and mental energies, and a sincere eagerness to be of real service to the people he dealt with. Foland had had much experience as an organizer, and through this capacity he got into the moving picture industry, assisting in forming and later acting as pilot for the Amusement Association of Kansas. He left the secretarial position to go on the road in Kansas for Pathe—and study the exhibitors, the public and the industry. He is entering his first managerial position with enthusiasm.

J. E. Foland.

McAlister and Cooper Visit Kansas City.

Mr. McAlister and Mr. Cooper, of the Peerless Amusement Company, which is building the new $150,000 theatre in Wichita, Kansas, were in Kansas City for several days arranging for service. The new theatre is to be completed by October 15 and is recognized as one of the finest houses in the southwest.

Robertson Buys the Tourney Theatre.

W. C. Robertson, proprietor of the Royal Theatre, at Hutchinson, Kansas, has purchased the Tourney Theatre at McPherson, Kansas, from C. E. Oelrich.

Exhibitors Who Visited Kansas City.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors who paid their respects to the Kansas City exchanges were the following: Charles Barron, Augusta, Kansas; J. C. Johnson, of Haskell, Oklahoma; Herbert Thatcher, of the Gen Theatre, Salina, Kansas, and Thomas Boland, of the Empress Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Theatres That Observed Paramount Week.

National Paramount and Artcraft week was announced in this territory by a page ad in the Kansas City Star, Monday, September 2. Practically all of the theatres which are using the Paramount service ran those subjects during the entire week of September 1 to 8. The general heading which followed up the lead that "It is just as important to project the right sort of pictures over here as to buy the right sort of cartridges over there" were the advertisements of 54 photoplay houses in this territory which were celebrating Paramount-Artcraft week. Announcements in the combined theatre advertisement were as follows: Royal Theatre, Regent Theatre, Isis Theatre, Liberty Theatre, Alamo Theatre, Bonaventure Theatre, St. John Theatre, the Warwick Theatre, Emerald Theatre, the Bancroft Theatre, the Prospect Theatre, Idle Hour Theatre, the Twelfth Street Theatre, all of Kansas City, Mo., and these out-of-town houses: Electric Theatre, Kansas City, Kan.; Central Garden Theatre, Kansas City, Kan.; Gene Gauntlet Theatre, Kansas City, Kan.; Electric Theatre, Springfield, Mo.; Electric Theatre, Joplin, Mo.; Regent Theatre, Wichita, Kan.; Thomas Theatre, Wichita, Kan.; the Orpheum Theatre, St. Joseph, Mo.; Glory "B," Miami, Okla.; the Orpheum Theatre, Atchison, Kan.; the Orpheum Theatre, Leavenworth, Kan.; Pastime Theatre, Ottawa, Kan.; the Casino Theatre, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; Sedalia Theatre, Sedalia, Mo.; the Palace Theatre, Tulsa, Okla.; the Rialto Theatre, Tulsa, Okla.; the Varsity Theatre, Lawrence, Kan.; the Columbia Theatre, Junction City, Kan.; the Orpheum Theatre, Topeka, Kan.; the Iris Theatre, Topeka, Kan.; Linwood Theatre, Tarkio, Mo.; Crystal Theatre, Cherokee, Okla.; Constantine Theatre, Powhuska, Okla.; Palace Theatre, Salina, Kan.; Majestic Theatre, Centerville, Ia.; Novelty Theatre, Anthony, Kan., Empress Theatre, Ft. Scott, Kan.; Fourth Street Theatre, Moberly, Mo.; Broadway Theatre, Muskogee, Okla.; the Mill Theatre, Venita, Okla.; Klock Theatre, Pittsburgh, Kan.; Majestic Theatre, Billings, Okla.; Majestic Theatre, Enid, Okla.; Electric Theatre, Falls City, Neb.; the Gem Theatre, Baldwin, Kan.; Palace Theatre, Hoxie, Kan.; the Picture Show, Severance, Kan.; the Royal Theatre, Burrton, Kan.; Wareham Theatre, Manhattan, Kan.; the Rex Theatre, Ridgeway, Mo., and the Electric Theatre, Mound Valley, Kan.

Among the Theatres.

Elk City, Okla.—The Quality Theatre is to be completely razed and a new theatre and office building erected in its place. The first floor will consist of the moving picture theatre, with offices above.

Nevada, Mo.—Harry Grant has taken charge of the Star Theatre, formerly managed by J. E. Haggard.

Clarendon, Ark.—Fire of unknown origin destroyed the Majestic Theatre, August 18. The loss was about $10,000, partly covered by insurance.

Port Arthur, Tex.—The new Liberty Theatre, 409 Proston street, which was entirely remodeled for J. P. Pittam, proprietor of the Pittam Theatre, opened the first of September.

Ranger, Tex.—W. T. Flippin, E. R. Shane and W. A. Suddarth are planning the construction of a theatre with a seating capacity of 1,500, which will be ready for business by December 1.

Fredericktown, Mo.—George Madden, of St. Paul, Minn., is installing new scenery in the Gem Theatre.

Cherryville, Kan.—The Royal Theatre, which has been redecorated and remodeled, has been reopened by S. A. Davidson, owner.

The Editor of the World Explains and Corrects An Unfortunate Error

IN the issue of the Moving Picture World dated July 6 there appeared under the caption, "Theatre Burner Sought by Marines," an item in our Nashville news letter, that did a grave and entirely unintentional injustice to Ray McKee, a player, who enacted the role of Phillip Lindicutt in "The Unbeliever," a propaganda feature that was being shown throughout Tennessee at that time. We present this explanation in approximately the same location in the paper that the original story was printed in the hope that those of our readers who perused the story we refer to will now read this correction.

The incident demonstrates how easily it is, under the most careful supervision, for an editor to pass at current news value matter that may, through inadvertant circumstances, do grave injustice. Likewise does it prove that in compiling the World week after week these unfortunate incidents by their infrequency testify to the care we take in editing in the rare and infrequent necessity of our being called upon to make such amends as we may in printing retractions.

It is not necessary here to repeat the offending paragraph. Suffice it to say that the United States Marines were declared to be seeking "Phillip Lindicutt, alias Ray McKee," who was charged with acts of incendiarism directed principally against moving picture theatres, stipulating specifically that "his latest bonfire was the Princess Theatre, Hopkinsville." The mention of a $50 reward was made, and the story carried a circumstantial account of the stated movements of the man advertised as "wanted."

The story was written and forwarded to the World by our duly accredited correspondent then holding our appointment at Nashville. The matter passed through the usual method of editing, and eventually appeared in our columns. The matter submitted to us certainly was "news," the mention of the specific theatre destroyed, as well as the other alleged facts making it an item legitimately comprising material to be considered.

Recently the World received notice from an attorney in New York, A. L. Jacobs, in effect that his client, Ray McKee, contemplated bringing action against this publication for libel on account of the story. Investigation of our files brought to light the subject of the present statement, and the editor immediately began an investigation.

Between the time our July 6 issue was circulated and the date we first learned that we had injured Mr. McKee the correspondent who had written the story and sent it to us in all good faith had resigned his position and joined the Marines. The editor enlisted the interest of our present Nashville correspondent, James G. Stahlman, of the Nashville Banner staff, in securing a review of the matter and an explanation, and we also wrote to our former correspondent requesting that he state his own side of the case.

Slight complication enters into the incident in that the young man who wrote the original story, and has since joined the Marines, requests us to not mention his name in discussing the affair. We quote the young man's letter as a creditable sidelight on the character of the young Marine: "I trust that my name will not be brought up in such a way as to put me in a bad light with the Government and possibly cause a dishonorable discharge."

Referring directly to the story our young Marine declares that "the matter in my story came from the Tennessean's article (the name of a Nashville daily being there mentioned) * * * there was every reason to believe that the 'dope' was straight, as posters were displayed outside and inside the office of the United States Marine Corps. The Marine's office would not deny that the 'dope' was straight, but would divulge nothing to enlighten a person other than that McKee was 'badly wanted.' Flaring one-sheet posters were displayed around the city advertising that the U. S. Marines were after McKee, and that a reward of $50 would be paid for his capture by the local Marine's recruiting office in Nashville. Later it developed that the quarter-column story in the Tennessean as a news item was a trick to stimulate interest in 'The Unbeliever'." The editor submits that entire good faith is expressed in the foregoing extracts.

Now comes reference to a letter we have from Mr. Stahlman, our present correspondent in Nashville. We have received, and have in our office, a copy of the "poster" referred to above, and can find nothing to indicate that it is anything else than a legitimate offer of a reward for a missing member of the United States Marine forces. "For further information and details apply at the office of the United States Marines, 44 Arcade, Nashville," was part of the final details printed on the poster.

Our Mr. Stahlman explains, as the reader will have already surmised, that the former correspondent of the World at Nashville had been misled, or "hoaxed," by a piece of sensational advertising employed in conjunction with the proposed showing of "The Unbeliever"—an attraction later presented by Manager Wassman at the Knickerbocker Theatre in that city. It seems that our former correspondent did not sense the "trick," but combined the stories printed in Nashville papers with the presence of the posters in his desire to turn out a story that seemed, at the time, to adequately and fully cover what our representative presumed to be the facts in the case.

"In justice to your former correspondent," our Mr. Stahlman writes, "I will say that the general run of 'movie fans' really did believe Lindicutt to be a 'bad man' and badly wanted by the U. S. Marines, and considerable excitement was caused upon several occasions during the showing of 'The Unbeliever,' when it was whispered around that Lindicutt had been captured."

The World makes this full and lengthy explanation in fulfillment of our determination to present only reliable information. We also desire to make such amends as we may to Mr. McKee for having unintentionally done him an injustice.

ROB SEATTLE EXCHANGES OF FILMS

Believe Young Boys Are the Culprits—Some Offices Lose Only Parts of Pictures, Others Entire Reels

By S. J. Anderson, 424 Seaboard Building, Seattle, Wash.

SEVERAL exchanges on Seattle's film row have been missing parts of their film for several weeks, some reporting only parts of reels missing, while two or three have lost whole reels. These disappeared not through the express, but from the inspecting rooms of the exchanges themselves. Only one of the exchanges has found its missing film. This was the Greater Features Company, which lost two reels of new Chaplin film from the inspection room on the day of its arrival. No clue was given as to its whereabouts until three days later, when two young men came in with the two reels, asking if it belonged to them. They said that they had got them from some 8 or 9 year old boys who were playing at operating a motion picture theatre in an old unoccupied livery stable on the shore of Lake Union. When searched, the stable was not found to hide any other valuable film, only a few scraps.

All the film exchanges are on the street level, and some of them have their inspection room windows looking directly out on the street, while others open on the alleys; so that it is very easy for the boys passing by to reach in when the inspectors' backs are turned and take a part of the film. Heretofore they had not gone further than to take the cuttings out of the waste baskets, but it is thought that it was in this way that all of the films lost recently have disappeared. An entire reel was missed this week from the inspection room of the Universal office, as well as the two from the Greater Features, and several valuable parts of film from other offices.

Reizner Building $60,000 House.

Raymond, Wash.—George Reizner, who operates two theatres in Raymond and one in North Bend, has started building a big new concrete house in Raymond which is to cost $60,000 when completed and will seat 1,100. This will be the largest small town theatre in Washington.

Lanningham Takes Over the Lotus.

Tenino, Wash.—L. A. Lanningham, who operates theatres in Bucuda and in Tono, has taken over the Lotus Theatre at Tenino.

Summer Saving Plan Adopted by Coliseum.

One of the greatest items of overhead expense at the Greater Theatres Company's big Coliseum is the number of ushers employed. To save on this item during the hot weather, when business is lighter than usual, the big balcony is closed during the matinees. In this way the salaries of four ushers for the afternoon are saved, and there is still plenty of room on the ground floor and in the balcony to accommodate the crowds.

Barbour Leases the Dream Theatre.

Ketchican, Alaska.—The Dream Theatre Building in Ketchican has been leased by Jack Barbour, who is redecorating and refurnishing it, and who will soon reopen it as the Liberty Theatre. L. H. Kubley, who has been operating the Dream, will open a theatre in another location. Mr. Barbour is in Seattle buying equipment and chairs, and is getting the best service obtainable. Mr. Barbour has never been in the film business before, but he is familiar with vaudeville, and is known for his fine lyric tenor voice, which he will use to entertain his audiences between shows. The music for the pictures will consist of an orchestra of three—piano, violin and drum.

Thall Booking Big Shows.

Camp Lewis, Wash.—C. M. Thall, manager of the Victory Theatre, has lined up a lot of big shows to entertain the forty-odd thousand boys who will be in training at the Camp during the fall. "Hearts of the World" is booked for September 28-30, and most of the new Artcraft features have been signed for.

Exchange Personals.

H. B. Dobbs has resigned the managership of the Seattle Select office and is now salesman and assistant manager of the De Luxe Feature Film Company. His place has been taken at the Select office by Frank J. Hicks.

Joe Baum has been transferred from the Portland Universal territory to the Seattle office as salesman.

B. W. Copeland, formerly an exhibitor of Spokane, is now handling American features out of the Seattle Pathe office.

L. J. Schlaifer, owner of L. J. Schlaifer Attractions, is home on a furlough from the marine training camp at Mare Island, California.

L. M. Cobbs, formerly salesman out of the Chicago Vitagraph office, is the new booker and assistant manager at the Seattle office, taking the place of Ashley McRae, who has gone with Pathe.

Alex Singelow, salesman out of the Seattle Kleine office, has just returned from a trip through the Oregon territory.

MANY THOUSANDS SEE GRIFFITH FILM

Atlanta Theatre, Atlanta, Shows "Hearts of the World" to Approximately 20,000 in One Week

By Linton K. Starr, Atlanta Journal, Atlanta, Ga.

THE outstanding feature of the week in Atlanta film circles was occasioned by the record-breaking reception accorded the Griffith spectacle, "Hearts of the World," which smashed all attendance figures for the Atlanta Theatre, the city's legitimate house, during the first of its two-week presentation by the Wells and Evans interests, under the auspices of The Atlanta Journal.

Approximately twenty thousand people viewed the production on paid admissions, surpassing by four thousand the first week's attendance at the premiere showing of "The Birth of a Nation," at the same theatre two years ago. All previous records established by legitimate attractions at the theatre also went by the board.

The Griffith film, now in its second week, is playing practically to capacity at two daily showings, the regular $1.50 scale applying to dramatic attractions being in force. Long lines are the rule at the box office before every performance. The advance ticket sale indicates that the second week's showing will easily equal, if not pass, the figures set up during the first half of the engagement.

"During my entire connection with the theatrical business," states Mr. Lewis Hasse, manager of the Atlanta Theatre, "I have never seen such enthusiasm displayed in a playhouse as was evidenced at the Atlanta during the past week. When I saw the picture in New York the audiences there were receptive, but the people down here went wild. It was all we could do to keep many persons from standing in their seats."

An unusually effective publicity campaign has materially aided in the successful presentation of the film as has also the capable rendition of the musical score by an eighteen-piece orchestra under the direction of Signor Carborena, of New York, which is accompanying the picture on its tour.

Observes Paramount-Artcraft Week.

National Paramount-Artcraft week was observed in Atlanta by the Forsyth and Rialto Theatres, two local houses under the Jake Wells-John Evans management. The latter theatre varied its two-a-week policy by presenting three twoday showings of the J. Stuart Blackton production, "The World for Sale," Enid Bennett in "The Marriage Ring," and Sessue Hayakawa in "The City of Dim Faces." The Forsyth's program was made up of a four-day showing of the DeMille special, "Till I Come Back to You," closing the week with Dorothy Dalton in "Green Eyes."

Hooks Universal Special for Week's Run.

"For Husbands Only," the Universal special, has just concluded a remarkably lucrative week's engagement at the new Tudor Theatre, formerly the Odeon, now in its second month of operation under the ownership of William Oldknow, president of the Consolidated Film Company. Distinctly novel and original methods were employed by James Jackson, manager of the Tudor, in putting the picture over, including the use of ambiguous want ads, the tagging of scores of automobiles with cards, and extensive displays in local newspapers, the campaign being of the "teaser" variety, capitalizing the possibilities offered by the title of the production.

Four Minute Men Entertain Exhibitors.

Practically all theatre managers of the city were present as guests of honor at a luncheon staged at the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce last week, tendered by the local Four Minute Men Association. High praise for the liberal attitude assumed by the theatre men in permitting the use of their stages by speakers promoting Liberty Loan, Thrift Stamps and other patriotic campaigns, was voiced in several addresses, and an even closer co-operative understanding was reached by hosts and guests. Among the theatre managers in attendance were Willard C. (Pat) Patterson, of the Criterion; Hugh L. Cardoza, of the Lyric, Forsyth and Rialto; H. L. McClure, of the Alamo No. 1; George Schmidt, of the Alamo No. 2; Lewis Haase, of the Grand; N. Y. Darley, of the Savoy and Alpha, and John Evans, of the Strand and Vaudette.

Chaplin Picture "Cleaning Up."

The initial Chaplain-First National production, "A Dog's Life," has proved to be a money-getter here far in excess of the comedian's previous comedies. Opening to a big week's business at twenty-five cent prices at the Rialto Theatre six weeks ago, the picture has since played at a profitable return date of the same length there, scored heavily during a week's subsequent stand at the Strand to a seventeen cent admission, and is reported to have literally "cleaned up" at five cents, when presented at the Savoy and Alpha Theatres during separate showing of two days at each house.

Denbow Manager of Liberty Theatre.

William Denbow, at one time manager for the World company here, and until recently in charge of the William Fox office, has been appointed manager of the Liberty Theatre, Camp Gordon, and is now actively engaged in his preparations for a busy season at the nearby cantonment.

Vincent Kay Goes to Camp Gordon.

Included in last week's contingent of draft recruits who reported to Camp Gordon from Atlanta was Vincent Kay, musical director of Loew's Grand Theatre, and one of the city's pioneers in motion picture theatre orchestra work. It is understood that he will be assigned to head a band at the camp, the place carrying the rank of second lieutenant.

DONATES THEATRE TO RAISE WAR FUNDS

Texas Exhibitor Lets Club Women Run His House on 50-50 Basis to Earn Money for the Red Cross

By Phil. Fox, Times-Herald, Dallas, Texas.

THE women of Vernon, Texas, have taken over the management of More's Theatre there at the suggestion of Bob More, the owner. They are running the play house on a fifty-fifty basis with Bob More and all they make over More's one half goes to the Red Cross and other war work funds. The club women appoint two of their number to have charge of the theatre each day with others to assist them. They do their own booking and advertising and call up the membership of all the Vernon women's clubs each day and urge them to attend the show and aid the cause. They also act as ushers, ticket sellers, etc. Bob More says that he is making plenty of money and the war work funds have a steady revenue so all people concerned are well satisfied.

Soldier Patronage Swells Receipts.

With thousands of soldiers pouring into Houston every motion picture theatre is open and doing a land office business. The "K. & E." and the Vendome theatres which have been closed all summer have opened up and are running seven days a week.

Films Welfare Work for Children.

The work of Dallas women towards the welfare of children will be permanently recorded through motion picture films which will be sent to other Texas cities and to other states to demonstrate child welfare work. The Children's Year Committee of the Dallas Mothers Clubs have taken films showing welfare work at the various grade schools. The weighing and measuring of children, ideal school and housing conditions, etc., are shown in this educational series.

Erects Theatre for Lumbermen.

The Fidelity Lumber Company of Doucette, Texas, where woodsmen are engaged in hewing out timber for the United States merchant marine, has opened a motion picture theatre for their workers. The management has ordered a series of patriotic pictures headed by "Pershing's Crusaders" from local exchanges.

Hawley Manager of Liberty Theatre.

A. J. Hawley has been appointed manager of the Liberty Theatre at Camp Bowie, Fort Worth. Douglas Hawley of First National is going over there to see him. He thinks that the New York man may be a long lost first cousin.

Stuart Loans Aviators His Score Board.

Through the courtesy of Herschel Stuart, manager of the Old Mill Theatre several thousand flying officers and cadets of the air service at Camp Dick were enabled to get the results of the world's series baseball games. The Old Mill lent the camp their electric score board, and the Associated Press gave the soldiers the game play by play. Most of the large Dallas picture houses announced the games inning by inning.

Soldiers Prefer Pictures to Dancing.

Soldiers stationed in Dallas who patronize the Kahki Club, which is run by Dallas women, declare that they would sooner see a good motion picture show than dance on Sunday afternoons and evenings. Accordingly a screen and a projector have been bought and two separate shows are given for their benefit, free of charge each Sunday evening.

Cage Extending Theatre Chain.

E. G. Cage, who operates the Cage Theatre at Mercedes, Texas, has bought a new theatre at Pharr, Texas, and built a theatre at San Benito. These play houses are in the border country and provide amusement for detachment of troops in isolated sections on border patrol duty. Mr. Cage, who was in Dallas during the middle of September, says that business along the border is exceptionally good owing to the presence of large numbers of soldiers.

Robb and Rowley Buy More Theatres.

H. F. Robb and Ed. Rowley, who operate theatres at Big Spring, San Angelo and Abilene have added two more "R. & R." theatres to their list. They have bought the Greenville Opera House at Greenville, Texas, and the Best Theatre at Hillsboro. The Best was sold by Tom Gaines, who is planning to enlist in the United States army.

Theatres Aid Registration Campaign.

Dallas picture show proprietors early in September aided the National Council of Defense in putting on a campaign explaining that every person under the Draft law had to register on September 12. Speakers explained the Draft law from the stages of the theatres and slides told the patrons when and how to enroll for military service. The result was that the work of the Draft boards was considerably expedited.

Lowenstein Joins the Navy.

Harry Lowenstein of the Palace Theatre, Ardmore, Okla., has sold his show and joined the United States navy. Lowenstein a few weeks ago cleaned up $45,000 in a Ranger oil field deal. He says that he is going to take his money with him to France and if he likes it he may settle there.

Lieutenant Dugger Leaves for France.

First Lieutenant Clarence Dugger, formerly of Vitagraph and brother of J. B. Dugger, Vitagraph manager for Dallas, has gone to France with his cavalry regiment. Lieutenant Dugger, who served in the Philippines, Cuba and in Mexico, has recently been an instructor at the cavalry officers' training school at Camp Bliss, Ey Paso. He visited his friends in Dallas before starting overseas.

Prince Theatre One Year Old.

Celebrating the first anniversary of the opening of his Prince Theatre at Houston, Texas, William Epstein staged a special birthday party at the theatre early in September. Many friends were present. Mr. Epstein and Manager Ben Johns of the Prince both made talks and Jack Lingwood, who was with the British Army in Flanders, told tales of Hun atrocities.

Exhibitor Santicos Enlists in the Army.

L. Santicos, owner of the Royal Theatre at Waco, has joined the United States Army. Frank O'Leary, former manager of the Southwestern Feature Film Company at Dallas, will manage the theatre while Santicos is away.

Interesting Dallas Short Items.

W. R. Fairman of the Dixie at Bryan, Texas, was in Dallas during September. He states that Bryan has not had any rain for the past three years and that if it was not for the aviation landing station there and the Students Army Training Corps at the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College that things would be in a mighty bad shape. As it is the war is causing the Bryan show business to prosper.

C. E. Tandy, district manager of Paramount, made a special trip to Texas in September. He arranged to extend exhibitors in the drought stricken section of Texas every accommodation possible. Not the Paramount alone, but all other Dallas film men are trying to keep the West Texas picture shows open. Prices have been cut materially in towns suffering from the drought.

W. T. Wachter, Fox manager at Dallas, and J. B. Harrison of his staff, have been spending a few days at Galveston recently.

Harry Schoenstadt, booking agent for Liberty theatres in the army camps of the Southwest, will soon go back to New York. His successor has not yet been announced.

W. N. Williams, formerly with the George Kleine branch in Dallas, has gone to New York where he will remain in the film business.

Henry Putz in Dallas after winding up his summer series of free motion picture shows in local parks will resume his duties with the Community Motion Picture Bureau in charge of all machines and their operation in Texas army camps.

Miss Elizabeth Johnson is planning to build a new theatre at Houston, according to reports received by Dallas film men.

L. B. Bingham, of Oklahoma City, according to reports received in Dallas, is contemplating the erection of a new theatre for motion pictures only at that point.

Smiling Jimmy Kelly of General is back from a trip to Galveston and Gulf Coast points. He declares that prospects are good for a record breaking winter season in this section of Texas. Mr. Kelly invited newspapermen and visiting exhibitors to see a run off of "A Law Unto Herself" featuring Louise Glaum at the Old Mill Theatre early in September. Local critics declared the film a good one.

Exhibitors Who Visited Dallas.

The following motion picture exhibitors were among those who visited Dallas film row during the early part of September: Julius Levy, Opera House, Brady, Texas; Nat Lewis, Electric Palace, Tyler; A. V. Chavey, Hippodrome, Wolfe City; W. C. Edmundson, Play House, De Leon; M. C. Witcher, Empire, Dublin; W. G. Mender, Liberty, Orange; A. Zuccara of the Queen, Q. Thompson of the Lyric, W. M. Smith of the Orpheum, and D. C. Fleegles of the Rex, all of Forth Worth; L. N. Cox, Princess, Ardmore, Okla.; Harry Barr, Peoples Amusement Company, Beaumont.

ACTIVITIES OF NEW ENGLAND FILM MEN

General's Boston Office Enlarges Its Selling Force—Exhibitors Aid Four-Minute Men

By Robert N. Howe, 80 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

Donavan Takes Military Training Course.

JAMES J. DONAVAN, who has been with the Boston office of the General Film Company for the past two years, has left to take a military training course in the Franklin Institute, of this city. He first entered the General Film as a salesman, and served in that capacity for over a year, after which he was made assistant manager under Branch Manager Jeff Levine. On his departure he was presented with a comfort kit from the employes of the exchange.

Jack Jennings Enlists in the Navy.

Jack Jennings, salesman for the Pathe's Boston office covering New Hampshire and Vermont, has resigned, and has enlisted in the navy. He will report for active duty October 1. He is the son of Ensign Jennings, of the United States Navy, who was seriously wounded while performing his duties a short time ago. Jack Jennings has been with the Pathe for a number of years, and has served in the capacity of shipper, booker and salesman.

General Film Augments Its Sales Force.

Due to the large increase in business, Manager Jeff Levine, of the Boston office of the General Film Company, has taken on three new salesmen to cover the New England district. They are Grafton G. Corbett, a well-known film man, who will cover the territory of Eastern Massachuetts and Rhode Island; E. B. Tinker, formerly manager of the Bangor, Maine, office of the General Film, who will cover the territory in Western Massachusetts and Connecticut, and Ernest H. Warren, formerly booker on the Boston office of the General Film, will cover New Hampshire and Vermont. J. J. Orkney, the new Paralta salesman for the General Film, will cover the entire state of Maine.

Pathe's Booker Joins the Navy.

Dan O'Leary, booker at the Pathe's Boston office for the past two years, has joined the navy. He will train at the Harvard Radio School at Cambridge, Mass.

Miss May Brown Marries.

Miss May Brown, cashier of the Boston office of the General Film Company for the past five years, has left and was married to Jack Thrall, of Chicago, who is in the United States Marines. Members of the Pathe and General Film attended the military wedding which was held in St. Ann's Church in this city.

Griffith Film Goes Big in New England.

Managers of "Hearts of the World," the Griffith film, report excellent business on the picture, which is now being shown in many of the cities and towns in New England. The picture is being shown at the Auditorium in Malden, Mass., the week of September 1, and, according to the manager, it is cleaning up. It has also just finished a successful two weeks' run at the Shubert-Majestic Theatre in Providence, R. I.

Has New England Right on Red Cross Films.

Manager Levine, of the General Film, Boston, announces that his company has the exclusive rights on the Red Cross productions in New England. He reports good business on them. The first production, "Fourth of July in Paris," was shown at B. F. Keith's Boston Theatre the week of August 25.

Exhibitors Aid Four-Minute Men.

Providence, R. I.—Rhode Island had become a hot-bed of German propaganda until theatre managers were asked to give some of their time to blotting out this danger to war work. All the city's theatres joined in giving stages to four-minute speakers. The result was most astonishing. The four-minute speakers took for their text, "Where Did You Get Your Facts." It awoke the public to the truth of the stories that had been circulated with the result that it was soon very unpopular to spread stories detrimental to war work.

Metro's "Kaiser" Film Plays to Capacity.

Lowell, Mass.—General Manager Thomas D. Sorierio, of the Strand Theatre in this city, who has been showing the film, "To Hell with the Kaiser," announces that he had one of the biggest two weeks in the history of the theatre. He is showing the film at the Park Theatre, Boston, the week of September 12, which is also under his management.

Bay State Company Buys the Music Hall.

Leominster, Mass.—The Music Hall has purchased a $10,000 organ. This popular theatre has been taken over by the Bay State Theatre Company under the management of Cedric E. Gorman. Manager Gorman has superintended the complete renovation of the theatre, and it is now one of the finest in this section. Dan O'Keefe is the local manager.

Releases Her Husband for War Work.

Lynn, Mass.—Another man has been released for war work in this city through the action of Mrs. "Al" Newhall in taking over the management of a theatre in which her husband is interested. Mr. Newhall is the active head of one of Lynn's largest theatres. His second house he put in charge of a manager. The drafting of young men took away his help to such an extend that he had to hire girl ushers, and his wife has now been pressed into service as head of his second theatre. She has taken the entire management of the house, visiting Boston each week to select her own films. She is meeting with remarkable success. She is the mother of two children.

Fire Destroys the Auburn Theatre.

Auburn, R. I.—The Auburn Theatre has been destroyed by fire, and may not be rebuilt during the war. The loss was $10,000. The theatre was owned by Councilman Alfred Barolet, of Clanston. The loss was covered by insurance.

Hartwerck Building Theatre in Taunton.

Taunton, Mass.—An exclusive motion picture house is being built in this town by Manager Hartwerck, of the Bijou, also of Taunton. The theatre, which is to seat 1,000 on the main floor, is rapidly nearing completion, and is expected to open about October 1. The spot was formerly the site of an old skating rink, and it is well located. The interior decorations of the theatre will make it the most magnificent in the town. The theatre will be named the Strand.

Texas Brevities.

John Saeg, of Ennis, owner of the Jewel and Grand theatres of that town, has gone to Hot Springs, Ark., for his health. He has been ill for some while.

Mrs. B. O. Bartell has sold her Dixie Theatre at Humble, Texas, to S. Smith. The theatre is closed while it is being remodeled.

Jack Parsons, for many years in the theatrical business, has opened the Bauxite Theatre at Bauxite, Ark.

Motion picture operators belonging to Local 330, at Cleburne, Texas, in September closed a new contract with the exhibitors there securing a substantial increase in wages.

Hope, Arkansas, has a new theatre. It was opened early in September by J. N. Collins.

The Orpheo Theatre at Pine Bluff, Arkansas, is being remodeled by Sol Korberg. When complete it will seat 1,150 persons.

Wigwam Theatre No. 2 at San Antonio, which is owned by J. C. Christopher, has abandoned vaudeville and is running pictures only. Wigwam No. 1, owned by W. C. Lytle at San Antonio, is being remodeled.

STATE FAIR STIMULATES BUSINESS

Influx of Out-of-Town Exhibitors Results in Many New Bookings with Minneapolis Exchanges

By William Edward Mulligan, Minneapolis Journal, Minneapolis, Minn.

EXHIBITORS of the Northwest flocked to the Twin Cities during the first week of September when they attended the Minnesota state fair and incidentally booked heavily for the fall and winter months at the various exchanges. The fair, which had a record attendance of 450,000, stimulated a large amount of business for not only the exchanges, but also for local moving picture houses, all of which drew large audiences. Among the out of town exhibitors who attended the fair and transacted business with the local exchanges were: F. F. Trowbridge, Temple Theatre, Washburn, Wis.; W. E. Thieveldt, Grand Theatre, Jordan, Minn.; John Pesava, Orpheum Theatre, Pelican Rapids, Minn.; Mrs. H. Starkey, Star Theatre, Le Sueur, Minn.; Fred Larkin, Green Theatre, Anoka, Minn.; H. M. Thomas, Metropolitan Theatre, Owatonna, Minn.; Oliver Whaley, Elko Theatre, Bemidji, Minn.; Louis Frana, Olympia Theatre, Calmar, Iowa; J. R. Simpson, Ideal Theatre, South St. Paul, Minn.; T. Devereaux, International Falls, Minn.; M. Michalson, Garden Theatre, Rochester, Minn.; Ralph Parker, Sunbeam Theatre, Duluth, Minn.; M. Sorenson, Casino Theatre, Milaca, Minn.; F. F. Anderson, Princess Theatre, Aberdeen, S. D.; J. L. Hasbrouck, Grand Theatre, Graceville, Minn.; M. C. Jensen, opera house, Mora, Minn.; J. Gould, Crystal Theatre, Glencoe, Minn.; V. B. Vallenu, Broadway, Albert Lea, Minn.; Casson Kent, City Hall, Parkers Prairie, Minn.; L. J. Mott, Pleasant Hour Theatre, Raymond, S. D.; A. L. Hess, Yankton Theatre, Yankton, S. D.; M. Nelson, Bentley-Grand Theatre, Milbank, S. D.; A. F. Dibbs, Idle Hour, Hutchinson, Minn.; Mrs. Gaylor, Strand Theatre, Winona, Minn.; A. C. Buchanan, Savoy Theatre, Superior, Wis.; H. A. Schwahn, Eau Claire Theatre, Eau Claire, Wis.; W. Smith, Grand Theatre, Menominee, Mich.; W. L. Brown, opera house, Wahpeton, N. D.; Tom Fraser, Star Theatre, Stanley, Wis.

The record-breaking success of the fair, notwithstanding war times, kindled much optimism for the future among moving picture men.

R. & F. Liberty Theatre Opens.

Ruben & Finkelstein have opened their new Liberty Theatre in St. Paul under the management of Theodore Hays, who also has charge of the New Garrick in that city. The New Liberty, which was formerly operated under the name of the Hippodrome, has been closed for a short time undergoing alterations.

Calhoun Theatre Opened.

The Calhoun Theatre, one of the most popular Minneapolis neighborhood houses, opened on Sunday, September 15, after having been closed for the past three months because of the exodus of vacationists to the lakes for the summer. Hugh C. Andress, who is manager of both the Calhoun and Lagoon Theatres, states that the latter theatre, which remained open throughout the summer months, enjoyed a splendid business for the season. The Lagoon Theatre has been a success from the start and Palima's fine jazz band has proven a strong attraction.

Schwartzbine Resigns.

Joseph Schwartzbine has resigned as manager of the Minneapolis branch of the United Picture Theatres of America. He announced that he would make a public statement within the next two weeks explaining his reasons for leaving that corporation.

Johnston Back on Job.

After four days of intensive training in the United States army, John Le Roy Johnston, Universal publicity expert, has returned to Minneapolis from Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., and is back at his old post. Johnston was one of 15 out of 134 St. Paul draftees rejected from service because of defective vision. He declares that he is "not through yet," and that when a call for service at another camp comes he will be only too glad to respond, as he never had better treatment in his life than that which was accorded him during his brief association with the military forces.

New Garden to Be Overhauled.

Billy B. Watson, manager of the New Garden Theatre, of Minneapolis, closed his theatre temporarily for repairs on September 11 following the showing of Monroe Salisbury in "That Devil Batcese." The New Garden will be completely redecorated and overhauled preparatory to coming under the management of Ruben & Finkelstein.

Holmes Observes Anniversary.

E. S. Holmes observed a noteworthy achievement on September 1, the first anniversary of his career as office manager of the Minneapolis Vitagraph exchange. It is regarded as a noteworthy achievement in local film circles in view of the fact that there is only one other Minneapolis exchange manager that has remained with one organization in that capacity for a longer period—Harry Rathner, manager of the Minneapolis Select exchange.

Long Run Opened.

F. Y. Elliott, office manager of the Elliott Film Corporation, of Minneapolis, announces that a deal has been made between the Milwaukee Film Club and General Manager John Elliott, which will result in the showing of the spectacular production, "The Garden of Allah," in a run of 28 consecutive days at suburban theatres of Milwaukee. "The Garden of Allah" played to good business for an entire week at the Minneapolis New Garrick Theatre last spring. It is ranked as one of the best drawing cards in the Elliott list.

Metro Doing Well.

Harry Cohen, special representative of the Metro Pictures Corporation, spent several days in Minneapolis conferring with Harry Fisher, manager of the Minneapolis Metro exchange. He reports excellent business throughout the Metro territory. He left Minneapolis for Milwaukee, where he will visit the local Metro force before returning to New York.

Baltimore News Letter

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mt. Royal terrace, Baltimore, Maryland

New Manager at Garden.

THE affairs of the Garden Theatre, Lexington street at Park avenue, of which Charles E. Whitehurst is the president, are now in the hands of George List, who is well known in Baltimore theatrical circles and who for some years acted as general manager for Pierce & Scheck when those pioneer film men operated a large circuit of theatres. For several years past Mr. List has been managing the Opera House at Frederick, Maryland.

Will Represent Super Film.

Having been appointed the Baltimore representative of the Super Film Attractions, Inc., of which Sidney B. Lust, of Washington, D. C., is the president, J. I. Busk, has opened an office in the Wizard Theatre Building. Mr. Buck for some years was associated with the Pathe Company. He is handling the Gaumont serial for this territory for Mr. Lust.

June Caprice Appears in Person.

Through special arrangements with the Fox Film Company, Marcus Loew, of New York, had June Caprice the pretty screen star of that company, personally appear at Loew's Hippodrome Theatre in Baltimore at each performance during the week of September 9. In conjunction with the appearance of Miss Caprice at the Hippodrome, to make a short talk to the audience, one of her best pictures, "Miss Innocence," was screened. George A. McDermitt, the courteous manager of this playhouse, did everything in his power to make the Screen star enjoy her week in Baltimore. Mr. Loew stopped over in Baltimore on Wednesday to see how things were progressing.

Theatres Doing War Work.

Twenty-five thousand free tickets to theatres are now being distributed weekly to the men in uniform through the War Camp Community Service. But in order that the theatres may increase their activities along this line, a number of the managers are now displaying the familiar Red Circle in their lobbies or box offices. A sign, which is worded as follows, is hung near the red circle:

> Surround the camps with hospitality. We are affiliated with the War Camp Community Service of the War Department and Navy Department Commissions on Training Camp Activities in extending the hospitality of Baltimore to men in the service of the United States.

The following theatres which frequently show film plays or use moving pictures as part of their programs, are co-operating with this work: Ford's Opera House, Charles E. and John T. Ford; Maryland, Frederick C. Schanberger; Loew's Hippodrome, George A. McDermitt; Garden, Charles E. Whitehurst; Academy of Music, Harry A. Henkel, and the Auditorium, Leonard McLaughlin.

Plans Floating Theatres.

Plans are now being made by an organization, represented by John Barry Ryan, of New York, son of Thomas Fortune Ryan, to build two floating theatres which will carry amusement for the sailors in the United States Navy. Mr. Ryan came to Baltimore on Thursday, September 5, and, accompanied by B. Howell Griswold, Jr., in this city, called on Mayor J. H. Preston and Cardinal Gibbons. At the end of his interview with each he obtained their co-operation for the movement. They became contributing members of the organization.

Making Health Inspection.

In order that the diseases, which are spread through contaminated atmosphere, may be better fought by the Health Department of Baltimore City, Health Commissioner John D. Blake is having his inspectors make a thorough inspection of the ventilating conditions of all the theatres in Baltimore City, and especially those showing moving pictures.

Baltimore Briefs.

A moving picture machine and a screen has been installed in the Service Hotel, Holliday and Lexington streets, by Louis A. Delloff, manager of the New Theatre, 210 West Lexington street, so that moving picture may be shown for the men in uniform.

A private view of the moving picture "The Island of Lost Treasures," showing the working of the Williamson Brothers of Norfolk, Va., invention, was given at Ford's Opera House on Thursday, September 5.

Moving pictures still continue to be an attraction at the Y. M. C. A. Central Building in Baltimore. A performance was given on the roof garden on Sunday night, September 8.

George List, manager of the Garden Theatre, Lexington street at Park avenue, reopened the ball room of this theatre to the public on Thursday evening, September 12. It has been redecorated in an oriental manner.

Gordon L. Faulkner, a member of the 110th Machine Gun Company, and a brother of Kenneth G. Faulkner, organist at the Parkway Theatre, 3-9 West North avenue, has been killed according to word received from his father in Chester, Pa.

FRANK HALL OPENS DETROIT BRANCH

President of Producers Distributing Corporation Establishes Office at 712 Owen Building

By Jacob Smith, 719 Free Press Building, Detroit, Mich.

THE latest producing company to establish a Detroit office is the Producers' Distributing Corporation, of New York City, of which Frank Hall is president. Arrangements for the opening of the Detroit branch were completed last week, when Lynn S. Card, general manager of the company, was in town. He appointed W. A. Haynes as Detroit manager. Mr. Hayes has been for some time with the Dawn Masterplay Company, where he has done excellent sales work. The same day that Mr. Haynes was given the appointment he closed a deal whereby the company's first picture, "Her Mistake," will play a two weeks' engagement at the New Campus Theatre. The policy of the company is to release at the start a series of twelve features, selling them to the exhibitors at $10, $20 and $30 per day, depending, of course, upon the size of the theatre and playing dates. Offices have already been opened at 712 Owen Building.

Detroit Theatres Please William Fox.

William Fox paid Detroit a visit on September 7 accompanied by his personal representative and Paul C. Mooney, central division manager of the Fox Film Corporation. Mr. Fox visited the Detroit exchange, where he personally met the employes. He also called at the ltading theatres and paid Detroit a high compliment for its fine theatres and the splendid way in which they are conducted. It was his first visit to Detroit in many years. He came to Detroit from Cleveland, and from the motor city went to Chicago to attend the national convention of exhibitors.

Hyman In Control of Dawn Company.

Arthur S. Hyman, general manager of the Dawn Masterplay Company, has taken full control of the company and plans to completely reorganize its methods and policies. I. M. Freiberg is no longer connected with the company, and Warren G. McCoy has been appointed exchange manager for Mr. Hyman. He has been with the firm for over a year and his promotion is a deserving one.

"We grew faster than we anticipated and naturally we made some mistakes and incurred some misunderstandings, but under our new policy the Dawn will be a bigger factor than ever in the independent buying market, having new resources at our command and the best organization we ever had," said Mr. Hyman. "We have returned to the Triangle the Talmadge and Keenan reissues and we will no longer distribute the Ford Weekly. Our entire attention will be diverted to the personal wants of exhibitors and the buying of new big features."

"Salome" to Start Indefinite Run.

"Salome" will start an indefinite run at the Adams Theatre, Detroit, the week of September 15. This picture is to play throughout the state as a road show, which means percentage. It's a Fox-Special with Theda Bar.

Griffith Film Extends Run at Campus.

"Hearts of the World," which concluded its eleventh week at the New Campus Theatre, Detroit, on September 6, is destined to remain at least for two weeks more, as business has steadily improved since the cool weather. So far it holds the record for consecutive weeks booking of any picture, even including "The Birth of a Nation." Manager Arthur S. Hyman, of the Dawn Masterplay Company, says five prints are now booked throughout the State.

Carmichael Leaves for Europe.

Field Carmichael, former Fox manager at Detroit, left September 8 for New York City from where he will sail for Europe. Mr. Carmichael will be the European representative for the Fox Film Corporation in Great Britain, Spain and France, and Italy, making his headquarters in London. Good-bye and good luck, Field, from the writer and all your Michigan friends.

Separate Program for Each Kunsky House.

A separate program for each of its ten theatres is the latest policy of the Kunsky enterprises. Harry R. Guest is editing all of them. Each program is four pages in size and retains the title "Weekly Film News," while at the bottom is the name of the particular house, and the matter pertains to that house exclusively.

Regent's Business Satisfies Miles.

Charles H. Miles, lessee of the Regent Theatre, Detroit, expresses great satisfaction over the business of that playhouse for the first two weeks, and says that if business just holds where it has started throughout the balance of the year he will feel that his change of policy was the right one. Mr. Miles is to be given great credit for one thing—he is certainly giving the shows. The theatre seats over 2,000, and Mr. Miles has a thirty-five piece orchestra, organist, Henry Santrey, singer, besides giving about ten reels of pictures, including feature, news-weekly, comedy and educational subjects.

Theatres Make Changes in Policy.

The Colonial Theatre, Detroit, Woodward and Sibley streets, will inaugurate a change of policy effective September 21. After that time changes will be made on Sundays and Thursdays instead of four times a week.

Another theatre that is changing its policy—the first time in years—is the Empire, owned by A. J. Gilligham. Starting the first of October the daily change policy will be abandoned for a new policy of four changes weekly.

Exhibitors Want Capitol Comedies.

Manager J. E. Flynn, of the Goldwyn Exchange, reports that business is excellent on the Goldwyn-Capitol Comedies. "Exhibitors seem to be waking up to tne fact that these comedies are really clever and that, while they are not slap-stick, they are refreshing to the public as a change from the other type," said Mr. Flynn. "We are having a big call for them, and especially among the better class of theatres throughout the entire state."

WEEK'S DIGEST OF CAPITAL CITY NEWS

Well-Known Film Men Join Army and Navy—War Department Warns Against Amusement Profiteers

By Clarence L. Linz, 622 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C.

Made Second Lieutenant in Sanitary Corps.

FRANK GODWIN, a Washington boy, who has been actively connected with motion picture work for the Government, has just received a commission as second lieutenant in the sanitary corps of the army. Lieutenant Godwin enlisted in the army about seven months ago, waiving exemptions. He was put to work in the laboratory of the Army Medical Museum, where he developed a remarkably quick acting shutter and film release, which will be used for military work.

The invention of Lieutenant Godwin enables the military photographers to take action pictures later to be shown for educational purposes. For instance, photographs are taken of bayonet drill and from them instructors can discern the weak points and rough action and can remedy the defects by further training. He has also taken some remarkable pictures from airplanes.

Lieutenant Godwin, who was born in Washington and is the brother of Earl Godwin, of the Washington Times, who, on a number of occasions, has helped the motion picture men in civic matters, was located for some time in Philadelphia, where he did camera work.

Guy Brandt a Second Lieutenant.

Guy Brandt, who for some time was connected with the K-E-S-E exchange when it flourished in this city, and with other exchanges in various capacities, received the congratulations of his former coworkers when visiting Washington recently, he having won a commission as second lieuteant.

Lieutenant Brandt was inducted into the army some months ago as a raw recruit. He went at the job just as though he was trying to sell an exhibitor service, and step by step he got to the highest point in the enlisted ranks, becoming top sergeant, and then he was given an opportunity to gain a commission.

Miss Sarah Flax Joins the Colors.

The Marine Corps recently sent out an S. O. S. (save our service, probably) for women to replace the men needed in the line. The women enlist for a period of four years, just as the men do, and swear to do their bit. The scheme is rather new, so that few have consented to so join the colors, but among those whose names appear on the honor roll is that of Miss Sarah Flax, for the past six years in the employ of the General Film Company, in this city. Miss Flax has had charge of the poster department. She is the sister of Jake Flax, just promoted to the position of manager of the General Film Company exchange here, and Sam Flax, who is manager of the Metro exchange.

Biron Enlists in the Navy.

L. H. Biron, who has been in the employ of Pathe, Inc., as sales promotion clerk, has enlisted in the naval service. It develops that Mr. Biron made application for enlistment some weeks ago, before the ban was placed on enlistments and commissions, and so was permitted to "get in." He has been sent to Norfolk, Va., for training. Mr. Biron is a brother of the two Biron boys who operate the Liberty Theatre, on North Capital street.

Zama Enters the Merchant Marine.

M. A. Zama, a salesman for Pathe, following the signing of the treaty between the United States and Italy, whereby Italian citizens in this country became subject to our draft laws and regulations, has entered the merchant marine. Mr. Zama will be of value in the service because of the fluency with which he speaks several of the European languages.

Garner Goes to Super Films.

Leo Garner, recently with the First National Exhibitors' Circuit in Atlanta, Ga., has re-entered the employ of Sidney B. Lust and will be the office man for Super Films Attractions, Inc.

Warns Against Amusement Profiteers.

An order has just been issued by the War Department instructing army camp commanders to post lists of amusement places which discriminate against or profiteer on men in uniform so that they will be warned against such places.

Exchanges Contribute to Tobacco Fund.

The Walter Reed Hospital Tobacco Fund, placed with the Washington correspondent of the Moving Picture World for distribution, was enlarged by a donation of a quart of pennies from the Sixth street exchanges (General, Metro and Pathe) on the occasion of the special meeting of the Washington Film Exchange Managers' Association. At this meeting the other exchanges pledged themselves to duplicate this performance and to arrange to have other places where sufferers from the trenches are being cared for similarly supplied with smokes and other luxuries.

DES MOINES HAS BIG PARAMOUNT WEEK

All Leading Theatres Show Paramount and Artcraft Pictures—Waging Billboard Campaign

By J. L. Shipley, 615 Locust Street, Des Moines, Iowa.

PARAMOUNT WEEK went over with a bang in the leading Des Moines theatres. The Garden showed Jack Barrymore in "On the Quiet" the first half and Elsie Ferguson in "Heart of the Wilds" the last half. The Palace ran "The Hun Within" the entire week. All local papers carried Paramount week ads ranging in size from a quarter page to a page. Paramount is also waging a big billboard campaign announcing their subjects. The Garden and Palace theatres are making use of sixteen 24-sheet boards.

Griffith Film Goes Big at Rialto.

The "Eyes of the World," the Griffith film, was a big draw at the Rialto. It played to large audiences all week at 25c. admission with the boxes held at 50c. The popularity of the story plus a big publicity campaign turned the trick.

Metro Offices Move to Omaha.

The local Metro office which has been in operation for about three years has been moved to Omaha, it being the opinion of officials of that company that the Iowa and Nebraska business can be better handled from that point. William Skirboll continues, for the present at least, as manager.

Big Campaign for War Feature.

The A. H. Blank Enterprises is putting over a big campaign on "Italy's Flaming Front." The picture is booked for a long run at the Palace and dates have been arranged in many of the larger Iowa and Nebraska towns already. Mr. Blank announces a great deal of interest among exhibitors in the forthcoming Charlie Chaplin "Shoulder Arms."

200 Lawyers See "The Public Defender."

Manager Garland of the Yale Photoplay Company, held a trade showing of his new feature, "The Public Defender," at the Garden Theatre last week, inviting all the Des Moines attorneys, owing to the legal phase about which the story is built. Nearly 200 lawyers were in attendance and praised the acting of Frank Keenan and Robert Edeson, the stars. Mr. Garland has another new feature, "The Master Crook," with Edmund Breese as the star. A trade showing will be held soon.

New Staff at Pathe Office.

L. A. Sheridan, manager of the Des Moines Pathe office, who was hit hard by the last draft, losing all his roadmen, has a new staff as follows: R. S. Stackhouse, H. H. Savereid, S. Aronowtiz and E. S. Pickler, who have been assigned to various sections of the state. C. W. Ross, former star roadman, is now in the office as office manager. Mr. Sheridan last week made a trip through eastern Iowa. On his return he reported that "Hands Up," the new serial, is booking so rapidly that a new print had to be ordered to take care of the business. The same may be said of the Allies War Review. The Garden and Orpheum Theatres are now running this weekly first run in Iowa.

Heavy Bookings on Y. M. C. A. "Rookie" Film.

M. J. Frisch, of the Universal exchange, is receiving many bookings on "On Around the Clock with a Rookie," the one reeler sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. and distributed by Universal. This picture was a feature at the Palace the first half of the week. Mr. Frisch is well pleased with the volume of new business that is coming in and looks for one of the best year's Universal has ever had in this territory.

Goldwyn Men Close Big Contracts.

Richard Robertson, Kansas City manager for Goldwyn, accompanied by Frank Gehring, Nebraska roadman for that company, visited Des Moines this week and closed contracts with A. H. Blank for Geraldine Farrar, the Rex Beach series, Madge Kennedy and Tom Moore for the Garden and Palace theatres. A Frankle of the Strand contracted for Mae Marsh, Pauline Frederick and Mabel Normand, giving Goldwyn one hundred per cent. representation here on their new star series.

Drue to Open Picture Theatre.

A new picture house seating 400 and sponsored by M. Drue, is about to open on the east side. Drue was formerly interested in the A-Muse-U and sold out his interest before promoting the new house.

Blank on Business and Pleasure Trip.

A. H. Blank spent the week in Davenport and Chicago on a business and pleasure trip. Mr. Blank now divides his time between Omaha and Des Moines, but retains his residence and executive office in Des Moines.

Des Moines Theatres May Raise Admissions.

Theatre managers contemplate raising admission to 20 cents if the new ruling on additional tax stands without amendment. Many of the larger towns in Iowa are now charging 20 cents where 15 cents was the former scale, and report that business has not suffered as a consequence.

Helmts Becomes Film Salesman.

E. H. Helmts, former manager of the Auditorium at Mt. Pleasant, is now roadman for the Des Moines Film and Supply Company, distributors of Paramount-Artcraft. Mr. Helmts has just returned from a trip to the West Coast.

Indiana Trade Letter

By Indiana Trade News Service, 69 Layman Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

American Theatre to Be Renovated.

TERRE HAUTE—When the new Liberty Theatre at Eighth street and Wabash avenue is dedicated, some time within the next ten days, the American Theatre will close its doors to remain closed for a period of three weeks. During this period the decorators and doctors of badly arranged theatres will be at work making a new interior for the American.

The one big improvement contemplated by the management is the elimination of the brass railed boxes, which, for some reason or other, never appealed to the patrons of the house. Also a number of new seats, wide enough to accommodate Fatty Arbuckle himself, will be installed. The proposed improvements will not cut down the seating capacity to any appreciable extent for the old boxes were so constructed as to take up more room than ordinary seats and this space will be conserved.

When the American reopens about the first of October, Manager Shannon Katzenbach expects to have one of the most handsome theatres in Indiana.

Indianapolis Mayor to Censor Fox Film.

Indianapolis.—Charles W. Jewett, mayor, who essayed the role of a censorship committee all by himself when "Cleopatra" was presented at the Circle Theatre last winter, announced this week that he will view the first production of the Fox film, "Salome," a Theda Bara film, at English's Theatre, Sunday, and if he finds it on the same order as the other Bara film at the Circle last winter, will order it discontinued.

Henry K. Burton, general representative of the firm of Barton & Olson, which has booked the big picture, said the producers of "Salome" have assured him that it contains no objectionable scenes.

Oliver Theatre Rebooks Gerard's Film.

South Bend—"My Four Years in Germany," the picture adaptation of Ambassador Gerard's remarkable book, will play a return engagement of four days at the Oliver Theatre starting next Sunday afternoon. When the picture was shown here for a week earlier in the summer, there was such a demand for seats that many were unable to get into the theatre, and the engagement at that time was extended for three days. Even then many people were disappointed in not seeing the picture, and the management had to promise to bring it back for a return date.

Carlton Manager of Sipe Theatre.

Kokomo.—The Sipe Theatre, which has been closed for several weeks, opened Labor Day with Sam Carlton, formerly manager of a theatre at Frankfort, as managing director and, judging from the crowds which attended the opening, the prospects for a successful season are exceedingly bright. Mr. Carlton is running combined vaudeville and photoplays.

Crystal Reopened on Labor Day.

Anderson.—The Crystal Theatre reopened on Labor Day and showed four performances, two matinees and two at night to capacity houses. The theatre has been redecorated and thoroughly gone over and is now as attractive a place as the theatre-going public could desire. J. Muller, manager, expressed himself as well satisfied with the first performances in his theatre and said he received many compliments from his patrons.

Cleveland News Letter

By M. A. Malaney, 607 Belmont Building, Cleveland, Ohio.

Ohio First National to Hold Meeting.

ALL arrangements are complete for the first annual convention of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit of Ohio, which will be held in Cleveland, September 17 and 18. Over fifty requests for hotel reservations were received up to September 10 and at least one hundred and fifty more members will be on hand, who intend to stay only for a day.

A committee of Cleveland members of the circuit has been named by President E. Mandelbaum to handle the affair. They are Messrs. Al Friedman, of the Metropolitan; Dave Schuman, of the Dennison Square; Sam Deutsch, of the Sun; Scovill, of the Ezella; Miller, of the Olympia.

The convention opens with a noon luncheon at a leading hotel, yet to be selected; a business meeting at 2.30 and in the evening theatre parties at the leading "movie" houses. On the second day there will be a business meeting at 1 p. m.; photographs will be taken at 2.30, after which there will be an auto ride throughout the city. In the evening there will be a banquet.

Takes Over the Foursquare Exchange.

The Cleveland Foursquare exchange has changed hands, control of it passing into the hands of Joseph Diemer and Bert Stern.

The deal was brought about when "Hustling Joe" Horwitz, of Detroit, sold his interests to Messrs. Diener and Stern. These gentlemen will continue to operate it in the same headquarters in the Sloan Building at the same time operating the Sterling Film Exchange at the same location.

William Fox Visits Cleveland.

William Fox appeared in Cleveland last week quite unexpectedly as far as the exhibitors or newspapers knew, and left the same day for the Chicago convention.

Mr. Fox was the guest of District Manager P. C. Mooney. He had never been in the city since the opening of his first exchange in Cleveland. As the Fox exchange had just moved into the second floor of the Belmont Building he had a chance to inspect the new and complete exchange and expressed his utmost approval of it.

Mr. Mooney accompanied Mr. Fox to Detroit, where he inspected the exchange and then left for Chicago.

Concerning Current Productions

"ASHES OF LOVE."

Graphic Film Production Tells Story of Unrequited Love.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THE creator of this six-part production of the Graphic Film Corporation, Ivan Abramson, has chosen very sombre dramatic material for the story. While the splendid cast introduced at the beginning, with James K. Hackett, Effie Shannon and Mable Juliene Scott in leading roles, gives promise of a strong production, the nature of the plot itself proves disappointing. It bears too heavily upon the sad side of life, and with the exception of one or two humorous touches toward the close is almost wholly without the usual comedy relief in stories of the semi-tragic type.

James K. Hackett is cast in the part of Arthur Woodridge, a wealthy philanthropist, who has founded the Free Food Home for deserving poor. He adores his wife, Helen, but she, in spite of his tender regard for her, does not return his love. Helen falls a victim to the wiles of a married man named Howard, and is later apprehended dining with him at an inn.

Following her discovery with Howard, Helen suffers great remorse and this finally leads to a fatal illness. During the sickness she decides many times to confess to her husband, but cannot bring herself to the point and dies without telling him of her sin. The husband broods over her death and almost loses his reason. Mr. Hackett gives a telling representation of the grieving husband.

There are numerous other features of the plot, which involves three different sets of characters whose love will not run smoothly. There are so many divergent threads of interest that it continually breaks the continuity and thus robs the production of suspense.

Others in the cast are Paula Shay, Ruby de Remer, Dora Mills Adams, Hugh Thompson, William B. Davidson, William Bechtel and Thea Talbot.

"BEHIND THE LINES IN ITALY."

Italian Propaganda Picture of Industrial Interest to be Released by Kleine.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

A PRIVATE exhibition at Wurlitzer Hall, New York City, on Thursday evening, September 12, of an Italian propaganda picture revealed many interesting facts regarding Italy's industrial resources. The evening opened with a stirring address in the Italian tongue by Captain Sabelli which was greeted from time to time with enthusiastic cries of "Brava!" accompanied by loud applause.

The picture, which is being presented by George Kleine, comprises about 5,300 feet of film, the battle scenes of which were photographed by the cinematographic division of the Italian Army. The industrial portions of the film attributed to Cines, of Rome, are well photographed and well fitted to illustrate to the world Italy's huge effort in the cause of victory.

In assembling the picture a successful effort has been made to compare not only ancient warfare with modern methods but also Italy's military resources in 1914 with what they are today. In the course of the picture we visit the munition plants and witness the actual making of big guns, shells, machine guns, mortars, gas bombs and grenades. The history of the Italian aeroplane and its manufacture is encompassed, the making of wire for barbed wire entanglements is shown in detail, and the manufacture of steel is given a spectacular presentation. The making of lenses for the great search lights is an interesting picture. We also visit the great iron mines on the island of Elba, Italy's one iron resource. Here one is astonished at the elaborate system of machinery which facilitates the production of iron, one of war's greatest necessities. The extent to which Italy's women have responded to the call is displayed by their remarkable activities in the munition factories.

We believe that this is the largest industrial picture that the moving picture industry has dared to turn out, and we predict for it fine success both from a commercial and a propaganda standpoint.

"BY THE WORLD FORGOT."

Vitagraph Story of Love and Adventure on South Sea Islands Features Hedda Nova.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE story of the five-reel Vitagraph feature for September 16, written by Cyrus Townsend Brady, is reminiscent. It is suggestive in spots of more than one other film production including "The Sea Wolf." And it is only truthful to say that the most convincing scenes in the picture are those dealing with the shanghaiing of Derrick Van Beekman through the machinations of a rival. Hedda Nova is the featured member of the cast and J. Frank Glendon and Ed. Alexander and Patricia Palmer have the roles next in importance. In the construction of the picture there seems to be a slight defect. The impression of the writer is that a better effect could have been obtained by introducing the South Sea Islanders earlier in the story, thereby establishing a more substantial reason for featuring the role of the South Sea Island maid.

As the story goes, a son of one wealthy house and the daughter of another have become betrothed at the wish of their parents, while neither cares for the other. The feminine part of the bargain is already in love with another man, who in order to prevent the taking place of the marriage at which he is to occupy the position of best man only instead of bridegroom, enters into a scheme with a sea captain friend of his to shanghai the bridegroom. The shanghaied man escapes in a small boat after much abuse aboard the vessel, and discovers a colony of Dutch people who have lived for a century or so on a South Sea island, not knowing from whence they came. He falls in love with the daughter of the chief, and when he is discovered by his friends decides to marry the island maid.

"THE ATOM"

Pauline Starke Excellent as "Slavey" in Rather Commonplace Triangle Picture.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

FAMILIARITY with stage life would have assisted Catharine Carr in writing "The Atom," a five-part Triangle picture directed by William Dowlan and presenting Pauline Starke as the star. The story is rather commonplace all through, but it will entertain the class of spectators that never trouble to look beneath the surface of things and love a romantic looking hero and a persecuted heroine who meet all sorts of misfortunes and experience one misunderstanding after the other until the end of the last reel.

The story is well acted. Pauline Starke takes first honors as a little "slavey" in a cheap boarding house who is an intense admirer of the leading man of a second-rate stock company. The actor is one of the lodgers and is in love with the leading lady. A fire in the theatre during a performance disfigures the hero, whose name is Montague Boothe. He loses his engagement, and the leading lady deserts him.

Jenny, the "slavey," goes to his room to offer her sympathy; the landlady finds her there and turns them both out of the house. Jenny can sing and she and Boothe start out with a medicine show, the actor's duties consisting of standing on the tailboard of the wagon and reciting "Hamlet's" soliloquy and then selling death-defying pellets. Business is good and Boothe takes up a homestead claim out West. The leading lady hears of how things are going and arrives on the scene with a companion who she claims is her brother. The heroine is prepared to sacrifice her happiness and help Montague marry the leading lady, but Boothe finds out her true character and Jenny is rewarded by winning him for herself.

Harry Mestayer, as Boothe; Belle Bennett, as the leading lady; Ruth Handforth, as Miss Miggs; Charles Force, as Oldson; Lincoln Stedman, as Ethelbert; Gene Burr, as Benson, and Tom Buckingham, as Jerry, complete the cast. Elgin Leslie was the cameraman.

"MISFITS AND MATRIMONY."

First of Vitagraph's Big V Specials Welcome Addition as Clean Two-Reel Comedy.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

VITAGRAPH'S decision to increase the length of their Big V farce comedies will doubtless be met with enthusiasm by exhibitors and patrons throughout the country. Earle Montgomery and Joe Rock are featured in this number, and are particularly daring in houseclimbing and other stunts. The picture opens at a Red Cross entertainment where pretty girls' kisses are sold to the highest bidder. One of the young women whose kisses are being sold, becomes unbalanced and forgetting that she is already married, promises her hand to two rival suitors, each of whom is to meet her at the depot with a minister. In the mixup the number of ministers invited to perform the ceremony increases, and in their eagerness to be in at the finish they take to bicycles in pursuit as the two lovers try to elude each other. Finally the husband of the young woman appears on the scene and puts an end to his wife's flirtations.

"BEANS."

Bluebird Comedy Features Edith Roberts in Leading Role.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

A BRIGHT little comedy number has been produced from this story, entitled "Beans," which was written by John B. Clymer and directed by Jack Dillon. The subject matter turns up but slight plot material, but what there is is handled to the best advantage. The agreeable cast, pleasant tone of the story, the gradually increasing suspense, and satisfying climax, all contribute to make the offering enjoyable.

Edith Roberts is cast in the part of Betty Brewster, daughter of a bean magnate. She has before shown considerable natural ability for light comedy roles and does much to make this number pleasing. In the final scenes she makes a long and rather hazardous ride on a motorcycle.

The story centers very largely about the carrying of a certain contract to San Francisco, where Betty's father hopes to take up an option for a lease on a rival property. Betty, who has been making a personal study of the bean business, which she some day expects to inherit, has agreed to carry the contract. Her trip is the important feature of the story, for she is closely followed by two young attorneys. One of these, Kirk, was sent by her father to aid her, and the other, Wingate, was sent by his rival to intercept the messenger.

In the course of the trip Wingate deceives Betty as to the identity of Kirk, and tricks Betty temporarily out of the papers. She learns who Kirk is while they are imprisoned in a country jail. They escape, recover the papers, and an amusing chase follows, with Betty and Kirk finally arriving with the contract on time.

Others in the cast are Lew Cody, Charles Gerrard and Harry Carter.

"WHEN A WOMAN SINS"

Theda Bara Featured in Fox Offering as Regenerated Vampire.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

IN THIS seven-part number, "When a Woman Sins," Theda Bara attempts the very difficult task of reaching the extremes of feminine degradation and spirituality. Her effort to this end, while not entirely convincing at all times, is certainly interesting. The story, written by Betta Breuil and directed by J. Gordon Edwards, has plenty of plot material for seven reels, though it might have been contained in a less number.

Lillian Marchard, the heroine, portrayed by Theda Bara, is first introduced as a nurse, employed in a hospital. She is of gypsy parentage and has flung aside her bohemian tendencies only as the result of great personal effort. A degenerate man of wealth, Mortimer West, knowing that he is to die soon, sends for a pretty young nurse, and Lillian responds to the call.

In the situations which follow Lillian is attacked by Mortimer West and rescued by his son, Michael, a young divinity student who has himself fallen in love with the nurse. The elder West dies and Michael, thinking Lillian to blame, sends her away. Lillian leaves, still loving him, and vowing to have revenge. She becomes a successful actress, known as Poppea, and amuses herself meanwhile with Michael's cousin, Reggie, a weak young man through whom she hopes to humiliate Michael. The engagement with Reggie is broken on the eve of the wedding and he shoots himself. Michael, to whom Lillian appealed, again casts off the girl, who then threatens to renounce all her good impulses and become an utterly abandoned woman. But in the end she is redeemed through Michael's love and religion.

Theda Bara does some strong work in this number, but her transitions from good to bad and back again lack the touch of reality at times. Part of this may be due to a trick of frequent posing of a semi-conscious sort, which tends to render her acting artificial; in other words, her own personality intrudes upon the character she is portraying, thus interrupting the story.

The story is theatrical at times, but will no doubt have wide appeal. Others in the cast are Joseph Swickard, Albert Roscoe, Ogden Crane, Alfred Fremont, Jack Rollens and Genevieve Blinn.

"BEWARE OF BOARDERS"

Paramount-Sennett Farce with Chester Conklin and Ford Stirling in a Roaring Mixup.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THERE is a lively tendency visible throughout this farce to parody some of those serious screen stories which are funny without intending to be, particularly those of outworn incident such as chasing important war documents which pass from hand to hand and purloining the pearls. Jack Cooper is a burglar who gets the "papers" constantly when he is after the pearls, and Ford Sterling a spy who endlessly gets the pearls, while he is after the "papers." But the most farcical work falls to Chester Conklin, or he makes it so, it does not matter which, probably both, as the jealous husband of a flighty wife in what he calls a "house full of lovers," consisting of the spy, the burglar and sundry detectives, all in hiding, all trying to avoid him and each other; altogether a roaring mixup of most amusing character. "Beware of Boarders" is a winner.

"A WOMAN OF IMPULSE"

Paramount Presents Lina Cavalieri in an Adaptation from the Play by Louis K. Anspacher.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

IN personality and delicate interpretation, Lina Cavalieri has very few equals, and she contributes these elements in high value to a story which greatly limits her opportunities. Of course she is a delight to the eye at every moment, her natural beauty always framed in good taste, her movements graceful, her poise artistic, but she is given very little to do that could be called "dramatic" until the concluding scenes of the play. The real story is located at New Orleans, when a prima donna, impersonated by the lovely Lina, visits a stilted old family there in company with her titled husband, a cousin of the Louisiana family. Her young husband, Count Nerval, is jealous of his cousin, Phillip, and discovers his impulsive wife in the latter's arms. She is not there by her own wish, and she stabs Phillip with a dagger she carries in her hair. She thereupon faints.

In a family council she is accused of killing Phillip, and she confesses to stabbing him once. It is discovered by a young American doctor who has been paying attention to the Diva's sister that the murdered man was stabbed twice. The impulsive woman is not arrested for murderous assault. She is set free without trial when an octoroon girl fortuitously confesses that she finished the job from jealousy. There is a long preparation for this murderous impulse, and the improbable confession, the latter without visible motive, not enough material for a full-sized photodrama. The scenic effects are all in good taste, and the entire support effective, but the story operates largely as a vehicle for the beautiful prima donna to display those graces which have contributed not a little to her success in grand opera.

"A PULLMAN BLUNDER"

L-KO Comic Turns Up a Number of Very Laughable Stunts.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

OCCASIONALLY a comic production of the knockabout type gets to skidding along on a series of funny situations that make for real laughter. This two-reel L-KO production, "A Pullman Blunder," is one of that kind. It does not differ essentially from the usual comic in plot or situations, but has a certain irresistible swing that gets the giggles going.

Harry Gribbon, who has had a long and valuable schooling in the comics, appears as an erring husband who has been trifling with too much booze. He is undergoing a certain cure, and while this is in progress his wife gets his pills mixed up with some moth balls and feeds him the latter. The husband so far recovers as to get into further difficulties with a certain bride and groom on a honeymoon trip. Mae Emory appears as his faithful but suspicious wife.

The number also gets considerable humor out of the "work or fight" ruling, with Harry Mann playing the role of detective. Eddie Barry appears as the doctor.

"BONNIE ANNIE LAURIE"

Fox Release Features Peggy Hyland in Charming War Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THOSE who are acquainted with Peggy Hyland in at least one of her previous releases, "Persuasive Peggy," will not regret seeing her in this new offering. It is a quaint Scotch character story, with realistic scenes from the trenches as a striking feature. The old song, "Annie Laurie," still sung wherever Britons are at war, is featured at the beginning and the end, and will of course appear in the musical score accompanying the picture.

The story, written by Hamilton Thompson and directed by Harry Millarde, is one of delicate sentiment, altogether pleasing in its simple heart interest. The Scotch characterizations are excellent as are also the village scenes at the beginning. The trench and hospital scenes leave nothing to be desired in the way of dramatic effect.

Annie Laurie, the girl heroine, is first seen in her betrothal to Captain McGregor, who leaves for the front shortly after the engagement has been celebrated. The departure of McGregor and his company, all in kilts, is accompanied by the skirl of bagpipes, and makes an attractive picture. The girl remains happily at home until she one day discovers a strange man cast up by the waves on a rocky shore near her home. She assists the stranger to the cottage of Old Nan, where they nurse him back to health.

Some new tricks of memory are brought out in this story. The stranger, upon recovering his physical health, cannot remember anything of his previous life. Later, after Annie has fallen violently in love with him and been forced out of her home by her irate father because of him, the stranger wanders away in a storm. He recovers his memory of previous events and makes his way back to the front, but it now develops that he has entirely forgotten Annie Laurie.

Annie reappears in the story as a hospital nurse and meets both the stranger and McGregor, after both have been wounded. Her heart is torn by the love of both, and this situation continues the interest at full tension until the satisying close. The number is certain to be popular.

Others in the cast are William Bailey, Henry Hallam, Sidney Mason, Dan Mason and Marion Singer.

"WILDFLOWER"

Paramount Reissue of Marguerite Clarke's First Contribution to the Screen.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

VIEWED in the light of the quality of screen art now to be found in Paramount pictures, Marguerite Clarke's first Famous Players release will hardly repeat its early success. "Wildflower," taken from a story by Mary Germaien and directed by Allan Dwan, serves best the purpose of illustrating the rapid strides forward that the screen has made since this picture was first produced. The story is insipid, has all the faults of its age and lack of experience, and but faintly foreshadows the finished screen art that now marks the impersonations of the star.

It will be received with kindly tolerance by a portion of the screen public. Others will regret its having been brought from its retirement in its present form.

"THE BETTER HALF"

Alice Brady in Five-Part Select Picture Acts Dual Role with Fine Effect.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE array of names connected with the making of the Select picture, "The Better Half," is imposing. Alice Brady comes first on the list with her fine acting in a dual role. Then there is Miriam Michelson, whose novel "Michael Thwaite's Wife" was the original of the screen story. Next comes Louis Sherwin, the dramatic critic of the Globe, who is responsible for the scenario. It is gratifying to learn that although Mr. Sherwin never loses a chance to turn his critical guns against the well made play, he is not above using as many of its technical devices as he found, by practical experience, are adaptable to the work of the scenario writer.

It is doubtful if the well remembered motive, the substituting of one twin sister for the other, has ever been used more skillfully than in this story. It all starts off in the beaten track: the marvelous resemblance of the two girls, one weak and pleasure loving, the other steadfast and devoted to duty, both loving the same man. He is dazzled by the more showy sister and marries her. She soon tires of him and runs away with the notorious Hendrick Thurston. The husband, in the meantime, is beaten by thugs and his sight almost destroyed. He keeps calling for his wife, and Louise, her sister, to save him from a shock that may kill him, takes the absent woman's place. How she wins this place permanently is told so as to keep the interest at concert pitch.

The outstanding feature of the picture is Alice Brady's acting. She indicates the difference of character in the two sisters with the subtle touches that command the respect of the spectator who thinks. The double exposures are not always well done. Aside from this defect, the two parts are distinct and the thoughts and emotions of the two women are expressed with convincing skill.

David Powell plays Michael Thwaite naturally and makes him likable and of good metal. Crauford Kent is a polished and handsome villain. W. T. Carlton, Isabelle O'Madigan and Richard Allen are the remaining members of a high-grade cast.

"THE TEMPLE OF DUSK."

Five-Part Mutual Release Improvement on Hayakawa's First Effort Under New Management.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

IT is a pity that Sessue Hayakawa's new management is not able to locate for the star stories of more substantial dramatic interest than is exhibit in his first two numbers, the second of which is entitled "The Temple of Dusk," a five-part production to be released by the Mutual Film Corporation.

"The Temple of Dusk" was directed by James Young, who has done well with the material afforded him. There are pretty Japanese garden settings and more than one touch of true artistry in the making of the picture; but there is lacking that convincing quality which makes for good drama.

The story of the picture tells of a young Japanese poet whose home is in Tokio. Under his father's care is a young American girl who has grown from childhood to young womanhood under the roof of the wealthy Japanese. The son falling in love with the girl is much saddened at the discovery that an American acquaintance has won her hand in marriage. The story then skips three or four years ahead showing not only domestic trouble in the girl's new home, but also illness which shortly causes her death. Her child, a little girl of possibly three years, is left in the care of the young poet, who accompanies her father and a new wife to America where the child's father shoots a former lover of his wife's with whom he finds her, and the young Japanese for the child's sake takes the blame for the crime. Finally he escapes from prison to visit the child and is shot. The closing scene is an allegorical one showing the Japanese and the woman he loved together in the "temple of dusk."

"JUST FOR TO-NIGHT."

Tom Moore Amusing in Goldwyn Crook Story Written by Charles A. Logue.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

A SURPRISE finish of good quality does much to help "Just for Tonight" register a success. This five-part Goldwyn picture, written by Charles A. Logue and directed by Charles Giblyn, suffers from too bountiful a supply of story. The third reel is partly over before the author has planted his main complication and started to drive a steady course toward the homestretch. Tom Moore, who is the star of the picture and tries to inject breeziness and humor into the early proceedings, finds himself handicapped by the amount of preparatory incident that gets in his way.

There is no question about the punch in the finish when it arrives, but the interest is slow in starting, and in attempting to mystify the spectator by introducing a number of minor complications there is danger of keeping him in the dark too long.

The story comes under the head of crook drama, "Just for Tonight" having a whole band of these industrious and deft fingered persons who are so interesting and charming to meet on the stage or the screen, but whom no one but the police wants to meet in real life. Theodore Whitney, Jr., the part played by Tom Moore, has a rich father, an auto and nothing to do but run it. He meets a girl while out riding one day, and falls in love with her at first sight. Theodore's father is after a stock certificate that is pasted up on the wall of a road house. Betty Blake, the pretty girl, is after the same certificate for her father, and Betty, Theodore and several detectives try to get it first.

Betty is the niece of Major Blackburn, at whose house she is staying. The place has been robbed, and every one is suspicious of strangers. A detective is detailed to go to the Blackburn home, disguised as an English lord, and keep an eye on the servant. Theodore bribes the officer to let him take his place for one night, so as to be near Betty. When matters have progressed this far things really begin to happen and there are plots and counterplots until the whole band of crooks is unmasked and Theodore and Betty agree to keep the lost certificate in the family by accepting each other for better or for worse.

The production is well put on and the entire cast up to the mark. Tom Moore's type of wealthy young idler is likable even at this time when the work or fight order is being put into effect. Lucy Fox is natural and attractive as Betty Blake. Henry Sedley, Henry Hallam, Robert Broderick, Ethel Gray Terry, Edwin Sturgis, Phil Riley and Maude Turner Gordon are the other members of the cast. Photographed by Lloyd Lewis.

"THE BELLS."

Frank Keenan Gives Finely Sustained Impersonation in Pathe Picture of Famous Novel.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

SINCE the night that Henry Irving electrified a London audience with his masterly characterization of Mathias, the crime haunted burgomaster in "The Bells," the stage version of the Erckmann-Chatrian novel, made by Leopold Lewis, has become almost a classic. Emile Erckmann and Alexandre Chatrian, who wrote under the hyphenated signature, Erckmann-Chatrian, drew a powerful picture of the mind of a murderer and the remorseless lashing of conscience in their famous story "The Polish Jew," and Leopold Lewis transferred it to the stage with a skill that was only surpassed by the splendidly imaginative acting of the English tragedian as Mathias.

The story has reached the screen. Frank Keenan is now being presented in a moving picture version produced by Pathe, from a scenario by Gilson Willetts and Jack Cunningham, directed by Ernest C. Warde. It is regrettable that where there is so much that is admirable the want of proper care has allowed several serious errors to creep into the picture. To begin with, the subtitle informs the spectator that the play was adapted by Erckmann Chatrian (without the hyphen), when it should have read "adapted from Erckmann-Chatrian." The most serious mistake is the age of the inn-keeper's daughter Annettee. According to the story, she is a child of about three years when her father kills the peddler. It is fifteen years later, after her marriage to Christian, that retribution overtakes the burgomaster. The screen version shows her to be at least eighteen before the murder and, although a subtitle carries the information that many years have elapsed between the time the Jew was killed and the night of Annette's wedding, she shows no evidence of having grown one day older.

Without the long elapse of time half the strength of the story is lost. Mathias has lived so long in safety and prospered so with the years that there seems no chance of ever been found out. Then his own guilty soul convicts him. The fear of one man,—a mesmerist who is able to put people to sleep and make them reveal their inmost thoughts—pursues him in his dreams. He imagines himself on trial for his life. The mesmerist is brought in, Mathias is placed under his influence, the murderer tells how he struck down his victim with an axe and burned the body in his own limekiln. He hears his doom pronounced, imagines he feels the rope about his neck and awakes in an agony of fear. The shock is too great. He falls dead, surrounded by his wife and daughter and the wedding guests. The elapse of time is absolutely essential, and the costuming does not always coincide with it. The gendarmes at both periods of the story wear modern uniforms.

On the production side, except that the stereoscopic snow storm is a poor substitute for the real thing, the different scenes and effects are excellently managed. The scenario is skillfully devised in the main and permits the story to grip the attention from the start and hold it firmly to the end. Last Sunday's spectators at the Rialto Theatre, New York, followed the unfolding of the plot with the keenest interest.

Frank Keenan's impersonation of Mathias is cleverly conceived and finely sustained. A greater contrast between his manner before and after the murder would have heightened the effect of his later scenes; but he meets the demands of the part with adequate power at its telling moments and acts always with the intelligent earnestness that has marked his whole artistic career. Lois Wilson, Joseph Dowling, Ida Lewis, Bert Law, Albert Cody, Edward Coxen and Carl Stockdale are the members of a thoroughly satisfactory support.

"THE BORDER RAIDERS."

Diando-Pathe Production in Five Reels Melodrama of Mexican Border.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel subject, written by Frank Beresford and Jack Cunningham, is stronger in the first reels than at the close. The foundation is laid for a strong melodramatic offering somewhat resembling the average Western serial in construction, but the final scenes are disconnected and lacking in suspense. It is a subject that will carry the interest along fairly well, but has not the gripping quality promised at the start.

The plot concerns a Chinaman, Mock Sing, who runs a gambling house on the Mexican border. Cattle rustling and opium smuggling are side lines of his business and he has aiding him a band of rough and ready fellows who stop at nothing. John Hardy, a wealthy rancher, falls into the toils of Mock Sing and his gang, and a plan is laid to get possession of his ranch, through the aid of an adventuress. Hardy's daughter, Rose, is the heroine, and the hero is a supposed faro dealer in Mock Sing's employ. The latter turns out to be a federal agent. The plot is sufficient but rather unconvincing.

The cast is headed by Betty Compson and George Larkin as the lovers, Frank Deshon as the Chinaman, Claire Du Brey as the adventuress and H. C. Carpenter as John Hardy. Others who appear are Howard Crampton and Fred. M. Malatesta.

"A SOUL WITHOUT WINDOWS."

World-Picture Features Ethel Clayton in Absorbing Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel production, written by Julia Burnham and directed by Travers Vale, may be safely recommended as a thoroughly enjoyable offering. We do not know whether the original story was in book form, but it flows along on the screen like an intelligent adaptation of a well written novel, bringing out the original features and touching the obvious but lightly. It is one of the best subjects recently shown in the matter of direction.

The story itself is quaint and original, never once getting into situations of a familiar type. Ethel Clayton is distinctly pleasing in her portrayal of Ho-Pama, the child who grew up in a Shaker colony, with her parentage and even her real name unknown. Miss Clayton gives careful attention to the character role she is playing and keeps it always within the prescribed bounds.

The opening scenes picture the arrival of a child and a woman attendant at the station of Lebanon. They should have left the train at Lebanon Spring, the next station, and it is while walking there that the woman faints on the roadside. She is taken in by the Shakers, a picturesque sect living nearby. The woman dies and the Shakers rear the child, in an unworldly faith that is too restricted for her ardent temperament. There is of course a hero, whom the girl meets accidentally, and the usual love story follows, but not in the usual way. The hero is already engaged, but the chain of interesting circumstances gives him over to Ho-Pama, whose real name it later develops is Hope Palmer. There is an abundance of well-constructed plot and the story leads up naturally and easily to a good climax. It is a desirable offering of the pleasant, agreeable type.

Frank Mayo appears as the hero, a part which he fills very satisfactorily. Others in the cast are Richard Clarke, Eugenie Woodward, Victor Kennard, Pinna Nesbit, David Davies, Gus Pixley, Zadee Burbank, Jack Drumier, Jack Roberts, Sadie Schaeffer and Violet Aksel.

"PECK'S BAD GIRL."

Energetic Fun in Goldwyn Comedy-Drama Featuring Mabel Normand.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

TEX CHARWATE is the author of "Peck's Bad Girl," a Goldwyn picture that has been built for the express purpose of furnishing Mabel Normand with plenty of opportunity to kick up her heels and play the tomboy to the delight of her many admirers. A twin sister of the amusing young scamp that hailed from Milwaukee and helped to make George Peck and George M. Cohan famous, Minnie Penelope Peck is a lively young lady who raises more excitement in Yaptank in one afternoon than one small town can get over talking about in four years. Failing to collect nine dollars owed her father by the president of the Yaptank bank, she starts a run on that institution that includes the entire population and brings out the fire department also. Before peace is restored Minnie starts a new excitement by helping to trap a band of robbers that are bent on robbing the bank. A heroine at last, she ends by getting the nine dollars and a husband besides. Incidentally she is engaged as general help in a modiste's shop, and exhibits low cut gowns in high cut underwear.

Charles Giblyn directed the picture and has seen to it that it never lacks speed. The laughs begin early in the game and last through to the end. The town of Yaptank is a realistic appearing burg, and the people that live there look as if they belonged.

All of which information means that Mabel Normand has returned to the style of work in which her public knew her first and like her best. Good rough soubrettos are a rare blessing at any time. Given the proper material to work with they are worth a dozen of their more delicate and serious minded sisters who suffer and are sad for five reels and only cease defying the villain when he dies or is carted off to prison in the last ten feet. Amusing types of character are contributed by Corinne Barker, Blanche Davenport, Ryley Hatch, Leslie Hunt, E. M. Favor, Edwin Sturgis, and Joseph Granby. Louis Physioc was the cameraman.

"A WOMAN'S EXPERIENCE."

Bacon-Backer Photoplay Has Excellent Cast and Tells Dramatic Story.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

PAUL POTTER'S play of "Agnes" furnished the foundation for "A Woman's Experience," a six-part Bacon-Baker Film Corporation picture, directed by Perry N. Vekroff, who is also responsible for the scenario. The story is strongly dramatic and shows how a young couple from the country get into the social whirl in New York and barely escape moral destruction. The material is not startlingly original, but it is put together with the skill of an expert craftsman, and the direction and acting of the cast are on the same order of merit. The stage sets and the lighting are highly artistic and the atmosphere of good breeding required by most of the situations is seldom absent.

Although feverish at times, the moral effect of the story makes for good, and the danger of playing with fire is exemplified in an impressive and entertaining manner. The character of Agnes Roydant, the young wife, would have stood out better if she had been permitted to play the earlier scenes in a lighter mood and tried to hide her real feeling under a smile on every possible occasion. The tragic scenes in the latter part of the story would have gained in force by such a use of the law of contrast.

Trying to keep up with the procession of social climbers almost brings George Roydant and his wife to financial ruin, and involves Agnes's name with that of an English nobleman. There is an intense scene when the titled gentleman forces his way into the sleeping apartment of his hostess. During the struggle he unintentionally takes a dose of poison and Agnes just escapes being suspected of aiding in his death. The husband and wife realize in time their mistakes, and go back to the old peaceful life in the country.

Mary Boland has the part of Agnes. It suits her personality and she denotes all its different moods with convincing skill. Her best work is done in the last two reels, the emotional stress of the scenes with the nobleman and his tragic death being expressed with adequate depth of feeling and finished dramatic art. Sam Hardy as George Roydant, Lawrence McGill as Nicholas Barrable, Robert Cain as Lord Sulgrave, Corrine Uzzell as Attlie Damuron and Bradley Barker as Rufford are the other members of the exceptional cast. Photographed by Edward Earle.

COMMENTS

General Film Company.

TRANSIENTS IN ARCADIA (Broadway Star Feature Co.).—One of the best of the O. Henry stories yet presented at the Rivoli, where it was received with an outburst of applause.

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

BEANS (Bluebird).—A bright little five-reel subject featuring Edith Roberts as the daughter of a bean magnate. The story, which was written by John B. Clymer and directed by Jack Dillon, is rather slight in plot but excellently handled. It has considerable suspense and leads up to a good climax. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Educational Film Corporation.

MODERN MEXICAN HACIENDA (Educational Films Corp.).—Far from being educational, a mere picture of a dusty Mexican Hacienda and a tame bull-fight.

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

HE COMES UP SMILING (Artcraft), Sept. 15.—A very amusing farce-comedy with Douglas Fairbanks in a more natural characterization than those he usually interprets. Bright with incident and laughable situations and a definite purpose besides.

THE LAW OF THE NORTH (Paramount), Sept. 29.—A story of life among the Canadian trappers with Charles Ray in the leading role, not one entirely suited to his talents. The story attempts the melodramatic but it is dark in atmosphere and without a sympathetic characterization.

Fox Film Corporation.

BONNIE ANNIE LAURIE (Fox).—An excellent Scotch character story with a strong love interest, written by Hamilton Thompson and directed by Harry Millarde. Peggy Hyland appears as the attractive heroine, assisted by William Bailey, Sidney Mason and others. The number is a pleasing one of the sentimental type and certain to prove popular. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

WHEN A WOMAN SINS (Fox).—A seven-part number written by Betta Breuil and directed by J. Gordon Edwards, with Theda Bara in the leading role. She appears as a nurse of Bohemian birth and instincts, who makes a hard fight to keep on the straight path. The story is not always convincing, but is very interesting and holds the attention well. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Graphic Film Corporation.

ASHES OF LOVE (Graphic Film Corporation).—A six-part offering written and directed by Ivan Abramson, with James K. Hackett, Effie Shannon and Mabel Juliene Scott in the cast. The cast and settings are superior to the story, which is weak in continuity and inclines to the depressing. It does not make a strong subject, in spite of the acting ability shown. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Greater Vitagraph, Inc.

MISFITS AND MATRIMONY (Big V Special), Sept. 16.—A two-reel farce-comedy and the first of the Vitagraph "Big V Specials." Earl Montgomery and Joe Rock are featured. The comedy situations are only moderately strong and include some acrobatic stunts that will please most audiences.

BY THE WORLD FORGOT (Vitagraph), Sept. 16.—A five-part production featuring Hedda Nova. The story is by Cyrus Townsend Brady and deals with the accidental discovery of a colony of Dutch people on a South Sea island, and the love story of the daughter of the chief, who became enamoured of a young man accidentally thrown on the shores of the island. The production is not particularly commendable from the standpoint of construction and is unconvincing, although not totally unentertaining. A full review will be found elsewhere.

A FIGHT FOR MILLIONS, No. 11 (Vitagraph), Sept. 23.—"The Noose of Death" is the title of this episode of the serial and is thrillingly entertaining. After the girl who is being kidnapped by an admirer succeeds in getting rid of her escorts she finally gets to her own ranch and puts up a good gun fight. In the meantime a rescue party arrives and is about to lynch the rascal when the episode closes.

Mutual Film Corporation.

SCREEN TELEGRAM No. 55 (Mutual).—This issue opens with scenes showing Pershing at the front. These are followed with pictures of a fallen battle plane and an engine from a German plane which had been shot down. War landscapes include interesting scenes at the front, one of the unusual sights is a hospital train on its way back to the base. The Federal Building in Chicago after having been wrecked with a bomb is also shown.

SCREEN TELEGRAM NO. 56 (Mutual),—The launching of the U. S. S. Piave is one of the first items of this issue. Fighting fire in the mines to conserve coal, dogs at the annual New York Dog Show, a celebration in honor of Lafayette and Y. M. C. A. recruits ready for France are among other interesting events which have been filmed for this number.

THE TEMPLE OF DUSK (Haworth).—A five-reel production featuring Sessue Hayakawa and directed by James Young. The picture contains many beautiful Japanese settings—gardens built in their artistic fashion. The story is not big nor convincing, and while the production has been artistically made the material is not equal to the length of film. A full review will be found elsewhere.

SABA, THE ASTONISHING (Outing-Chester), Sept. 15.—An unusually beautiful and interesting number of the Outing-Chester presents the island of Saba in the Dutch West Indies. This little island consists chiefly of a dead volcano in the crater of which nestles a little town. The people of this island are mostly white. They grow limes and make boats, although they have no harbor. A full review will be found in the Motion Picture Educator for October 5.

ALL KINDS OF A GIRL (Strand), Sept. 17.—Elinor Field and Cullen Landis have the principal roles in this comedy, which is very attractively made. The story centers about the efforts of a pair of youthful sweethearts in trying to discover what kind of a girl the young man's rich uncle would like him to marry. The impersonating of different types is very well done by Miss Field.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

THE RUNAWAY BRIDE (Pathe), Sept. 15.—Episode No. 5 of "Hands Up." This is another installment containing many interesting thrills. The plunge of the balanced rock over a cliff, smashing a cabin below is one feature. Echo, the girl heroine, also meets with new adventures. The fighting scenes taken on the moving train are exceptionally good.

THE GREAT WATER PERIL (Pathe-Rolin), Sept. 22.—One of the best Toto pictures yet made. This is a burlesque melodrama, with good action and clever subtitles, which have a lot of fun with the plot as it goes along. Toto plays the hero and twice rescues the girl heroine from peril at the hands of the villain. This will bring laughter.

ANTIGUA (Post-Pathe), Oct. 6.—A travel number, picturing scenes taken in the British West Indies. The towns of St. Johns and English Harbor are shown, with various buildings of special interest. Native types are also included, with glimpses of the life and industries there.

CURACAO (Post-Pathe).—This is one of the most striking of the recent "island" travel subjects. Curacao, in the Dutch West Indies, is described as a Hollandized Carribee, and the views of Williamstadt might have been taken along the Zuyder Zee. This is something distinctive.

Select Pictures Corporation.

THE BETTER HALF (Select).—Alice Brady has a twin sister role in this five-part picture and plays it to perfection. The story is full of interest. It was founded on Miriam Michelson's novel, "Michael Thwaite's Wife." A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Triangle Film Corporation.

THE ATOM (Triangle), Sept. 15.—Excellent acting by Pauline Starke as a "slavey" is the best feature of this five-part picture. Stage life and western situations are utilized in the story, written by Catherine Carr. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Universal Film Company.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, No. 39 (Universal), Aug. 28.—This opens with scenes taken at the great Police Carnival at Sheepshead Bay, shows Prince Connaught reviewing Canadian fighters, American cartoonists aiding Liberty Loan, a melon feast at San Francisco, and contains many other features. Cartoons by Hy Mayer close the issue.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, No. 40 (Universal), Sept. 4.—Labor Day parades come in for first place in this diversified number, which also includes a Flying Circus at St. Louis, wounded American soliders in New York, a New Jersey launching, women at work in England and various other features.

CURRENT EVENTS, No. 69 (Universal), Sept. 7.—Timely war topics lead the interest in this number, which shows training camp activities, memorial services to Major Raoul Lufbery, sale of war stamps, daily noon prayer at Washington and various other interesting features.

CURRENT EVENTS, No. 70 (Universal), Sept. 14.—This opens with scenes from the slacker raid in New York City. It includes also views of King George visiting war gardeners, close of baseball season at Washington, Captain Archie Roosevelt on a visit home, scenes from the front and other features.

A PULLMAN BLUNDER (L-KO), Sept. 18.—A lively two-reel comic featuring Harry Gribbon, Mae Emery, Eddie Barry and Harry Mann. This is unusually laughable and contains many situations of a very funny nature. The action throughout is of the best knockabout sort and carries the interest at high speed.

HELLO TROUBLE (L-KO), Sept. 25.—A two-reel comic with Babe Hardy, Peggy Prevost, Billy Armstrong and Bartine Burkett in the cast. An undertaker stirs up trouble in two married families, but the angry husbands get their revenge upon him. This has good action of the knockabout type and is better than the average. It contains a number of laughs.

UNDER FALSE PRETENCES (Western), Sept. 28.—Helen Gibson and M. K. Wilson in a railroad drama. This picture contains a very thrilling scene in which Miss Gibson rides up behind a railroad train and leaps from her horse's back onto the train. The story tells of the love of the railroad president's son, working as a lineman, for the telegraph operator. He meets with an accident and the girl compels his father to pay for the operation.

World Pictures Corporation

BY HOOK OR CROOK, Sept. 9.—Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley have the leading parts in this five-reel picture. The hero is an over-indulged young chap who wakes up and makes a fight for the girl he loves. The picture is given a longer review on another page of last week's issue.

TO HIM THAT HATH (World Picture), Sept. 23.—A six-part offering adapted from a novel by Leroy Scott and directed by Oscar Apfel. Montagu Love appears as the hero, David Aldrich, a youth reared in the slums. He assumes the crime of embezzlement to save the name of his teacher in the mission, Philip Morton. The action is melodramatic and quite unconvincing at times. The story contains some sympathetic glimpses of slum life, but is of only average strength. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Pathe Releases "The Border Raiders."

"The Border Raiders, a high speed southwestern feature, starring George Larkin and Betty Compson, will be released the week of October 6 as the first of the Pathe Program Features. It was made by Diando from a story by Frank Beresford and Jack Cunningham. Stuart Payton directed the feature. The picture is full of rapid, stirring action which starts at the very beginning, but is threaded through its desperate rides and gun-play by a pretty love story.

Wellington Cross Featured by Triangle.

Wellington Cross, favorably known as a vaudeville head-liner will make his initial appearance in the silent drama under the Triangle trade-mark in "The Grey Parasol," in which he is jointly featured with Claire Anderson. This production is offered as a Triangle release for the week of September 22. "The Grey Parasol' was directed by Lawrence Windom and photographed by S. S. Norton.

Helping the Other Fellow Out.

Jack Cohn, in charge of Universal's Animated Weekly, has contributed a number of scenes from the Weekly program to other companies for use in forthcoming Liberty Loan pictures. The Famous Players-Lasky, Metro and Goldwyn companies in particular requested and obtained a supply of this material. The scenes contributed were of late news events bearing on the war and national service. They depict large celebrations, crowds and parades, etc.

Eighteen Cameragraphs for Canada.

The Perkins Electric Co., of Montreal, through Mr. Geo. F. Perkins, report that business in Power's Cameragraphs is very encouraging. They state they have just placed an order with the Canadian Government for eighteen 6B Cameragraphs.

"THE QUEEN OF HEARTS."

William Fox Presents Virginia Pearson in the Strikingly Sensational Story of a Woman Who Swore to Avenge Her Father's Murder.

Cast.

Pauline Cheraud.....Virginia Pearson
Emil Cheraud.....Joseph Smiley
Jimmie Dreen.....Victor Sutherland
Robert Faulkner.....Edward J. Burns
Helen Faulkner.....Peggy Shaner
Hawley Roberts.....John Webb Dillion
Pierre.....James A Furey
Little Pauline.....Adelaide Lawrence

Directed by Edmund Lawrence.

The Story: On her return to her home after many years abroad, Pauline Cheraud is shocked to discover that her father has turned the house into a gambling establishment. Her pleadings induce him to agree to abandon this disreputable mode of life, but a few nights later Pauline stumbles across his dead body in the library. Pauline takes a vow to pursue to justice the guilty party. She remembers seeing three men enter the library on the fatal evening, one of whom, she believes, killed the old man. Believing also that every criminal sooner or later returns to the scene of his crime, she decides to continue her father's gambling salon, and to become its mistress. One of the trio, who had owed her father a large sum of money, is detected by Pauline rifling the dead man's desk. Under the spell of her passionate avowal that she desires a cave man, Pauline surprises the second suspect into a boastful confession that he has already killed his man. The third man, whose love is returned by Pauline, falls under suspicion when a button from his coat is found in the room on the night that Pauline's father died. How the plot is worked out can only be appreciated by seeing the play.

Feature Virginia Pearson as Pauline Cheraud and Joseph Smiley as Emil Cheraud.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Virginia Pearson Heroine of a Baffling Mystery Drama and Detective Romance.

Playing a Dangerous Game of Hazard for a Man's Life.

How a Woman Risked Her Reputation to Avenge Her Father's Death.

"THE GIRL FROM BOHEMIA"

Pathe Presents Mrs. Irene Castle in a Masterful Story of a Bohemian Who First Shocks Then Saves a Country Town.

Cast.

Alice Paige.....Mrs. Irene Castle

The Story: Alice Paige, a thorough-going bohemian, received word from her aunt that they are joint heirs to an estate of $50,000, the only proviso being that they must share the old Paige homestead in a country town. Alice with her "artistic" gowns shocks staid Mayport, but Canton Leigh sees the girl within the gown and is attracted to her. She rescues the little daughter of the village saloonkeeper, who has incited a strike in Leigh's shipyard, Mayport's chief industry, and it is Alice who averts the strike through an appeal to the patriotism of the men.

Feature Mrs. Irene Castle as Alice Paige.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Love in a Stable Converted Into a Studio for Artistic Faddists.

Bohemia Is Astonished at the Conventionalities of Artistic Souls.

"BRAZEN BEAUTY."

Bluebird Presents Priscilla Dean and Kenneth Hyde in the Story of a Girl Who Had Millions and No Way to Spend Them.

Cast.

Jacala.....Priscilla Dean
Aunt Allen.....Katherine Griffith
Mrs. Augusta Van Puyslear.
Gertrude Astor
Kenneth Hyde.....Thurston Hull
Mrs Kate Duvey.....Alice Wilson
Her Brother.....Leo White
Bruce Edwards.....Thornton Church

The Story: Jacala has inherited an enormous fortune, but it never occurred to her that she could have more fun with her millions than a Montana ranch offered until she saw a picture of Mrs Van Ruyslear's marble palace. Mrs Van Ruyslear was divorced and sold the palace to Jacala, who mistook Kenneth Hyde, the brother, for the corespondent in the suit. To guard against her growing love for Hyde she made a contract with Tony Dewey to be his fiancee, but when Tony tried to realize on the promise Jacala showed her claws and things came straight in the long run.

Feature Priscilla Dean as Jacala and Thurston Hull as Kenneth Hyde.

Program and Advertising Phrases: How a Girl Who Inherited Millions Gained Happiness Despite Her Wealth.

The Adventures of a Small Town Heiress Who Built Castles in Spain.

Money Means a Lot to Some People—but Happiness Is More to be Desired.

Sensational Outcome of a Girl's Desire to Shine in Society.

Another Instance Where Possession of Money Failed to Bring Love.

Dan Cupid Mixes Into the Love Affairs of a Girl Distressingly Rich.

Advertising Angles: Play up the girl who had millions she did not know how to spend. Work the changes on this aspect of the story and you can gain the interest of your patrons. Use also the angle of the girl who invaded society and beat it in the long run and the girl who was afraid to fall in love with a man she supposed to be unworthy. You might hook up with a jeweler or department store on a display of bronze statuettes.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six sheets. Stock one-sheet of star. Colored and black-and-white lobby displays. Slide. Heralds. Player cuts in three sizes. Scenes cuts one and two columns wide. Press book.

Released in September.

Bill Avery.....Henry West
Blake.....John Sturgeon

Directed by Oscar Apfel.

The Story: David Aldrich takes upon his own shoulders the thefts of a dead friend and is sent to prison for misappropriation of funds. At the end of a five-year sentence he comes out of jail to start life anew. Even the woman who loved him thinks him guilty, and he is reduced to dire want before he finds the turn in the path that lends upward. In the end he wins back his fair name and literary fame as well, but only after a series of engrossing happenings that threaten to drive him still deeper into the underworld.

Feature Montagu Love as David Aldrich and Gertrude McCoy as Helen Chambers.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Famous "Best Seller" Gets Into World Pictures with Montagu Love Starring.

Montagu Love Star of Particularly Strong Photoplay Created from Famous Novel.

Big, Forceful, Convincing Photoplot Done in World Pictures.

What a Real Man Did to Save the Good Name of a Friend.

Filmed from Famous Novel Photoplay Improves Story on the Screen.

Would You Shoulder a Friend's Guilt to Preserve His Memory Unsullied?

Advertising Angles: If you played "The Cross Bearer" cash in on the popularity the star then gained. In any event feature his appearance and announce that the story is a powerful recital of a man's fight back to decency and happiness. If there is a prison welfare or similar organization in your town they can be interested in this production and their interest communicated to others.

"NEWMAN" Brass Frames and Rails

A FEW REASONS

why "NEWMAN" METAL FRAMES have been chosen by all the big circuits and best class of theatres.

1—Because the constant exposure to all sorts of weather conditions cannot affect "NEWMAN" NON-CORROSIVE METAL FRAMES.

2—Because of their richness in beauty and design, they liven the entrance and render the lobby more inviting than any other kind of frames.

3—Because they will outlast a dozen wood frames. They are practically un-wear-out-able.

Bluebird Presents Edith Roberts and William E. Lawrence in a Brisk Story of Big Business and a Pretty Girl Who Had Brains.

Cast.

Betty Brewster.....Edith Roberts
Kirk.....William E. Lawrence
Wingate.....Charles Gerrard
Ellis.....Harry Carter

Directed by Jack Dillon.

The Story: Brewster, the bean king, has an option of renewal on a certain bean canning plant owned by Ellis. Ellis does not desire to renew and hired Wingate, a shyster lawyer, to help him. Brewster has to send Betty to renew the contract. Later he sends his lawyer to help her and Ellis' man persuades her that he is a plotter. There follows plot and counterplot, but all-innocently Betty carries the day.

Feature Edith Roberts as Betty Brewster and William E. Lawrence as Kirk.

Program and Advertising Phrases: The Romance of a Society Girl Who Didn't Know Beans.
"Beans is Beans" and Love is Love—Even in Moving Pictures.
How the Bean King Cornered Everything but His Daughter's Disposition.
Being a Bean King Involves a Lot of Excitement and Thrills.

"THE HUN WITHIN"

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation Presents Dorothy Gish and George Fawcett in the Story of a German Who Was an American Patriot.

Cast.

Henry Wagner.....George Fawcett
Karl Wagner.....Charles Gerard
Frank Douglas.....Douglas MacLean
Krippen.....Bert Sutch
Max.....Max Davidson
Beth.....Dorothy Gish
Leone.....Lillian Clarke
Krug.....Robert Anderson
Von Bickel.....Eric von Stroheim
Beth's Father.....Adolph Lestina
Frank's Mother.....Kate Bruce

Directed by Chester Withey.

The Story: Henry Wagner is a German who has become wholly American through his hatred of the Prussian junkers, but his son, Karl, has been educated in Germany and favors that country. Beth is Wagner's ward and believes herself in love with Karl. But she overhears his complicity in a plot to blow up a transport and taxes him with his perfidy. He takes her to a spy rendezvous in the mountains, whence she is rescued by Frank Douglas, a secret service man, who loves her. They warn the transport barely in time to save the ship and Karl and his co-conspirators are apprehended, leaving the field to Douglas.

Feature George Fawcett as Henry Wagner and Dorothy Gish as Beth.

Program and Advertising Phrases: How Kultur Worked Its Way Into an American Home and Met Its Customary Downfall.
Like German Diplomacy, German Kultur Works with a "Kick-Back."
How a Patriotic American Girl Defeated the Cult of Kulturists.
American Grit and Stamina Defeats the Cunning of Hun Kultur.
Stirring Photoplay Feature Destined to Awaken Patriotism.
Photoplays Like These Serve as Alarm Clocks for Uncle Sam's Awakening.

Advertising Angles: Open your campaign with a couple of days of masked advertising along the lines of "Beware of the Hun Within," directed at the pro-German posing as a patriot. Follow this up with the announcement of the play. Then announce Miss Gish as the leading woman in "Hearts of the World" and try to hook up with defense societies and get the newspaper to work with you on the anti-German crusade.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.

"VIVE LA FRANCE"

Thomas H. Ince Presents Dorothy Dalton in an Intimate Story of the World War and a Girl Branded With the Cross of Shame.

Cast.

Jenevieve Bouchette.....Dorothy Dalton
Jean Picard.....Edmund Lowe
Captain Heinrich May.....Frederick Starr
Colonel Bouchier.....Thomas Guise
Pierre Le Gai.....Bert Woodruff

Directed by R. William Neill.

The Story: Jenevieve Bouchette, a motion picture actress, returns to her home in France when the war breaks out to sustain her aged parents. The town is taken by the Germans and Jenevieve is branded with the cross of shame by a Prussian officer. She meets Jean Picard, a cinematographer, who was her leading man in happier times. He has penetrated the German lines on a secret mission. She aids him to escape and assumes the uniform of a German and returns to her own lines, where she narrowly escapes being shot as a spy, but her brand saves her from this fate and in the end she and Jean are reunited.

Feature Dorothy Dalton as Jenevieve Bouchette and Edmund Lowe as Jean Picard.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Intensely Melodramatic Vision of Hun Atrocities and Allied Grit.
Vivid Pictures of War Reflected in Stirring Photodrama.
Photoplay of Victory's Spirit Reflecting Woman's Heroism.
Women in the Work Make Their Place Among Brave Heroes.

Dorothy Dalton, Star of Stirring Photoplay, Reflecting the Spirit of France.
Stirring Drama of Freedom, Inspiring the Spirit of Patriotism.

Advertising Angles: Offer this as a story with a war setting and play up "the cross of shame," using a crimson cross for painted window cards and for a lobby decoration. It will be effective to show a large crimson cross in your lobby as a mystery ad. for some days before advertising the feature.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. One 24-sheet. Rotogravure one-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.

"COME ON IN"

Adolph Zukor Presents Shirley Mason and Ernest Truex in the First of a New Series of Stories by John Emerson and Anita Loos.

Cast.

Emmy Little.....Shirley Mason
Eddie Short.....Ernest Truex
Count von Bumstuff....Charles De Planta
Prof. G. Wottan Orphul-Schmell, Joseph Burke
A. Schlobb.....Renault Tourneur
Otto B. Schott.....Bernard Randall
Mrs. Schroeder.....Blanche Craig
Office Boy.....Meyer Berenson
The Colonel.....Richie Ling
Germany Spy.....Louis Henrick

Directed by John Emerson and Anita Loos.

The Story: Emmy Little is a patriot and is loved by Eddie Short and Otto Schott, both of whom are enlisted in the United States Army. But Otto is a spy in the service only to betray its secrets. To win Emmy he shows her his fellow spies and she is so delighted that she consents to marry him on the spot, and they depart for the railroad station to begin their honeymoon. Eddie is something of a spy hunter himself. He captures the spies Otto has so obligingly trussed up and also saves Emmy's father who Otto planned to kill, and as a final achievement he interrupts the wedding journey and saves Emmy from a honeymoon with a man who already has two wives in Germany.

Feature Shirley Mason as Emmy Little and Ernest Truex as Eddie Short.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Shirley Mason and Ernest Truax Introduced to the Screen as Paramount Stars.
What Happened When a German Spy Fell in Love with a Patriotic Stenographer.
How a Girl Masked Her Purpose with Laughter and Trapped a Host of Hun Spies.
Things Are Not Always as They Seem When Patriotism Is On Guard.
Fine Patriotic Theme of Stirring Melodrama Defeating "Kultur."
How Patriotic Girl Exposed Nest of Hun Spies and Caught Them All.

Advertising Angles: Whoop this up as the first release from this clever pair of producers since they stopped writing for Fairbanks. Point out their long string of successes for this star and add that they have even greater opportunity in this offering since they are no longer forced to fit the personality of a single player. Also make use of the names of the stars, both of whom are popular. Make "Come On In!" a slogan in your vicinity a week before the production through the use of distributed cards bearing that title and no advertising, or at least only a six-point line.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.

Released September 22.

"OUT OF A CLEAR SKY"

Adolph Zukor Presents Marguerite Clark in an Original Story by the Well-Known Novelist Maria Thompson Davies.

Cast.

Countess Celeste de Gersek et Krymn, Marguerite Clark
Robert Lawrence.....Thomas Meighan
Uncle Dyrek, Celeste's Relative, E. J. Radcliff
Crown Prince.....Raymond Bloomre
Boy.....Bobby Connelly
Father.....Robert Dudley
Steve.....W. P. Lewis
Granny White.....Maggie H. Fisher
Governess.....Helen Montrose
Valet.....Robert Vivian
Mamie.....Nell Clark Keller

Directed by Marshall Nielan.

The Story: Celeste, Countess of Bersek and Krymn, is a little Belgian who refuses to become the political pawn of her Uncle Dyrek, who wishes her to marry a German prince. She escapes to America, where her uncle follows, and eventually lands in the mountains of Tennessee. There she gains the aid of Robert Lawrence, a young American, who persuades her Uncle that she has become the victim of a bolt of lightning. He returns to his political chess while the little Countess abandons her title for the plain "Mrs." of a good American housewife.

Feature Marguerite Clark as Countess Celeste de Bersek et Krymn and Thomas Meighan as Robert Lawrence.

Program and Advertising Phrases: She Swore She Wouldn't Marry a German and "Died" to Keep Her Word.
Surprising Outcome of a Girl's Determination to Marry Whom She Chose.
Stern Discipline Meant Nothing to This Girl, Who Fled Across Two Continents to Have Her Own Way.
Girl Escapes from Belgium to Avoid Detested Suitor and Meets Dan Cupin in the Tennessee Mountains.
Novel Plot Engages Interest in Surprise Finish of Photoplay.

Advertising Angles: You will, of course, feature Miss Clark, but emphasis should be given the fact that she appears in an unusually attractive story, one suited to her personality and offering her every opportunity. Play up the fact that the little Countess refused to marry a German princeling, preferring a virile young American.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.

Released September 15.

THE UNITED STATES FUEL ADMINISTRATION

has taken Space No. 85 for the National Motion Picture Exposition to be held in Madison Square Garden October 5th to 13th, inclusive. P. B. Noyes, head of the Conservation Division, was extremely enthusiastic over this exposition and said that it had the endorsement of the Fuel Administration.

JOSEPH JOHNSON, PUBLICITY DIRECTOR FOR THE AMERICAN RED CROSS, is heartily in favor of this exposition. He has taken space and has instructed his assistants in New York to prepare a large and attractive exhibit.

THE UNITED STATES FOOD ADMINISTRATION

has also arranged to take generous space and stage an attractive exhibit. Herbert Hoover, the Food Administrator, was the first Government official to realize the importance of the motion picture for propaganda purposes. He naturally would not overlook such an opportunity as this war service exposition.

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

evidently realizes the importance of this exposition. Nearly every department of the Government looks upon it with favor and enthusiasm. As a patriotic duty, can the motion picture industry do less?

THE MOST DESIRABLE LOCATIONS ARE rapidly being disposed of. Many concerns entirely outside of the motion picture business are making arrangements for space. As a means of reaching the general public, they realize the value of this war service exposition. For information and contracts apply to

"THE RETURN OF MARY"

Metro Presents May Allison in a Strongly Dramatic Screen Version of Hale Hamilton's Unusually Interesting Play.

Cast.

Mary.....May Allison
John Denby, Sr.....Clarence Burton
Mrs. John Denby, Sr.....Claire McDowell
"Jack" Denby.....Darrell Foss
John Graham.....Frank Brownlee
Clark, the Denby's butler.Joseph Belmont

Directed by Wilfred Lucas.

The Story: Mary, the three-year-old daughter of John Denby, a railroad president, is kidnapped, and all trace of her is lost. Fourteen years elapse. There has been a terrible wreck on Denby's road and Graham, the engineer, is made the scapegoat. In spite of the fact that he merely obeyed orders, he is sent off to prison. Mary is returned to Denby, the kidnapper explaining that he stole her when his own little daughter was killed, but that now he feels he must return her to her parents. Denby's son, Jack, finds himself strangely attracted to the girl. He procures Graham's release, believing him to be blameless, and Mary tells that Graham is the man she has always known as "father." Graham confesses she is his daughter and that Mary was really kidnapped by his fireman in revenge for fancied wrongs. The child died and the confession enabled Graham to provide for Mary's care during his prison term. Denby is distracted at the idea of losing Mary, but young Jack solves the problem by marrying her.

Feature May Allison as Mary and Clarence Burton as John Denby, Sr.

Program and Advertising Phrases: What Happened When a Kidnapped Girl Turned Up at an Unexpected Crisis.
Great Photoplay for Railroad Men to See and Seriously Consider.
Important Developments When the Innocent Suffered and the Guilty Escaped.
Extremely Novel Idea Introduced Into the Art of Photoplotting.
Mistaken Identity Leads to Confusion Until Dan Cupid Intervenes

Advertising Angles: This story will appeal particularly to railroad men, but it can be made to draw all organized labor by playing up the situation tactfully. For general work offer it as the film version of a stirring play, and present the main idea as attractively as possible. You may be able to borrow some lanters or other railroad property for lobby decoration, but do not seek to give the idea that this is merely a railroad play.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten-minute novel. Slide. Heralds. Lobby displays, 8x10 sepia, 11x14 sepia, 22x28 colored. Cuts.

Released September 23.

"I'LL SAY SO"

William Fox Presents George Walsh in the Story of a Flat-Footed Patriot Who Still Is Able to Do His Bit—And Then Some.

Cast.

Bill Durham .....George Walsh
Barbara Knowles.....Regina Quinn
August Myers.....William Bailey
Carl Vogel.....James Black

The Story: Bill Durham is rejected by the recruiting officers because of flat feet, but Bill doesn't worry. He figures out that there is a chance even for the flatties in a war so big. He turns his attention to propagandists, and makes some of them as flat as his feet. Of course, he gets arrested and Barbara Knowles comes to his aid. Her guardian is a propagandist himself, and takes Barbara away, but after he has spoiled a lot of propaganda schemes he finds Barbara at the altar, takes her away from the Prussian her guardian is forcing her to marry and marries her himself, though he is not exactly dressed for a wedding.

Feature George Walsh as Bill Durham and Regena Quinn as Barbara Knowles.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Mysterious Motives of a Girl's German-American Guardian Revealed in Photoplot.
The Banker's Daughter with Money to Burn Coveted by German Spies.
Flat Feet Prove No Handicap to Patriots with Level Heads.
It's Impossible to Finish a World War Without Making the Kaiser Eat His Bombastic Words.

Advertising Angles: Advertise this as a comedy of war times and play up the fact that it shows you do not have to wear a uniform to serve your country. Work such phrases as "Have you flat feet? You can still do your bit. See how at (house and date)."

Advertising Aids: Two each, one and three sheets; one each, six and twenty-four sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10 (black and white), 11x15 (black and white), and 22x28 (colored). Cuts and mats. Advertising layouts. Slides. Press book.

Released November 17.

"WHY AMERICA WILL WIN"

William Fox Presents a Fact Story as Gripping as Any Romance, Depicting the Busy Life of General John J. Pershing, Commander of the American Expeditionary Force.

General John J. Pershing,
As a boy....A. Alexander
As a youth.Harris Gordon
As a man....Olaf Skavlan
President Woodrow Wilson.R. A. Faulkner
Col. Theodore Roosevelt....W. E. Whittle
Mrs. Daniel Pershing.....Miss Irving
John F. Pershing.....Frank McGlynn
Ann Thompson Pershing.....Betty Grey
The Kaiser.....
Field Marshal von Hindenburg } E. Maupin
King George of England..Harry Warwick
General Foch.....John Fox, Jr.

Directed by Richard Stanton.

The Story: This is not a romance but the biography of the man who now leads our vast forces in France. It shows him from boyhood to his present high command, and the story of his life tells why Pershing was selected to head the American forces overseas and how he has his own personal account to settle with the ruthless Hun.

Feature the principals in the cast.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Patriotic Photoplay Designed to Reflect the Life of Gen. John J. Pershing.
Heroic Leader of the Yanks Made Subject of Patriotic Film.
High Lights in the Life of America's Great Military Leader.
The World's Greatest Men Impersonated in Patriotic Photoplay.
Picturing the Downfall of Kultur and the Triumph of Freedom.

Advertising Angles: Start work on this picture well in advance. The press book carries many good stories and newspapers will be glad to give you the space for their news value. Interest not alone the patriotic societies, but get after all fraternal and civic bodies. Get plenty of paper and circus the locality. For lobby decoration use flags, military equipment, if you can get it, and pictures.

Advertising Aids: Two each, one, three and twenty-four sheets. One six-sheet. Lobby displays 8x10 (black and white), 11x12 (gelatins), 22x28 (colored), stills of star 8x10, 22x28 sepia gelatins of star. Seven one-column and six two-column cuts. Two 1-column, two 2-column, one 3-column, three 2-column display advertisements. Eight one column type advertisements. Slides. Music cues.

Released in September.

THE SUREST ROUTE TO THE CONSUMER

DETERMINE your route by the goal you wish to reach.

Remember that the MOVING PICTURE WORLD dominates the field of the motion picture industry—not only in quantity and quality circulation, but in reader interest, and confidence, the final test that determines the value of a publication to advertisers.

If you are dealing in anything moving picture theatres use, either pictures, projection machines and accessories, the MOVING PICTURE WORLD will carry your business story to the buyer you seek in this vast market.

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lenses have long been considered standard equipment by the leading motion picture machine manufacturers. The product of America's greatest lens specialists, who have been producing high grade lenses of one type or another for 65 years, they are unexcelled in the clear-cut, evenly illuminated pictures they produce on the screen.

Because of the demand made upon our resources for some of the Government's most important military needs, we are unable to make projection lens deliveries for the present. While proud to be of such service in this world crisis, we shall expect to serve our other patrons even more efficiently than before, when the world is again at peace.

Screencraft

BY LOUIS REEVES HARRISON

An invaluable help to the writer who is making a serious effort to evolve stories for screen production.

Of great interest too to the individual who is watching the development of "the silent drama."

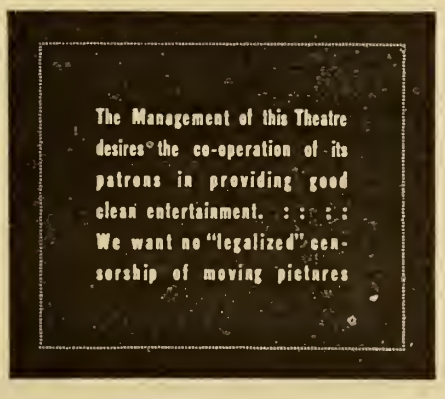
Educate Your Audience to Help Fight Censorship

Introducing a bill providing for the Censorship of Moving Pictures is a favorite indoor pastime in legislative halls throughout the country. Eternal vigilance is the price of the Exhibitor's mere safety if not his success.

Presented in the proper manner, the Censorship of Moving Pictures is just as obnoxious to the Exhibitor's audiences as it is to the Exhibitor. And public opinion aroused in behalf of moving pictures and against their unfair and discriminatory control is the surest weapon to defeat Censorship.



The Management of this Theatre desires the co-operation of its patrons in providing good clean entertainment.
We want no "legalized" censorship of moving pictures

We have prepared a series of nine different stereopticon slides which crystallize the argument against Censorship; one of the slides is shown herewith.

These slides shown repeatedly in any theatre cannot fail to influence public opinion in that locality against Censorship. They will line up the general public on the side of the Exhibitor.

You Ought to Be Showing Them Now! Legislatures Everywhere Are Convening

Set of Nine Slides, carefully packed, will be sent postpaid on receipt of $1.00.

Index to Reviews, Comments, and Advertising Aids on the Films

Appended is a list of subjects which have been released during the three months ending September 30, 1918, and upon the majority of which have been published reviews, comments, or advertising aids. This list is as accurate as it is possible to make it with the information that we have received from the companies whose productions are included. Should any of our readers detect errors, we shall be pleased to have our attention called to them so that we may correct our card index. The letter before the folio indicates the page where the review, comment, or advertising aids can be found. "R" stands for review; "C" for comment; and "A" for advertising aids. Where reference letter is omitted it signifies that none was published. Of the later releases where any or all reference letters are omitted it may be said that the missing information, or part of it, will probably be published in the next volume.

N. B.—Comments or reviews of episodes of serials or series are indexed in connection with general title of such serial or series and not under title of each episode. Date shown for Pathe subjects indicates the week during which they were released.

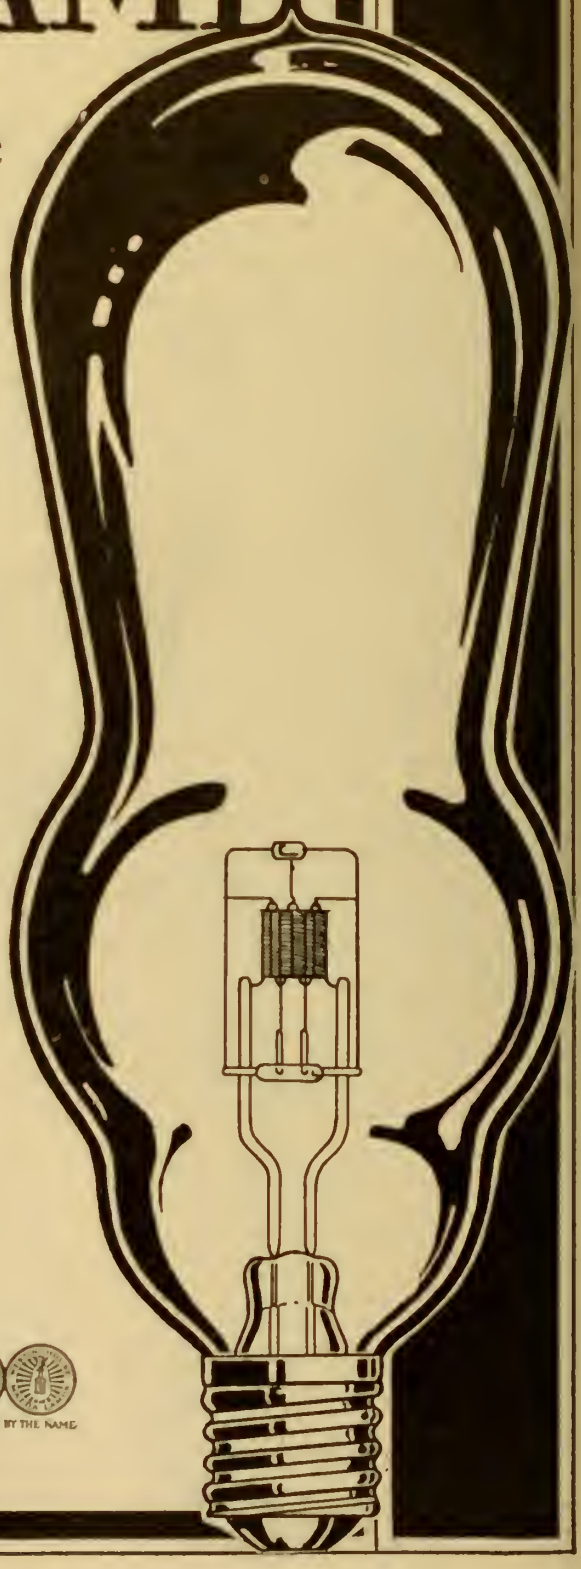
WESTINGHOUSE MAZDA LAMP

For Motion Picture Projection



EVERY progressive motion picture exhibitor is continually on the alert for developments that will promote the comfort of his patrons, improve the tone of his house, or better the quality of his attractions or the showing of them.

The longest step that has yet been taken in all three of these general directions is the adapting of the WESTINGHOUSE MAZDA LAMP for the projection of motion pictures.

It is safe to predict that this lamp is destined to become, in the near future, the standard light source for motion picture projection.

Not only is it far more economical than the arc light, but it is easier and simpler to operate and produces better pictures.

It gives a soft, smooth light which is just as agreeable to the eyes of those sitting near the screen as to those in the rear of the theatre.

Don't fail to see this lamp at our exhibit at the Motion Picture Show to be held at Madison Square Garden, October 5th to 13th.

Simplex

The advantage is not always with the "big fellows"

In some lines of business the "little fellow" is up against it because his larger competitors have so many advantages, in purchasing power, lower prices, influence, etc., etc.

An Exception

The Motion Picture Business is a refreshing exception to this in the most important commodity it produces and sells—PROJECTION.

A Truth

True, the biggest and finest Houses in the country have the highest quality Projection obtainable; but exactly the same high quality of Projection is within the reach of any of the smaller Houses.

A Reason

You see, the large Houses must use Simplex Projection to have the best; and Simplex Projection is Simplex Projection no matter where you find it.

It is just as steady and clear-cut and lifelike and eye-soothing when enjoyed from a wood seat as when viewed from a seat upholstered in real leather.

A Conclusion

So the "big fellows" have nothing on you in this respect. You are able to buy the Machines they use and therefore can equal the Projection of the biggest and best of them—by getting the Simplex kind.

It's how you project what you project; that's what determines your success

Projectionist Ray says

"Where Power's Cameragraph comes through again, is in the Lamp House.

"All Lamps generate a great amount of gas and heat; unless you get rid of it properly, you'll break your condensers and chill your carbons.

"Power's Lamp House is scientifically ventilated. The air is heated before reaching carbons and condensers, and a steady circulation maintains an even temperature which greatly reduces expansion and contraction.

"And Grip—O! Some carbon holder! Its everlasting, non-slip grip, holds carbons in plumb and gives the top-notch area of contact for easy transmission of the 'juice.'

"Power's Cameragraph! Look it over and you'll never overlook it. I'm saying again:

"It Puts the Picture on the Screen"

NEWSPAPER CRITICS CALL "TRIPLE TROUBLE" FUNNIEST CHAPLIN FILM

Read these few excerpts taken at random from hundreds of commendatory clippings:

"You will laugh, you will scream and you will roar, when you see this brand new Charlie Chaplin comedy, 'Triple Trouble.' "

—Columbia, S. C., State.

"Charlie Chaplin, in his latest comedy success, 'Triple Trouble,' is smashing all records at the Franklin Theatre this week. The crowds gladly wait their turn to get a chance to see Chaplin and laugh at his endless troubles."

—Oakland, Cal., Enquirer.

"Charlie Chaplin, in 'Triple Trouble,' is easily the hot weather, sure fire hit, and in one of his best Essanay brand comedies, is attracting hosts of admirers."

—Schenectady, N. Y., Star.

"Charlie Chaplin, in 'Triple Trouble,' injects a lot of new comedy never before presented by the king of comedians. If you think you have seen Charlie in funny ones, take a peek at him in his newest comedy and you'll vote him the best ever."

—Fall River, Mass., Globe.

" 'Triple Trouble' is more fatal to a fit of blues than an attack of laughing gas. The picture is meeting with great success at the Strand this week and is proving one of the funniest of the Chaplin films."

—Duluth, Minn., Herald.

"The Essanay Chaplin comedies have been listed among the most humorous the little comedian has made . . . and Essanay made one film—'Triple Trouble'—that was the funniest of any."

—Montgomery, Ala., Advertiser.

ALICE BRADY in

THE seven productions which comprise Alice Brady's first series of Select Pictures offer the Exhibitor a brilliant group of attractions of high merit, splendidly produced, and starring an artist of international repute on both stage and screen. Show these pictures at short intervals, and benefit by their value as a patronage-building series.

"HER SILENT SACRIFICE"

The story of a maid of Brittany who became the idol of smart Paris, and risked all for the man she loved.

"WOMAN AND WIFE"

The Alice Brady version of Charlotte Bronte's immortal creation, "Jane Eyre," a fiction classic made a screen triumph.

"THE KNIFE"

Made from Eugene Walter's wonderful play. This is one of the most remarkable dramas ever presented on the screen—its action swift and direct, like the stab of a blade through the dark.

"AT THE MERCY OF MEN"

Magnificent acting marks this stirring love drama in which red blood and strong passions sway the hearts of men and women.

"THE ORDEAL of ROSETTA"

A fine standard attraction. Miss Brady is in the picture almost every foot of its five reels, playing many roles in this fascinating screen-play.

"THE WHIRLPOOL"

This clean, wholesome picture tells the story of a young girl who had faith in the better side of human nature—and played her hunch. A winner!

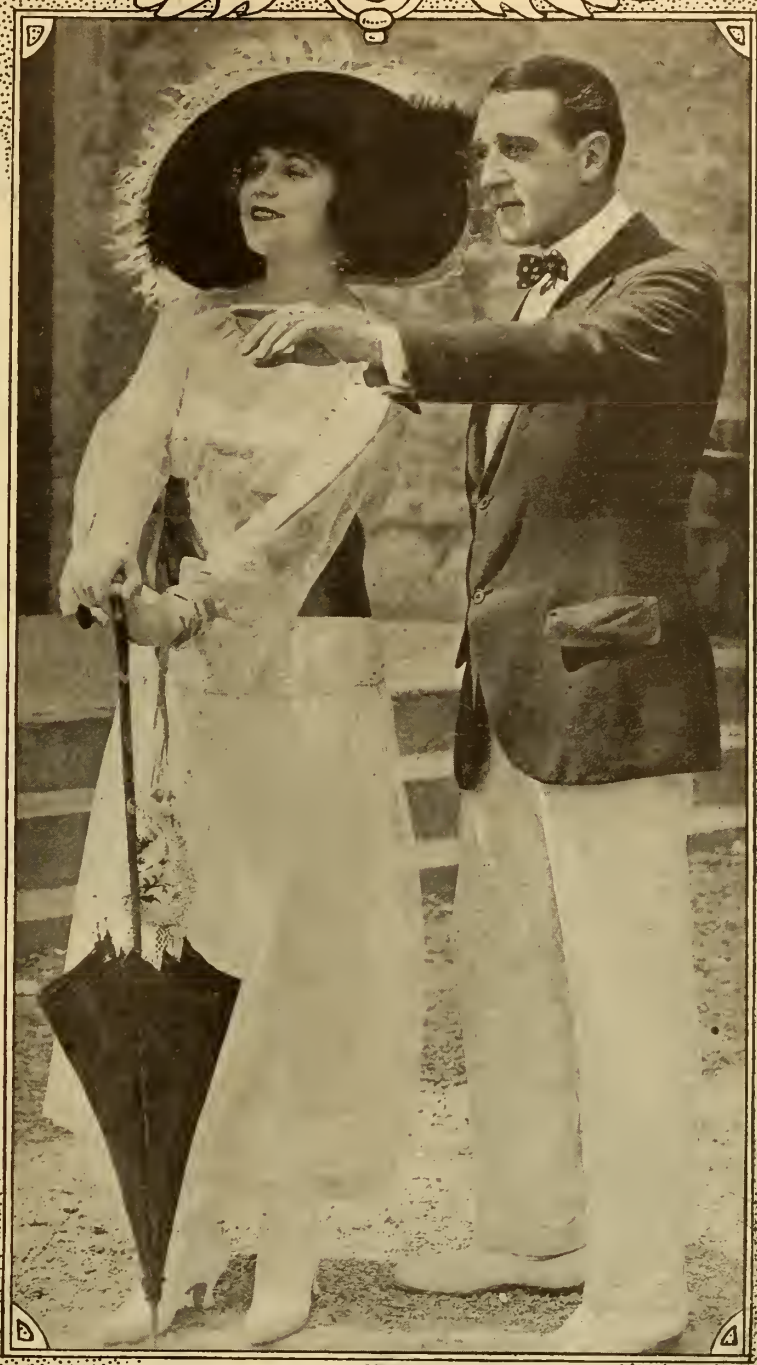
"THE DEATH DANCE"

Hemmed around by adverse circumstances, the one good woman of a fast company—she stayed good! Alice Brady herself dances the difficult "death dance."

SELECT SP PICTURES

AN ideal picture for every class of patronage—is this first of Alice Brady's Second Select Series—clean, of gripping tenseness, and wholly beautiful! This photoplay of twin sisters who loved one man easily outranks this star's best productions in the past. It is a picture which does credit to the screen, and one of which Select is proud.

You will make new friends for Alice Brady with "The Better Half"—and she will win new patrons for your theatre with it.



Another man's wife, and bearing another woman's name—there she stood!

The BETTER HALF

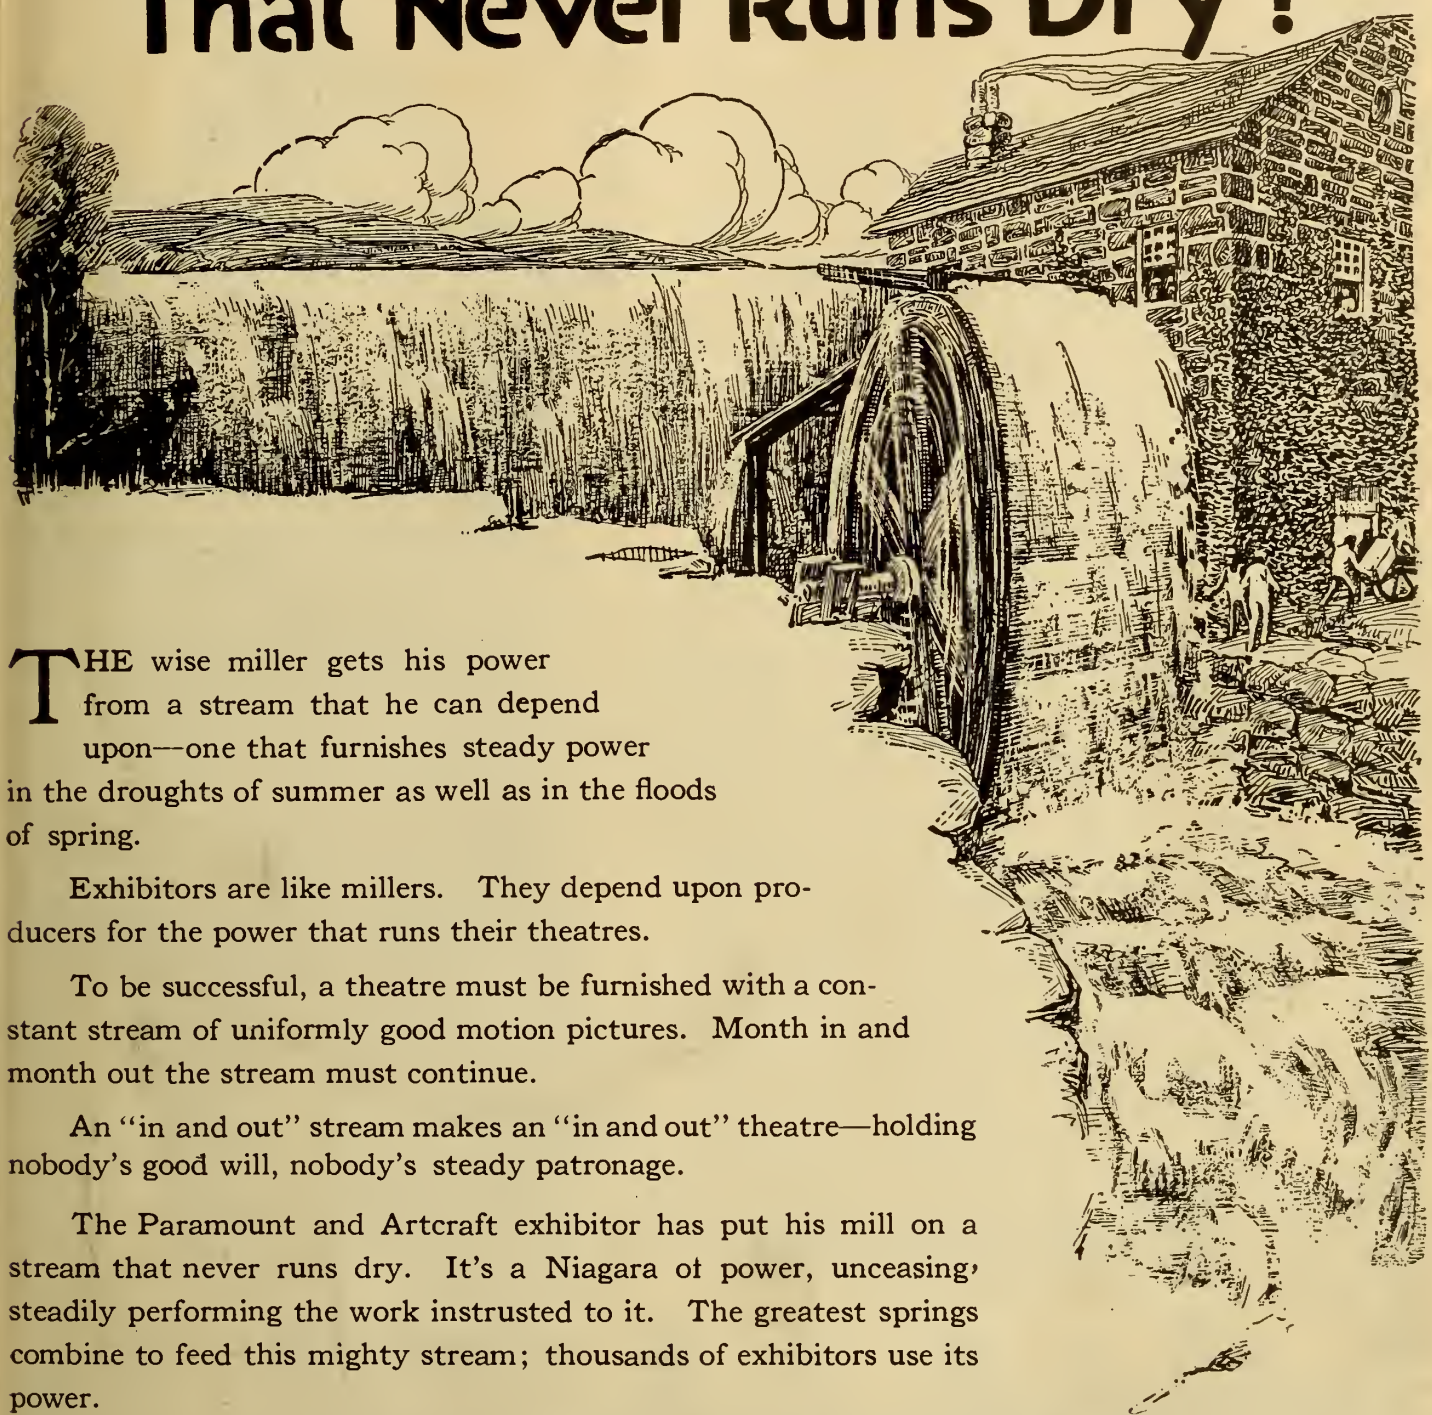
Is Your Mill On a Stream That Never Runs Dry?



THE wise miller gets his power from a stream that he can depend upon—one that furnishes steady power in the droughts of summer as well as in the floods of spring.

Exhibitors are like millers. They depend upon producers for the power that runs their theatres.

To be successful, a theatre must be furnished with a constant stream of uniformly good motion pictures. Month in and month out the stream must continue.

An "in and out" stream makes an "in and out" theatre—holding nobody's good will, nobody's steady patronage.

The Paramount and Artcraft exhibitor has put his mill on a stream that never runs dry. It's a Niagara of power, unceasing, steadily performing the work instrusted to it. The greatest springs combine to feed this mighty stream; thousands of exhibitors use its power.

There's still more room along the bank—
Come set up your mill!

An ARTCRAFT Picture

YOU CAN'T SAY "PISH!" TO AN EARTHQUAKE

WHETHER you want to or not, you've got to take a definite attitude toward an earthquake. It won't let you ignore it.

Fred Stone is a human earthquake. You can't ignore him. For years he has held a solitary position on the musical comedy stage as acrobat, comedian, actor, personality.

In his first Artcraft Picture, "The Goat," he does all of those things that have made him famous. As acrobat he thrills you with his reckless daring. As comedian he rocks your theatre with laughter. As actor he holds your audience spellbound. And as a personality he wins their hearts, so that they will come again and again to see him.

You can't ignore Fred Stone in "The Goat." What are you going to do about it?

"Business Was Capacity in Hottest Week"

When there's hot weather in Cleveland the citizens can run over to Lake Erie and get cooled off. They don't have to suffer. And to keep them in town you've got to have something mighty big. During the hottest week of the summer D. W. Griffith's first Artcraft Picture, "The Great Love," opened at Loew's Stillman Theatre. It was playing in competition with Lake Erie—and it won! Here's what Jack Kuhn, manager of the Stillman, says:

> "Spell of the hottest weather did not affect drawing power of this wonderful feature. On Saturday, the last day of the showing, our receipts were the biggest of any day during the week. Capacity business in extreme hot weather is a record of which any theatre may be proud."

"The Great Love" is a picture your people want to see, and you won't be able to keep them away.

"SHERRILL!"

THE name stands for high art in film production as features like "The Witching Hour," "Conquest of Canaan" and others will attest. Sherrill made "Hearts Across the Seas," a call for patriotism in all countries, and the critics have pronounced it the finest thing of its kind to date. It makes every spectator a booster for his own country; and so is one of those pictures that receive —and deserve—official support everywhere. The executives of your nation, state and city will be glad to endorse and publicize "Hearts Across the Seas." So will every local civic and patriotic organization of any importance. IT MAKES BETTER CITIZENS. If you must have a "special" that has thrills and pep and action, that will make lots of noise, get lots of advertising and do lots of business, you had better sign this Frohman Amusement Corporation (Sherrill) masterpiece today. Oh, yes—Arnold Daly, known the world over as a leading star of the American stage, is the featured player.

Earle Williams is at the very height of his powers in this feature de luxe which ushers in Vitagraph's new Star Series Releasing Plan.

Action—intrigue—fight—a strong love story—a touch of the Secret Service—with a one hundred per cent. American hero in his dashing Yankee role—"A DIPLOMATIC MISSION" is in every sense worthy to bear the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Seal—"the mark of the highest in photoplay art."

Mr. Williams is supported by a strong cast of Vitagraph favorites headed by beautiful Grace Darmond, and in story, photography and production, "A Diplomatic Mission" will delight the most exacting audiences.

24 Special Hodkinson Representatives

THE twenty-four men representing the Hodkinson Organization throughout the United States are the result of a careful selection from the several hundred applicants who wished to connect themselves with us. Each of these men, we believe, is especially fitted for the territory he is in charge of. Each representative, moreover, realizes that one of the most important parts of his duty is careful service to the exhibitor, including a co-operation and extension of friendly feeling that will promote better business and good will.

If you have not already met the Hodkinson Representative in your territory, there is a distinct pleasure in store for you. Let him help you in every way possible and prove to you that the Hodkinson principle of quality pictures for quality houses distributed on an equitable basis and at reasonable prices is an actual fact, rather than a theory.

FROM Jacob Lourie's Modern-Beacon theatres, Boston, to J. J. Parker's Majestic, Portland, Ore.—and at all in-between points—Geraldine Farrar in "The Turn of the Wheel" has registered the biggest success of her screen career and packed theatres to capacity.

From Keith's, Portland, Me., to E. H. Hulsey's Old Mill, Dallas, Mabel Normand in "Peck's Bad Girl" has been acclaimed once more in the type of Mabel Normand stories that millions know and love best. Result: Crowded houses.

From the Finkelstein & Ruben New Garrick, Minneapolis, to the Farley Majestic, Montgomery, Ala., Tom Moore in "Just for Tonight" has strengthened the exhibitors' faith in a personality they themselves discovered. Big business everywhere.

From Jones, Linick & Schaefer's Orpheum, Chicago, to M. L. Markowitz' Strand, San Francisco and to Chas. H. Williams' Strand, Providence, Madge Kennedy in "The Kingdom of Youth," has scored the biggest hit of her screen career in her best picture.

This week from from S. L. Rothapfel's Rivoli to Emil Kehrlein's Kinema, Los Angeles, Rex Beach's "Laughing Bill Hyde" with Will Rogers is beginning a career that, we believe, will stamp it as the most successful of all the Beach pictures.

Goldwyn promised exhibitors everywhere "a Goldwyn Year" of successes. These are but five out of a total of fifty equally successful productions offered you under the Goldwyn Star Series sales policy.

When in Danger He Always Smiled.

"LAUGHING BILL HYDE" is a regular Rex Beach hero. Strong, bold, daring, human, devil-may-care and loyal to the core.

He goes the limit for the pal he loves.

He stakes his life and liberty for a girl—and wins.

So great is his power and pathos that no one who sees him will ever forget this picture.

He is a real American—there are millions like him—challenging danger with a smile on his lips; eagerly inviting the great adventure and meeting it like a man when put to the test.

"Laughing Bill Hyde" is the first of Six Star Series productions of Rex Beach's greatest stories produced and released by Goldwyn. In the coming twelve months these six Rex Beach stories represent the greatest profit-making opportunities open to the exhibitors of the world.

SECRET SERVICE REPORTS PROVE ACCURACY OF "KULTUR" PLOT

To complete the evidence the circulars are themselves penciled with the cipher signature of the head of the German secret service bureau.

Would Destroy Documents.

These two circulars apparently had been obtained by some Russian agent in Germany and transmitted to Russia. The German General Staff evidently wished to get them back in order to destroy them. By the order of the German General Staff and with the "consent" of Lenine and Trotzky they are turned over to the Germans to be destroyed. Why? Because they are conclusive proof that on June 9, 1914, the German Government was preparing for war, several weeks before the assassination of the Austrian Archduke, which was made the pretext for war.

One circular is an order from the German General Staff, dated June 9, 1914, informing "all industrial concerns" in Germany to open the sealed envelopes containing their "industrial mobilization plans and registration forms," so that they might be prepared for the war for which the excuse had not yet been found.

¶ Victory is the biggest word in the English language—the biggest thing on earth today—the supreme event for which a whole world waits in anxious expectation!

¶ Victory is the all-important event now—not the victory of a few miles of territory, but of a culminating series of successes—the mighty triumph that shall free mankind from the bondage of autocracy and of war!

¶ Victory Pictures lead the way to such a triumph for the exhibitor. Victory Pictures are a development of this war—an outgrowth of exhibitor and public demand for the best productions for the best stars a new series—a new brand with a new trade mark, typifying the highest possible expression of dramatic and photographic art!

¶ Victory Pictures are made for the best theatres everywhere. They satisfy the most exacting, the most critical audiences. They are rousing thunders of applause in houses that are proverbially cold; they are waking the echoes of forgotten triumphs—revivifying theatres long lapsed into profitless pursuits. They are getting the coin—everywhere.

¶ Victory Pictures are punch pictures! They've got the real stuff! In stars, stories and supervision, they combine those elusive qualities that register a fair-and-square bull's eye with the universal audience! It's going some to be able to say of any picture that it hasn't scored a miss anywhere in a trip across this country, and it's going a lot further to be able to say the same thing of a whole series—a brand—of productions. But that's the record of Victory Pictures to date—a record as clean and bright and sound as a new-minted quarter.

¶ Victory Pictures have the dash and snap and piquant flavor that win audiences from the start and hold them to the end. They're the sort of pictures of which there's never enough—pictures freed of every foot, every inch, of useless or uninteresting action—pictures that have required big brains to originate and real money to make.

¶ Victory Pictures have the three greatest actors of their respective classes in the films today—

GEORGE WALSH—the athlete supreme;

TOM MIX—the cowboy who never fakes a scene;

GLADYS BROCKWELL—greatest dramatic actress of modern times.

¶ Victory Pictures are the pictures of big stunts and big drama—the best balanced, most uniform series of productions yet marketed—sure money makers for successful houses and certain trade builders for houses that have seen better days—the one, outstanding, supreme value "buy" on the market today!

¶ Book Victory Pictures now—now, while you still have the chance, and get these masterpieces that the trade press is proclaiming the big winners of the new season:

FILM MEN GET HEARING AT CAPITOL

Large Delegation Before Senate Finance Committee Recites Inequalities of Proposed Tax on Industry—Effort to Impress Senators Does Not Register Clearly on the Record

WASHINGTON, D. C., September 17.—That the pending tax bill will serve to wipe out a greater number of motion picture theatres than did the law of 1917, and thus deprive the Government of that many avenues for the dissemination of propaganda films, was the warning of William A. Brady, president of the National Association, who headed a delegation appearing today before the Senate Finance Committee.

Unfortunately for the industry, this was the concluding day of the hearings and furthermore, the Senators were anxious to close promptly at twelve o'clock in order to get to the Senate Chamber in time to hear the remarks of Senator Lodge, of Masschusetts, on the subject of the peace note from Austria. Senator Lodge is himself a member of the committee, and was in the committee room until just prior to the time for his speech. The desire to bring about the early conclusion of the hearings resulted in misunderstandings and probably misjudgment of the testimony offered.

Before the delegation went to the Capitol, a meeting was held in the Shoreham Hotel for the selection of speakers and to outline a program. The latter was not carried out. Mr. Brady was given an opportunity to make an opening statement and then the cross examination began, before the picture men had a chance to place their hopes and desires before the committee in a form that would help the cause.

"We do not come here at all as 'squealers,'" began Mr. Brady, and he read to the Senators his letter from President Wilson wherein the latter told of the good that could be derived from the screen. "During the last eighteen months," he said, "and I think it is a well known fact to you all, the motion picture has delivered a world of valuable service to the Government. It has not charged for its services; it has not come here asking for reductions or favors of any kind. All of the Departments in the City of Washington and elsewhere have been offered its services gratuitously. For the next Liberty Loan it is dedicating free of cost to the Treasury Department at least forty-five pictures made by the men and women of the screen and by the manufacturers without cost. These, in the opinion of the Secretary of the Treasury, are going to be the most valuable propaganda to be used in the Liberty Loan drive. Let that suffice to alibi us."

Mr. Brady then declared that the taxes to be put upon the industry will practically drive at least fifty per cent. of the theatres of the United States out of business.

Senator Thomas stated that there had been 160,000,000 feet of film exported, and he wanted to know the terms of lease and sale, pointing out later, accepting the statement of Mr. Irwin that the exports would not average over eight cents per foot, that the manufacturers would not have to pay a cent of tax on $12,800,000 in sales abroad. Mr. Irwin explained that it was the practice of the manufacturers to sell their prints outright in Europe, and in Great Britain an ordinary picture would sell at from $4,000 to $5,000. The film rentals in the United States would total $70,000,000.

It is proposed in the bill to place a tax of ten per cent. upon the gross rental price of each picture. This would mean that $7,000,000 would each year be saddled upon the motion picture industry. Later during the hearing it was stated that the total returns to the industry last year was something less than $5,000,000, so that if the manufacturers could not get out from under this tax they would have to borrow $2,000,000 to pay the Government in order to keep in business. On their part, the exhibitors, according to Alfred S. Black, who appeared in their behalf, were equally positive that they could not absorb this tax, because of meagre profits and so many other taxes, and any attempt to pass it on to the public will cut off the patronage to such an extent as to cause many houses to close their doors permanently.

Mr. Brady stated that the industry was not profiting by the war and was not rolling up great surpluses. Whatever surplus has been made is in films lying on the shelves. He claimed that Congress was taxing the picture industry more than any other industry, and Senator Thomas remarked that there were many others claiming their respective industries were in similar positions.

The speaker stated that following the imposition of the present admissions tax 17,000 exhibitors dwindled to 14,000 in number. Senator Thomas asked if the theatres had not increased their prices and so hurt their businesses. Being assured such was not the case, he remarked that he believed the theatres everywhere were doing a good business. Mr. Brady urged upon him not to gauge the whole industry of the country by abnormal conditions in Washington, where all theatres are doing exceptional business.

The charges made by the ticket stands in New York City were criticised by Senator Thomas, and this led to the injection of unfortunate testimoney into the record. It was pointed out that in the last tax bill there had been proposed quite a heavy tax on these stands, but that this provision "strangely disappeared" when the measure was in conference. This reference to an action taken by a committee of the Senate and House of Representatives while whipping a bill passed by both houses of Congress, by the Senate with many changes, into shape acceptable to both branches, brought forth the reproof of Senator Simmons. He declared it to be a criticism of the members of Congress, and the speakers apologized.

"I believe as the oldest theatrical man actively engaged in the business," continued Mr. Brady, "I must be an expert. You consult with other industries of the United States before you fix prices on steel, and rubber and other commodities, and I say that you should take into consideration the man who has spent the whole of his life in the business."

He pointed out that it is estimated by the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives that under the new rates the tax on admissions and dues will yield $100,000,000, and said: "I desire to go on record as an expert that this estimate will not come true; that the estimate of $50,000,000 for twelve months under existing rates will decrease with extra taxation. The business is decreasing all over the country—not in Washington, where conditions are different, and it is not true of New York, Boston, or Chicago, but they are not the whole United States."

There has never been an occasion when film men appeared before a committee during the consideration of problems of taxation that the salaries paid to motion picture actors and actresses did not enter into some sort of a controversy or another. This time it started with the query of Senator Thomas as to whether or not Anita Stewart received $3,500 per week, and then inquiry was made as to why it was, with salaries to Charlie Chaplin, Mary Pickford and

Douglas Fairbanks so large, the industry was unable to assume these taxes.

"The actors and actresses get it all," said Mr. Brady.

A rather unusual interpretation was placed on a part of the export business by Senator Jones, of New Mexico. Mr. Irwin was attempting to explain his remark that "our inventory has not increased; and, rather, our inventory is really fictitious." He stated that it was necessary to continue valuing films for the purpose of borrowing money, etc., on the basis of the full disposal of all copies. He had stated that because of war conditions, films intended for export trade were accumulating on the shelves, although the manufacturers were continuing to make them in the hope of some day being able to get their money back through foreign sales.

Senator Jones got the impression, apparently, that the manufacturers were going ahead and making films expressly for this export trade. He did not understand that what Mr. Irwin meant was that extra positives were being struck off at the same time that positives were being made for the United States and that instead of the export films costing $42,000, that figure was represented as follows. Mr. Irwin had taken films of a class costing $20,000 to produce and had stated that 50 prints for the United States would cost an additional $10,000. If the picture was also intended for foreign sale, 30 more prints would be made at a cost of $6,000. The total expenditure on the picture and the 80 prints would be $42,000.

Under the belief that the $42,000 was the amount of money being sunk in each picture for foreign trade only, Senator Jones intimated that he would expect such action "if you gentlemen had just escaped from St. Elizabeth's." (The last named being the hotel maintained by the Government for the insane.) "To have it appear in this record here that you are deliberately investing money in a thing you deliberately know you will get no money out of is beyond the comprehension of at least one member of this committee," he said.

The exhibitors are dedicating 100 per cent. to win the war, declared Altred S. Black, who said that this was the first time that the small exhibitor has come to Washington to be heard. The exhibitors are willing to pay a just and fair tax, but ask that the taxation be not made so burdensome as to put a large number of small theatres out of existence. He agreed that the manufacturers could not absorb the proposed rental tax in their profits, and said it is even more true that the exhibitors cannot afford to pay it, and there is no way to pass it on to the public.

Mr. Black briefly told of the large number of taxes, national, state, county, and local, to say nothing of censorship taxes and charges, that the industry is subjected to, and said it was fast getting to a point where the small houses that had been earning a profit would show larger figures on the other side of the ledger. He was clear in stating that this does not apply in cities like Washington, where there is a war boom, but in those cities where such prosperity is not present, but where the draft and the calls for employment in the war-boom cities were making themselves felt in cutting down the possible fields of patronage for the exhibitors.

He said that the keeping of all of the theatres in operation for the pushing of Government propaganda would prove of more value than the additional returns from the increased taxes.

Another unfortunate period was the accusation made that the various interests in the industry had combined to fight the tax, but Senator Robinson remarked that it would not have been possible for all present to have been heard at this time, and Senator Simmons said that the request of the committee had been that all branches of an industry get together and select one speaker, and that was just exactly what the film men had done.

Among those present were William A. Brady, Walter W. Irwin, Harry M. Crandall, Colonel Barry Bulkley, Charles J. Pettijohn, Harry S. Bernstein, Alfred S. Black, Gabriel L. Hess, Frederick H Elliott, Sydney S. Cohen, Samuel L. Rothapfel, J. Victor Wilson, Louis F Blumenthal Elmer H. Horstmann, Albert Lowe, Lewis Innerarity. The trade papers were represented by Clarence L. Linz, Moving Picture World; Earle A Dyer, Exhibitors' Trade Review; R. F. Welsh, Motion Picture News, and Milton Hackes, Wid's Daily.

The members of the Senate Finance Committee present at the hearing were Furnifold McL. Simmons, chairman, North Carolina; Charles S. Thomas, Colorado; Peter G. Gerry, Rhode Island, Henry Cabot Lodge, Massachusetts; Porter J. McCumber, North Dakota; Reed Smoot, Utah; Joseph T. Robinson, Arkansas; Andrieus A. Jones, New Mexico, William P. Dillingham, Vermont, and John F Nugent, Idaho LINZ.

War Board Restricts Manufacture of Machines

MOTION picture machine manufacturers are to go upon a war basis of curtailment in variety of sizes of lenses, production of lighter machines and substitutes where possible for brass, aluminum, steel and iron under a conservation program which has been worked out at conferences between the manufacturers and the Conservation Division of the War Industries Board, according to an announcement authorized by B M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board.

In an announcement to the manufacturers of motion picture machines the Conservation Division, emphasizing the primary importance of husbanding the country's resources and supply of materials, equipment and capital to aid in carrying on the war, says:

"The Division has been informed that manufacturers in your industry are producing machines with lenses of a greater variety of sizes then is necessary in war time, that considerable saving in the weight of machines can be effected, with a further saving by substitution in many cases of some less essential materials for the brass and aluminum now used, and that economies can be effected in the distribution of accessories. The elimination of the avoidable use of brass, steel, iron and aluminum, which are all urgently required for war purposes, is particularly desired."

The schedule covering the industry, which is issued, provides:

1.—The purchase of new lenses to be restricted from this date to 4 inches, 5 inches and 6 inches focal lengths, and 16 inches, 20 inches and 24 inches stereo. There is no restriction in dealing in second-hand lenses of any size.

2.—After September 20, 1918, the following accessories to be furnished to purchasers only upon request as extras: (a) Rheostat; (b) Re-winder; (c) Reels.

3.—Each manufacturer to reduce the weight of his machines as much as is practicable and to advise this Division immediately of the amount of this reduction.

4.—Each manufacturer to substitute some less essential material for brass, aluminum and steel in so far as possible, and to advise this Division of the action taken.

Propaganda Features Are Useful at Training Camps

THE official news bulletin of the Theatre Division, War Department Commission on Training Activities, issued by De Hull N. Travis, for the week ending Sept. 21 contains remarkable testimony to the efficiency of "propaganda" features in arousing the fighting spirit in soldiers assembled at training camps. We quote the bulletin.

"At the conclusion of the performance, six of the conscientious objectors in attendance signified their change of attitude and expressed their willingness to become United States fighting men," writes the manager of the Liberty Theatre, Camp Pike, after special showing of 'To Hell With the Kaiser.'

"The special morning matinee of the picture was under a general order from headquarters. Major Keefer gave an address with this picture to all the conscientious objectors in the camp present for this performance.

"Due to the patriotic results from the showing of this picture, recommendations will be made by officers of Camp Pike to Washington, suggesting the use of 'To Hell With the Kaiser' and other like propaganda pictures for the purpose of making fighting men out of conscientious objectors. Other feature propaganda pictures to be used for the same purpose include, 'Why America Will Win,' 'The Prussian Cur,' 'The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin,' and 'The Unbeliever.'

"E. L. Hyman, Director of Pictures for the Liberty Theatre Division of the War Department, Commission on Training Camp Activities, has directed all Liberty Theatre managers to give special morning propaganda performances whenever possible."

Dick Rush to Join the Anzaks.

Dick Rush, Cliff Smith's assistant director, has resigned his position with the Triangle to go into the Australian fighting forces. He expects to obtain a commission as he has been training with the Officer's Reserve in Los Angeles for six months and has seen real fighting. At the outbreak of the European war he offered his services to the British army, but technicalities in the neutrality laws forbade his entrance into England's ranks. A year ago he planned on enlisting, but an untoward circumstance prevented the fulfilment of this cherished dream. Now he has definitely decided to go into the big fight with his old pals, for Dick is Australian. He comes from the "Back Blocks," as the Anzaks call the frontiers of their native land. For nineteen months he hot-footed it after the Boers in South Africa.

MARITIME PROVINCES CONVENTION

Annual Convention in Halifax Discusses Topics of Importance to Industry And Adopts Binding Pledge

By Sam Spedon

ON Wednesday, September 18, the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the Maritime Provinces of Canada opened its third annual convention at the Board of Trade rooms in Halifax, N. S., continuing through the next day.

An address of welcome was made by President M. V. Gastonguay, who, precisely at 2.30 p. m. called the first day's session to order and proceeded with its regular business. The acting secretary, J. M. Franklin read the minutes of the previous convention held at St. John, N. B., September 8, 1917. These were adopted as read.

J. R. Macadams, under the head of unfinished business, introduced the subject of the liability of express companies in the prompt delivery of films. He suggested that a test case should be made in the courts at the expense of the League.

W. C. McKay, moved that a standardized contract be requested from the express companies and this matter be taken up by the incoming executives with full power to act. The motion was seconded by W. W. O'Fenerty and unanimously carried.

L. E. Ouimet cited a test case in Montreal, which was decided in favor of the exhibitor. Mr. Macadams said: in Nova Scotia the courts were indifferent and had never expressed themselves positively on the subject.

Discuss Merger with N. A. M. P. I.

A motion by Mr. McKay that the question, brought up at last year's session, of affiliating with the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, should be decided in the affirmative. By request Sam Spedon explained the absorbtion of the M. P. E. L. and the A. E. A. by the N. A. M. P. I. at the convention held in Chicago, September 3.

Motion was then made and carried to defer the matter until the fourth annual convention, to be held in 1919. Secretary Franklin read his report for 1918 and it was adopted as read.

Next in order came the appointment, by the president, of the nominating committee, as follows: W. W. O. Fenety, J. F. O'Connell, F. W. Winters and J. M. Franklin, who brought in the following slate for the officers of the league of the ensuing year:

New Officers Installed.

President, Walter C. McKay. Opera House, St. John.

Vice President, R. J. Macadam, Casino Theatre, Halifax.

Secretary, Walter H. Golding, Imperial Theatre, St. John.

Treasurer, George J. B. Metzler, Empire Theatre, Halifax.

Vice President for Nova Scotia, John F. O'Connell, Majestic Theatre, Halifax.

Vice President for New Brunswick, Witter W O. Fenety, Fredericton.

Vice President for Prince Edward Island, J. J. Gaudet, Summerside.

They were unanimously elected and inducted into office.

The treasurer's report delayed in its reading, showed that the League is in good financial condition and has a balance to its credit of $200.

Mr. Gastonguay, the retiring president, in resigning the gavel expressed his regret that he had not been more active the latter months of his office on account of giving up his motion picture business and taking up the life of a gentleman farmer. While not actively engaged in the business he assured the members that his interest was none the less keen in their welfare and the success of the industry. On motion of Mr. McKay, Mr. Gastonguay was elected an honorary member of the League.

W. H. Golding, of St. John, made a report for the exhibitors of his province on the good work and untiring efforts in the adjustment of taxation and other legislation. The following resolution by Mr. Macadams was read and adopted:

Pass Resolutions of Sympathy.

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God to remove from this worldly sphere Mr. A. S. Wall, the late censor of amusements for the Province of Nova Scotia, and;

Whereas, in the death of Mr. Wall the country has lost a model citizen, the Province a most competent and popular official, and the moving picture interests a highly esteemed counsellor and friend;

Resolved, that the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the Maritime Provinces in convention assembled, tender to Mr. Wall's family and the Government of Nova Scotia an expression of condolence and sympathy. And further,

Resolved, that a copy of this resolution be inscribed on the minutes of this convention and that copies of it shall be forwarded to Mr. Wall's family and the Premier of Nova Scotia.

Another resolution offered by Mr. Golding was as follows:

Be it resolved, that the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the Maritime Provinces in convention assembled, does hereby extend to its esteemed fellow member, Mr. W. W. Fenety of the Gaiety Theatre, Fredericton, N. B., our sincere sympathy in his recent loss of both parents in an automobile accident, and that a copy of this resolution be included in our official record. The resolution was unanimously endorsed.

W. T. H. Fenety, killed in the automobile accident referred in the above resolution, was the senior member of the picture house partnership in Fredericton and was one of the best known and highly respected showmen in Eastern Canada, having been identified with the business for thirty-six years.

Another resolution presented at a later session of the convention referred in most feeling terms to David M. Richards, proprietor of the Gem Theatre, Fredericton, N. B. Mr. Richards was affectionately known as "Uncle" Dave by all the exhibitors and respected for enthusiastic support of the League.

The first day's session of the convention adjourned at 5.30 p. m., to meet the following day at 2 p. m.

Banquet Closes the First Day.

At 10.30 p. m. at the Tally Ho restaurant a banquet was tendered the members and their guests.

Those in attendance were: N. V. Gastonguay, John F. O'Connell, R. J. Macadam, G. J. B. Metzler, J. M. Franklin, M. Herschon and Thos. Daley, of Halifax; L. E. Ouimet, of the Pathe Freres interest, Montreal; R. G. March, of the Specialty Film and Import Co., St. John; G. A. Margetts, of the Universal Film Co., St. John; E. Teel and E. English, of Regal Films, Ltd., St. John; Mitchell Bernstein, of the Famous Players Film Service, St. John; A. Collen, of the Universal Film Co., St. John; Walter C. McKay, St. John Opera House; Walter H. Golding, Imperial Theatre, St. John; F. W. Winter, Opera House, Moncton; Mrs. Walter Davidson, Dreamland Theatre, Moncton; A. R. Walker, Dartmouth; A. Walfield, Bridgewater; A. J. Mason, Wolfville, W. W. O. Fenety, Fredericton, N. B.; and Sam Spedon, of the Moving Picture World; Joe Fieberman, Fox Films; A. Donaghy, of Exhibitors' Distributors Corpn.; Billy Richards, New Castle; "Bobby" Finn, M. P.; Bob McCurdy, Halifax Herald and Mr. Phelan, manager Majestic Stock Co.

The Second Day's Session.

The second session of the convention was called to order by President W. C. McKay at 2:45 p. m. Thursday. The reading of several communications by the newly elected secretary, W. H. Golding, from absent members and others was then in order. Among them was a letter of regret from C. C. Pettijohn, explaining his inability to be at Halifax. Just as it was read Sam Spedon received a telegram, which read as follows:

"Eight-pound boy. Anniversary our Canadian trip. Both doing fine." Signed C. C. Pettijohn.

Motion was made by R. J. Macadams and seconded by J. M. Franklin that a communication be sent to Mr. and Mrs. Pettijohn, congratulating them on the new arrival. Unanimously carried.

Mr. Golding explained the rapid-fire co-operation the New Brunswick exhibitors had given in furthering legislative matters that might benefit the exhibitors of the Maritime Provinces. On their own initiative they had placed an editorial telegram in all the Toronto papers on the power of the screen, which was read by all the members of the legislature and carried great weight in gaining favorable legislation on fuel conservation, licenses, etc. This display was inserted in the newspapers over night, appeared the next morning, the day these matters were to be considered at Federal Capitol. To reimburse Mr. Golding for this excellent iniative the members present subscribed the amount necessary for the payment of this advertising account.

Non-Cancellation Contract Discussed.

On new business Mr. Finety brought up the one-year, non-cancellation contract of the Famous Players-Lasky Film Corporation. Mr. Finety made a motion that all exhibitors refuse such a contract without a thirty days' cancellation being inserted. This motion was seconded by Mr. Mason, but it was not acted upon because the motion was practically embodied in the obligation printed below.

Mr. Macadams advocated the standing together on the actions of the league, and make it binding on all matters decided upon by the convention in order to do something worth while. Mr. Macadams then presented the following obligation:

I hereby promise on my honor as a gentleman and as a member of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the Maritime Provinces of Canada to faithfully adhere to the following obligations:

First. I will not pay advance deposits to film exchanges or other film distributors.

Second. I will not sign a non-cancellable contract for regular film service.

Third. I will not willfully be a party to the scheme of any film exchange or distributor to foist obnoxious terms on any other member of the league.

Fourth: I will not directly, or through an agent, attempt to secure the services of an employee of any other member of the league, without the employer's consent.

Fifth. I will not rent or buy pictures from any exchange or company actively interested in the operation of any theatre in the Maritime Provinces.

Sixth. In my relations with brother members, film exchanges, or the public, I will not be guilty of any action calculated to bring the picture business into disrepute.

Seventh: I will assist to the best of my ability in carrying out any instructions issued to the members of the league by its executive.

It is understood that section one of this obligation is not binding on any signer who happens to be the employee of some person or firm not resident in the Maritime Provinces.

This obligation will be considered binding until rescinded by a majority vote at a meeting of the league.

This obligation was discussed and dissected by the convention During the discussion Mr Macadams said he was informed the Famous Players Lasky and the Regal were establishing theatres of their own—some twenty-seven in all—throughout the provinces

The obligation on motion was unanimously adopted All those present immediately signed it

At this point the members, with the film men, repaired to the steps of the Provincial Building, where a photograph of the group was taken Exchangemen's Session.

While the convention was going on the following exchangemen held a session in conjunction with the exhibitors

A. Donaghy, Exhibitors' District Corporation, Ltd., St. John, N. B.; Ed English, Regal Films, Ltd., Montreal; Joe Lieberman, Manager Fox Film Corporation, St. John, N. B.; E. H Teel, Regal Films, Ltd., St. John, N. B.; G A Margette, Canadian Universal Film Company, Ltd., St. John, N. B.; R. G. March, Specialty Film Import, St. John, N. B.; Arthur Callan, Canadian Universal Film Company, Ltd., St. John, N B.; M. S. Bernstein, Famous Players Film Service, St. John, N. B.; L. E. Ouimet, Specialty Film Import Company, Montreal, Quebec.

J. A. Margette of St. John, president of the Exchange Managers' Association of the Maritime Provinces, also manager of the Universal exchange, acted as spokesman for the exchangemen. He said as president of the association he would see that all members of the exhibitors' league secure a copy of the constitution and by-laws of the exchangemen's association. He explained that the primary object of the association was to protect its members against bad accounts and unfair cancellations of contracts.

Mr. Ouimet said he was one of the originators of the exchangemen's association. He believed in organization for protection to see that both exhibitors and exchangemen get a fair and square deal. No exhibitor is obliged by reason of any ruling of the association to make a contract he cannot afford to pay. Every exhibitor should know what he is signing and should use his best judgment as a man and not as a child. He believed that if the Government insisted upon higher taxes for exchange privileges the exchangemen would be obliged to move out of Montreal.

Mr. Golding said he sympathized with exchangemen's troubles and did not object to exchangemen organizing, but he did object to the exchangemen introducing objectionable non-cancellable contracts. He requested any exchangemen present, if so empowered, to state their business plans for the coming year. He would like to know if any radical changes were to be made in their policies.

Mr. Macay invited Mr. Bernstein, of the Famous Players-Lasky, to state the policy of that company. Mr. Bernstein said he was at liberty to state that its contract was to be two or three a week, non-cancellation clause, and for one year. This announcement caused much discussion and interrogation.

Mr. English, of the Regal, said his company would have a thirty days' clause on all but the specials—Pickford, Chaplin, Storey and some other stars. They will be non-cancellable All the other exchangemen said their companies would have a thirty days' cancellation clause

Mr Macay then read the obligation as adopted by the convention, which was startling information to the exchangemen

Mr Margette, referring to the fifth clause, explained that the Universal had a theatre in the city of Montreal, known as the Holeman Theatre. While it was operated by the Universal, it was not exclusively showing Universal pictures It uses all makes. Further he admitted that this theatre was a subsidiary branch of the Universal Film Company

It was said during the discussion that F. G Spencer, of St. John, was a distributor as well as an exhibitor The chairman explained that clause five of the obligation applied to exhibitors as well as distributors, and all members of the league must conform.

Mr. Franklin made this motion, seconded by Mr. O'Connell and unanimously carried

That this league go on record as requesting that a copy of all contracts be left with the exhibitor before the head office decides on their validity, and a copy of this motion be sent to all exchangemen.

This motion, it was explained by Mr. Franklin, was to avoid all subsequent questions. Mr. Ouimet said all his exchangemen were authorized to sign all contracts with full power without forwarding them to the home office for approval.

Mr. Golding moved that the secretary of the league be instructed to communicate with all existing exhibitor bodies in Canada for closer co-operation and affiliation. Seconded by A. J. Mason Unanimously carried.

The question of fifteen cents a reel tax was introduced and a motion made and carried to refer this matter to the provincial Government.

Mr. O'Connell said the league should go on record in its patriotic work, voluntarily and freely, in Government propaganda. He also presented a resolution, offering the use of leagues' screens in the next Victory Loan drive. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

A resolution was adopted that a letter of condolence be sent to the family of our deceased league member, D. M. Richards, and spread on the records of the convention. The third convention of the Exhibitors' League of the Maritime Provinces adjourned to meet at St. John, N. B., 1919.

Connecticut Reel Fellows Add More Members.

Great strides are being made by the newly organized Reel Fellows Club of Connecticut, in both their exploitation of good will and good fellowship among the salesmen and exchange managers of that particular territory.

Morris Rabanus, former Mutual representative in Connecticut, has left his post in New Haven and is now stationed at Camp Greenleaf, Georgia, in the Infantry, having been drafted. In appreciation of his long term in the territory and the good will which he helped to create during his time as film salesman, the Reel Fellows are purchasing a handsome wrist watch which will be sent to him as a token of esteem from his brother salesmen.

The Reel Fellows have already taken up the matter of putting over big things in Connecticut on the new Liberty Loan, and promise grand results. New members who will be entered into the organization at the meeting of October 1, are as follows: Sam Farber, recently appointed manager of the New Haven office of American Feature Film Co.; Jerry Wilson, representative for Sherry Service, and Michael Alperin, new representative of Famous Players-Lasky, and formerly with Boston Goldwyn.

Cunningham Writes for Kerrigan.

Jack Cunningham, who has to his credit the writing of a goodly number of the features which have come out of the West Coast Studios in the past year, has been engaged by Robert Brunton to do the "scripts" for the Kitty Gordon pictures, which will be made at the Robert Brunton Studios in Hollywood, for the United Theatres Programme, as well as a number of those in which Bessie Barriscale will appear at the Brunton Studios during the next year.

Cunningham also has been engaged by Jesse D. Hampton to do a certain amount of screen writing for J. Warren Kerrigan, his second script for Mr. Kerrigan, on which work will be started in a few days, is an adaptation of John G. Blackwood's play "Come Again, Smith." At the present time three stars, Miss Barriscale, Frank Keenan and Louise Glaum, are engaged in the filming of scenarios from Cunningham's typewriter. Miss Barriscale in "Two-Gun Betty," Mr. Keenan in "Todd of the Times," and Miss Glaum in an out-door story which has not been finally named.

DUAL PERSONALITY OF JUNE ELVIDGE

Heroine of Hickory Nut Gap Confesses She Feels Equally at Home as a Vicious Vampire or as the Dutiful Object of the Hero's Strenuous but Steadfast Devotion

By Edward Weitzel

STYLES in vampires are as varied as are the shapes of their noses and the types of their masculine but mentally flabby victims. One sort that is much admired by people who would scorn a real vampire in the flesh and refuse to meet her on the ground that it would imperil their social standing, is the lady who advertises her profession in every line of her sartorial and physical make-up with the liberality and artistic restraint of the familiar circus poster. Another brand favors the use of finesse and is known to the underworld as "nifty workers." June Elvidge is a member of this branch of the industry. So well does she conceal her real purpose when she smiles upon the male being in the picture, who is to curse the day that a benighted Englishman invented the rag-bone-hank-of-hair harpy, that the deluded gentleman is quite excusable for thinking her a lady. To such an extent does she carry this deception that her managers have seriously considered billing her as the Amiable Vampire. And she glories in her task.

She feels equally at home, however, as the dutiful object of the hero's strenuous but steadfast devotion. A dual personality allows the heroine of Bat Cave, Hickory Nut Gap, North Carolina, to appear as a freckle-nosed, bare-footed but white-souled child of the hill country, whose identity is never in doubt. The story of how June Elvidge came to be cast for two such separated lines of business makes interesting reading. The interview took place at the office of the World Film Corporation.

"Your debut as a moving picture actress was made as a vampire, I believe, Miss Elvidge?"

"Yes; in a picture called 'The Oldest Law.' I was chosen to play opposite Alice Brady on account of my height. I was very fond of the part and thought I should be satisfied to go on impersonating a long line of fascinatingly wicked ladies for the rest of my screen career. There was something about being a dangerous woman and 'luring men's souls to the shores of sin,' as the poem has it, without really meaning it, that gave me a sense of power I heartily enjoyed. I acted a number of these attractively sinful creatures, and wore expensive gowns to my heart's content.

"Then, one night I became conscience-striken and determined to mend my ways. It happened in a moving picture theatre. I realized how every one in the house hated the vampiring person and sympathized with the modest little heroine. I longed to inspire the same love and devotion. My feelings urged me to ask for a juvenile lead; my mirror told me I was several inches too tall for such a part. But I determined to make the attempt. Contrary to my expectations, I was at once given a chance to create the role of the heroine in a new picture."

"That made you very happy, of course?"

Chauffeuring a Plow.

"Only for a short time. At first I gloried in knowing that the people in front of the screen were nightly and afternoonly giving me their love and pity. Then I commenced to feel the old fondness for the sinful life and the joy of wrecking the happiness of other women, and shortly afterward I was back in the studio vamping away like a good fellow. A brief return to the 'roses and raptures of vice' was followed by another period of reform, and I exchanged the silks and laces I had been wearing for a calico frock, and walked bare-footed behind a self-willed plow whose steering gear was in no way related to anything connected with an automobile."

"Do you mean that you were really obliged to act as chauffeur to a plow?"

"A moving picture actress may not be expected to know how to do everything, but that is no excuse for not tackling any bit of business called for by the scenario. The first time I followed a furrow across the field and tried to stick to the rear end of the plow, I thought I had met my Waterloo. It happened at Hickory Nut Gap, North Carolina, in a picture called 'The Power and the Glory.' I stuck to the job and the plow, however, and felt more than repaid when the old chap who owned the farm looked over the result of my work and remarked:

"'Keep at it, Miss, an' you'll make a good plow boy.' I don't know what was planted in that field after I finished plowing, but I raised a fine crop of blisters on my hands. My last picture is known as 'A Woman of Redemption.'

"The lady is a product of the London Music Halls, who comes to this country and leaves her old life behind her."

"That sounds as if you had gone back to vamping again."

Leading a Trunk Astray.

"Yes. Getting near to nature in one's bare feet is very healthful, I've been told; but we were obliged to go back to Hickory Nut Gap three times before the picture was finished, and I was afraid I might overdo the thing. We had a long drive from the railroad to Bat Cave, and stopped at a hotel with the promising name of 'Esmerelda Inn.' I don't know whether the proprietor ever heard of Mrs. Hodgson Burnett's heroine of that name, but I am certain he knew nothing about the way a New York hotel is run, and wouldn't have thought it necessary to put in all of the modern improvements if he had. To make it more interesting for me individually, on the first trip my trunk went astray, or rather was led astray. It arrived with the others all right after a long haul from the railroad station, but our manager thought it did not belong to the company baggage and sent it back in the wagon."

"What did you do when you discovered the mistake?"

"Tried to remember that I was a lady. There were thirteen people and thirteen trunks in the company and we started away on the thirteenth of the month. I had always claimed that I was not superstitious, like the man who was willing to borrow thirteen dollars, but my belief received a severe shock which it did not recover from until my trunk was brought back the next day."

Responding to the Emotional Appeal.

The light strain in which June Elvidge had been telling of her experiences was changed to a more serious tone by an inquiry as to the line of acting she preferred. From her answer the conclusion was reached easily, that the actress has a determined ambition to go far in her profession and possesses the insight and sympathy that are among the important essentials to success. Sitting near an open window, with the afternoon sun lighting up her features, her earnestness lent force to her words:

"The part I like best is the title role in 'The Beautiful Mrs. Reynolds.' The woman has strength of character, in spite of her moral defects. She loves sincerely and is willing to dare almost anything to win the man who has captured her heart. She has brains also and the fascination that beauty and culture always exerts. I could feel her power when I was playing the part."

"You believe in responding to the emotional appeal of a character, then?"

"Indeed I do! There can be no really fine acting without such a response. If I ever realize my ambition I know it will be because both mind and heart are in my work."

Prevent an Epidemic of Spanish Influenza

AT THE instance of Royal S. Copeland, Health Commissioner of the city of New York, there was a meeting of representatives of motion picture theatres, dramatic theatres, subway and surface car lines at the Commissioner's office last week to discuss methods of preventing the spread of Spanish influenza in the city. Sydney S. Cohen, as president of the New York State Exhibitors' Association, represented the motion picture men.

It was decided to ask all picture theatre managers to show a slide daily and at all performances which is to read as follows:

> To Prevent the Spread of Spanish Influenza Sneeze, Cough or Expectorate (if you must)
> Into Your Handkerchief
> There is no Danger if you Heed this Warning. By Order of the Board of Health.
> Royal S. Copeland, President.

Exhibitors should do their utmost to make this order of prevention effective. The results of the epidemic of infantile paralysis two years ago, during which many picture theatres were closed by order of the health authorities, should be prevented if possible. Sufficient warning given to the public now should have the right effect.

Get slides now; an ounce of prevention, you know, will save you considerable business loss should an epidemic of influenza occur that would make it necessary to close all places where the public congregates.

TOM NORTH CONTEST CLOSING

Last Ginger Letter in the First Month of His Whirlwind Sales Campaign, Which Brought Results

TOM NORTH'S first contest for the Western Division of the Pathe Exchange has closed, but the result is still to be announced, since the verification of the figures requires some time. The contest will continue, though Mr. North will not personally conduct it, since he has been recalled to more important work in the home office.

From Washington, where he writes he is straightening out the Hindenberg line, he sends in the last of the first batch of letters. It will probably conclude the series, for he has turned his attention to other matters now, but this series forms one of the most interesting campaigns ever exploited, and from letters received we know that other salesmen have appreciated the hints they got from this vivid chain of letters. The last letter runs:

"To each and every branch manager in western district:

"Well, old man, the race for the Tom North trophy, month of August, is over, and I want you to know that I appreciate the efforts you have put forward to the greatest extent.

"There is no use talking, the "pep" displayed by you has spread into your organization and reached the maximum of one hundred per cent.—this includes everybody from the smallest to the highest employee in your branch.

"I wish you would please convey my personal thanks to each and every one of your office personally, and tell them that it does me a world of good to know that they were one of the unit that smashed all previous records during the month of August.

"The entire matter is now in the hands of the committee in our Home Office, New York City, and for your information please know that our comptroller, Mr. Smith, has advised me that it will be September 20th before he will be able to compute the figures of the competing branches, and give me the final result or standing of each branch. I am telling you this so that you will not get nervous, and think that you have been neglected.

"I was reading an article by one of the greatest salesmen in the world, Mr. H. B. Rosen, whose personal sales last year amounted to more than $12,000,000. In this article Mr. Rosen said:

"'Salesmanship has never been a matter of hours or of conditions to me. I have always felt that one could "sell" a man anywhere and at any time. I do not mean that one should force one's self upon a person when paying a social call or upon just being introduced. What I mean is that, a favorable opportunity arising, one should not hang back just because it is outside of business hours or because a man is not standing in his own store or office.

"'Many men might say, for example, that a funeral and a burying ground were not the time or place to talk insurance. Under ordinary conditions, they would be quite right. But this enemy of insurance was in such a frame of mind that he was actually anxious to have himself insured. If the taking of the policy had been postponed until the next day his feeling about the necessity of insurance might have worn off; and then his wife and children would have been as unprotected as they were before he went to the funeral. Realizing this, it was justifiable to talk business at such a time.

"'Then, too, I have often noticed that many men do not stop thinking about their business when they leave their offices. So the salesman who puts away his order book when the five o'clock whistle blows, simply because he thinks business hours are over, is making a great mistake. I learned that rule early in the game, because I learned that half or more of my policies were being written after five o'clock in the afternoon. Once I had to wait in a man's house until three o'clock in the morning; but when he finally came in, he signed up for a large amount. To succeed as a salesman, working hours must be forgotten.'

"I know very well, after looking at your report for the month of August, that you have followed one of Mr. Rosen's principles, namely, 'that you did not put away your order book when the five o'clock whistle blew,' and that you put in many hours of good hard grind laying out a good stiff barrage in your forward push for the Tom North Trophy.

"Again congratulating you, and assuring you of my hearty co-operation and highest respect at any and all times, and wishing you the continued success which you deserve, believe me, old man, to be,

"Yours very sincerely,
"TOM NORTH,
"Western District Mgr. Pathe Ex., Inc."

We hope to announce the name of the winner of the contest in the next issue. Meantime the western exchanges are already hustling for the next decision, for the cup will not find a permanent home until it has been won three times by the same exchange.

F. I. L. M. Club's Social Numbers.

The F. I. L. M. Club of New York will honor William A. Brady, president of the National Association, and his daughter, Alice Brady, with a theatre party at the Central Theatre, September 30, in witnessing Miss Brady's latest stage success, "Forever After." Already there has been a large subscription list and it is expected "Who's Who" of the film industry will be present.

The F. I. L. M. Club will also give a dinner dance at Reisenweber's early in October. Those who were present at the dinner dances for the members of the F. I. L. M. Club will remember what enjoyable affairs they were, and it is expected that this year will prove a repetition of last season's success. The dinner is limited to the F. I. L. M. Club members, their ladies, and friends.

THIRD OFFICIAL WAR SUBJECT.

The third U. S. Official War Picture to be issued by the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, George Creel, Chairman, will be entitled "Under Four Flags," and will be given its first public showing early in November. Owing to the comprehensive character of the present offensive, and the intense interest it has aroused, the new picture will not be exclusively American, but will include the activities of the Allies as well as of the United States.

HOW TO HANDLE LIBERTY LOAN PRINTS

Instructions Issued by Manager of Distribution Call for One Hundred Per Cent. Service by Exchangemen and Exhibitors

CAREFULLY formulated plans to obtain the 100 per cent. distribution desired by the Government for the Liberty Loan films contributed by various stars and producing organizations of the motion picture industry are announced this week by the Liberty Loan Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. The committee, of which Adolph Zukor is chairman, lays stress upon the importance of the part the exhibitors are to play in the coming campaign, and urges that all exhibitors co-operate, not only with the distributing organizations handling the prints and the National Association, but also with their local Liberty Loan committees, who will be able to provide Four-Minute speakers and to assist in the work of taking subscriptions in the theatres.

The following letter, which was drafted by Al. Lichtman, manager of distribution for the Liberty Loan Committee of the N. A. M. P. I., and which explains in detail all distribution arrangements for the prints to be used in the campaign, has been sent by each distributing organization to all of its exchanges, thus insuring uniform instructions for the distribution of Liberty Loan films:

The Motion Picture Industry, collectively and individually, gives way to no other industry or group of individuals in patriotism and in practical, substantial aid to the Government. As evidence of this fact, 37 of the various motion picture stars have made negatives in aid of the Fourth Liberty Loan. From each negative the Government is furnishing 112 prints to be distributed by the branch offices of the several distributing organizations, as follows:

1st—Each company will distribute, through all of its offices in the United States, the prints in which its own stars appear.

2nd—Bookings of the Liberty Loan prints shall be made to any exhibitor, whether or not he runs our product.

3rd—Each branch office of each distributing organization will be held strictly accountable, not only by its Home Office, but by the Treasury Department, for booking solid each print from the date of receipt of each print, up to and including the 19th day of October. Shipment of prints will begin on September 15.

4th—No exhibitor shall be permitted to book one subject for more than one day; nor to book two subjects for the same day, whether such subjects are handled by this or another company, in other words, no exhibitor shall have more than one of the 35 subjects for any day; nor shall any exhibitor be permitted to obtain a repeat booking for any subject.

5th—No charge shall be made, directly or indirectly, to any exhibitor for the exhibition of any Liberty Loan print.

6th—Instead of shipment being made to exhibitors by express, all such shipments are to be made by post under a Government frank, especially issued for the purpose. This frank will be evidenced by a label. These labels will be sent to you along with the shipment of prints. It, of course, follows that no postage will be necessary. One label is to be enclosed in each shipment for the exhibitor's use in returning the print. A heavy penalty is attached to the use of such labels for any other purpose.

7th—At the top of each booking sheet you will write the words, "Respectfully submitted to the Treasury Department of the United States Government."

8th—On October 20, you shall forward to this office the original booking sheets, or duplicates thereof, showing the specific theatres and the days for which each print was on exhibition, as well as the dates for which each print was in transit. Such information is not to be conveyed by signs or hieroglyphics, but on the contrary is to be plainly written, so that the actual facts are perfectly apparent to a layman totally unacquainted with the booking sheets and booking methods of the Motion Picture Industry.

10th—For each day that each exhibitor books a Liberty Loan print, such exhibitor is to be impressed with the necessity of sending to you a record of the total amount of the Liberty Loan subscriptions taken at his theatre for that day. This record shall be carefully entered by you in a book kept solely for that purpose, and a transcript thereof daily sent to this office. Each page of such book shall be totaled, and the total carried over to the succeeding page, for it is quite probable that several times during the drive you will be asked to send by wire the total of the subscriptions obtained to date by the theatres booking the prints assigned to you.

11th—The prints allotted to you are Government property. Accordingly, you are held personally responsible for their safety. Immediately after the conclusion of the drive, you will be asked to return all prints to the Government. Shipping instructions for such return will be forwarded to you at a later date.

12th—This same letter of instructions is sent by the Home Office of each distributing organization, to its respective offices. In other words, all exchanges handling the Liberty Loan prints, are receiving a uniform letter of instructions prepared by the Committee of the Motion Picture Industry, appointed by the Treasury Department.

13th—No excuse or alibi will be entertained either by the Government or by this office, for permitting any print to remain idle on the shelf.

It is, of course, recognized both by the Treasury Department and by the Liberty Loan Committee of the Motion Picture Industry that all of the exhibitors of the United States are more than anxious to perform their patriotic duty, by exhibiting a Liberty Loan subject every day of the drive, and that, therefore, each exhibitor will see to it that he possesses complete bookings for the entire period.

It is likewise recognized with equal force that you, and each member of your organization, are just as anxious to do your bit in aid of the Liberty Loan as the exhibitors are to do theirs, and that, therefore, you will see to it that each print is booked solid during the drive, so that each day for each print is accounted for by the print being on actual exhibition, or being in actual transit.

By this method both you and the exhibitors will execute a 100 per cent. result.

From the above, it is of course manifest to you that the purposes of this distribution are twofold; first, to perform, to the fullest extent, our duty to the great cause and to the Government; and, second, and very incidentally to demonstrate to the Government, by actual figures, the extent to which the Motion Picture Industry is a practical aid, and therefore essential, and that all the members of this industry, in all its branches, are more than ready and willing and capable of doing their bit to the extent of 100 per cent.

Holland Goes to France.

Sergt. Theodore F. Holland, formerly General Film manager at Indianapolis, now is hailing his friends from abroad with the American Expeditionary Forces. Sales Manager W. F. Rodgers, of General, has received a card from him, chronicling the safe arrival of the ship upon which he sailed. Sergt. Holland is with the Headquarters Detachment, 603d Engineers.

French High Commission Exhibits War Films

A PRIVATE exhibition of French Official War Films was given at Aeolian Hall by the French High Commission in the United States of America, on Friday evening, September 20. Some of the films shown are being handled by the Pathe exchange, and all are attributed to the Cinematographic Division of the French Army and are under the control of the French Pictorial Service. The pictures shown included "Our Dumb Friends in the War"; "Brothers-in-Arms"; "How France Treats Her Prisoners of War"; "The American Colored Troops at the Front"; "French Colonial Troops in the War"; "France's Dusky Warriors" and "All For Liberty."

The program, which was relieved by the playing of Gabrilowitsch, Lortat and Grainger, reproduced on the Duo Art Grand pianola, was well arranged, evidently with the purpose of giving what might be termed a bird's eye view of the war activities of the Allies. One of the things impressed on the audience after having viewed these pictures was the humaneness of Allied methods off the battle field. The treatment given the French prisoners of war includes good food, a decent place to live in, useful labor, such as building railroads, harvesting grain, mending garments returned from the front, and healthful recreation. One of the unique sights presented a bit of the Orient transplanted on French soil. This consisted of warriors from Indo-China on guard at munition plants and buildings erected by them after their own fashion. Moroccans, Senegalese and Algerians mounted on beautiful Arabian horses presented picturesque sights. Scenes from Tunis showed how its people are also striving to do their bit in the agricultural line as well as giving of its manhood for the great cause. The entire program was much enjoyed by an enthusiastic audience.

Pathe to Hold "Save and Serve" Convention

PATHE announces that on September 24, 25 and 26 it will hold a "save and serve" convention, to be attended by the manager of all the thirty exchanges. The convention will be held at the home offices of the company in New York. It will be the first time in the history of the company that representatives from points west of the Rocky Mountains have been called to the home office in a body.

Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, has approved of an elaborate program prepared by Sales Manager Quimby, which includes discussions of many matters of interest to the sales force as well as generous plans for entertainment.

The keynote of the convention will be conservation and economy in order to meet the war-time expectations of the Government. Its slogan will be "Keep the home wheels turning."

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

By A. H. GIEBLER

Metro Studio Plans Submitted to U. S.

RICHARD A. ROWLAND, president of Metro, and the other officials who have been in Los Angeles for the past two weeks, have returned to New York, after selecting a site for the erection of a new studio and making arrangements for the production of pictures with the Metro stars now employed in the eastern studios of the company.

The plans for the new buildings have been submitted to the U. S. Government for approval, and the lot decided upon will be purchased if the plans are authorized. A $50,000 glass studio and other buildings with space enough to accommodate all the companies to be sent from the east will be erected.

Select Forces Arrive.

Clara Kimball Young and Blanche Sweet, stars; Harry I. Garson, manager, and Marshall Neilan, director; all high up on the roster of the Select producing forces, arrived in Los Angeles September 10, and began work at the Sunset studios in Hollywood the following Monday. Miss Young's first picture will be "A Path Through the Night," from the novel by Maude Radford Warren, and will be followed by Max Marcin's "Cheating Cheaters." Miss Sweet's new play has not been announced

Lasky Returns to New York.

Jesse L. Lasky will return to New York about the first of October to remain in the east for several months. Mr. Lasky says that the exodus of Famous Players-Lasky stars from New York will begin very soon, with Shirley Mason, who will be in the west in about two weeks, leading the van.

Film Players Want A. F. L. Charter.

Motion picture performers to the number of one hundred and fifty men and women met one night last week at the Walker Theatre building and organized a society with a view to securing a charter from the American Federation of Labor. The application contained enough signatures to ensure its consideration by the Federation, and it was agreed that if a charter were granted the organization would be perfected and membership opened to those connected with the stage end of the picture business. Several speakers who addressed the meeting charged that the workers are underpaid and receive little consideration from the producers.

Five Hundred Film Extras Listed.

The moving picture producing companies of Los Angeles and vicinity have arranged a list of five hundred eligible film extras who are essential for the maintenance of the picture industry, upon the advice of the Army Draft officials, so that a certain number of eligible men could always be at hand for work in the pictures, and at the same time release many men for war duty. The men will be given cards of identification, and a central booking agency will handle the supplying of all men for the studios. This booking will be free to the actors, the studios bearing the overhead expense.

Little Mary at Naval Ball.

Mary Pickford led the grand march at the Naval Ball held in the big barracks at the training station, on the evening of September 11. Many of the loges and boxes in the hall contained parties of prominent society people and their guests. Miss Pickford purchased two boxes, and among her guests were Marjorie Daw, Zazu Pitts and Sarah Mason.

Trainmen to Produce Films.

Members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen of Southern California have gone into the moving picture business, not so much in the hope of financial remuneration, as explained by B. M. Lyon, a member of the organization, but as propaganda in favor of continued Governmental management of railways. A company has been formed which is said to have the moral and financial support of the railway organization and the indorsement of its president, W. G. Lee.

David Horsley has been selected as director-general, and work will begin within thirty days at the Horsley studio at Washington and Main streets, Los Angeles. The first story for production has been written by Upton Sinclair.

Studio Strikers Return to Work.

Following a series of conferences between Capt. C. T. Connell, Federal Labor Mediator, representatives of the International Alliance of Theatrical Employes, and several managers of motion picture studios, an agreement was reached on September 13 whereby four hundred workmen returned to work at the various studios, pending final adjustment.

Only one point remains to be settled, and this point will be submitted to a board of arbitration to be made up of an appointee selected by the studio owners, one by the employes, and a third to be a disinterested person.

Zane Grey to Film Novels.

Zane Grey, author of a number of best sellers, is in Los Angeles, and has secured space at the Brunton studios for the purpose of making photoplays of several of his novels. Ben Hampton, who is said to have tried recently to secure the Grey stories for the use of a noted western star, may have put the bee in Grey's bonnet to produce his stories himself. At any rate, the continuity on the first story to be filmed is practically finished, although no players' names have been announced in connection with the production.

McRae Producing Independently.

Henry McRae, for some time manager of productions at Universal City, has severed his connections with the Big U and is now producing independently. McRae's first film will be a propaganda picture, which he has arranged to produce at the Clune studio, just opposite the Brunton establishment. Although he has not made public the names of his players, he is said to have several notable actors as members of his company.

Triangle Dismisses Stock Company.

More than seventy-five actors and actresses were dismissed at the Triangle studios last week when the new system of engaging players for each production was put into effect. No stock players remain on the payroll of the company, and the players hereafter will be engaged as they are needed for each production.

Ray to Remain With Ince.

A rumor has been going the rounds that there has been trouble between Charles Ray and Thomas H. Ince, and that Ray was to become a Select star under the management of Harry I. Garson. Mr. Garson claims that there is no truth in the story, and Mr. Ince has emphatically denied the rumor and states that perfect harmony exists between himself and Ray. Ray's contract with Ince has still two years to run.

Farnum Working in "Wolf Breed."

Dustin Farnum has begun work on his second production for the United Pictures Theatres of America, an adaptation of "Wolf Breed," by Jackson Gregory. Dusty says this picture may be the last he will make before he is called in the new draft law—if men of his age are called soon—and if he is called he will only ask for time to finish the production before he goes.

Doug Planning Athletic Show.

Douglas Fairbanks is planning to stage a big athletic show at Washington Park soon for the benefit of the National War Community Fund, and if the plans are carried out he may "mix" in about four rounds with Joe Benjamin, pugilist, or pull off a little wrestling match with his old friend and trainer, Bull Montana.

Bara Suffers From Prostration.

Theda Bara, who was expecting to complete her fifth picture and be on her way east at the expiration of her six months' stay in Los Angeles, came down with a case of complete prostration two days before the date set for her departure. She was so ill that her reservations on the Salt Lake had to be canceled and her trip postponed until she recovered sufficiently to travel. Besides the nurses and physicians who were called on the case, Lora Bara, the star's sister, has been in constant attendance.

Hollywood Players Give Country Fair.

A country fair was held from five o'clock until midnight on September 19 at Hall's grocery store, at 6382 Hollywood Boulevard, for the benefit of the Stage Women's War Relief. Mrs. Theodore Roberts, Mrs. Wilbur Higby, Vera Lewis and Mrs. F. W. Stith were in charge of the evening's entertainment, which consisted of a supper served to the public and a dance in Wilcox Hall, just over the store. Admission to the fair was twenty-five cents. C. C. Hall, personal friend of practically every film player in Hollywood, donated the use of his store for the affair.

Electric Storm Destroys Film.

Sessue Hayakawa and his company were victims of an electric storm while they were in Bear Valley last week on location, which destroyed some five hundred feet of filmed action for a new picture and which burnt up a lot of properties belonging to the company, besides setting fire to the lodge where the company was quartered. No one was injured and the scenes were retaken within the next few days as weather permitted.

Parker Engaged by Fairbanks.

Albert Parker is the most recent addition to the directorial staff of the Douglas Fairbanks organization, which includes Allan Dwan and Art Rosson. Parker played with Fairbanks in "American Aristocracy," and in "In Again—Out Again." On the regular stage he followed Fairbanks in "The Man of the Hour," and was in the same cast in "The Gentleman from Mississippi."

Former Selig Player Dies.

William Hutchinson, actor, who left the stage ten years ago to become a member of the Selig Motion Picture Company, died at the Clara Barton Hospital in Los Angeles on September 7. Hutchinson was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, forty-nine years ago, and was brought to this country at the age of two by his parents. He was associated with the Mack Swain Theatrical company shortly before his death. A son and daughter and three brothers survive him.

Actress Buried in Los Angeles.

The body of Ruth Darling, the film actress who was killed in San Francisco while she was standing on the curbing of a pavement when two automobiles collided and she was struck by one of the machines, was brought to Los Angeles, her home, for burial. The actress was known as Mrs. Chester N. Franklin in private life, and her husband is a soldier stationed at the Presidio.

California Theater to Open in November.

Roy Miller, one of the proprietors of the new California Theatre, now in course of construction at Eighth and Main streets, plans to open the new house in November, with Wm. S. Hart's "Border Wireless" as the first attraction. Miller is making arrangements to run other Artcraft and Paramount features, as well as the Nazimova productions released by Metro, and possibly the Dustin Farnum pictures.

Exhibitors Now 4-Minute Men.

At the last bi-monthly luncheon of the Southern California Theatre Owners' Association, it was announced by Marshall Stimson, representing the Four-Minute men, that on September 14 each theatre manager would be presented with a certificate of membership to the Four-Minute speakers in recognition of the assistance rendered the Government by theatre managers in Los Angeles. J. M. Quinn, proprietor of the Rialto, announced that Mary Pickford would donate a platinum and gold loving cup to the organization's most successful entertainment committee of the year.

Rivera Theatre Leased.

Claude Halzel, local theatrical man, has leased the Rivera Theatre from the Triangle Film Company, and will open the house in a short time with a two-hour motion picture bill at popular motion picture prices.

Hotel Chef Sends Recipe for "Bread."

When Mary MacLaren offered a prize of $5.00 for the best recipe for Victory Bread submitted during the run of her latest feature, "Bread," at the Symphony Theatre, she had no idea what a commotion her offer would creat among the housewives and other cooks in Los Angeles. More than five hundred recipes were turned in, among them a formula from the chef of the Hotel Alexandria, the Knickerbocker of Los Angeles.

Lila Lee Sings at Grauman's.

During the run of Lila Lee's first screen play, "The Cruise of the Make-Believe," at the Grauman Theatre, the little star appeared at both evening performances every day of the engagement and sang her two most popular songs of her recent vaudeville career, "Look Out for Jimmy Valentine" and "School Days."

Seymour Tally, son of T. L. Tally, proprietor of Tally's Broadway Theatre, has just escaped having pneumonia, and is able to be about again.

Mary Pickford's first Artcraft feature for the new year, "Johanna Enlists," was given a pre-release run during the week of September 16, at the Kinema Theatre.

Carl Ray, new owner of the Miller Theatre at Ninth and Main streets, has contracted for first run rights to all the William Fox productions starring Theda Bara, George Walsh and Gladys Brockwell.

Studio Shorts

D. W. GRIFFITH staged several big battle scenes for his new Artcraft picture, "The Romance of Happy Valley," on Registration Day. Lillian Gish, Robert Harron and George Fawcett are the leading players in the production.

Leon T. Osborne is now president of the Diando Company, since W. A. S. Douglas, former president, enlisted in the army.

Monte M. Katterjohn is entertaining the family of George Katterjohn, of Paducah, Ky., at his home in Beverly Hills.

Betty Compson, late Christie comedienne, has been engaged to play feminine lead in the Bluebird feature, "Breathes There a Man," with Monroe Salisbury.

Eileen Percy will be William Russell's leading lady in his new picture, "Where the West Begins."

Little Virginia Lee Corbin, of the Fox Company, is making a house-to-house canvass in her car, in the interests of the Salvage department of the Red Cross.

Scott Sidney, director of Mutual-Strand comedies, has returned from a vacation spent in the Sierras.

Louise Glaum is at work on her last picture for the Paralta program, and the story is going the rounds that she will be again seen on the Ince lot in the future.

James Tynan is Julian Eltinge's new publicity manager.

Franklyn Farnum will leave Southern California as soon as he finishes work in a coming Pathe-Astra picture, to take part in a musical comedy in New York.

Baby Marie Osborne, who has returned with her governess from a short vacation spent at Catalina Islands, has begun work on a new picture under the direction of William Bertram.

During the week that Theda Bara's "Salome" was given its premiere at Clune's Auditorium, a department store in Los Angeles had on display all the gowns worn by Miss Bara in the production.

Frank Griffin, former director with Lubin and later with the Keystone forces, is now in charge of a megaphone at L-Ko.

Thomas Jefferson is supporting Bert Lytell in "The Spender," now in course of production at Metro.

Ford Sterling and Bothwell Browne made scenes during the past week in the famous Busch Gardens at Pasadena.

Roy Stewart has left the Triangle organization, and is said to be considering two offers from other producers.

Fritzi Brunette will play the leading role in "The Wrong Side of Paradise," a Colin Campbell production, instead of Mary MacLaren, as formerly announced.

Al Christie was host at a farewell party given to Bobby Vernon just before he left to join his company at the Submarine Base.

Jack Cunningham, scenario writer, has entered into an agreement with Robert Brunton to write scripts for the stars who are turning out photoplays at the Brunton studios.

Bill Hart left for the East September 16 to begin his tour in behalf of the Fourth Liberty Loan.

Alma Rubens has filed suit for a divorce from Franklyn Farnum, to whom she was married on June 14th last.

Kitty Gordon has arrived.

Dorothy Dane will support Billy Parsons in a coming Capitol Comedy.

Bessie Love and her company spent last week in the desert making scenes for the Bret Harte story, "The Judgment of Bolinas Plain."

A call for more volunteers among the players to entertain the soldiers and sailors in Southern California has come from a camp near San Diego.

Ethel Clayton has finished "The Mystery Girl," under William De Mille at the Lasky studio, and is preparing for another feature with Chet Withey as her next director.

Several hundred dollars were realized for the M. P. W. S. A. Fund at the ball given by the Vitagraph players to dedicate the new glass studio. Otto Lederer has charge of the affair and everything came off as scheduled.

Billie Rhodes is moving this week in a beautiful Swiss chalet on top of a hill near Hollywood.

Mae Murray has returned from Lake Tahoe, where she has been filming scenes for "Little Lady Bo-Peep."

J. Gordon Edwards left Los Angeles on Sept. 20, for New York, to be present for the opening of "Salome" at one of the Broadway playhouses.

War Notes.

Bert Lytell, who expects to complete his final picture for Metro in a few weeks, will enter military service upon the expiration of his contract. He is already an officer of the Hollywood Officers Training School, and, although he gave his age as 33 on Registration Day, his application for a commission in the army was put in several months before the new draft law went into effect.

Albert Roscoe, leading man for Theda Bara in "Salome" and other spectacular Fox productions made in the West Coast studio, left for the Naval Aeronautical school at San Diego as soon as he had finished his work in "The Siren's Song" was completed.

CHAPLIN MAKES STATEMENT OF POLICY

Explains Reason for Irregular Releases and Proves His Production Plan the Best to Insure Perfect Comedies

RUMORS and alleged authentic statements that dissension, politics, dissatisfaction and other difficulties have been responsible for the intermittent release of Chaplin comedies are answered in a statement issued this week from the offices of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, which carries an explanation from Mr. Chaplin of the exact conditions under which he is working and the policy that actuates his production efforts.

It was made plain by First National officials that the statement was not prompted by any interest in the text of those few of the hundreds of rumors constantly in circulation which relate directly to Chaplin comedies, but that it was issued for the purpose of making known to exhibitors the protection afforded them under their contracts by the very infrequency of Chaplin releases. First National officers declare that there is no difficulty attached to making footage for Chaplin releases. The difficulty is in making footage for Chaplin comedies.

Under the terms of his contract Mr. Chaplin is to make a total of eight comedies. No definite dates of delivery for each subject are specified. This contract became operative last year. Figured on the basis of ordinary comedy production for two or three reel subjects the eight productions could have been made and delivered in four months, averaging two weeks of studio work for each.

When Mr. Chaplin signed his contract he had just started the construction work on his new studio. This structure he had especially designed for comedy work, and in it he had provided for every improvement and facility which would contribute to the quality of his productions. Many of his ideas for mechanical and technical equipment are innovations.

The suggestion was made to Mr. Chaplin that he rent another studio pending the completion of his own, and begin work at once on the initial comedy. This he declined to do, with the explanation that he knew the facilities of his studio would contribute to a much higher quality in his first production than he could get by making it elsewhere. As a consequence he did not begin "A Dog's Life" until late in February, and this was despite the fact that the continuity for it was prepared in rough draft early in January.

This was a forerunner of the policy which has marked his work since then. Quantity and speed have been sacrificed to quality, with an attendant monetary loss to Chaplin which, if made known, would seem unbelievable.

Pride in the quality of his comedies has outweighed every other consideration. Letters from exhibitors, requesting a greater output have each met with the same response: "Each Chaplin release has got to have in it the very best work of which I am capable. Comedy situations are much more difficult to work up than the action of dramatic scenes. There is no trick in grinding out scenes that might be called amusing, but to get real laughs and actual humor out of situations demands study, the utmost concentration and eternal experimenting.

"No one knows better than I do how simple it would be to just grind a camera crank and turn out footage which would constitute a release. The problem in producing successful pictures is no longer one of an output made to meet a regular releasing schedule. That system demands that quality be sacrificed to time and speed. The release date must be met. Half the picture is finished. It is full of good material. It has taken time to produce. Now it must be hurried. The last half of the picture is jammed through hastily. The subject is released on schedule. But is that system fair to the exhibitor? Does it benefit the producer or the star?

"The public pays its money to be entertained. It demands, as a right, the utmost that the star, the cast, the director and the producer can give in ability, intelligence and entertainment value. When a production falls short of this standard, when it does not represent every ounce of energy and enthusiasm of which those responsible for it are capable, then it becomes a burden to the exhibitor. His audience is quick to recognize lack of value. They blame him directly, because it reflects both on his judgment and his sincerity. The star is the next to share the blame. Popularity decreases. And the exhibitor pays the penalty in loss of valuable patronage. He suffers the most.

"I suppose I could take the first 'shots' of all my scenes and assemble them into releases, saving time, money and effort. But theatre-goers would not see the best that I can do. There is hardly a scene made at the studio that is not rehearsed a dozen times. Very often the final rehearsal will develop a suggestion or an idea for a greatly superior situation, and where only a smile would have resulted from the original action, we make a revision that is certain to bring a hearty laugh.

"This constant effort to improve every bit of action, to be satisfied that it cannot be made stronger or funnier, is the supreme obligation of every star and producer.

"I want to be absolutely content that Chaplin comedies contain the very best of my ability, and I won't sanction their release under any other condition. Then I know that the public is going to be entertained and satisfied, that the exhibitor will make money, and that I am not going to be accused of trading on a name to the loss of any threatre-owner who books my productions.

"I would release only one picture in a year if the others I attempted did not measure up to my own personal standard, but that one would have to be right, or it would be shelved. I would be better off with no releases, and the good will of the American public and exhibitors than I would with a score of subjects booking, with any one of them meriting criticism."

Directors of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit cite Chaplin's last release, "A Dog's Life," as an example of his policy of giving the best of which he is capable. More satisfaction has been expressed over its supreme entertainment value, the novelty and originality of the scores of humorous situations than has characterized any previous Chaplin release of which they can find records.

Exhibitor-directors of First National have encouraged Chaplin in his policy of no releases until he is satisfied that they will be good ones. The result has been that "Shoulder Arms," the next Chaplin comedy, now completed, has been months, instead of weeks, in the making. Every scene and every situation in it has had Mr. Chaplin's personal attention. Each of them, with the seemingly infinite possibilities that the action of the story suggests for laughable results, has been worked over repeatedly until the famous comedian was satisfied that there was nothing more that he could do to improve it.

"We believe," said one of the First National officials, "that Mr. Chaplin's determination to make quality the master principle in his producing is an epoch in the manufacturing branch of the business of an importance equal to some of the recent evolutions in the exhibiting and distributing departments of the industry.

"He has kept his own counsel for months, rather than to commit himself to a statement of 'what was about to happen.' He preferred instead to put his conclusions into practice, leaving to self-styled wiseacres the apparently welcome task of assigning a score or more of erroneous reasons for the completion of only two comedies since he signed his contract with us. Now he has proven, by nine months of activity, that he is really sincere, and that his decision is not a thing for the future, but that it is for the past as well as the present and future."

World Pictures Cost $2.17 Per Minute.

The statistician of the World studio at Fort Lee has spent some interesting time in working out the figures of just what a production costs, and his work forms the basis of a conservation propaganda which should have a far reaching influence.

"The nominal time for the filming of a story," he says, "is based on a four weeks' schedule. This arranges for delays growing out of weather conditions.

"Each picture averages three hundred scenes. With a working day of eight hours this gives the daily quota of twelve and one-half scenes on a twenty-four day bases. The average cost of a picture is $25,000. This makes the cost of each scene, including title and subtitles, $83.33. A day's work represents $1,040.66. This includes all overhead of the studio. Each minute represents an expense of $2.17.

"Each minute wasted by reason of inexcusable negligence growing out of tardiness, inattention to duty, slacking, or lack of attention to your employer's interest means that you are robbing the concern that is giving you your bread and butter. If you are honest you won't do it."

After a two weeks' vacation in the hospital Director Craig Hutchinson is able to resume work at the L-K. studios, Hollywood, Cal., on "Work or Fight," with Harry Gribbon, Mae Emory, Eva Novak and Jim Connelly in the cast.

RUBBERNECKING IN FILMLAND

Los Angeles Correspondent Personally Conducts Our Readers Through the West Coast Studios

By Giebler

LADIES and gentlemen, here on the corner of Gower street and Santa Monica boulevard in the purlieus of South Hollywood, hidden away in a leafy bower of palm, pepper, eucalyptus, accacia and other trees, indigenous to this section, we find the works of the National Film Corporation, the concern that makes Capitol Comedies, released on the Goldwyn program, and the Billie Rhodes De Luxe features.

The building among the trees contains the offices of Isidore Bernstein and William Parsons, heads of the corporation.

We will pass on from this sylvan scene and onto the stage, which being exposed to the sun is not so sylvan. The popping noise you just heard was not an expiring inner tube but the breaking heart of a thermometer that just busted itself in vain attempt to register the heat.

The tall man superintending the setting of the scene is William Chaudet, the director, who is getting ready to stage a comedy called "Proposing Bill," with Smiling Bill Parsons in the leading part. The golden-haired girl on the balcony is Dorothy Dane, who will play the leading part opposite Mr. Parsons in the comedy just mentioned.

The little lady in the big hat who just passed is Billie Rhodes. She is getting ready to appear in a feature that will necessitate her travelling with a circus and doing all kinds of bareback stunts for several weeks.

Mr. Parsons is one of the paradoxes of the pictures. It is a generally accepted theory that successful screen players must have had regular stage experience or at least a decided leaning toward things thespian.

Bill leaned against nothing more dramatic than the life insurance business before he broke into the movies.

Bill made a big success of life insurance, however. Where other solicitors in search of business got the gate, Bill got the glad hand and the signature on the dotted line, and all because of a smile that occupies the major portion of his facial map at all times.

After striking ten with a loud and resonant whang on the cymbals of the endowment, the tontine and the accumulative dividend policies, Bill decided to capitalize his smile in another direction and busted into the movies in Capitol Comedies, with himself as the star.

In addition to playing parts Bill is also a producer of note. He is responsible for "Tarzan of the Apes," one of the most successful pieces of monkey business ever put on the screen, and he will release a sequel to the story very shortly.

Now, if you will all step this way, you will be given an introduction to Mr. Parsons just as he is about to smile one of his famous smiles.

Friends, meet Smiling Bill Parsons.

As you have seen, Bill's smile is wide, comprehensive and winning. It starts at his mouth, and after a brief close-up of his pearly teeth moves in a southerly direction to his double chin, thence to his left ear—moves upward agitating his eyebrows and wrinkling the smooth surface of his forehead clear back to his rear collar button, emerges at the right ear and starts all over again.

In addition to the things you have been told about Mr. Parsons, it might be well to add that he holds the undisputed record as an ice cream fiend.

Bill devours a quart of ice cream at every meal, and claims he is able to eat a gallon under pressure. In addition to this he manages to stow away a few sodas, sundaes, and cones in between times.

Our next stop will be on Court street, the highest point, altitudinally speaking, in the fair city of Los Angeles. The building we are about to enter, although you would never suspect its nature, were it not for the sign "Rolin Film Company" that adorns the gate, is a movie studio.

Food for reflection is found in this location. This noble domicile was formerly inhabited by one of the first families, and was at one time the resort of the socially elite of the neigborhood.

The tree on the lawn that now shelters Wallace Howe and James Parrot, two well-known and toil-weary comedians, once cast its shade and dead caterpillars on the heads of social highbrows gathered here for elevating converse.

The broad veranda, now decorated by a varied assortment of extras, was once thronged by the belles and beaux of Court street, who gathered here to indulge in the merry quips and jests of the time, and to trip the light fantastic toe to the stirring strains of the Spanish guitar and the bull fiddle.

Here in the reception hall, where we find Fatty Lampton consuming his matitudinal Bull Durham, the polite persons of the district once bowed and scraped their salutations to the host of the house.

Upon yonder grand staircase, where once the satin-slippered belles tripped with fairy gracefulness to the upper rooms, Lew Harvey, W. Peterson and other acrobatic comedians employed here, now do the Brodies, falls and bumps coincident to the making of movie comedies.

The spacious drawing room is a business office, filled with the appurtenance of commerce. Niches, once doubtless filled with tasty statues carved by Michael Angelo and other Italian gents, are now occupied by the typewriter, the adding machine and the mimeograph. And where the grand piano stood, flanked no doubt by a harp as sweet as any that twanged its melodies through Tara's halls, you see a roll top desk with Hal Roach, president of the company, deeply immersed in toil.

We will enter what was once the garden. It requires but a little exercise of the imagination to bring back the roses that once bloomed here, to restore the palm, the oleander, the tulip, the lemon and the orange, the fragrant mesquite and other nice smelling trees that once flourished in this spot.

Any one with romantic vision can restore the pergola with trumpet vines clinging with tender tendrils to its slats. Another thought brings dusk and the scene is bathed in the beams of our celebrated moon (see tourist come-on literature for further information about our moon), and a maiden seated on a bench with a cavalier at her feet.

Instead, we find what was once the garden now filled with a modern movie stage, set to represent the five and ten-cent section of a department store, with Director Alf Goulding and his comedians doping out gags.

In the group immediately before us you see the three principal players of the Rolin-Pathe organization. The young lady sitting on the table looking at the old style photograph album is Bebe Daniels, without which no Rolin-Pathe comedy would be complete. The person with the horseshoe mustache is Harry Pollard, and the sad looking chap with the frog-eye spectacles is Harold Lloyd, otherwise known as Lonesome Luke.

Mr. Lloyd is regarded as one of the most promising of our younger comedians.

The scene these three laugh makers are being photographed in will be part of a comedy called "Going, Going, Gone." As soon as the scene is finished Alf Goulding will move the players over in the set to the left, which represents a small department store.

Your attention is called to the realism and absolute authenticity of the atmosphere of this set. The action of the comedy that will be filmed here requires the different departments of a store to be shown, and the whole interior of a store has been made here on the stage.

The bins and stalls in the center contain real merchandise, and you will find anything from a hatpin to a hatrack, just as you would in a regular store. The boxes in the shoe department to the right contain real shoes, and William Gillespie and Oscar Larson, who will each buy a pair of shoes from Mr. Lloyd when the action begins, have real corns on their feet.

The only false thing about the entire outfit is the mustache worn by J. W. McCarthy, who is the pseudo proprietor of the store. The young lady occupying the bench in the shoe department is Marie Mosquini; near her are Belle Mitchell and Stella Harris.

After watching this scene we will ascend to the upper floors of the building, where we will have one of the finest views the city affords. By allowing the eyes to gaze over the chimney pots you can see clear to San Pedro Harbor, which is twenty miles away, and back again, making in all a distance of forty miles of unimpeded and uninterrupted vision.

Mme. Myrle Wagner White in "What Love Forgives."

Mme. Myrle Wagner White of the Chicago Opera Company makes her first screen appearance in "What Love Forgives," a World Picture, in which Barbara Castleton is the star, Perry N. Vekroff directing. Mme. White is a native of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, and made her operatic debut in Italy, where her success attracted the attention of Cleofante Campanini, who engaged her for contralto roles for his organization in Chicago. Mme. White is recognized as possessing great dramatic ability, in fact, unusual for an operatic artist. Her connection with World Pictures grew out of a desire to see how effectively she screened. It is quite possible that she will star later on in screen productions.

BIG OPPORTUNITIES IN SOUTH AMERICA

John C. Graham So Reports After Trip to Chile, Peru and Bolivia—Establishes Paramount Branch at Santiago, Chile

AFTER an absence of three months, John Cecil Graham, general foreign representative of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has returned to New York from South America, where he has completed arrangements for the distribution of Paramount and Artcraft Pictures in Chile, Peru and Bolivia. Headquarters for the new distributing company, known as the South Pacific Paramount Company, have been established at Estado 250, Santiago, Chile. Here the entire floor of a large building has been fitted out with all modern appliances used in the conduct of a big film distributing busines.

Senor Eduardo Suarez, who has again become Chilean Ambassador of the United States, is president of the South Pacific Paramount Company, with Senor B. Villar, local manager. There will be two releases a week of Paramount and Artcraft pictures, selected with special regard for local demands, and actual distribution has already been comenced on this schedule. The films are being exploited and distributed in keeping with the progressive lines employed in this country, and every facility is extended the exhibitor in making his presentation of these pictures a success. A publicity and general service department has been formed, and an advertising campaign is already under way. Within six months an office will be opened in Peru, arrangements having already been made for same by Mr. Graham before his return.

In connection with the South American situation and his activities during the past three months, Mr. Graham said: "There are big opportunities awaiting progressive exhibitors in Chile, Peru and Bolivia. Managers there at present are somewhat restricted in various ways due to war conditions abroad, which prevent them from obtaining necessary material to enhance their shows. The exhibitors, however, are showing initiative, and it is safe to say that after the war they will be giving entertainments that will compare favorably with our own. There is a crying need for trained operators, and in most cases only one projecting machine is used, with long waits between reels. I found that clean pictures are most popular. Thus Paramount and Artcraft pictures have a big field here.

"The formation of the South Pacific Paramount Company completes our distribution throughout South America. Arrangements have already been made for the first run presentation of our films in the largest theatres of the territory which this organization covers, including the Comedia and Union Central of Santiago, the Colon of Valparaiso, the Olympo of Vina del Mar, the Royal of Concepcion and the Bidwell-Lorraine Theatres in Northern Chile at Coquimbo, Antofogasta, Inquique and Arica. After passing through these first run theatres, all films will continue to work on circuits through other theatres in these respective localities.

"We will co-operate with exhibitors in every way to bring their entertainments up to the modern standards in this country, and with this assistance progressive managers will readily enhance their shows and educate their patrons to motion picture entertainment and exploitation along lines used by American exhibitors. The field is a particularly promising one, and I find that managers readily adapt themselves to ideas in showmanship that mean more business at the box office. Our Santiago headquarters already present scenes of great activity, which, however, is only a sample of the rush of business we anticipate within a few months."

Faversham in "The Silver King."

Production of "The Silver King," the Paramount-Artcraft Special in which William Faversham is to appear in the title role, was started last week at the Fort Lee studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The picturization of this famous melodrama, it is said, will be fully worthy of taking a place among photoplay productions corresponding to that occupied by the play in the history of the English stage. To this end, Burns Mantle, dramatic critic of the New York Evening Mail, was entrusted with the task of writing the scenario from the original drama by Henry Arthur Jones and Henry Herman and the production was placed in charge of George Irving, one of the most noted directors connected with motion pictures, who has just been engaged by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Mr. Faversham plays the part made famous by Wilson Barrett in the original production at the Princess Theatre, London, on 1882. Barbara Castleton has been chosen for the feminine lead.

Eugene O'Brien Signs with Famous.

The rumor that Eugene O'Brien had signed a long term contract to appear in Paramount and Artcraft pictures was confirmed by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation last Wednesday. The contract, which was arranged through Arthur Butler Graham, representing Mr. O'Brien, is for four years, and the popular leading man has already started work opposite Elsie Ferguson in her newest Artcraft picture, "Under the Greenwood Tree."

Fred Goodwins Off to War.

Fred Goodwins, whose peculiar style of light comedy acting has won him numerous admirers in Paramount and Artcraft Pictures, leaves for England after the completion of "The Way of a Man With a Maid," Bryant Washburn's next starring vehicle, in which Goodwins plays the leading role. He will go to an officers' training camp, and he leaves a high salaried position to work for his country for $1.75 a week, the pay received while in training.

Melford Coming to New York.

George Melford, the well known director of Paramount pictures, is to pursue his activities for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in Gotham for a time. He will leave shortly for New York to direct one of the Eastern Paramount stars.

Night Watchman Boosts New Riviera.

IT ISN'T a theatre, it's a baronial hall —the new Riviera out on Broadway and Lawrence. Maybe Mr. Balaban and Mr. Katz are planning on a series of teas and benefit balls to be given along with their pictures. Anyhow they have provided all the trimmings.

Mr. Balaban and Mr. Katz, by the way, are pretty well known as exhibitors in Chicago. As lessors they are presiding possessively over the last fond attentions in the way of lighting and decoration which the building is now undergoing. They are going to preside over its destinies in action, too. And it will be something of a task, providing entertainment that will fall in well with the background of long, luxurious shadowy lighted drawing rooms and impressive entries.

One has to take the luxury of the drawing rooms pretty much on faith and the word of the watchman at the present time, to be sure, the lessors having determined upon a policy of secret diplomacy in the matter. I saw enough from the entry one day last week, however, to know that the decorations are going to be extraordinarily fine and the lighting quite unique.

The watchman says, furthermore, that there is to be no gold leaf on walls or ceiling, which is almost more than one could have hoped for. He says that deep cream is to be the prevailing color and that the delicate ornaments in the wall panels alone cost $100 apiece.

The entire wing of the building is large in itself, apparently, as the ordinary auditorium is to be devoted to promenades and lounges, he says, while the theatre proper is likewise a building unto itself, related to the other only after the fashion of an "ell." It will seat 2,500, who are to be entertained, always according to the watchman, with vaudeville as well as pictures.

J. B. Koppel, it is already announced, will be manager. Mr. Koppel has had an energetic and interesting career as theatre manager, beginning back in the days of five-cent houses. It includes a sojourn with Finn & Hyman at the North Shore Theatre, at the Stevens Theatre and later with Ascher Bros., at the Calo and Adelphi houses.

Just one interesting detail in the matter of management has leaked through the stern censorship of its sponsors. It concerns the ushers, who are to be punctiliously military, if you please. They are to wear khaki, it is rumored, and they are to be trained to salute at a precise angle before they inform you that the only seats left are in the gallery.

Oh, yes—the rookies in the Riviera service will be feminine.

Judging by the bustle of the night crew which was working on the building when I visited it, the work will be completed very soon. The watchman specifies October 1. He wears a star, so maybe he knows.

"The Great Love" Dedicates Theatre.

W. C. Lamoreaux possesses a managerial record of considerable achievement with the Ascher Bros. at the Lakeside Theatre in Chicago. Now he is undertaking a fresh enterprise in Racine, Wis. The new Rialto Theatre with a seating capacity of 2,000 opened Friday, September 20, under his management with D. W. Griffith's "The Great Love" as the initial program.

The Playhouse Abandons Pictures.

The Playhouse has closed a three weeks' run to capacity business of the Bear State Film Co.'s "The Vigilantes." The theatre will remain closed for repairs until late in October, when it will reopen with a musical comedy. Bear State announces that "The Vigilantes" will be ready for Illinois distribution after October 1, and that it will be at home at that time at 1004 Consumers' Building for the purpose.

Official "Belgium" Film Coming.

The Classic Film Co. is getting ready for two simultaneous showings of its official Belgian picture, "Belgium, the Kingdom of Grief," on Broadway, New York. They will be presented as benefits for Cardinal Mercier's Milk Fund for Belgian Babies and Father Jean de Ville of Chicago, the Cardinal's American representative, will lecture with the showings.

P. J. Schaefer Commands Loan Drive.

Chicago thatrical people were so effective in the last Liberty Loan drive that a special division has been set aside for them in the campaign that opens September 28. Loop theatres are captained by their individual managers. Outlying theatres are divided into zones comprising ten or fifteen theatres, each with its chairman. Peter J. Schaefer is chairman of the entire division and secured the initial bond sale of $10,000 from Dick Green, international vice president of the Stage Employees and Operators Union. Ed Ballard will celebrate the local opening of the Hagenbeck & Wallace show on the night of September 28 with a large purchase in bonds.

"America's Answer" Great Money-Getter.

"America's Answer" will finish a two weeks' showing at Orchestra Hall September 28. The film has played to larger business than its predecessor, "Perishing's Crusaders," according to W. H. Hill, manager of Orchestra Hall, who thus reported the other day. Orchestra Hall closes its moving picture season with the end of the Government film showing, and opens shortly afterward with E. L. Newman's lectures on "War Time Europe."

Entire Building for F-P and Artcraft.

Famous Players and Artcraft offices in Chicago is getting ready to expand to some eight times its present displacement about October 1. An eight-story building is to take the place of the single floor which constitutes present Artcraft lodgings in the Consumers' Building at that time, and no space is to be let out to alien industries. It should be something of a relief to inmates of the present congested offices who have lived under the menace of tottering towers of unhoused correspondence for many months.

The new building is located at Ninth and Wabash. It has been remoderel recently to provide every up-to-date equipment so far conceived by ingenious film men, and it complies as well with all the strenuous stipulations of anxious fire insurance underwriters. Films will be handled, stored, inspected and packed exclusively on the top floor to insure lower floors against danger from possible fire among them. They will be stored in ten fireproof vaults, each capable of being shut off quickly and completely from the rest. Each vault is equipped with a 30-inch flue, ten feet high, opening on the roof, with a corresponding intake for air. Screens will prevent films from being drawn out the flue in case of fire. The inspecting rooms, in each of which four girls only will be employed, correspond to the vaults and may likewise be completely isolated.

The sixth and seventh floors will be devoted to display and storage of advertising paper. A private theatre, seating 100 persons and provided with two Simplex projecting machines of latest model will occupy the fifth floor. Here, also, will be the publicity department. Other space will be given over to distribution managers, business offices and sales department. The building furnishes by far the best quarters now possessed by any other Chicago exchange. It is unlikely, indeed, that there is anything outside New York to compare with it.

Joe Brandt Pays Chicago a Visit.

Joe Brandt dropped in last week for a glance at Universal affairs in Chicago. He is making twenty similar visits all over the country and expects to be absent from the New York offices more than a month. His chief impression gathered, he said, from the four or five towns visited previous to his stop here was that exhibitors are prospering and will continue to prosper in spite of added government taxation.

"Sooner or later," he remarked, "everybody will come around to the point of raising admission prices as a solution to the burdens imposed by heavy war time taxes. That, in my opinion, is the only logical solution, anyway. If the people demand pictures they should be willing to pay extra war time cost. If they do not, then pictures have no place in war schedules. They do demand them, though, and will pay any increase that is necessary and reasonable, I am convinced. Bob Lieber, in Detroit, has raised his prices to 35 cents and business has increased. Stillman, in Cincinnati, has put on an extra nickel, too, and his patrons are perfectly satisfied."

Mr. Brandt reported Universal affairs in good shape and preparations under way for an extremely energetic year in picture production.

Chicago Firms Have Pueblo Contracts.

The Colorado Fuel and Iron Co. is erecting a thoroughly modern moving picture theatre in Pueblo, Col., for the benefit of its employees. Shattuck & Hussey, Chicago architects and contractors, are the designers and builders. The Seeburg Piano Co., also a Chicago firm, will install a $10,000 organ when the structure is completed.

The company is also building a Y. M. C. A., and the theatre will adjoin it. It will have a seating capacity of 1,250, with a balcony and gallery, and the plan is to operate it in connection with the Y. M. C. A. as a veritable community center. The entertainment will consist largely of moving pictures. There will be community singing, too, however, and amateur theatricals, with occasional professional concerts and theatrical performances. The admission fee, it is understood, will be merely nominal.

Calgary Man Shops in Chicago.

W. E. Marshall, manager for Mutual in Calgary, Altamont, Canada, spent a few days in Chicago last week for the purpose of buying studio equipment for a new commercial studio and laboratory which he will open soon in Calgary. This equipment was bought from the Bass Camera Co. Mr. Marshall intends to produce and release cartoon films which will be distributed through some recognized agency. The services of J. A. Atkins, formerly with the Kansas City Slide Co., have been secured by Mr. Marshall, and the studio will be open for business on or about October 1.

Sherry's Organization Holds Meeting.

All central west Sherry salesmen ran in to Chicago last week to meet William L. Sherry, who stopped here a day after convention time for the purpose. Kansas City, Minneapolis and Cleveland were represented, and business everywhere was adjudged to be flourishing. Subsequently Joe Lyon, well known among Illinois film men, formerly booker and representative for William Fox, was appointed to the Chicago staff. R. L. Nelson, of Milwaukee, was assigned to the Milwaukee exchange. Walter Altland and M. R. Rutter were assigned to represent the service for Indiana and Illinois, respectively.

Training Camps Create Picture Public.

S. T. Stevens, Mutual's general supervisor, came in from the South last week and reported that the war and training camps had shaken them out of their apathy down there with regard to pictures. The training camps in particular have built up a picture-going public, he said, which he thinks will remain pretty constant when the camps are discontinued. Mr. Stevens discovered that so far as Mutual programs go the romantic Gail Kane pictures reflecting the old South are most popular.

Pickford's Latest Has Biggest Pull.

Chicago Pickford fans are finding "Johanna Enlists" one of Little Mary's happiest. It has its first local release at the Ziegfeld last Saturday. Manager Harmeyer reported after several days' showing that the film was drawing the largest crowds in his experience of Pickford films.

Rogers Shows How It's Done.

F. B. Rogers made his initial sales tour over Illinois for Pathe to show what a branch manager can do in the way of making new friends and new contracts. He covered all the larger towns of the state during the week.

Puts Ban on All Night Pictures.

Acting Chief of Police Alcock decided one day last week that going to the movies after 1 A. M. was an impropriety. Consequently the all night movies, of which there were several in the loop, have been closed along with certain offending and licenceless cabarets.

Items of General Interest.

Nate Urber called to pay his respects at Goldwyn offices one day last week and was signed up by Ike Van Ronkel for several Goldwyn contracts. Mr. Urber manages the Lincoln Square Theater in Decatur, Ill.

William S. Hart, Bryant Washburn, Margery Wilson and Donald Crisp spent a few hours in town Sunday. Hart was on his way East to commence work on his Fourth Liberty Loan picture. Chicago Hart fans were a bit out of luck because he came and went before most of them were up. The rest of the party remained in full view most of the day, however, at the Sherman Hotel.

Tom De Cipicco, husband of Rita Jolivet, escorted by Dick Rowland, president of the Metro service, stopped in Chicago between trains one day last week on their way from Los Angeles to New York.

Louis Green, of the George Kleine offices in Buffalo, N. Y., spent part of the week with his Chicago confreres.

W. C. Kunzman and E. O. Fahner, assistant branch manager for the United Theatre Equipment Corporation, made a pleasant call at the World office on Thursday, September 19. Mr. Kunzman heads the motion picture department of the National Carbon Co., and is spending a few days in Chicago for the purpose of promoting sales for his company in this territory. He expects to remain with us until October 1. Mr. Fahner is well known to the trade, having acted as salesman for more than three years. He reports excellent business for his company in the middle western states.

J. S. McBride paid a visit to the Fox exchange last week. Mr. McBride is a member of the general manager's staff in New York.

Metro announces the enlistment of Harold Wallyck as traveling representative in Indiana. Wallyck formerly owned a moving picture theatre in Mystic, Ia., and represented Goldwyn in that state. E. W. Johnson, previously associated with Pathe and Goldwyn in Chicago, has also joined the Metro service. He will travel in Illinois.

C. W. Ekhart, district manager for Fox, returned to the Chicago offices after a tour of the district, Thursday.

Many War Displays at Motion Picture Shows

EVERY form of war industry in which the Government is engaged will be shown and exhibited at the National Motion Picture Exposition to be held in Madison Square Garden, October 5 to 13 inclusive. The latest Governmental department to requisition space at the war service exposition of the motion picture industry is the United States Government Employment Service of the Department of Labor. The object of the exhibition of this department will be to visualize for the people of New York the vast variety of the war work upon which the Government is engaged and in doing so call their attention to the urgent need for mechanics and laborers of every kind to engage in an essential war industry. It is planned to show miniature ships actually in the course of construction. Miniature ways and shipyards will be built in Madison Square Garden and workmen will actually build ships before the eyes of the public. The making of aeroplanes and rifles will also be shown.

Working in co-operation with this department is the Ordnance Department of the army and navy. The exhibit which is being planned by this branch of the service will open the eyes of those attending the exposition and will serve the purpose of bringing the war to their very doors.

Plans are now being worked out to show every weapon that is used in modern warfare and the exact manner in which it is used. The Ordnance Department of the United States army will have on view a specimen of every form of deadly weapon that is used in war. They will also provide a large detachment of soldiers in uniform who will demonstrate to the public the exact manner in which these weapons are used.

The Gas Defense Division of the Chemical Warfare Service of the United States army and the Employment Division of the Department of Labor have also been invited to take space.

This exposition will furnish us with an opportunity to demonstrate to the people of New York and vicinity the great need for labor and permit us to visualize for them the great variety of the war work of the Government.

Another Smith in Service.

Another son of Studio Manager W. S. Smith of the Vitagraph-Hollywood plant has gone into the service. Ernest Smith, cameraman for Paul Hurst at the Vitagraph lot, is the newest member of the Smith family to join the colors. He has left for Camp Kearney during the past week and now the sixth star in the rear panel of Mr. Smith's car has underneath it the name of "Ernest Smith."

Cast for Keeney Picture.

Sidney Olcott, who is directing Catherine Calvert, the Frank A. Keeney star, has provided an exceptionally strong cast to support her. Miss Calvert's leading man will be Edward Burns. Among other well known men in the cast is Georgio Majeroni and Henry Sedley. Ann May and Blanche Davenport are also in the cast.

STANLEY CASE IS ONLY OPENING GUN

Fight Begun Against Unfair Trade Practices To Be Followed to a Finish, Say Spoor and Kleine

THROUGH the sweeing decision handed down by the Federal Trade Commission, September 16, against the Stanley Booking Corporation, ordering them to desist from practices designed to force film producers and theatres to deal with each other through the corporation, George K. Spoor, president of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, and George Kleine, president of the Kleine exchanges, have won their battle for the open booking system for exhibitors.

The fight against the Stanley Booking Corporation for an open booking system was begun by Essanay and the George Kleine system early in January of this year, when Andrew J. Callaghan was sent as a special representative to Philadelphia to gather evidence that the corporation was acting in violation of the federal trade laws in its dealings with exhibitors and producers, with the effect of stifling and suppressing competition in the sale nnd leasing of moving picture films.

This evidence was submitted to the Federal Trade Commission together with affidavits from many exhibitors. The commission appointed George McCorkle attorney for the commission, to investigate the matter and to gather further evidence. Attorney McCorkle found that there was sufficient evidence to take the matter before the board.

A hearing was set and the Stanley Booking Corporation ordered to file an answer as to why they should not be restrained from their practices. Evidence was submitted before the commission in session in Philadelphia. Testimony showing the violations of the federal trade laws were submitted by Mr. Callaghan and by several exhibitors. The Stanley Booking Corporation was found guilty on the nine counts charged against it, and a decision rendered September 16, which was published in the Moving Picture World of September 28.

George K. Spoor, in speaking of the decision, said: "The decision of the Federal Trade Commission against the Stanley Booking Corporation is extremely gratifying. It means not only that exhibitors in this territory will in the future have the privilege of booking what photoplays they wish, but it establishes a precedent for other territories and furnishes a lever by which similar practices in other localities can be stopped.

"The battle for open booking has only begun. The pernicious practices of trying to force exhibitors by threats and intimidation to use only the productions of certain companies, prevails in many other territories besides the Philadelphia district. We do not mean to stop with this one victory, but will carry the fight into every territory and keep on fighting until an honest booking system is established throughout the United States.

"This initial victory will be of great assistance in the action contemplated in other districts, as it shows the attitude of the trade commission on this point and their ruling in other cases will undoubtedly be similar to the present one where violations are proven."

George Kleine Signs This Statement.

"The drastic order of the Federal Trade Commission compelling the Stanley Booking Corporation of Philadelphia to desist from various illegal practices will have a tonic effect upon other concerns attempting to monopolize the film business in various localities. For a long time past my exchanges have been instructed to rent directly to theatres only, and not to deal with booking concerns, except for the theatres actually owned by them. We refuse to assist these third parties in exacting comsions from exhibitors for booking our films, and will continue booking in the open market without unfair preferences and illegal agreements.

"Since its beginning the film industry has been undergoing evolution in its various branches. During this evolution it has been attacked from time to time by diseases which sometimes were thrown off from within, and sometimes had to be corrected from without.

"The Stanley Booking Corporation represented a rather virulent and new disease. Within its territory it assumed the power of dictation far beyond anything formerly attempted by the Motion Picture Patents Company. The operations of the men who controlled the Stanley Booking Corporation were manifold and interlocked. They or their corporation acquired exclusive rights to feature films; they had heavy interests in the local exchanges of national distributing organizations; they owned or controlled heavy investments in theatres. In the fall of 1917, Stanley Mastbaum stated to me that he controlled moving picture houses representing a combined investment of $11,000,000.

"It is not necessary to enlarge upon the dangerous power for oppression which rested in these activities, and that they were used and abused is proven by the action of the Federal Trade Commission.

"The operations of the Stanley Booking Corporation and its controlling factors seemed to be so successful that other concerns have attempted similar tactics in other parts of the United States. Operations that are plainly in violation of the Sherman Law as well as of the equitable practices enforced by the Federal Trade Commission are being flagrantly practiced in manufacturing and distribution as well as by exhibitors. Here and there throughout the United States one or more concerns are attempting to monopolize the exhibition of pictures with the purpose of driving competitors out of business and dictating the prices of film rentals without regard to value or merit of the film. These people are laying themselves wide open to attack, and complaints will be laid against them before the proper Government agencies in due course."

"Salome," Countrywide Fox Success, Finally Comes for New York Showing

HAVING achieved a tremendous success wherever it has been shown elsewhere in the country, the Theda Bara super-production, "Salome," will begin a limited engagement Sunday evening, October 6, at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, as a special William Fox attraction. Two performances will be given daily thereafter. Since "Salome" played its first engagement in the middle of August, William Fox has had eighteen companies touring the principal dramatic circuits. Every one of these companies has reported such extraordinary business that indications now are that "Salome" probably will play to more people than even "Cleopatra," that other Theda Bara triumph.

William Fox has made a radical departure in showing "Salome." It has been the custom of theatrical managers to hold the premieres of their production in New York, as the New York verdict has been generally accepted as determining the success of a production. With "Salome," however, William Fox has reversed the procedure. "Salome" had its premiere on the road. In fact, it will have played the road for two months before it will be seen by New York.

War Conditions Cause Player Famine.

World Pictures has recently been brought face to face with a newly developed war condition, which will grow more acute as the war progresses, and which has forced this concern to lay aside six scenarios which it had purchased and intended to put into immediate work. This condition is the lack of juvenile male actors, other than leading men, and the impossibility of getting skilled actors to play juvenile roles.

Recently the World had splendid vehicles for both June Elvide and Montagu Love, but each of the stories called for several young men to play important roles. A couple of weeks were spent in trying to get these actors, without success, and the effort was finally abandoned and Mr. Love and Miss Elvidge were co-starred in "The Quickening Flame," on which they are now working. This experience brought a realization of the fact that stories with numerous men of the draft age appearing in important parts, cannot be successfully produced during the war and has led to a further realization that scenario writers must adapt their stories to meet these new and unforseen conditions.

How Universal Stars "Appear."

Quite often when motion picture stars make personal appearances at theatres where their latest productions are being shown they stutter and stammer and then shuffle out of sight. Not so with Universal and Bluebird stars. Fritzi Brunette recently appeared at the Symphony Theatre, Los Angeles, and sang several songs; Ruth Clifford is a talented 'cello player and entertains with selections on that instrument; Dorothy De Vore, Lyons-Moran comedy leading woman, used to be a cabaret star and entertains with ragtime selections; while Lew Cody, who supported Universal stars in many productions, is an accomplished elocutionist. Edith Roberts is to appear at the Symphony Theatre, Los Angeles, during the engagement of her newest play, "Beans," and will sing a different song every night.

FACTS AND COMMENTS

FROM all indications there will be no change in the official forecast of the tax schedules prepared for the motion picture industry by the Ways and Means committee of the House of Representatives, to wit: the doubling of the seating tax, the doubling of the admission tax and a ten per cent. tax on film rentals. From bits of conversation with some of the men who went to Washington to appear before the Senate Finance committee we learn that there is little hope for relief in that direction. All our readers know of the urgent need on the part of our Government for money and more money, so that it is safe to conclude the schedule will stand. The result will be to very much more than double the tax the motion picture business will be called to contribute toward winning the war.

When the committee of picture men who went to Washington the other day appeared before the Senate committee it was not their purpose to attempt an evasion of the tax, but rather to tell the lawmakers why the tax was too high. Evidently the arguments advanced made little impression, nor do we see how such should have been the result. Generalities, no matter by whom uttered, never serve to impress anyone, much less a committee of case hardened Senators who have become used to that sort of talk. We believe that if the motion picture men had presented facts instead of statements they might have obtained a more respectful hearing. For example, it is a very common thing to read in the daily press that this or that prominent man in such and such a trade said to the Ways and Means committee: "If you compel us to pay this tax we will be put out of business." Yet that is mainly what our delegation of picturemen said. They said that as a result of last year's tax levy only 14,000 theatres survived, where there had been 17,000. We assert without fear of contradiction that this statement could not have been proved by any member of the committee of picture men. THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD is in fairly close touch with the motion picture theatre owners of this country and has not heard, either directly or indirectly, that any such number of theatres have been closed or abandoned for the reasons named. Now, why is it that our representatives should continue to repeat statements so trivial to congressional committees who have means of knowing exactly how the theatres of this country have been affected by the tax lexy?

In the matter of the seating tax and the admission tax it is more than likely that no argument that could be advanced would change the determination of Congress to make the increases suggested in the proposed bill. Argument on those items would be wasted. There is, however, a grave question as to the justice of the ten per cent. tax on gross film rentals. We will admit that the tax on rentals is more equitable as between the various producing units of the industry, for reasons that have been mentioned before. The proposal to so levy a tax is almost preposterous. Think of it: ten per cent. of the gross! And to make matters worse, this tax is certain to be passed on to the exhibitor who pays the rental. But was there any definite, concerted and intelligent attempt to prove to the members of the Finance Committee of the unjustness of that levy? Our report of the proceedings does not reveal any such effort and a copy of a brief said to have been filed with the Finance Committee does not touch on that question. The old footage tax was complained of, but it was not a marker to what the rental tax will be. The footage tax was paid once, but the rental tax goes on forever—ten per cent. every time the rental is charged.

* * *

LAST week the MOVING PICTURE WORLD published the findings of the Federal Trade Commission in the matter of complaints of unfair methods toward competitors in the booking of pictures. We will not reprint the findings here, but every exhibitor should read them and fix them firmly in his mind. There is no place in the motion picture business for such piratical methods as have been charged against the Stanley Booking Company and exhibitors should be thankful that those practices have been condemned. The Commission's ruling is a precedent by which the actions of booking combinations will be judged in future and exhibitors should be keen to prevent the recurrence of the conditions.

LOOKING TO THE FUTURE

By Robert C. McElravy.

THE criticism is often made of stories and plays that they are built on false premises. This may be taken to mean that the foundation is unreal and therefore the superstructure cannot be strong. In a majority of cases this is undoubtedly good criticism, though if the craftsmanship is sufficiently strong it is possible to rear a good structure on poor support. But there is small use doing it.

An experienced workman is seldom tempted to construct his building in this way, for the very natural reason that he wants it to last as long as it may. In the same manner a playwright or a scenario writer usually likes to feel that he is creating something that will last, and it behooves him to get the right sort of a foundation for his edifice.

The motive back of the story may be regarded as its natural premise, or foundation. This is the thing that colors the whole and shines through it from beginning to end. However good the drama or the humor may be, the success of the play or the picture is measured by its meaning as a whole. If it reflects even the smallest atom of truth or beauty, it is certain to please the multitudes. But if the underlying idea is ugly or untrue to life, then it is almost equally certain to disappoint.

It is a safe rule in devising plots for stories that the basic idea must be worth while. No matter how odd or eccentric the characters may be, no matter what astonishing turns the story is destined to take, it should start on normal premises and wind up there, if possible.

What are normal premises? It is a hard question to answer, for to a certain extent this varies with conditions. A few years back the proper premise for a story of American life seemed to be Somewhere on Broadway, presumably in a cabaret. There was seemingly no end to the number of such creations the American people could digest. It may be safely doubted if any other fare would have satisfied our money-mad, commercialized public.

But times have changed. The war has sobered the entire world and the tidal wave of prohibition is coming apace. Even the Sunday joy-ride is no more. It is only reasonable that producers of moving pictures should take a long look ahead in order to prepare for a gradually changing attitude on the part of picture-goers. The man who has had his usual toddy taken away from him is likely to become astonishingly moral.

There will perhaps be no radical change, but the life of the American people for some time is going to be greatly altered, and with this will naturally follow a call for new forms of screen amusement.

Stories of the problem type are likely to be hit rather hard, for as people begin to hold more firmly to the simple virtues, the ties of family life grow stronger. The call of so many men to arms is already doing much along this line. Stories about husbands and wives who can't get along together are likely to be supplanted by stories about those who can, for the rush to the divorce courts is another interrupted industry in this country just now.

War is the dynamic theme of the day—it may almost be said to constitute the normal premise for any bit of modern fiction. Certainly all live Americans are now bending every effort to win the war, and people enjoy best of all the sort of stories that reflect their own individual feelings and activities at the moment. Comedies and dramas with simple, often sentimental, plots are also popular, by way of diversion.

These suggestions are not of course intended to be final, or even applicable to all cases. They perhaps will be found to apply to the ordinary run of screen stories, produced by the rank and file of scenario writers from month to month. For the big stories that are to come, one would hesitate to make predictions. Certainly the producer who adapts one of the great novels, or brings out any new story with the proper authority behind it, will be circumscribed by no rules or regulations. A work of real art goes where it will, and the producer who has it, will, in the words of Mr. Cohan's popular song, find "the whole world waiting" for him.

NOVELS AND THE SCREEN

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

A VERY live agent sat in his handsome private office and pointed out with delight the list of authors who had deputized him to sell their novels and short stories to motion picture producers. He took pride in being their accredited representative, and he was in earnest about disposing of all this material, primarily for the commission, but in full faith that he was giving value for the money received from the sale. More than one large publisher has looked over the long list of fiction on which he could draw for screen material with much the same belief that it was available for high class production. Neither is to be blamed for an error of judgment which is almost universal.

Most of these gentlemen understand the art of painting.

All of them can guess at the art of the theatre.

Both of these arts depend largely upon the way a subject matter is presented. Neither is altogether subject, nor altogether sentiment, any more than one of us is altogether body or altogether soul. If there is subject matter in these novels and short printed stories of big and live interest to people at this moment, why not sell it to the artists and dramatists? Those mediums require far less material than a full-sized feature, which needs about three times as much as the average work of fiction contains. This may sound like a bare statement, but it is founded on a large sum of practical experience.

Must the scenario writer furnish the other two-thirds?

He must unless the story is painfully attenuated.

Who, then, is the author of the screen story?

Who is the author of a drama adapted from a novel?

One question answers the other.

Modern motion picture audiences demand that the subject matter shall either be vital, or that it shall be of exceptionall yhigh value to be worth repetition. They also demand that it shall be well done quite as well as well worth doing. This involves "technique."

Painters and novelists are sole executives.

The dramatist furnishes only subject matter and method, interpretation being that of the actor.

The writer of screen stories, whether or not the subject matter is his, furnishes the method by which the thing may be well done on the screen, the actor interpretation under supervision of a director.

The threefold, composite production of moving pictures has led to a remarkable confusion in minds otherwise clear-visioned. A great deal that is both beautiful and necessary in painting, printed fiction and stage presentation may be utilized, but a vast amount in novels has to be eliminated, as may be readily understood when it is fully appreciated how much time and space is given over to conversation between characters. Stripped of verbiage, most of them do not contain enough stuff for one reel, at most three reels. Assuming an average of two reels, and authors would be staggered to see how thoroughly their works can be pictured in that space, another writer must supply three reels of imaginative matter in accord with the original purpose, in sympathy with the original mood, logical, plausible, constructed with both discernment and discrimination, a joy to the beholder.

Without this masterly transformation what do we get?

We get patched-up continuity, with neither significance nor lasting impression, the kind of pictures which make the first author indignant, the critical spirit disgusted, and the public very tired.

Story value is submerged in bad telling.

This new medium has its own essential qualities. Its stories must be rich in dramatic material, not eloquent of uttered word and printed phrase. It must have vigor of action, romantic beauty of suggestion, the visible comedy of our lives, emotions and thoughts and actions to be pictured so as to keep our minds alert, our souls fresh and clean, our hearts young with hope, our common sense and love of beauty satisfied.

A FEW TERSE OBSERVATIONS

By Edward Weitzel.

At one of the Broadway moving picture houses, last week, two ladies sat quietly through an entire overture, without exchanging a word of conversation. It was evident that they enjoyed every note of the music. When the number was finished one of the ladies expressed her appreciation of the orchestra's artistic merit.

"Yes," replied her companion; "they are all splendid musicians. What a pity they are so ill-bred; they insist on playing when a number of the spectators want to talk."

The thoughtless chatterer is less prominent than he (or she) was when the modern moving picture theatre was first opened. He is being educated to the value of good music; but he is still numerous enough to annoy those around him altogether too frequently. His selfishness is not excused because it is generally unconscious.

Why Is an Author?

There is a story of an author who went back on the stage during the first night of one of his plays while the scene was being changed and was glad to escape with his life. He found himself in everyone's way. The only person who condescended to speak to him wanted to know if he were the property-man. "By no means," he explained humbly; "I am only the man who wrote the play."

The moving picture author is often treated with the same scant courtesy. His name is frequently the only one left off the house program. If it does appear and is an unusual name, it is quite likely to be misspelled. When it comes to a choice between the author and the cameraman, the man who wrote the story is generally a poor second.

Tricks of the Trade

The bold spirits who refuse to be bound down by precedent and insist on adding to the world's stock of knowledge by experimenting with the untried should be given every encouragement. They are the ones who are developing the art of the screen. A thorough understanding, however, of what has been done and what are the conventions of picture making that are indispensable, is excellent preparation for a trip into the realm of the unknown.

One of the laws of dramatic art demands that nothing shall be introduced to take the attention of the spectator from the point that the scene is trying to reach. A convention of the screen also demands that when a revolver is wanted for the purpose of suicide or self defence it shall always be found in a drawer of the desk or the library table in the center of the room. The director of a recently released picture, with this in mind, made a brave attempt to break away from the good old rule by having the villain, at a tense moment in the action, search hurriedly but unsuccessfully through one drawer for the harmful necessary pistol; then reach into a second drawer and produce the weapon. And thereby reminded most of the spectators that it is possible for a director to vary the conventional revolver business—with the result that there is a perceptible weakening in the grip of the situation. The old trick is still the better of the two.

Toe the Line, Gentlemen!

Enterprise is to be commended. But there is something of vastly more importance in the commercial world—fair play. Even business is a gentleman's game and is conducted best according to the rules governing a decent regard for the other fellow's rights. Special privilege is contrary to the spirit of the Constitution of the United States. And it is to overthrow the Hun doctrine of unequal rights that the Allies are fighting the Central Powers on the battlefields of Europe. To start any sort of race and permit one of the contestants the advantage of a fraction of an inch is unAmerican; and any attempt to out-distance the field by sharp practice should find the offender quickly and properly rebuked.

Within the last few weeks a moving picture trade paper has been straining every nerve and muscle to obtain exclusive showings of new releases, in advance of the regular trade showing, and so "score a beat" on all the other papers. Application was made by one of the employees of the paper in question for this special privilege, and was generally denied by the different film manufacturing companies. In one or two cases, and actuated solely by a desire to be accommodating, the reviewer was granted an advanced showing of certain pictures. As soon as the injustice of this was brought to the attention of the proper persons a gentleman's agreement was at once arrived at, that all the trade papers were to be treated alike. A fair field and no favor!

Toe the line, gentlemen!

THE FOURTH LIBERTY LOAN.

THE Government has declared the motion picture industry essential. The tremendous effort and abundant success attendant upon the exhibitor's effort and manufacturer's cooperation in doing beneficial service to the Government made this patriotic service a convincing factor in the decision.

Now comes the Fourth Liberty Loan—and there will be others. Having been declared essential it remains for the industry at large to continue submitting proof of the Government's wisdom.

Boost the Loan. Testify in every manner possible to the fact that the motion picture industry is not alone essential, but vital to the will to win the war.

CAPTURE OF JERUSALEM PATHE SUBJECT

Official French and British Films Form "The Crusaders' Dream"—An Interesting War Subject with Sacred Setting

WERE the whole world not distracted by war, and events took their value from normal operations, as in times of peace, the passing of Jerusalem from the rule of the Turk back to the Christian, after a lapse of four centuries, would have unquestionably been the greatest story in Christiandom. And, indeed, it is to-day and will be when the horrors of war have passed away and its restoration will stand as a bright, imposing reality in the era of peace that must come to the world. The fall of Jerusalem in 1517, prophesied in the dim past, was no more remarkable in its fulfilment than is the miracle which gives the entire world of men eyes to see it in all of its historical detail.

The cinema here, for the first time, takes its place as a recorder of sacred history, and one who views with reverent attention "The Crusader's Dream," realized by the capture of Jerusalem, must be profoundly impressed by the wonder of it all. It is the fifth of the "Far-Flung Battle Line" series, which started the week of September 1 and is distributed by Pathe. They are the official films furnished by the French and British governments. It is difficult to believe that any other great climax of the war will approach this in its spiritual significance to millions of the sons of man. For that reason it should have a tremendous appeal to all creeds of the Christian church, and to the Jewish people, of whose history it is such an important part.

The film, therefore, is not merely impressive—it is epochal. It opens with General Sir Edmund Allenby's entry into the Holy City. Commander-in-Chief of the British army operating in Palestine, he had dispossessed the Turk who had held the place since 1517. He is seen being received at the Jaffa Gate by the British Military Governor; then, accompanied by the Allied commanders and military attaches, he enters Jerusalem on foot and unarmed, exactly in accordance with the prophecy. It is an impressive picture, this prophesied transition, framed in by silent, wondering crowds along the way and swarming over the roof tops.

And from the Tower of David, lending an impressive significance to the occasion, is read the proclamation of the conqueror, translated to the teeming populace, reassuring them:

"Every sacred building, monument, holy spot, shrine, traditional site, pious bequest, or customary place of prayer, will be maintained and protected."

Then follows the presentation to General Allenby of the heads of the various religious communities—Christian, Jewish, Mohammedan, etc.—in Barrack Square, with thousands of wondering onlookers. Here also the British conqueror converses with the Allied commanders and attaches. Then the departure, which is not without a thrill as the General and his staff mount their horses outside of the Jaffa Gate and ride forth in further pursuit of the Turk, whom they have since repeatedly defeated. The business-like martial air is in sharp contrast to the reverent air of the men during the ceremonies in the Holy City. Here, after four hundred years the Crusaders of the New Era had regained the prize for which rivers of blood had been shed and of which millions of people, through centuries, had passionately hoped for and dreamed.

This picture will be released by Pathe the week beginning September 29, and, apart from this one big outstanding feature the series promises to be exceedingly popular. It shows all classes of Allied fighters and war workers in practically every country under the sun—official war films furnished by the French and British governments.

Persons with De Luxe Pictures.

In order to provide Doris Kenyon with the very best talent obtainable, both on and off the screen, Theodore C. Deitrich, president of De Luxe Pictures, Inc., has made several additions to the De Luxe organization. Thos. A. Persons, one of the best known and most efficient men in the motion picture industry, has been retained as studio manager and will be in direct control of productions, working under the personal supervision of Mr. Deitrich, in the Biograph studios. Mr. Persons was for many years studio manager for Colonel Selig, both in Chicago and on the Pacific Coast, assuming during that time complete charge of Colonel Selig's coast production interests. In the event of a scarcity of fuel during the coming winter, Mr. Persons will also be in charge of the De Luxe productions under Mr. Deitrich's supervision on the Pacific Coast.

Another recent addition to the De Luxe organization is Joseph L. Clement, who has been engaged as technical director. Mr. Clement, who is a Frenchman and possesses all of the artistic instincts of that race, became famous through his work with the productions of Maurice Tourneur, Emil Chantard, Albert Capellani, and more recently, Clara Kimball Young.

Still another addition to the organization is Ned Van Buren as cameraman, who is working on the latest Doris Kenyon production, "Wild Honey," in conjunction with J. Badaracco. Francis J. Grandon, who is directing "Wild Honey," will leave this week with two hundred persons and fifty horses who are working in the picture, for the Adirondacks, where some of the exteriors will be made.

Blackton Loans Star to Tourneur.

By special arrangement with J. Stuart Blackton, Maurice Tourneur has engaged Sylvia Breamer for the leading feminine role in his new production, "My Lady's Garter," by Jacques Futrelle. Miss Breamer, who is featured with Herbert Rawlinson in Commodore Blackton's forthcoming production, "The Common Cause," completed her part in that superfeature, which is under the supervision of the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission about two weeks ago, and then planned to take a brief vacation. Mr. Tourneur, however, induced her to consider the leading role in his production and on opening negotiations with Commodore Blackton, the latter agreed to loan the star to the French director, since it was found that she would have time to complete her part in "My Lady's Garter" before she is called to play the featured feminine lead in "The Battle Cry of Liberty," which is to be Commodore Blackton's next big war special, after "The Common Cause."

Miss Breamer has already begun work under Mr. Tourneur's direction with Wyndham Standing opposite her. In "The Battle Cry of Liberty," which is to be the successor of Blackton's earlier success, "The Battle Cry of Peace," she will again be featured with Herbert Rawlinson, whom Commodore Blackton also has under contract for a series of special productions.

Robert Hill on Triangle Staff.

Mr. Robert F. Hill, who was recently named as assistant editor to Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, in charge of the scenario department of the Triangle, has had a wide and varied experience in the theatrical and amusement business. Mr. Hill's stage experience began with a nine-year engagement in stock with Vaughn Glaser. Subsequently he played one season in "The Bridge" and one season in "St. Elmo." Then followed a season as stage director and producer of Ty Cobb in the "College Widow," wherein he played "Silent Murphy." He also played leads in several stage productions. Later he played heavies before the camera with the Edison company. He did "villains" with King Baggot, Mary Fuller and Violet Mersereau. He then deserted the foreground and moved to the camp stool beside the camera, directing Miss Mersereau, Hobart Henley and Sydney Brasee for Universal. Mr. Hill has fifty-six original stories, written and produced by himself, to his credit. Mr. Hill is counted upon to do a mountain of good stories for Triangle.

Mutt and Jeff for Training Camps.

Testifying to the popularity of Capt. Bud Fisher's Mutt and Jeff animated cartoons is the War Service Bulletin for September 1 of motion pictures selected for use in training camps of the army and navy. With six Mutt and Jeff cartoons on the list the Fox Film Corporation points out that Fisher's famous comic characters outstrip all other brands of humorous pictures selected for Uncle Sam's soldiers and sailors.

The Mutt and Jeff cartoons listed are: "The Extra Quick Lunch," "Hunting the U-Boats," "Hotel de Mutt," "Joining the Tanks," "An Ace and a Joker" and "Landing a Spy."

Other Fox pictures listed are: Jane and Katherine Lee in "Doing Their Bit," Gladys Brockwell in "The Bird of Prey," Virginia Pearson in "The Liar" and Jewel Carmen in "Lawless Love."

Tefft Johnson to Direct "The Love Defender."

Tefft Johnson, having directed "The Latch String," with Madge Evans, World Picture star, begins work on Monday on "The Love Defender," in which June Elvidge, Madge Evans and Frank Mayo are to play principal roles. The story is by Maravene Thompson and was adapted for the screen by George Du Bois Proctor. The World officials were so well pleased with Mr. Johnson's initial effort in directing Madge Evans that he was immediately given a contract for another picture.

FIGHT THE HUN PEACE OFFENSIVE

Do Your Bit to Help the Allies to a Complete Victory. Work Your Slide and Program

PRUSSIAN poison gas is not confined to the battlefields of France and Italy. It is sweeping over the Allied countries in the form of peace propaganda, and it is unfortunate that in each community there are a few who, for selfish motives or more sinister reasons, are willing to help the agitation along.

It is unfortunate, in a sense, that the first American offensive should have been crowned with such brilliant success. The impression has been created that with the Americans on the fighting line the war is now but a matter of months, perhaps weeks. It gives a wrong impression. It will slow down the sale of Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps. It will make more difficult the efforts of the draft officers. It will bring about a spirit of lethargy that will be intensified when it is found that the war will and must go on and on until the foe has not only been defeated but so thoroughly and completely conquered that the Allies may make terms of surrender that will prevent a recurrence of the dreadful conflict forever. Germany and her allies must not be left in a position to immediately begin preparations for a new war, as she did following the last conflict. She must be so soundly thrashed and so completely subdued that this can be prevented by the terms of capitulation.

We are not fighting for the cessation of this war. We are fighting for a permanent and lasting peace. For this hundreds of thousands of men have already given their lives. For this cause others will make the supreme sacrifice, and we shall be traitors to those dead if we permit a peace upon any terms short of complete, abject and humiliating surrender.

Every loyal manager of a motion picture theatre should be ready to do his bit by offsetting the effects of the still prevalent Prussian propaganda and the efforts of perhaps well-meaning, but wholly misguided pacifists. Work through slides and programs. Take it over into your newspaper advertising. Make it plain that we are in this war to a finish and that finish a complete and lasting peace. A "peace" that merely brings the cessation of war is no more than an armistice to permit the enemy to gain new stores, to train a new generation in the arts of war, to regain strength to continue the ghostly struggle. Short of this the sacrifice of human life will have been in vain.

J. Harry Lewis, in the Crescent, a Shrine paper, has handled the subject well. Read the matter and use it in your program if you have the space. You can at least use part of it. Then search for other material of a similar nature in the periodicals and daily papers. Lift them from the mass of type onto your screen where they will show up. The editorial follows:

Lots of people seem to be more interested in when this war is going to finish than in what shall be accomplished by its having been. There's just one time for it to finish—and that is when the damnable Hun is licked to a standstill, when Wilhelm has either been kicked from his throne or his hands so tied that the people will have the voice when it comes to opening another slaughter house; when Belgium shall have had whatever reparation it is possible for the severest penal terms to exact on her behalf; when punishment that is somewhere near fitting to the crime has been meted out to the arch fiends of the high command and the German people themselves have been made to suffer some of the agonies they have inflicted upon the invaded nations.

Short of this no peace is possible that any Yankee should stand for.

It's nice enough to talk about humanity and lack of aggression in this war. That's talk and it's nothing but talk. The mother and father who have given their sons to aid in righting the world's wrongs are not going to be satisfied with a mere perfunctory righting of those wrongs. They are going to insist that some punishment nearly adequate to the tremendous crimes perpetrated, be visited upon the offenders. That payment shall be exacted that will be a lasting lesson to other nations that the peace and security of the world, the rights of mankind and womankind, the sacred God-given privileges of children shall not be wantonly ignored and overridden without adequately exacting payment that will be punative and lasting.

Let's forget the end of the war and strive to make it a real one while it lasts, let's forget the lost profits, the wrecked businesses, the enforced shortage of meats and sugars and flours and other luxuries, let's have just one thing in mind—the licking of the Hun, the licking that will stand out above and beyond any licking that the world has ever written into history as a real, bona fide, Simon Pure, double six cylinder licking that will last as a lesson as long as the pages of history exist. Let's make it a classic and make it a condition precedent to any peace consideration that Wilhelm shall either descend to hell in person, be kicked off the throne he has so signally disgraced or a constitution shall have been forced on the German nations that will put into the hands of the people the sole authority to make shambles of the world in future so that when a settlement of other battles and wars shall come there will be no need for hysterical considerations of mercy to the rank and file as being misled. Put the power in their hands to do the mischief and if they insist on fiddling, make them pay the fiddler.

When will the war end?

When everything shall have been accomplished that has been so eloquently set forth by President Wilson. Any peace short of that would make us ashamed to meet the boys on their return and to slink into side paths when we meet the parents of those who would then have given their liberty, their limbs or their lives in needless sacrifices.

The war is going to end when it ends right, and not until then, unless we shall become a nation of slackers sacrificing our principles to our love of ease, to our greed of gain, to our objection to minor sacrifices and inconveniences.

Let the war end when the boys on the front, the boys who are seeing the horrors that we can hardly believe possible, are satisfied that it should end. They've earned the right to a say-so in the final finish and there isn't apt to be any mistaken mercy extended to an army that crucifies sentries, that outrages women and murders children—not the slightest chance that eye witnesses to these outrages will be easy in the terms of settlement.

The war is going to end when there has been a delightful licking administered—one that will satisfy the doughboys—and until that time, let the watchword be "To Hell with the Hun," and let every energy be bent toward helping him accomplish his manifest destiny.

Norma Talmadge.

Norma Talmadge Quits "Personal Appearances"

NORMA TALMADGE announces that she has made her last personal appearance in connection with the showing of her pictures. "I believe" she said in explaining her decision, "that the public does not care for film stars except on the screen where they belong. Personal appearances not only destroy the illusion of the screen for nearly every audience that listens to a film star make an address, but they place the star at a decided disadvantage. I know that for days before I am scheduled to make a personal appearance I am nervous and worried, with the result that I am nearly dead of stage fright when the time comes for me to go out on the stage. The public then sees me as a nervous and embarrassed person and forgets all about any good work I may have done in the picture they have just seen.

"So I have decided to refuse to appear before audiences any more, except perhaps now and then for such patriotic purposes as the Liberty Loan or War Stamps Sales. Just now I feel that every star has a duty to perform in doing his or her best, since so many of our pictures are being shown in the Y. M. C. A. huts for our soldiers in France. The star should always act with that audience in mind and if by doing my very best on the screen I can make some of our boys over there forget for an hour the terrible scenes they are going through daily it will make me very happy."

FOLAND MANAGER FOR GENERAL.

General Film Company's office at Kansas City is now in charge of J. E. Foland, it is stated in an announcement from the company. Mr. Foland is a well-known film man in the Missouri territory, and was most recently in the sales force of Pathe at Kansas City.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Grade Your Advertising.

SUPPOSE that it were possible for you to get an absolutely even program in which each Monday show would be just as good as Tuesday's and Tuesday's as good as Saturday's. Suppose that you reached a dead level of excellence where there could be no better. Do you suppose that would be an ideal condition? If you think so, you're wrong. You would have no standard of comparison and so, in time, every show would seem poor because it was no better than the others. There is no danger that you will be forced to suffer from such a condition. Just now you'll get a lot of pretty poor stories and some good ones, and you may as well be glad that this is so if you advertise them right. That's where the rub comes. You must advertise them right. Don't waste valuable space trying to get people to come to a show you know is not up to the mark. You will make no lasting hit under such a condition. Save the space for the shows that you know are better than average, and get everyone in town to see these. The regulars will come no matter what the show, and you do not have to advertise so intensively to get them in. In these days you should be able to get a pretty fair line on your attractions before it comes time to advertise them. Plan your advertisement to accord with the merits of the story. Advertise every day, but make a splash only when you have something better than usual. And don't make the mistake of thinking that you can make a poor show good by superlative advertising. Don't brag too much about your poor offerings, or in time you will hit a dead level and can make no appeal to your patrons. Do not contract for precisely the same space each day. Make a line or inch rate and use it up as you need it. Two threes might be good enough for one show where another will stand four tens. That apportionment will be better than a flat 23 inches for each attraction. This does not mean to suggest that you advertise or indicate in your advertising that any program lacks merit. That would be foolish. Present all features in their best light, but do not lie extravagantly in type over the poor attractions in the hope that you can get a crowd. What's the use of getting a crowd to a poor picture if you get most in that crowd into your house for the last time perhaps in months?

Varying the Wall Paper.

Printing on wall paper, with varying reasons for doing so, has been used for years, but Maurice Daniels, of the Majestic, Monticello, N. Y., has something new. He cuts his old posters into throwaways and announces that

> By using our old posters for dodgers we overcome the high cost of material so that without raising our prices we can show, etc.

The title and selling talk follow, and we like the line "You want to be around when the church burns." It suggests a lot without telling anything and will rouse curiosity where "See the terrific scene where the church burns down" would merely be "another of those lines." Of course, in using posters you must be certain that the ink will show well above the color and nothing smaller than an eighteen-point or at least a twelve-point if you use a block letter should be used. For a "just once" this idea is capital, and most houses accumulate a stock of material from time to time for which there seems to be no outlet. Here is a handy way to use it up.

Daniel Connor, of Piper's Opera House, Virginia City, Nevada. sends in some more of his advertising. The first is a small space duplicated and scattered through the paper. It will work for any of the numerous spy pictures now prevalent, and the novelty, though slight, will give it a punch. Probably these are stock eyes, and almost any small paper with a job department can let you have cuts along these lines. If you get stuck you may be able to borrow them from the local occulist, if you have one. Have a talk with the foreman of the job-room some day and see what you can dig up in the way of novelty cuts. The other example is a pair of two sevens which will give you some suggestions for paneled advertisements. Mr. Connor has a small single-column display, using strips of border with three small panels cut in along the lines of several program fronts we have shown from time to time. This will work best with a self-selling play like Pickford's or Hart's or Bernhardt's, which is what Mr. Connor used it for. The displays shown are good examples of panel work, and the spaces are not too full, though well filled. "Bab's Burglar" is described as apepaling to "School girl, past, present and future, from 7 to 70," If you will note the top of this display you will find that Mr. Connor gets what is practically a cut by setting type between two slugs of twelve-point rule and covering top and bottom with one- or two-point. The lock-up must be carefully done, but if this care is taken it works just as well as a cut would and gives greater variety in changes.

More Special One Sheets.

W. E. Jones, manager of the Superba, San Diego, Cal., has been good enough to send in some more photographs of his special one-sheet displays in his lobby. His first exhibit was gotten up because there were no decent one sheets to be had, but in the case of Heart of the Sunset this reason did not apply. Here he wanted to fill five frames and did not have five different ones, so he made some up, and really got a better display than he could have obtained by using original posters only. You will notice that the second poster, counting from the left, uses part of the poster shown in the fourth frame, while some of it looks as though it might have come from larger posters. The second display also shows some of the fabricated posters in combination with the regular supply. The details do not show clearly, but you can note the general idea. Some of the posters doubtless cost more than would duplicates of the sheets used, but they are more effective, and that is the reason Mr. Jones uses them. You can get from your paperhanger the so-called cartridge papers in several colors. The red, buff and blue, in particular, supply good bases for displays and should be pasted upon panels of compo board. With a little figuring you can get unusual results, and make your signs talked about. Just as an example, if you have a "heart" title, you can mount a red backing, paste on a cut-out portrait of the star and over this paste a sheet of blue from which a heart shape has been cut, giving you a red heart on a blue ground, or you can use a blue base, and stripe it with white, then paste over a shield cut-out and you have a good title for a patriotic play. It may sound foolish to say that you may make these home-made posters one of the hits of your show, but we have seen it done right here in New York. Try it yourself some time.

More examples of fabricated posters in which a manager can carry out his own ideas of what posters should be.

Launching a Serial.

The Oneonta Theatre, Oneonta, N. Y., gave A Fight for Millions a fine send off. Included was a window display shown in the first cut, with a policeman guarding the Million. The man in the fur coat to the right of the picture is the street advertiser and as the display was made in midsummer the effect of the fur coat can be imagined. In working the street he carried a sign to the effect that the coat could be comfortably worn in the theatre. The second cut gives a detailed view of the window display. From this it can be seen that the jeweler takes a portion of the space for his own display, and gets twice as much attention for it. The line cut shows a combined program and coupon ticket. This is 3¼ by 10 inches, grey stock printed in black. The supposed coupons detail the show by days, and on the back of this section of the ticket are equal-sized spaces for memoranda headed: "What I must do today." For the Saturday space the line is already filled in with "See William Duncan In A Fight for Millions at the Oneonta Theatre." The stub is good for a five-cent admission to the first chapter of the serial. The memorandum idea is a good one to use regularly, using a shorter card and getting them out regularly. If they are used regularly the backs can be printed in quantities and the face printed as required, all stock being one color or stock being changed for weeks.

Here's Raleigh.

Here is A. C. Raleigh's first advertisement for the American Theatre, Butte, Montana. It combines the use of white space, art work and selling talk in good proportions. It is a four fourteens. It might be a three column and still get almost the same effect, we think, for the open display would show almost as well a quarter smaller. That is one advantage of an open set. It will look larger than it really is. It might look better with a larger title. This has been sacrificed in some degree to the art work, but Mr. Raleigh has been picking up a bag full of tricks in a newspaper office and we look to see some good things when he gets started. With Ruffner and Raleigh in the same town we would dislike exceedingly to be the third house.

A four fourteens from the American, Butte, combining white space, art work and selling talk in good proportions.

Add Greeley.

Add Greeley, Colorado, to the Ruffner list. They also worked a fire department run and ½sche for The Still Alarm at the Sterling Theatre. But they had it only for a single day and the chief angle of the Ruff stuff is that the department ran each of the three days of the Butte showing. Who else worked it? The Sterling worked it so close after Ruff that they were not copying.

Circuslug a Paramount.

The Schade Theatre, Sandusky, O., circused Enid Bennett in The Biggest Show on Earth, as did many others, but the Schade did it more throughly. The first notice was a two sevens announcing the coming of "Bennett's Biggest Show on Earth," advertising three rings, two stages, 100 elephants and an artificially cooled tent, which is a new refinement in the circus business. Two more characteristic advertisements are three fifteens. The second notice disclosed the fact that this was a picture and not a tent attraction. The Sennett Comedy works in very well with this picture, it will be noticed. Already dramatic managers are using "Not a motion picture" in their advertising for the spoken plays, but it will be odd if the Ringlings have to identify their attractions in the same way.

Two "circus" advertisements for a Paramount picture.

Triple Spaces.

Here is a four sevens from the Strand, Freeport, Ill. This takes care of three attractions without getting them confused, but they would look a little better were they joined as a three-part panel. As it is there is a certain lack of connection, though the signatures on the outside panels will cary the centre.

Three In One.

In these days of conservation we do not think that managers can do much better than the program of the Lorenz, Lehigh-Orpheum and Broad theatres, Bethlehem, Pa. The three are advertised for a full month in a four pager 4½ by 6 inches, the attractions being listed by day and date. Of course, this is supplemented by other advertising in the papers and with throw-aways, but for a compact program this comes close to the record.

Steve Stunts.

Steve Farrar, of the Casino, Eldorado and Orpheum, Harrisburgh, Ill., booked in The Unbeliever the other day. Almost every manager in Southern Illinois had booked the picture at a high price and had failed to make money with it because the feature is so poorly captioned. It sounds more like a religious controversial subject than a war propaganda, and Steve was warned off. But Steve thought he knew something, and evidently he did, for the picture played three days and broke all August records. What Steve thought he knew was that if you have something to sell, you can sell it if you advertise it properly, so he went to work. Here is his opening-day smash. It is ten inches across the page, and while it doesn't tell a lot pages. The local sheet is only a four-page daily, so you simply had to see one of these, at least. His advance was an average of six inches deep across the page (Steve is great for cross-page effects) and follows the same general lines. In none of the advertising was there a catalogue of the big scenes. This was a picture good Americans should see, and Steve stuck to that argument. The St. Louis recruiting bureau sent a couple of sergeants down, who got there before the run was over, and this gave Steve as many as three news reading notices in one day in the same sheet. The recruiters got nearly twenty men, including one man of forty. It is pretty much the same thing with any subject. If you advertise enough and do the right sort of advertising, you can clean up. If you are careful to advertise only those picture worth while, you can keep on cleaning up. Steve is in a couple of small towns, but he is advertising just as he would in a big town. He doesn't despise the place because it is small. He doesn't figure that enough people will come anyway because there is no other place to go. He went after those who might have stayed home and he got them all out and their money more than offset the extra advertising.

Dogs Of War.

Al Nathan, of the Holman, Montreal, sends in a two elevens for The Geezer of Berlin that is unusually good. It will not reproduce well here on acount of the dimensions, but we show the lower portion of the space. A chain of sausages circles the advertisement save on the sides, where it is broken to let in "The Kaiser's Medals." It will be seen that the Kaiser's neck is similarly decorated, while a daschhund is labeled "One of my dogs of war," though the sausages should come under the same designation. Mr. Nathan adds that he never uses type advertisements, all being specially drawn. This does not seem to be really necessary in Montreal, for some of the type displays are good where the copy permits the use of display faces, but most houses seem to try to get too much into a space. The fault is with the copy writers rather than the compositors. But Mr. Nathan gets a good-looking display with the only reverse cut on the page. In the present instance he capitalizes the fact that this is a parody on a serious subject he has already played. The Universal advertising made this the selling point of their announcements, and it has worked well everywhere.

Middleton's Cure for Sick Nights.

A. L. Middleton, of the Queen, De Queen, Ark., had a "sick" night, and if you want three guesses, it was Friday. Business was not so good as other nights and the funny part was that from four to six kiddies represented a full juvenile attendance. Probably they were saving up for the Saturday shows, but they were not around the house. Mr. Middleton tried several experiments, such as changing service, raising and lowering prices, but Friday still stayed sick. Then he passed the word along that any kid under twelve who bought a thrift stamp at his box office could have a pass to Friday's show free. He didn't even advertise; just passed the word to the kiddies. Now he sells about 25 kid tickets on Fridays and the funny part is that his adult sales are fifty per cent. better. That was an angle he did not figure on, but it's a case where good intentions brought its own reward. He sells about 60 stamps a week so that he gets $15 for the Government, he gets more money himself, he helps the general war spirit, makes a lot of kids happy and gets a couple of new leaves for his wreath of laurel. And the sick night is sitting up and taking nourishment three times a day. Have you a sick night—and some thrift stamps?

Rule Work.

A. L. Barclay, of Johnstown, Pa., still seems to be having his troubles getting cut material, but he has made a pair of nice-looking advertisements through the use of a small cut and rule work. One is two eighths and the other two tens. In both it will be noticed that he makes the most of the previous appearance of the stars at his house and in both instances he plays up the stars above their productions to follow up on this. A known star has more pull than an unknown play, and Mr. Barclay knows this. Mr. Barclay still has his troubles getting cuts, but up to date no one seems to have sent him one of those rubber cuts, so he has escaped something. Ever try to run one of those rainproofed things?

A two eights and a two tens from Johnstown, Pa.

Beats Ruff.

It would seem that C. Post Mason, of the Denver Exchange of the First National, beat Ruff to the fire engine stunt for The Still Alarm, but he worked it only for one day. The big thing about Ruff's stunt is that he worked it three days' running.

Still a Chance.

ONE of the old guard writes in to know whether there is any use in an old-timer trying to reach the current market. He is handicapped to some extent by the fact that he wrote practically all of his stuff for one company and his name is not well known to present-day editors, but he has the same chance as others of coming back if only he will realize that the market has changed. He wrote a special style of stuff for one company. When that style no longer pleased, the company went out of business and his market was gone. The crude melodrama of a few years ago is no longer in demand. What is wanted today is a story with more heart interest than blood and thunder. Stories of charm are more in demand than the-duel-in-the-dark style of plot. Given an appreciation of this fact, then the old timer still has a better chance than the newcomer, since he has a thorough knowledge of technique, which is still the basis of good plot writing. In the past six months we have heard no story more widely praised than "Nine Points of the Law." This is a story of the woods, but it is not the usual story of strife and murder. There is a kidnapping, but this is merely to provide the situation. The real story concerns the man who finds the child and who yearns to adopt her, but who takes her back to her father when he learns of her identity. The story is simply told to gain sympathy for the man and his wife. You are almost sorry when you see the poor fellow take the child back home. Then the climax comes. The child is brought back. She is not the daughter of her supposed father, but merely a child he has been keeping. He gladly gives her back into the custody of the childless couple. This surprise finish to a logical happy ending is what makes the play—plus the clever planning of the earlier premises, and it makes a noteworthy play that has attracted wide attention. It is not often that a play so searching is developed, but taking the same keynote of simplicity and heart-appeal, it is possible to make good plays that leave a lastingly pleasant impression instead of plays that merely excite for the moment and are forgotten with the coming of the next program. It is such plays that the better class of producers want, for they realize that such plays will last longer and gain more rebookings than the flash melodrama that, once seen, can offer no second appeal. Whether you are a newcomer or an old-timer, take this lesson to your heart and try to write plays that go to the heart. It pays best, because it is easily the best seller, and it brings reputation that sometimes is worth more than the money paid for that particular script. Of course there are some melodramas that will live as long as the heart interest plays, but they are few in number as compared with heart-interest, and they cost more to make, in both time and money. The old-timer has his chance, but he must stop being an old-timer.

Selecting Material.

Some authors sell their synopses because certain editors have found that they are "safe." The editor may not have had wide screen experience himself, and he is not able to judge the screen values of the hooks dumped on his desk. Some of the stories he recommends are good when they come to the screen and others that promised even larger returns are quite the reverse, but he notes that all or practically all of the story material turned in by some experienced writer gets over on the screen, and presently that writer has almost a staff job without the confining hours that the job carries. The old timers are most fortunate in this regard. They know what will and will not screen, and they write synopses with real photoplay experience back of the work. They know from study and from the reproduction of their own work what will and will not get over to the audiences. They work with a certainty of touch that not all of the present day continuity writers can attain, and they profit by their knowledge. Don't feel that you are qualified when you have mastered the rudiments of plot building. Learn to know from experience what plots will work into good plays, and you will find in time that your work is selling better and with more repeat sales to the same studio. Learn all the angles of your business if you would become a first-class workman. Do not rest content because you can think ideas. Think ideas that will not only sell but create a market for future sales. That is what counts.

System and System.

There is a difference between the methodical worker and the follower of systems. The former does his work in a systematic manner. The other fellow is so busy with his systems that he seldom has time for work. This is not meant to decry system. It is valuable and necessary, but system carried to excess becomes so involved that time and opportunity are lost instead of saved. A note book of facts and situations is a handy thing, but keep it as simple as is compatible with efficiency. You do not need an indexed file of several hundred divisions to keep track of your ideas. Then the index becomes a graveyard. Keep your notes so simple that you can get at them easily, and above all do not arbitrarily label an idea "comedy" or "drama" or "farce." Just slip the idea into the book or file and use it for comedy or drama as necessity may require. You can get more good comedy ideas from poor melodramas than you can get from other comedies, and comedy will often suggest an intensely dramatic situation. The idea that goes into the book as a small boy sorry that he ate the green apples may emerge as a heroine poisoned by a cunningly doctored peach. If you put the idea into the comedy division you may never get the poisoned peach idea, so leave it laying around where you can see it whether you want a comedy or a dramatic idea.

Either End.

If you find it difficult to start a story, suppose some time you commence at the other end. Write a corking good climax and then back up to the start. This is old advice, but it has not been given for so long that someone sent the suggestion in as a novelty. Instead of lining the story up get a climax. Then let the climax suggest what has gone before. This is a scheme often used in detective stories to make easy the work of the imitator of Sherlock Holmes, but it will work as well with any story. You get the situation of a hero placed in a deserted shack. Outside prowls a lunatic with a yard-long knife and a thirst for blood. Inside the fuse of an infernal machine splutters away. The heroine comes galloping to the hero's rescue. The lunatic seeks to stop her but falls back with a cry of "My daughter!" She rushes into the shack to free the hero, the villain dashes out to stop her. The lunatic kills him but gets a blow on the head that restores him to sanity and rushes into the hut to join his daughter and her fiance. Now all you have to do it to get the reason why the villain seeks the hero's death, why the old man went crazy—and you have a complete plot, not quite in the present day mode, but one that would have sold a couple of years ago. With a little practice you can work backward better than you can forward, and many authors invariably plan the climax as the starting point, since it is more apt to suggest good action before and after.

Twists and Turns.

If you can get hold of a copy of the month-end Popular for June read the first story, the "Ghost Hunter," by W. M. B. Ferguson. It is a fine example of betrayed confidence. Before you are half through you are certain that the detective is really the missing heir. Then the missing heir turns up, rather convincingly, and you are at sea, but presently the detective exposes him and announces himself as the heir. Now you are certain, but the next moment he explains that this was merely a ruse to extort the truth and in reality he is only the detective. In the same way you are kept guessing as to many things, and almost invariably find that you have guessed wrong. The murder victim was not murdered at all, and the man you think his murderer, and who is not certain that he isn't, is shown to have an alibi, and the man who was a good second choice for murderer was the saintly lawyer of the early part of the story. Purely as an example of artistry this story will interest, but it should interest the author-student more as an example of the manner in which the unexpected twist gives heightened interest to the plot. The usual run of cut and dried characters is missing. You are not quite certain of anyone before the story ends. There is a real suspense instead of merely the theoretical suspense raised by clumsy contrivance. As a rule the Popular is even better than the Saturday Evening Post as a means of studying the action story, and this story is unusual even for the Popular. Study the tricks and then do not copy, but invent others like them.

"Unsuited."

An author complains that studios seem to make no distinction and send good stories back along with the poor, all branded "unsuited." The mere merit of a story as a story does not indicate suitability. The best story ever written for photoplay might be returned with the same brand if it were done for a romantic lead and sent to the Chaplin company. It would be good, but it would not be suitable for Chaplin's use. This is an extreme example, but it is just as bad to send a story to a company that does not make that style of stories, though it may make dramas of a broad general type. Some companies use only women stars, others use both men and women, and still others pair their favorite players and demand stories in which the male and female leads shall be of almost equal value. Each must be suited and they cannot all be suited with the same story. It is possible to swing the story somewhat to conform to the requirements of each studio, and this may be done more easily in the synopsis than in the continuity, though it is no particular joke to rewrite five thousand words.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Amateur Projectionist.

H. Harris, Carlsbad, Texas, says:

Am an amateur projectionist and regular reader of the department, which I enjoy very much. Have Power's 1916 model projector which has run about 16 reels per week for two years past. Of late it has developed trouble, as follows: The left-hand side of the intermittent sprocket strips off the sprocket hole track from the film and it winds it around the sprocket, usually, several times before breaking off. Sometimes it stops the machine and other times the pieces fly up into the light ray, catch fire and sets the whole reel (sets fire to it, I suppose you mean. Ed.). The films we get are very old, and perhaps that is the real cause of the trouble, which occurs on left side of intermittent sprocket only. We also have much trouble with carbons. Had good ones and no difficulty, then got some cheap ones and the jinx got busy. Then no kind of carbons gave good results. Have to keep adjusting arc continually to keep it from going out entirely, and even then don't get good light. It burns craters in the carbons, and then a flame circles around the carbon; then it sputters and goes out. Have same juice from same plant; 110 volt D. C., 25 to 40 amperes. When machine was first put up could have long or short arc, but now it must be a certain length or it goes on strike.

I suspect your intermittent sprocket shaft is low on the left end, which has the effect of throwing most of the work on the sprocket teeth on that side. Very likely this has caused them to undercut or wear hook-shape; also it is likely you have aided this trouble by having too much tension at the gate, thus overworking both sprocket and film. I cannot use space to set forth in detail the methods for remedying these conditions. Would take a full page. Must therefore refer you to General Instruction No. 13, page 466 of Handbook for general information on this subject; General Instruction No. 9, page 463 of Handbook for proper method of tension adjustment, and General Instruction No. 8, page 462, for information as to effect of worn intermittent sprocket teeth on film. If you do not own a handbook you certainly should. I am not trying to force you to buy one, though for your own good I would be willing to do just that if I could. Space in this department is too much in demand to use it in setting forth that which is contained in the handbook in full detail and which has been printed in the department many times in past years. As to the carbon matter, I would suggest that you begin at the main house switchboard and carefully examine and clean all wire connections, cleaning them thoroughly. I would suggest that you examine your asbestos wires inside the lamphouse, stripping off the insulation back as far as the wires are discolored and cutting off the wires at that point, installing new sections of wire in place of those discarded. In this connection I would refer you to third paragraph, page 233 of Handbook, which is of great importance to you and your manager. It tells you the practical effect of oxidized lamp leads and lugs. Their resistance is very high. I would then suggest that you very thoroughly clean the inside of your carbon jaws, filing them smooth, but being very careful to keep their surface flat, so that the carbon will make good contact the full width of the jaw. You should then carefully examine your rheostat and test it for grounds; see page 260 of Handbook for illustrated method of testing rheostats. Next examine the insulation of lamp and test it, the lamp, for grounds. Last of all, test the entire projection room circuit for grounds. You will most likely do well to have your local electrician test the lamp and lines for you, though if you have a handbook it will tell you how to do it. When you have all these points O. K. I think your arc will have been properly spanked and will behave itself.

Returned Soldier and Projection.

The above title suggests very serious matters. The returned soldier, particularly if incapacitated for hard work or work demanding physical activity impossible to him, must be provided for. It is a solemn duty we shall owe the man who has given so much for society at large. The only question possible in this connection is as to how this may be best accomplished. Vocations in life which may be followed by physically incapacitated men with success, especially when a great majority lack college training, are not so many. Projection is perhaps one of them. How many such men there will be to be provided for no man may say at this time, but we are justified in supposing the number will not be small. What is to be done, insofar as applies to our particular profession?

First of all let it be clearly understood that neither this department or its editor has the slightest disposition to be unreasonable in this or any other matter. We have and always shall oppose with every scrap of power we possess the placing of untrained men in charge of projection. It is neither right or safe. It is an outrage on both the motion picture industry and the patrons (audiences) thereof. It makes for tremendous waste at a time when waste is doubly pernicious. It is not, therefore, to be tolerated. We shall oppose the placing of untrained returned soldiers, wounded or otherwise, in charge of projectors just as we have for years opposed placing of other untrained men in such position. We shall not, however, oppose, but will advocate the following of what we understand the action of the Toronto local to be, viz.: The giving preference to returned soldiers who, while partially incapacitated, are still able to preform the duties of the projectionist, as assistants to projectionists. In such position they will in due time graduate as projectionists, meanwhile being self supporting.

It seems to me unions all over the country may well take action allowing only these men to be employed as assistants to projectionists for the future, always provided they be available. It would be a commendable and a patriotic action; also, it would be largely helpfull in warding off the placing of returned soldiers in projection rooms without any proper training. It would be notification to the authorities and to exhibitors that the profession is quite willing to do its part provided that part be done decently and in order, as it should be. As a matter of fact, this plan will in the end aid the men it is intended to aid vastly more than if they were allowed to attempt something they cannot possibly do in acceptable form, at the same time conserving the best interest of the industry, the theatre patron and all concerned. We would be glad to hear from locals which may see fit to follow this suggestion.

Pennsylvania Code Being Revised.

We are informed by William Lauder, secretary Department Labor and Industry of Pennsylvania, that the Motion Picture Code of that state is being revised. If by this it is meant that the code governing the licensing of projectionists is being revised we are pleased to know it, for the last Pennsylvania code was about as crude a thing of its kind as we have ever examined. We refrained from criticism thereon at the time of its issue at the request of one of the officials of the above named department. We shall not do so this time if criticism is needed, because there is no excuse for such absurd errors as were contained in the last code. If the Pennsylvania officials do not know how to formulate a proper code then for heaven's sake let them consult with those who do.

Likes the Name Projectionist.

The Nicholas Power Company by its general manager, Will C. Smith, says:

I agree with you that the use of the word "operator" is antique and that it should have been eliminated some time ago. The more I think of the word "projectionist" the more I am impressed with what it means. This company will do all it possibly can to advocate the use of the new word, and our stenographic department has been instructed to insert it wherever any of our office staff inadvertantly use the old term. Another excellent suggestion is the use of the term "projection room." Our advertising department will use these terms in future.

Comment is unnecessary. General Manager Smith has always been recognized as a progressive man. Our friend, E. M. Porter, general manager of the Precision Machine Company, is also a progressive, and I am confidently expecting him to take similar action on behalf of his company. General Manager Smith adopted the name projectionist without any suggestion of any sort from me, except such as I have given to all through the department.

Unique Fire Protection Suggestion.

John Griffiths, Ansonia, Conn., is responsible for the following suggestion, based on the proposition that the complete isolation of the projector in trouble, when a fire occurs, would not only prevent any possible alarm to the audience, but prevent any harm to the other projection equipment or films. Briefly, his idea is to construct a metal hood large enough to set down over the entire projector, one to be suspended over each machine by counterweight. This hood to be connected by slip joint, with a vent flue to the open air, and in its upper end would have suitable fire extinguishing materials to be automatically released when the hood is lowered.

The idea seems rather queer at first glance, but is nevertheless practical. It would call for not less than twelve feet of ceiling height in the projection room. Its lowering would, in effect, isolate the projector in trouble in a veritable stove, so that all smoke would pass away to the open air and all danger to other equipment be avoided. It might even be possible for the projectionist to proceed with the show, using the other projector. The air space between the hood and floor, when in lowered position, should, of course, be but little.

Optical Difficulty.

William H. Muller, Flushing, Long Island, has optical trouble, as follows:

> Have projector with Gundlach lens, alongside a Power's 6-A having a French lens. Get the better, clearer picture with the Power's outfit. Am at my wit's end to discover the reason. Have interchanged link fuses, wall switch, Inductors, asbestos leads, condensers and projection lenses of each machine at different times, without improving results. The Power's always gives the same excellent result. Have noticed that when burning the two arcs together the arc on the poor outfit is weak, as compared to the other; also I do not get the brilliant, round spot at aperture with the machine giving poor results. Both machines have 4¼-inch projection lenses, 80-foot throw, 16-foot picture. Condensers, Powers, one 6½ and one 7½, other machine, two 6½s. Distance, condenser to aperture, Power's, 19 inches, other machine, 15¾ inches. Back focus of both lenses, 3¾ inches. Can you help me out?

In describing optical difficulties it is essential that amperage be given with close accuracy. If the arc of one machine is "weak," getting less current, then its optical train requirements will be very different, in so far as concerns condenser lenses and distance from center of condenser to aperture. Presumably you have two inductors, each taking current from the same projection room leads, also presumably the wires are in good condition and of equal size. If they do not get warm they are all right. The fuses, also, may be eliminated from consideration, except that contacts are clean and tight. Lack of those two items would waste electrical energy and, if bad, might generate enough mechanical heat to melt the fuse. These conditions being O. K. and the switch blades making good contacts, the trouble seems to lie in the inductor itself. Better remove the inductor casing and examine the inductor switch and wire connections thereto. If O. K., then better have the Nicholas Power Company send a man out to examine and test the inductors. As to the lack of definition given by one machine, the failure to get a round spot seems to indicate fault in crater burning, probably due to too much advancement of lower carbon or wrong angle of lamp, or both. Give the lamp exactly the same angle as the Power's lamp has and same advancement of lower carbon. Remember that spot is but an inverted, somewhat out-of-focus photograph of the crater, hence, if the crater is not round, the spot will not be round. See to it that both condensers have their lenses so set that their apexes come within about 1 16-inch of touching. Always, provided the amperage be the same on both machines, put in a 7½-inch front condenser lens on the offending projector and set the condenser the same distance from the film that the Power's condenser is. Attention to these various things should remedy your trouble, but the condenser system requirements will be different on the two projectors if the amperage differs materially.

From My Home Town.

From Otis H. Butler, Centerville, Iowa, the town where the editor was born, comes the following:

> This is from a Centerville man who wishes to be one of the many projectionists to thank you for what you did in our behalf in the matter of the "work or fight" order, by getting us declared essential. Am now in charge of projection at the Majestic. Was at Orpheum for past five years, but wish to go to California as soon as I can locate in a theatre where excellence in screen results will be appreciated. Under proper working conditions will guarantee A1 projection. Have always been a reader of your, or rather our department, which has been a great help to me. Am using Power's 6-B, and am installing a new one as soon as projection room is remodeled. No use to describe projection room as you have seen it. I shall always be a reader of the department, and am enclosing money order for handbook. Will appreciate the favor highly if you will autograph same. Have the Hawkins works, but my old handbook (second edition) is out of date.
> Do me a favor. Get a pass for two from friend manager some day when you have a good show on and send same to Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Henry Blachley, 510 West State street, with my compliments. Mrs. B. is my maternal ancestor's sister. As to the California stunt, the union controls things pretty closely in all cities. Are you a member of the I. A.? If so, advise me and I will see what I can do for you. It is possible some western coast local may be in need of one or two good men. Your autographed handbook has gone forward. I am always glad to hear from progressive men, and when their theatre stands less than 500 yards from where my first squawk was borne out upon a waiting world the letter is doubly interesting.

Size of Screen.

James Boyle, Fort Madison, Iowa, sends in subscription and asks:

> Kindly advise as to correct size of screen for auditorium 48 x 100 feet, with 25 to 30-foot ceiling at screen.

You should have sent ground plan of seating. Would not advise picture in excess of 18 or at very outside 19 feet wide, with not less than 20 feet from screen to first row of chairs. For wide auditorium you should require guarantee from screen manufacturer against "fade-away"; in other words, that the picture will appear practically as brilliant from side as from center seats. You will, of course, border your screen with black, same to be not less than 2 feet wide, and to come one or two inches inside the light.

Much Interested in Department.

Morris A. Goldman orders question booklets and says:

> Kindly send list of any other questions you may have and accept thanks for aid I have derived from the Projection Department, in which I am much interested.

There is no other list of questions. Those in booklets will give you plenty to do, I think. They are designed as a guide to study. I will earnestly advise you to forward four dollars for a copy of the third edition of the Handbook, unless you already have it. It is a book every projectionist should by all means have.

A Caller.

We learn that Roy R. Stewart, now in the Intelligence Bureau at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, called on the editor recently when he was away. Brother Stewart was formerly chief projectionist in the Tucson Opera House, Tucson, Arizona. He is one of the real men, and we regret missing the opportunity to again meet him personally.

Question Box.

It is possible there are those who hesitate to consult this department through reluctance to have their names known to the public or to their employers as asking questions. For their benefit we have established a "Question Box," in which such questions as may be marked for the Question Box will be answered without publication of any name or address. Just mark your letter plainly, "For the Question Box," preferably at its beginning, and address it to the Projection Department, giving your name as a guarantee of good faith. It will not be published.

Ohio Boy. Your question booklets have gone forward. Trouble is due to fade-away. This is a fault of the screen and cannot be eliminated without changing same. Theatre owners, when purchasing a new screen, should insist on a guarantee against fade-away. The fault consists in showing perceptibly less brilliancy from side angle than from full front view of screen.

West Canada. As to which make of projector is best, I would say there are no better projectors made than those you will find represented in our advertising pages. Of these you may make selection according to individual preference and you will make no serious error. If your projectors are as old as you say, then most emphatically your employers will do well to replace them immediately, because they are sadly out of date and cannot possibly be made to equal the performance of the modern projector.

Jesse James. Why pick out the name of an outlaw. Have taken up the matter you complain of with the manufacturer, and it will be made right. Your grievance is fully justified. The noise is probably due to very badly worn intermittent sprocket teeth.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by GEORGE W. BEYNON

Musical Directors Should Take Artistic Responsibilities Seriously

THE poor impression conveyed to the minds of the public in the early days of the "movies" by the mediocre ability displayed by picture players has been one of the greatest handicaps confronting the musical director of today. He finds it a difficult problem to maintain even a semblance of the dignity given to his profession in other branches. There is no unity of purpose among his brother musicians, nor can he look for help from the public.

Even yet, to those whose minds dislike analysis and deduction, the violinist playing pictures is one who plays only in first or second position, usually upon two strings. Artists in the singing field and those musical geniuses of instrumental music heard in concert consider it beneath their dignity to attend a motion picture theatre. Temperamentally averse to listening to a poor performance, they shun the place where they expect cheap music. They cannot conceive the idea of musical art allied to screencraft.

Sellers of instruments regard the efforts of picture orchestras as puerile and ineffectual because they seldom attend a theatre of this kind. They prefer the symphony concerts, grand opera and other concerts, where celebrated artists perform. The bad name still clings to the music offered with pictures, and they openly scoff at its artistic possibilities.

This striking condition plainly shows the first duty of the musical director fitting pictures. Whether he be an organist, pianist or orchestral leader, his responsibility is heavy. He must live down the bad name attached to his profession. He owes it to himself, to his employer, to his patrons and to music as an art that in accepting the position of musical director he gives the best possible results.

Time or clocks have no place in the life of a musical leader. He must enter into the duties to which the screen has called him with a whole-heartedness and evenness of purpose not to be deflected by side issues. The calling is indeed worthy of his artistic ability, but it requires more than simple artistry to raise this profession in the minds of the public. Industry and constant attention to details will help. Perfect picture portrayal will add to its laurels. Intensive interpretation of selections regarded as standing upon a higher plane than those usually attributed to this class of performance will prove that the concert halls do not hold a monopoly in classics. Let there be no let-down in the musical morale, and picture music must come to its own.

This eminently satisfactory result is not going to be attained without the surmounting of many obstacles. The first hurdle will likely be the manager. He is usually lacking in musical knowledge, and will wish to continue the playing of cheap music. He has become accustomed to the light, melodious and jingling stuff. His patrons have said they liked it, so why change? As an employe the orchestra leader will need much tact to place before his manager the strong arguments for better music. However, if the performance of light music be musicianly and always in good taste the step made into classics will not be a great one, and the change in quality of playing will be little noticed. Do not use "jazz" music in a feature or serious subject, but keep it for the comedies and the portrayal of slap-stick humor. When played it should be as well played as a nocturne. Put into it all the "pep" and "jazz" of which you are capable. Your manager will like it, and his resistance to good music will slowly vanish when he knows that his performance is not going to be turned into a "high-brow" symphony concert.

Organists who are called upon to play a church organ have been told to make their work sound like an orchestra. Managers have always held a fe r that their theatre might be mistaken for a church and a puritan or two stroll in and refuse to contribute to the collection plate at the door. Organists have been notified that any "churchy" effect would automatically become the acceptance of their resignation. Theatres install an organ, the grandest of all instruments, and expect to hear a hurdy-gurdy or a caliope. Now there is only one way to play an organ, and after years of tedious and technical effort to learn it a theatre manager has no moral right to dictate a different method to which the organist must adhere. Organists must accept the responsibility of their position as a serious one and refuse to prostitute their art for the mere sake of monetary gain.

A pianist who has the charge of the music in a theatre should be careful in his improvisation. The masters have written wonderful numbers for the piano, which, when memorized, become gems in his repertoire, the rendition of which raises his art in picture playing. The key twiddling that emanates from his own brain can never be anything that will interest his audiences. This is not an aspersion cast against his musical ability, but rather a reflection upon the mental attitude of the public, who only enjoy those things that they have heard before. The duty of the pianist is to bring before the people the best in musical literature written for the piano; not indiscriminately, but well suited to the scenes depicted. There is abundant chance for improvisation in modulating from one key to the other during the change of music and scene. The comedy also holds opportunities for individuality. Let the pianist first consider his art. His personality should be secondary.

The responsibility of keeping up the high standard of music devolves also upon every orchestral player. He has no choice of what he may play, but he can at least show his virtuosity in that selected for him.

Many players leave their instruments in the theatre and never practice. Naturally their work suffers. It becomes indifferent and slovenly. It affects the orchestra generally and the result is poor music. Picture playing is as important as symphony work, and every musician should keep himself in trim. If the cornetist finds his top B slips on him he knows that he needs to improve his embouchure. Practice only will do it. If the clarinet player encounters difficulties in fingering of fast passages he owes it to himself to spend an hour each morning on finger exercises. Don't say to yourself, "Well, this is only a picture house. Why should I keep in shape?" The question is, Why should you not? You are paid for your work, and your best is expected. Because it looks like a steady position that is no guarantee that you will stay. Good work only will make it steady.

The picture industry has opened up a new field for musicians, for which they should be sincerely thankful. Their appreciation should be shown in the perfect performance of their work and the fulfillment of the heavy responsibility accepted by them to maintain the high standard and lofty ideals set by other branches of the musical profession. Every musical slacker helps to postpone the ultimate victory of good music for the pictures.

Popular War Song Chosen by B. S. Moss.

A contract has just been closed that should bring satisfaction to the two parties most intimately concerned and much pleasure to the public at large.

Charles K. Harris, the composer and music publisher, has signed over the picture rights of his popular Spanish-American war song, "Just Break the News to Mother," to B. S. Moss.

The song is to be made the nucleus of a seven-reel feature, upon which work will be begun as soon as possible.

5 min. Intermezzo.

Rialto Offers Exceptionally Fine Music.

The Rialto is well named the "Temple of the Motion Picture." There is never a program presented but what contains something of a startling nature and of true merit.

The overture last week was "Francesca Da Rimini," by Zandonia, with Dr. Reisenfeld conducting. It is a most intricate work and one seldom heard outside the large Symphony Concerts. Filled with counter themes it presents innumerable difficulties to orchestra and director, but Dr. Riesenfeld carried his men through it with apparent ease and enjoyment. The cello solo was especially well defined, the tonal balance being perfect. The difficult changes of tempi were well marked and contrasts from pp to ff magnificent. Music lovers can no longer complain that the works of masters are beyond their means.

The educational feature dealt with the life, habits and panorama of Mexico. The orchestra opened it with "Il Guarany" and we were apprehensive. Suddenly after the first strain they blended into a light Spanish intermezzo. Talk about musical art, this is the epitome of it. "Il Guarany" established the atmosphere of Mexican grandeur just enough to place the auditor in a receptive mood, then the picture was fitted scene by scene with other and lighter atmospheric music.

Tosti's "Good-bye," sung by Gladys Rice, was poorly orchestrated and gave no support to the singer, especially in the last ff passage. Many players had not parts and utilized the rest to carry on a little conversation among themselves. This is bad.

The surprise in the playing of the Pictorial Review lay in the playing pp during the scenes showing aeroplanes in operation. It has a psychological reason for its foundation that never struck us before, but it certainly is mighty effective.

Desere La Salle offered the baritone aria from "The King of Lahore," by Massenet. Mr. La Salle has a very fine presence, a splendid voice and knows how to get his songs "over." Joseph Klein wielded the baton for his accompaniment, and Joe has improved so much we could hardly believe it was he.

Mr. Klein's conducting is causing much favorable comment. His gestures are graceful, forceful and definite, his interpretations are sound musically; and withal he is at all times in full control of his men.

The big feature of the Rialto performances is the factor called Synchrony. There are no breaks in the music, no chopping of phrases, and yet each scene, whether found in the Weekly Scenic or Feature, is properly fitted and timed. Don't take our word for it, go and hear the music. It is worth while.

Anniversary of "Star-Spangled Banner."

The most patriotic demonstration New York has seen since the war began was celebrated at City Hall on Saturday, September 14, the one hundred and fourth anniversary of the "Star-Spangled Banner's" birth.

The Pelham Bay Naval Station Band played the "Star-Spangled Banner." Then Justice Pendleton, grandson of the author, related the history of the anthem and its relation to the past. Miss Anna Fitziu sang the song, and Miss Laurette Taylor recited Patrick Henry's immortal address. The crowd went wild with enthusiasm as she closed with the impressive lines: "As for me, give me liberty or give me death." Major General Bell referred to the anthem as the "Shibboleth of the greatest nation on earth," and spoke of the sacredness of our cause and our personal responsibilities in the present world crisis.

All through the ceremonies, as the music playing beneath the picture was heard, the newsboys chanting the victories of the American troops on the Western front. It seemed but a part of the remarkable scene thrown on the canvas of life.

"Battle Cry of Freedom" Answers Call.

At the outbreak of the Civil War an idea was prevalent in the North that it was only a matter of a few days before the slight blaze in the South should be snuffed out, and the few who had started it would be suing for forgiveness in the meekest of spirits. It seems never to have occurred to anyone that a conflagration had been started that could only be extinguished by rivers of blood.

Having this idea firmly fixed in the mind, President Lincoln's second call for troops came as a great shock to the nation, and consternation joined hands with patriotism. But there are always a few whose heads remain cool and whose hearts are loyal in any crisis. Among this number on the honor roll of the country the name of Dr. George Frederick Root shines out.

This gentleman came of stern New England stock. He was born in Sheffield, Mass., in 1820, when the aftermath of the war of 1812 was still being reaped by his people, and the influence of the period gave coloring to his life work. He received his musical training at Boston under George Webb. In 1844, he came to New York as organist of the "Church of the Strangers." But later he resigned this position and went abroad for a year's study in Paris. Returning, he settled in Chicago, and established the music publishing firm of Root & Cady.

Several cantatas and a large collection of school and church music are among his compositions. As a writer of war songs, he had the honor of presenting to the nation a group which breathed the spirit of the time and were a great aid in rousing the people to a sense of their duty and responsibility to their country. Among the best known at the present day are "Tramp! Tramp! Tramp!" "Just Before the Battle"—the pathos of which had such a depressing effect upon the soldiers that they were often ordered not to sing it—and "The Battle Cry of Freedom."

When Dr. Root heard that President Lincoln had asked for more volunteers to protect the Union, he realized the significance of the crisis and the need for an incentive to stir up patriotism. Under the inspiration of his own intense loyalty he wrote "The Battle Cry of Freedom" as a rallying factor. The next morning two young recruiting singers entered the music store for some patriotic music. Mr. Root showed them his new composition. They saw at once its possibilities, and sang it that day in the square. Before they had finished the crowd took up the refrain. It spread like wild fire over the country, and was heard everywhere. Often soldiers were ordered to sing it when going into battle, and so great was its appeal and influence that it is said to have turned the tide of one of the most decisive battle of the war. President Lincoln publicly referred to it, and stated that he considered the greatest service a song could render was to inspire a spiritual conception, or patriotism.

"If we had only possessed your songs you would not have beaten us," is a remark attributed to a Confederate veteran speaking to a Northern man after the war. Probably this is an exaggerated tribute to the power of song, but it emphasizes a fact. The war songs of the North had a swing and vim to them. They were no mean factors in adding recruits to the army and in keeping up the spirits of the people at home and the soldiers in the field.

The years have come and gone, blotting out the bitterness of the "sixties," but a few songs created to lighten the blackness of that decade have survived. Among them we have the one composed by Mr. Root, which barely fell short of being the National song.

Again our armies are engaged in a mighty struggle, and, in this world-war for democracy, it seems peculiarly appropriate that we should sing with a new inspiration the "Battle Cry of Freedom."

Strand Synchrony Sincerely Suggested.

The Strand, of New York, has been until very recently the foremost exponent of good music for the pictures, and today it is offering musical presentations as good as ever. But the "as-good-as-ever" music has been improved upon, and no longer is it the forerunner of the best.

The performance of the week of September 15 is a case in point. The overture, "Peer Gynt Suite," by Greig, required no great effort to present properly, but its rendition was slovenly and poorly interpreted. The pictorial review was played in the same old "slappidy bang" style that has prevailed for some time. No attempt was made to synchronize this music, and the "breaks" were anything but pleasant.

Yon Collignon, a baritone, slurred through the "Benevute" song by Diaz, and then attempted "The Sunshine of Your Smile" (composer left off program) in English. His French is fair, and no doubt many thought the second song was sung in a foreign language, for his diction beggared description. Added to these few little faults he had the habit of leaving the key and roaming in pictures of sound totally foreign to the accompaniment.

"Johanna Enlists," a Pickford feature, was well fitted—by the organ principally. The same sudden and abrupt endings held sway during the orchestral accompaniment. Have they never heard of synchrony?

"Roce di Trivabera" (composer left off program) was sung in artistic style by Miss Grace Hoffman. She has a wonderful voice, and is a big favorite with Strand patrons.

During the scenic the music seemed to go a bit smoother, while the comedy cartoon was a splendid adaptation of light music.

The organ solo closed the bill.

"Hearts of the World" a Splendid Song.

It is remarkable how the whole world is drawn to the screen drama. Its importance is manifested in a thousand ways, and the one-time toy cinema has become the great motion picture—the fifth estate.

Music has always been more or less allied to the dramatic art, and has been especially adaptable to pictures. It has kept step with the rapid advancement in filmcraft, and bids fair to rise to a dignified profession on its own account.

Songs have been introduced as themes in picture scores since the "Birth of a Nation" with some success, but the Echo Publishing Company brought off an artistic and financial coup when they had "Hearts of the World," a beautiful ballad, interpolated into the score of the famous picture of the same name.

It shows the trend of the times when producers themselves encourage this advance in musical art. Mr. D. W. Griffith, after a careful analysis of the song, wired James W. Casey, the composer, as follows:

"Your song, 'Hearts of the World,' has my approval and endorsement. Hope that it will be a great success."

Miss Grace Nelson is singing the song in the performance at the 44th Street Theatre and winning unstinted applause. Already the song has sold beyond the hundred thousand mark, and looks like the popular hit of the year. No longer is the field of song limited to concert and recital halls, musical comedies and grand operas, oratorios and churches, the film claims its need of music and will not be denied.

Bricks cannot be made without straw nor can the bricklayer build his wall without a trowel. A large library of music is the straw for a leader's musical setting while the cue sheet is his trowel. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD gives you the trowel and the advertising columns show you where the straw stack is to be found.

Questions Asked—Suggestions Offered.

Q. There has been much discussion regarding the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner." How fast should it be played to gain the best results musically?

A. Our national anthem is usually played much too slow for singing purposes and if "dragged" becomes anything but inspiring. We would suggest that you play it about 104, which gives a brisk swing to the song that will take the popular fancy.

Q. How can I perfect myself in the playing of the clarinet?

A. We would suggest that you practice more assiduously. The clarinet is an instrument that requires constant playing to keep the player in good trim. The changing registers and difficult fingering makes it imperative that you keep up your scale exercises even if you have gone beyond the elementary stages of playing. There are some good books on the subject and it might be helpful if you procured these for study.

Q. I am a leader in a small place. I have a little orchestra composed of a piano, violin and organ. We cannot seem to keep our organists or violinists, because of the better offers they get elsewhere, which are more than our management can afford. What do you suggest?

A. It is an unwise thing to import players, and from what you have said we glean that the price is not very high. Now musicians are scarce owing to the draft. Why not pay your organist more money and do without the violinist? Piano and organ make a good combination. Duets can be arranged for overture purposes and all around good results obtained. Let the organ play the feature through and the piano the comedy. The balance of the program can be made interesting by alternating the two.

Q. Could you tell me who wrote the "New World Symphony," and under what conditions?

A. Anton Dvorak, the Bohemian composer, has added this wonderful work to the musical field, gaining considerable help from Harry Burleigh, the colored singer and composer. While not founded on actual Negro melodies—except a phrase from "Swing low, Sweet Chariot"—it is based on themes modelled after it. The peculiar and wierd harmonies of the darky are heard throughout it and then the principal theme of the final movements when repeated towards the end in a much quicker tempo, suggests "Yankee Doodle." Dr. Dvorak never tired of hearing the familiar plantation songs, and from them he has given us a symphony worthy of much recognition.

Q. Having formerly held a very good job as a leader of a large orchestra in hotel work, how can I get into the picture game?

A. The playing of pictures is a profession that calls for a great deal of knowledge that the average player cannot get at first hand. We would suggest that you take a position as violinist or pianist, as the case may be, in an orchestra playing pictures. Watch the way the pictures are set and keep your eyes and ears open for pointers. There is the "Professional School for Picture Playing" in Los Angeles, Cal., where, no doubt, you would receive the training necessary, but it is the only one of its kind and the distance might be your handicap. Anything we can do for you personally we will be pleased to do.

Q. I am sick of playing the same old music all the time and I wish you would suggest where some new music can be obtained.

A. The easiest thing in the world, brother. Get an issue of the Moving Picture World, look in your department, called "Music for the Pictures," and there you will find many excellent firms advertising new music. If they are in this department, you can be sure that they are reliable and their offers bona fide. Recently Chappell and Company offered a bargain sale of twenty new orchestral numbers for two dollars.

HONOR ROLL

Garden of Dreams

By

JOSEPH McMANUS

Published by Hinds, Hayden & Eldredge, New York

This song will prove a capital theme for sweet heroines, besides being adaptable for many love scenes. It should have a place in every leader's library.

Phonograph Co. Sees Vast Opportunity.

For the first time in the history of the phonograph business, the Columbia Graphaphone Company are putting instrumental and vocal selections on the same record. The incentive for this change is "Mickey."

Mr. O. S. Benz, of the General Sales Department, makes the following statement relative to this innovation:

"As we have already made plans to record the vocal number of 'Mickey,' and in view of the enormous appeal the photoplay will have with the public in creating a desire to hear the music after seeing the picture, we have decided to place on the opposite side of the vocal number an instrumental number or medley of numbers taken from the 'Mickey' score, as written by Mr. Krouse. We will endeavor to select from it such music as can be used for an instrumental number."

In addition to this double-face record, the Columbia Company will release on September 20 a dance record of 'Mickey,' as played by the Earle Fuller Jazz Band.

It will, no doubt, also be of interest to the trade that the Aeolian Company are releasing their piano roll this coming month, and are putting out approximately one half million pieces of literature on this subject.

The Vocalian Company, the phonograph record branch of the Aeolian Company, has also in preparation a double face "Mickey" record to be released soon.

Motion Picture Educator

Conducted by REV. W. H. JACKSON and MARGARET I. MACDONALD

President Wilson on Immediate Education

PRESIDENT WILSON wrote the other day about the tremendous importance of public education, the keeping open of schools now and the great educational task that one must take up after the war.

These are, however, certain phases of the developing education plans which are as necessary in war-time as afterwards. The Saturday Evening Post, writing on the subject, says:

"There is no limit to the intelligent education direction of the future, no sum that the people of the United States spend on education would be ill invested. Everybody who is sufficiently in the subject to know anything about it knows how far short of a rational idea we now fall. Anybody who is not interested in this subject is a poor citizen. We wish to see it talked about in billions. We wish to see it a primary interest of the Federal Government."

The Moving Picture Educator has always taken such a stand, although not daring such a tremendous proposal. When, however, the Government does begin to spend large sums of money in Education, then will the Moving Picture come into its own. The necessary great cost of equipment and the building up of a library of films has been the first great hindrance. Under Governmental direction, these difficulties will be overcome. The outlook is alluring.

PICTURES AN EDUCATIONAL ESSENTIAL.

There is no doubt that the greatest tribute has come to the moving pictures in the governmental declaration that they are a war-time essential. When one remembers how but a few years back the moving picture was the object of all kinds of opposition and prejudiced censorship, it is a splendid proof both of their inherent value, and the now educated public opinion, that in a time of the closest possible scrutiny of that which is necessary for the general good in time of war's distresses, the moving picture has been pronounced an essential for the public well-being.

In a similar manner the question should now be courageously taken up by the educational authorities. They, too, have looked upon the pictures with a bias and prejudice impossible to explain.

The time has now come, however, when the value of the pictures themselves are pressing upon the educators as an essential factor. These are times which demand a maximum of results in a minimum of time. Nothing has yet met these conditions like the moving picture.

The United States Government has proved in all military educational matters that the pictures are a quicker and more intelligent teacher with a corresponding curtailing of time and effort. Many of the larger schools of the country are in the future going to assume a military character. They will therefore follow the precedent and example of the government in using the pictures—the self-same pictures—for all these purposes.

This experience will be followed by other subjects wherein the pictures are already efficient, and only waiting adoption to prove their value everywhere, even as they already have in individual cases. The essential nature of the picture is a fact and not an opinion, well known by those of experience, not known by the uninitiated, the enlightenment of the latter is close at hand.

Educational Pictures Made During the Summer Vacation.

Those schools already so far advanced as to be using moving pictures will gladly note the additions which have accumulated during the past months, to the great stock of good and helpful films previously noticed. Other schools beginning to feel the need of the aid of the teaching pictures will also be interested in the list.

The latest release is the great Alpine series by the intrepid Alpine traveler, Dr. Frederick Burlingham, who has ascended and photographed Mont Blanc, The Matterhorn and The Jungfrau. Beauty and danger are made fascinating in this series, which with the suitable descriptions in the sub-titles will be more helpful than a large descriptive book.

Dr. Burlingham was also able to secure a series of views of "Unknown Switzerland" where the strange inhabitants have known no change for many centuries, truly the most interesting people of Central Europe. Released by W. L. Sherry, New York.

The series "Mexico To-day," (Wright's) are among the best of their class, and should be in every school. They are at once beautiful and intelligent. "Ditmar's Living Book of Nature" is continued. To mention them is enough, because the earlier series prepared the way for these which will be eagerly called for. Of this series, a leading farm journal, which circulates through the United States, calls attention of its many readers to the "Birds of the Woods in Cinematography," thereby acknowledging the value of the series and advising their use and study. School journals should not be behind in these matters. These are released by the Educational Film Corporation of New York.

The Current Films issued weekly by the Government Publicity Bureau shoul be followed with the regularity of thei issue. They are the greatest educator of the age. W. H. J.

Rivoli Has Prerelease of Bruce Scenic

The regular release date set for th newest Robert C. Bruce scenic, "'Ti Tough to Be Tender," is Oct. 7; bu in spite of this fact the New Yor Rivoli succeeded in corraling it for it audiences the week of September 15. I is a characteristic Bruce picture an is released by the Educational Film Corporation of America; and it must b admitted that the poetic style to whic Robert C. Bruce clings in the makin of his pictures is a relief from the mor conventional style of travel picture. It must also be admitted in favor of the opposite method of presentation that the Bruce scenic does not as a rule carry a quantity of information; on the contrary, the picture in question, "'Tis Tough to Be Tender," is fashioned entirely along entertainment lines. It contains much beauty, for Bruce never misses a trick in this direction: for instance waterfalls, mountains and clouds are never photographed at that particularly rare angle at which the Bruce camera focuses them. Jesse G. Sills, the photographer in this instance, is also deserving of praise for the splendid photographic work exhibited in the picture.

This picture was taken in the Yosemite Valley, while Marion H. Kohn, president of the Consolidated Film Corporation of San Francisco, and Robert C. Bruce were sojourning there. Mr. Kohn consented to be the star member of the cast, with a couple of pack mules as his support. His picture name is Softan Tender, and he is in the wilderness trying to appreciate the poetry of nature. Finally the call of the wild becomes a weak whisper and he retraces his steps with the vision of the peaceful city streets luring him from afar.

Picture to Aid in Recruiting Labor.

According to the September issue of the Bulletin of the Affiliated Committees for Better Films, a Citizen Committee in Stamford, Conn., to cooperate with the branch of the U. S. Employment Service in that city in recruiting labor for the patriotic task of backing up the soldiers by working in the munition factories, has had a short motion picture made as a part of the campaign. It is the story of a husband and wife who disagreed over the desire of the latter to do "her bit." It shows the wife visiting the U. S. Employment office, learning something about the kinds of work which women can do, thus releasing men for tasks which women can not do. She finds her opportunity and her husband comes around to her way of thinking. The picture was acted by local people. It was exhibited in the local theatre with great effectiveness, the exhibitors doing their part by putting the picture on the screen free. It has attracted much attention.

Paris Celebrates Bastile Day.

Pathe presents a film illustration of how Paris celebrated Bastile Day under the title of "All for Liberty." It pictures President Poincaire and many prominent Frenchmen of civil and army life. The chief feature is devoted to the parade of all Allied troops through the Paris streets, including the French, British, Scotch, Belgian, Servian, Polish, Portuguese and the "Yanks." The marching feature is excellent.

"Solving the Farm Problem" (Pathe).

This "Winning the War" number is full of great interest, particularly for agricultural communities. It pictures the organization of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve since we entered the war and shows the way youths have been trained and fitted to carry on the important work of growing crops for the Allies. More than 300,000 of these boys are in uniforms today, carrying on farm labors, and this film will accordingly have wide appeal.

"Saba, the Astonishing" (Outing-Chester).

The 12th number of the Outing-Chester travel pictures which are being released by the Mutual Film Corporation brings to our notice one of the most curious of the world's queer places. "Saba, the Astonishing" is its title, and if we scratch our geographical bump a bit we will recollect that Saba is a little island in the Dutch West Indies. It consists principally of an extinct volcano in whose crater nestles a little town in which life goes on in much the usual way among a people of Dutch origin. These people are quaint, peace-loving, gentle individuals. They have no harbor, yet they make the staunchest of boats for the outside world, which when they are completed are let down over the rim of the volcano into the sea, where a crew proud of Saba's creations mans them. The cultivation of limes including the extracting of the juice from the fruit via the old-fashioned press method is shown. The picture contains a number of delightful surf scenes in addition to those of informational quality.

"Punting With Sugar" (Post-Pathe).

The principal industry of British Guiana, according to the Post-Pathe film on the subject exhibited at the Rialto during the week of September 8, is the sugar industry. The picture gives a detailed account of how the sugar cane is harvested and transported to the mills. A fairly accurate idea of the work entailed can be had through this film.

"A Mexican Hacienda" (Educational).

The Rivoli Theatre, New York City, exhibited during the week of September 8 a reel of interesting scenes in rural Mexico. These scenes presented the Mexican hacienda in its most strictly Spanish type. About many of these haciendas walls have been built which served as fortresses in time of revolutionary troubles. The feature of the picture is the bloodless bull fight which is conducted with as much consideration for form as if the scene had been laid in old Madrid. In addition to the bull fight proper the sports include riding the bull, and throwing the bull. This is a good number and is instructional as well as entertaining.

"Watching a Ruby Grow" (Universal).

The manufacture of the chemical ruby is shown in the Screen magazine No. 90. This is done with the aid of electricity. First we see the weighing and compounding of the chemicals, the preparing of the coloring for the ruby, and then the placing of the compound in the oxy-hydrogen furnaces where the ruby chrystalizes in space in a temperature 4,600 degrees Fahrenheit. Then comes the shaping of the rubies, the grinding and the polishing before they are acclaimed finished gems.

"Finest on Four Feet" (Outing-Chester).

As its featured educational the Strand Theatre chose for the week of Sept. 15 one of Mutual's Outing-Chester group entitled "Finest on Four Feet." This consists of an amusing collection of dogs, thoroughbred and otherwise. There are collies young and old, baby Airedales and tiny Pekinese pets. There are also splendid police dog types; and even the kindly mutt, whose greatest fault is his questionable ancestry, has a show in this entertaining bit of film. The picture has been well photographed and carefully assembled, and the subtitles play a considerable part in the comedy of the film.

"The Road to Romance" (Paramount-Bray).

In the 138th release of the Pictograph will be found some attractive and informative scenes with the Camp Fire Girls of America. The picture shows how they seek and find the beauties of nature. They are not afraid of a thirty-five mile hike once a week, nor do they flinch at sleeping in their blankets out under the stars. They also gain independence of thought and action by being thrown on their own resources. In fact, according to the pictures of the Camp Fire Girls' activities, we would judge that the organization is doing much to inspire womanliness among the girls of the nation.

"Official War Review, No. 13" (Pathe).

Further scenes from the great war. Building bridges in the mountains of Italy leads, then come views of the British and French on various fronts. America crossing the seas is a feature toward the close, and the "Victory" flag of living men will arouse enthusiasm.

Bobby Connolly Joins Garson Forces.

Bobby Connolly, one of our best child actors, and one who has carved his name and winning personality into the hearts of movie fans, left for the Coast with his mother and little sister Helen, to join the Garson forces on the Coast. Bobby will be seen in "The Unpardonable Sin," Rupert Hughes' smashing war story, in which Blanche Sweet will be starred, and which is being directed by Marshall Neilan.

Tefft Johnson Believes in Trade Paper Reviews

THE strides that have been made in the development of the motion picture play, from the series of episodes hastily basted together with long stitches, characteristic of the early days of the industry, to the closely joined, smooth running continuity of the screen drama of today, may be traced to the work of the reviewers connected with the trade publications. This is the statement of Tefft Johnson, a World director, who has just finished "The Latch String," his first picture for this company, with Madge Evans as the star.

"Instead of resenting criticism I for one," continues Mr. Johnson, "welcome it. If I have grown with my work I owe it to the men who, day after day, see pictures and view them from an impartial angle. They are fully acquainted with every trick and device of directors in their efforts to give the public something new. Knowing just how the machinery operates they are not carried away by the enthusiasm created by seeing a new wrinkle, but can sit in calm judgment and express an opinion based purely on box office values. I owe it to these men for the system I employ in directing a photoplay, which consists in viewing each scene as a distinct play and filming it as such, but bearing in mind that it also must have some connection to the scenes already made and having a relation to those that are to come.

"Reviewers see a dozen pictures where a director views one, and if through no other medium than by induction the critic is bound to acquire a profound knowledge of values. Any director that thinks he knows all there is to be learned about picture making and resents criticism will find himself in the position of the paid patron of the thetre instead of occupying the director's seat in a studio. I study the reviews as closely as I do the script."

QUARANTINED SEE PICTURES.

Considering the quarantine at Camp Upton and the possibility of the resulting necessity to cancel outside attractions in the Liberty Theatre, E. L. Hyman, Director of Pictures, War Department, Commission on Training Camp Activities, booked a feature picture week commencing Sunday, Sept. 22.

"America's Answer" was played Sunday and Monday. This is the second official government picture and was the first showing for it outside of the Geo. M. Cohan Theatre, New York. "The Desert Man" with Wm. S. Hart; Fatty Arbuckle and Mabel Normand, Tuesday; Douglas Fairbanks, in "The American," Wednesday; Geraldine Farrar, in her Goldwyn picture "The Turn of the Wheel" also Mary Zentag, violinist virtuoso, and Herbert Waterous, basso, will render solos on Thursday and Friday. All Cleveland First-Run Exhibitors Join League

WHAT amounts to almost a miracle has happened in the ranks of the Cleveland exhibitors. All the first-run theatre owners have joined the league and are attending the meetings regularly.

This has been brought about by the consistent work of the league's president, Henry H. Lustig. When he took office he pledged to build up the league and make it worth while, and evidently he has made good, for the results are there.

In appreciation of his work, the league members gave Lustig a banquet at the Statler Hotel, September 9. It was announced previously that the affair was for Meyer Fine, who leaves soon for the army. This was camouflage, so as to make it a surprise on Lustig.

There was a large gathering and suddenly Chairman Max Schachtel, in his characteristic manner, made a speech and presented a gold watch to Lustig. Secretary Sam Bullock was also presented with a gold pen knife, while Mr. Fine was not forgotten, the committee having a present ready which he no doubt will find very useful after going away from home.

Canadian Exhibitors Face Increased Taxation

MANY hope that the Canadian Government would grant relief to the rural exhibitors of the Dominion from the fifteen cents per day per reel war tax in the near future was dispelled when G. W. Taylor, of Ottawa, Assistant Deputy Minister of Finance, announced that as the special tax was imposed by Parliament under an amendment to "The Special War Revenue Act," thus making the tax part of the federal statutes, it would be impossible for a department of the Government to make any alterations thereto or to vary the conditions under which the tax should be collected.

Formal complaint regarding the unfairness of the reel tax for small-town exhibitors was made to the Collector of Inland Revenue at Ottawa by exhibitor organizations in Canada. In the protest it was pointed out that at least double the present revenue through the reel tax could be obtained by simply arranging a sliding scale so that the large city theatres could pay something like their just share of the assessment. It was urged that the present tax places an unnecessary restriction upon the moving picture business, and that one result of the tax had been to close a number of small theatres. Examples of the injustice done to the smaller houses were given, and the claim was made that the application of the tax was defeating the very purpose for which it was intended—namely, to secure more revenue.

The honor of sending the official letter to the Ottawa authorities goes to R. Kershaw, of Winnipeg, Man., president of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association of Manitoba.

Brooklyn Exhibitors Boost the Exposition

At a meeting of Brooklyn exhibitors, held Saturday evening, September 21, at the Triangle Theatre, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, The Government has shown its approval of the Motion Picture Exposition, to be held at Madison Square Garden, October 5 to 13, by co-operating with the industry and placing at its disposal various exhibits from many of the Government departments; and

WHEREAS, We believe this is an opportune time for us to show our appreciation to President Wilson and the members of his cabinet for having declared that our industry is essential; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Exhibitors' League of Brooklyn pledge its heartiest support to the forthcoming motion picture exposition, and, moreover, that we call upon the other branches of the industry to show the same support and patronge, and to urgently request that they join with us in making this exposition a great financial success.

Resolution of Thanks to Wm. A. Brady.

At the same meeting this resolution was also adopted unanimously:

WHEREAS, Under the able, efficient and courageous leadership of William A. Brady the motion picture industry, co-operating with our Government in carrying on its war activities, has proven itself an essential industry; and

WHEREAS, We, the association of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Brooklyn and Long Island, feel grateful to William A. Brady for his many efforts in our behalf; therefore be it RESOLVED, That in body assembled on the twenty-first day of September, 1918, we unanimously tendered our thanks and appreciation to William A. Brady, our friend and our champion.

Atlanta Forms Local Exhibitors' Association

ON Monday, September 16, at a meeting attended by representatives of every theatre in Atlanta, the Atlanta Theatre Managers' Association was organized. This co-operative action evidences harmony among strongly competitive factions.

In the vaudeville field the condition applies to the Jake Wells, B. F. Keith and the Marcus Loew interests, and in exhibitors' circles to the Jake Wells, John Evins, the Sig and Adolph Samuels and independent enterprises. It was stated that the object of the organization was to co-operate in better serving the country, the state and the city in promoting civic and patriotic projects.

The officers elected were Hugh L. Cardoza, general manager of the Wells Amusement Enterprises, president; Willard C. Patterson, manager of the Criterion Theatre, and president of the Georgia Exhibitors' League, secretary and treasurer; members of the executive board: E. A. Schiller, general manager of Loew's Southern circuit; Lewis Haase, manager of the Atlanta Theatre; John G. Evins, manager of the Strand-Vaudette Amusement Company, and George T. Schmidt, manager of the Alamo Theatre No. 2.

The theatres represented in the association are the Atlanta, Auditorium, Alamo One, Alamo Two, Alpha, Bailey's, Bonita, Criterion, Forsyth, Lyric, Grand, Rialto, Regent, Royal, Strand, Savoy, Tudor and Vaudette.

WORLD PICTURES IN EXPOSITION.

World Pictures has just contracted for a large space in the Motion Picture Exposition which will be held in New York City from October 5 to 13. The space is prominently located near the main entrance to Madison Square Garden, where the exposition will be held, and it will be elaborately decorated for the event. The World is planning to have some of its stars at the space each evening during the progress of the exposition to greet the crowds of people who are interested in World actors and actresses and World productions.

Brooklyn Is "Moved" by Loew.

Brooklyn at last has come into its own. As the poet hath it, "there was a sound of revelry by night," the "night" being September 16, and the occasion the opening of the Marcus Loew Metropolitan Theatre in Brooklyn. As this house seats over 4,000 people, it is believed to be the largest theatre of its kind in America. It is sumptuous in all its appointments and in its arrangements all up-to-date knowledge necessary for a motion picture-vaudeville house has been utilized.

The house is both broad and deep with three entrances on as many streets. One enormous balcony reaches from the middle to the rear of the house, a row of boxes encircling the front with the usual proscenium boxes. Seats are large and comfortable with plenty of aisle space. Ladies' and gentlemen's retiring rooms, telephone booths, etc., make for comfort and convenience.

The projection room is of concrete, large and roomy. It is located at the rear of the balcony. The throw is about 165 feet and the angle is not acute. Very favorable comment was made of the projection which is accomplished by 2 Power's 6 B Cameragraphs.

The opening took on the aspect of a house party. Speeches and songs were rendered by Carlyle Blackwell, Sergeant Irving Berlin, Virginia Pearson, Sheldon Lewis, Harry Morey and others, with bows from Alice Joyce, the Lee sisters, Doris Kenyon, Carl Laemmle, Adolph Zukor and others; and the house was charmingly dedicated by Anna Case, the Metropolitan Opera House star.

Flowers were there in profusion and a large orchestra, supplemented by a big pipe organ, discoursed sweet music. It was a great success. To clinch it, a speech was made by the boss, Marcus Loew.

September 22 Attractions at the New York Theatres

RIVOLI.—Will Rogers made his screen debut at the Rialto the week of September 22 in "Laughing Bill Hyde," a Goldwyn picture, written by Rex Beach. Hobart Henley was the director. The Animated Pictorial, the Official Allied War Review, a Mexican scenic and a Biograph reissue, "When the Fire Bells Ring," were also shown. The Rialto Male Quartette and Leeta Corda were the vocalists.

RIALTO.—Marguerite Clark in the Paramount picture, "Out of a Clear Sky," taken from a novel by Maria Thompson Davies, was the leading screen attraction at the Rialto. Thomas Meighan and E. J. Radcliffe are in the cast. The Rialto Magazine, "Through the Fjords of Norway," and a Mack Sennett, entitled "Sleuths," were also on the program. Eldora Standford and Lorrie Grimaldi were the soloists.

STRAND.—Shirley Mason and Ernest Truex in a John Emerson and Anita Loos production, released by Paramount, were the headliners at the Strand. The picture is full of fun. A Burlingham Travel Scenic, the Allied War Review, a Christie comedy and the Strand Topical Review completed the screen attractions. A silhouette production of the garden scene from "Faust" and Maxine Pilcer in Russian songs were on the musical program.

EIGHTY-FIRST STREET.—First half, Enid Bennett in "The Marriage Ring"; latter half, Mildred Harris in "For Husbands Only."

FORTY-FOURTH STREET.—Griffith's "Hearts of the World."

BROADWAY.—"The Geezer of Berlin" and "The Craving."

NEW YORK STATE EXHIBITORS TO MEET.

A meeting of the motion picture exhibitors of the State of New York has been called to meet at Albany, N. Y., on Thursday, September 26, at the Hotel Ten Eyck. Matters relating to taxation and Sunday laws will be discussed. An effort will also be made to arouse interest in the trade exposition at Madison Square Garden, New York, October 5 to 13. A large attendance is desired.

Baring Some Secrets of the Clan and Proving It Pays to Advertise

IN the September issue of The Meccan, a house organ devoted to releases distributed by Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, we have discovered the handiwork of Epes W. Sargent, and present herewith what we venture is among the cleverest reminders of bills payable that has ever been circulated. We quote:

"Every year during the summer we send out a hint to those who forget to remit their dues. Then if they still remain forgetful the gobbleuns get 'em sooner or later, but it is plain forgetfulness with most of them, and all they need is a reminder. This year the notice that was sent out read.

"MOHAMMAD HAD FIFTEEN WIVES and when he died Omar Ibn Al Hareth declares that he left behind 'not a golden dinar nor a silver dirhem, nor a slave, nor a slave girl, nor anything but his grey mule, a few pots and pans, and his prayer rug.' That's what he got for trying to keep up fifteen different establishments.

"YOU HAVE BUT ONE WIFE, WE HOPE and it is to be supposed that you have golden dinars and silver dirhems, not to mention greenbacks, Liberty Bonds and chicken feed, yet though we discover with pained surprise that you've forgotten the dirhems you owe for dues until there is now recorded against you the sum of $.....

"YOU ARE BETTER OFF THAN MOHAMMAD WAS

"WE DON'T WANT TO WARN YOUR WIFE that we are afraid that perhaps you may be supporting fourteen more, and we don't want to drop you from the rolls of Mecca Temple; we like you too much for that, yet the Imperial Council law says we must, unless—

"YOU CAN SEE THE PREDICAMENT WE ARE IN.

Won't you please do something about it (preferably in a check line) and

"DO IT NOW—RIGHT NOW.

"And almost the first crack out of the box came the prompt confession from Noble—but never mind his name. He writes in part:

"'Being a sailor, I have only visited in ten ports, and as a sailor has a wife in every port I am still in hopes of catching up with our friend Mohammad, but do be a regular brother and Mason and don't repeat this, for it would make my New York wives very sore'."

Characters: Manager of Exchange and Exhibitor.

Time: Present.

Enter exhibitor, flashily dressed, big diamond in tie and on finger.

(Manager very busy, trying to wait on fifteen people at one time.)

Exhibitor sprawls out in only unoccupied chair. Stops wheels of commerce.

Manager: What can I do for you, sir?

Exhibitor: What sort o' stuff do you handle here?

Manager: Two-reel Billy West comedies.

Exhibitor: How much?

Manager: So much!

Exhibitor: Can't use 'em at that figure. What else you got?

Manager: Two-reel Jester comedies.

Exhibitor: How much?

Manager: So much!

Exhibitor: Sorry, but I don't think you and I'll be able to get together. That's all you handle, eh?

Manager: Well, I am also distributing the Ford Educational Weekly. Those are one-reelers and are free of charge to the theatres——

Exhibitor: Good! Book them to me for every Tuesday starting next week. (Gets up and shakes hands warmly with manager.) Mighty happy, old man, that I was able to give you some business after all.

Manager: (Handing good cigar to exhibitor) Much obliged!!!

Exits exhibitor. Manager (with far-away look in his eyes) goes back to his daily task of earning an honest living.

"The Waterfall of Influence"
Scenario by One Gerald Duffy

A MAN must be serious to be funny. There is no one more serious than LeRoy Stone, film editor for Bill Hart. He sits through the day and sometimes into the night running film through his fingers and trying to imagine he is before a screen. He sees only what others have done, his work is working over the work of others, his mind is always concentrated on what the minds of others have turned out.

It must be difficult for one in such a position to retain one's perspective—it must be almost impossible for such a one to be original—to think of things, deep things, that no one else has thought before him.

Yet Roy Stone has not been washed away by the waterfall of influence.

He was discussing with me this morning the future of himself and others in the industry.

Perhaps it was because today is Friday and the 13th all in one swipe; perhaps it was because he was speaking for publicity; perhaps it was merely because he is so serious.

Whatever the cause, he said it. It will be hard to believe, but he did.

"Do you know," his eyes, looking off into the black recesses of the future, shone with the keen fire of those of a wolf penetrating through the darkness of the night—and also, like the orbits of the wolf, they might have been seen by the future from deep in the doubtful darkness, and the future might have been afraid.

Elsie Ferguson's Loan Synopsis
Tale of "Sacrifice Until It Hurts."

THE picture opens with a scene showing Miss Ferguson reading a letter from her soldier, who makes a fervent appeal for the purchase of Liberty Bonds by those who remain at home. In a scene vivid with realism she sees the American soldiers charging across no-man's land, gladly sacrificing their all for their country.

She determines to make even greater sacrifices to help the soldiers "over there." She releases her maid for service in the Red Cross and her chauffeur for the army. She disposes of her luxurious car and the next day rides to the studio in a taxi.

There she meets her maid in her Red Cross uniform ready for service overseas, and her chauffeur, who has entered the army as a mechanician.—Publicity.

Recalling Film Activities
Only Five Short Years Ago

(Compiled from the Moving Picture World.)

"Moths," according to Thanhouser, would live in celluloid. They live despite camphor pellets—but in pictures they are imperishable.

"30 Famous Features a Year" was the F.-P. promise five years ago. Goodness, how they've grown!

General Film was advertising exclusive service with General, Biograph, Cines, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Melies, Pathe, Selig and Vitagraph. Some changes in the W. K. Industry since then, eh, wot?

The United States District Court of Buffalo ruled that Eastman Kodak Company had infringed on rights of Rev. Hannibal Goodwin, deceased. After eleven years of litigation it was determined that the Rev. Goodwin discovered and patented the same basic ingredients that Eastman had used in preparing film for moving, still, kodak, vacation, family-group and other movable and immovable pictures. Several dollars and fifty cents were involved in the settlement.

Watterson R. Rothacker's picture appeared as the chief attraction in a department headed "Flickers." "What do you think of his looks? He's a pretty nifty looking fellow, isn't he?" is quoted from the text surrounding the cleetrotype of the Chicago irrepressible. Sounds like what has later appeared under the weekly wheeze, "What Kind of a Cluck Is—Old Doc. Muck?" printed in another publication devoted to exploiting the Film Industry's Handsomest Men. But, all seriousness put to the one side, this Rothacker guy lives up to his billing even unto this day.

There was then coming along a 700-seat theatre in Passaic by H. K. Hecht—by Heck! Mebby it's finished and occupied by this time.

Oh, look! Here's Joseph Conoly—serious. He's the same "Smiling Joe" who has carried a cut-trunk into every one-night stand in North America for the Shuberts, et al. Joseph was heralded five years ago as general manager and sales agent for Beverly B. Dobbs, who was then getting the lumber hauled onto a lot near Seattle with which to build a "picter" studio. Before that "Smiling Joe" had been president of the United States—Film Company. No wonder Joe looked serious when he sat for his photo.

FOX TO EXPAND EUROPEAN BUSINESS

Field Carmichael, Former Detroit Manager, Going to Europe to Open New Branch Offices on Continent

TO SUPERVISE the establishment of several new branch offices abroad, made necessary by the growth of the Fox Film Corporation's business in Great Britain and on the Continent, Field Carmichael, for the last two years manager of the Detroit William Fox branch office, will sail next week for London, where he will be the American representative of the Fox Film Corporation in Europe.

The appointment of Mr. Carmichael as foreign representative is the outcome of the amazing popularity of Fox films in Great Britain and elsewhere on the continent. The growth of this popularity has been particularly marked in the last two years, with the result that an extension of the present facilities for handling Fox films in Europe is made necessary.

Although Mr. Carmichael's headquarters will be at 74 Old Compton Street, W. London, his territory will embrace practically all of Europe outside the Central Empires. Fox Films have long been established in Great Britain, where they form the staple fare for motion picture lovers, and in France, and Italy their popularity has been growing with leaps and bounds.

Up to this time the Fox business in France, Spain and Italy has been conducted through agencies, but it is understood to be the intention immediately to establish branch offices in all of these countries. Mr. Carmichael will arrange for such offices in Paris, Madrid, Marseilles, Rome, Venice, Naples and other cities, and inaugurate direct service with Continental exhibitors who are not already receiving it.

William Fox has long appreciated the possibilities for the development of Europe as territory for the extension of his films. In the last two years or more this territory has grown in importance Recently United States Government export bulletins show that from a comparatively few feet of film sent to Europe at the beginning of the war, the film exports of this country have mounted steadily and with amazing rapidity until to-day virtually the only films being shown in Europe are of American origin. It is the general opinion among the trade that this growth will be greatly accelerated as the war goes on, so that when victory comes American films will be impregnably entrenched.

In Great Britain the Fox Film Company, Ltd., already has ten exchanges. These, scattered through England, Ireland and Scotland, were able for a while to care for all the business in the United Kingdom, but the necessity for an extension of booking facilities has been increasingly apparent for some time. This growth in business has several times caused additions to be made to the main office in Old Compton Street, London, until now this office is rapidly approaching the size of the home office in New York City.

The promotion of Mr. Carmichael to the post of European representative is a natural development of his career. He is one of the oldest branch managers, in point of service, in the Fox organization, having been continually with William Fox ever since he opened the Fox branch office in Denver several years ago. Mr. Carmichael's whole life has been devoted to the amusement business in one form or another. Indeed, he began his career when he was twelve years old as a "candy butcher" for the Gentry Brothers dog and pony show. For four years he was press agent for the Sells-Floto circus, and has occupied other responsible positions in the amusement field.

He became affiliated with the film industry seven years ago when he organized a picture concern in Denver. When William Fox opened his Denver office, Mr. Carmichael went with him as a branch manager. He occupied this position for nearly two years, when he was transferred to Los Angeles, as Fox branch manager in that territory. He remained in Los Angeles for two years and made so many friends among exhibitors on the Pacific Coast that when he was notified that he had been transferred to Detroit hundreds of his friends organized a parade and with a brass band escorted him to the departing train.

Under his management, the Fox business in Detroit has grown nearly three times as great as it was when he took charge

Ponce de Leon searched and searched, but he couldn't find the Fountain of Youth. Andrew Waldron, who is appearing in the Universal serial of the big top, "The Lure of the Circus," hasn't even started to look for it. He doesn't have to!

Waldron is going to celebrate his seventy-first birthday, which falls in the latter part of September, by fighting six men from the McGowan company single-handed. Director J. P. McGowan has arranged his work so that the pugilistic encounter will take place on this day.

Despite his years Waldron is credited with being one of the best "stunt men" in the motion picture business, and never balks at such trifles as falls from moving trains, stopping runaway teams or rescuing the heroine from a burning building, if the script calls for such deeds of daring.

Mulhall Back to Paramount.

Jack Mulhall, who will be recalled by Paramount patrons for his work in "Wild Youth," opposite Louise Huff, has been re-engaged by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and will probably support Lila Lee in a forthcoming Paramount film Mulhall has spent several months as one of Universal's leading men.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

Local Showing Precedes Release of "Yellow Dog"

FOLLOWING its "tryout" at the Superba Theatre in Los Angeles, "The Yellow Dog" has been given a final polishing, and will be presented at the Broadway Theatre, New York City, September 29. Believing that this production will have a great bearing upon the suppression of enemy propaganda, it was decided to put the screen version of Henry Irving Dodge's indictment of patriotically deficient Americans to the test of public approval in Los Angeles, where any changes found necessary could be made without delay. The production was received with enthusiasm, and the only changes made were in the matter of "dressing" the titles.

Throughout the United States there are now declared to be over one thousand Anti-Yellow Dog Clubs, with a membership set at over a million, that will be interested in this Jewel production when it is released on November 3. It is expected that the campaign against the spread of Hun-bred rumors will receive added impetus when the effects of yellow dogism are shown upon the screen.

While the Universal Film Company have produced many patriotic films since the war began, "The Yellow Doy" is decidedly different from the Jewel features that have preceded it. It deals with the treacherous phases of the war as it is being secretly fought in America, and is faithful to the printed story.

The story from which this film was adopted is a tale of ordinary people in an average small suburban town without any apparent idealization by the author in depicting the important roles they play in the great war. It brings the war right home, and shows the people in civilian clothes that they too have battles to fight with a branch of the Hun army more dangerous than the German in uniform. Clothed in a strong vein of humor, "The Yellow Doy" points to a double enemy—the secret agent of the Hohenzollerns and the incontinent tongue of the headstrong, thoughtless American.

Tom Mix Begins "The Coming of the Law."

Three stories in a row by the same author is the record just established by Tom Mix, the William Fox cowboy-star. Mix has just begun work at Hollywood on a new picture called "The Coming of the Law." This is an adaptation of a magazine story written by Charles Alden Seltzer. Mr. Seltzer also wrote the story from which "Treat 'Em Rough," the play Mix has just finished at Prescott, Ariz., was made. The third Seltzer story on Mix's list is "Fame and Fortune," which is an adaptation of the novel, "Slow Burgess," which ran in one of the popular magazines.

"The Coming of the Law," which, it is said, furnishes the famous Western star unusual opportunities to display his remarkable ability as a horseman, is being directed by Lynn Reynolds, this being the sixth picture Mr. Reynolds has directed for William Fox. The scenario was written by Dennison Clift. In the cast besides Mix are Jane Novak, who was the star's leading woman in "Treat 'Em Rough"; George Nicholls, Jack Curtis, Sid Jordan, B. M. Turner, Charles Lemoyne, Gordon Marr, Pat Christian, Lewis Sargent and Jack Dill.

Quick Action Output on Advertising Campaign

THE Universal advertising department last week completed what it declares was the biggest piece of advertising work ever done for any motion picture. The material which was prepared will be sent to every exhibitor in the country. It comprises twelve newspaper size pages of layouts and copy for the picture, "Crashing Through to Berlin," a film which is being released by Jewel Productions. The entire task of writing copy, designing the illustrations and the work of making zinc etchings and matrices was all finished in five days.

The campaign consist of two full-page layouts, six half pages, four quarters, seven two-column, one three-column and four single-column advertisements, together with a full-page layout for a newspaper circular. The latter is a reproduction of a front page with a smashing three-line "Banner" news heads and illustrations. This is designed to be distributed as a throwaway, with the name of the local theatre given at the bottom of the page. Also there is a press sheet containing many news stories of sprightly war stuff to promote the "Crashing Through to Berlin" idea.

The Universal believes that this is the first time in the history of the industry that a single campaign of such proportion has been mapped out for one picture. It also believes that never before has such a large sized task of copy and illustration creation been accomplished in such a short time.

Newspaper Scandal in Walsh's "On the Jump"

A FEW days ago the newspapers of the country carried columns of first-page stories announcing the discovery that a large interest was held by Germans in a New York newspaper. Subsequently it developed that the Germans had a $30,000,000 fund for subsidizing American newspapers. Now comes the announcement that this incident has been turned to account in "On the Jump," a William Fox photoplay featuring George Walsh. In this play one Crumely, a wealthy man, in the interest of the Kaiser has bought a newspaper which is a power in his state and is using it to foment a strike in a big munitions plant. Through the alertness and daring of the hero, a reporter on a rival newspaper, played by George Walsh, this scheming pro-German is exposed.

Several striking settings, including a scene on a ship at sea, are features of the production. Mr. Walsh is supported by an exceptionally strong cast, and the action of the play, it is said, has been developed until "On the Jump" is said to be one of the fastest plays that George Walsh has ever enacted.

Crooks and "Crown Jewels."

"Crown Jewels," with Claire Anderson in the lead, has just been completed. It deals with the efforts of crooks who attempt to obtain the possession of the crown of a European monarch who finds that his hold on his throne is very shaky, and sends the crown jewels to America as a financial asset in case revolution should depose him. Miss Anderson portrays the role of a French refugee in America who becomes aware of the criminals' activities and baffles their plans. Joe Bennett, who received very favorable criticisms for his work in "The Golden Fleece," plays the male lead. Others in the cast are Claire Anderson, Lillian Langdon, Geo. Pearce, Billy Musgrave and H. N. Dudgeon.

Priest Will Offer "What Becomes of the Children?"

ROBERT W. PRIEST, president of the Flim Market, Inc., has secured the world rights to the feature photo-drama, "What Becomes of the Children?" written by Corra Beach. This production was made by the Corra Beach Pictures Corporation at Jacksonville, Fla. Miss Beach played the leading female role, and Walter Shumway was co-star in the principal male character. Other leading parts were acted by Morgan Jones, Billy Sullivan, Gladys Dore, Louis Westner and Grace Stevens.

The story, which is told in six reels, is one that will particularly appeal to women because of the timeliness of its subject and its compelling sentimental interest. A couple become estranged through the neglect of the wife by the husband, who is completely absorbed in his business. A divorce follows, and the children, a son and a daughter, are left unguided and unguarded in the formative period of their lives. What becomes of them forms the leading motive of a very sensational plot.

Miss Beach made her stage debut in comic opera, playing the soubrette role in "His Highness, the Bey," produced by the opera stock company at the LaSalle Theatre, Chicago. She played the prima donna role in support of Eva Tanguay in "The Sambo Girl," and succeeded Violet Dale in the title role in "The Girl from Rector's." For several seasons she played in her own playlets in vaudeville with Walter Shumway as co-star.

Mr. Shumway, who has played the lead in several photoplay productions, began his stage career with noted stock companies in Pittsburgh and Cleveland. He is the owner of Grand View Farm at Painesville, Ohio. His hobby is the breeding of Jersey cattle, and he has acted as cattle judge at many agricultural fairs in the Middle West.

Theda Bara Pictures in German Headquarters

THE spectacle of three Theda Bara productions being shown in the German field headquarters in France was afforded when the American troops captured Seringes in the recent counter-offensive in Marne salient, according to a letter just received from the front by the Fox Film Corporation. The pictures were "A Fool There Was," "Under Yoke" and "Cleopatra."

In providing entertainment for the soldiers the American Y. M. C. A. had established dugouts right up behind the front lines. When the Germans launched their offensive last March a number of films which the "Y" had on hand were captured by the advancing Huns. The Huns immediately turned them to their own use, motion picture shows being given for the German officers.

Captured Hun prisoners told the Americans that the Germans were getting a great deal of enjoyment out of the Theda Bara pictures, so when the order to advance on Seringes came the American troops had this in mind. No sooner had they entered the village than they began a systematic search for the captured Bara films, and last found them in the headquarters of the commanding German general.

In celebration of the victory and the recovery of the films the Americans immediately staged a motion picture show and ran off one Bara film after the other. The sight of an American actress, says the letter, stirred the American boys to great enthusiasm, and they cheered Miss Bara until they were hoarse. It is natural to believe that a motion picture show never received such greeting as this one did.

When Eddie Polo Stretched Hemp.

Eddie Polo came near crossing the great divide during the filming of a recent episode of "The Lure of the Circus," in which he overestimated the strength of his neck muscles. He was supposed to be hanged, and insisted to Director J. P. McGowan that he be actually suspended with the rope tight around his neck in order to get all realism possible out of the scene. McGowan assented, and Eddie was strung up. His neck muscles refused to hold, and the rope nearly strangled him. He was cut down and revived to consciousness in a few moments.

"Seeing New York" in Two Metros.

Old Trinity Churchyard is one of the interesting "flashes" of New York City to be seen in "Five Thousand an Hour," Metro's first vehicle for Hale Hamilton as an individual star. "Five Thousand an Hour" is a picture version of George Randolph Chester. Ralph W. Ince has directed the feature production, which June Mathis has adapted from the book published by Bobbs, Merrill & Co.

Trinity Church and churchyard were photographed from the offices of Harriman & Co., who allowed Cameraman William Black and Assistant Director W. W. Cohill to set up their equipment and "shoot" the scene from their windows. The exact location occupied by their offices had been the one chosen by the author for the financial enterprise of his hero, Johnny Gamble, played by Mr. Hamilton.

On the same day that the view of Trinity Churchyard was photographed another Broadway scene, further uptown, was being taken in connection with Viola Dana's forthcoming picturization of Alexine Hoyland's story, "Oh, Annice!" Cameraman John Arnold set up his tripod in Madison Square and took a few pictures of the Flatiron Building.

Norma Talmadge Finishes "The Forbidden City"

NORMA TALMADGE'S pretentious Chinese production, "The Forbidden City," which, according to all advance reports, will create a sensation when released, has just been finished, and is now being cut by Director Sidney A. Franklin. It will be ready for the screens in two or three weeks. Aside from affording Miss Talmadge an opportunity to play a Chinese character for the first time, "The Forbidden City" is a remarkable picture in every particular. Its production is the result of weeks of research by Chinese experts, and is by far the most magnificent ever offered as background in a Talmadge picture. The story by George Scarborough was secured by the Norma Talmadge Film Corporation only after spirited bidding against other producing concerns, as it is conceded to be one of the strongest ever written for the screen, and there was a scramble for it the moment it went on the market. Miss Talmadge's support is the best she has ever had, including Thomas Meighan, her new leading man; A. E. Warren, Rogers Lytton, M. W. Rale, Reed Hamilton and a number of famous Chinese actors whose adaptability for screen work will be admirably demonstrated in "The Forbidden City."

Former Newspaper Critics Pass Judgment on Films

FRANK LAWRENCE, veteran film editor of the Universal, has organized a congress of dramatic critics to sit with him in the projection room as each production is run in order to get the viewpoint of the men who have reviewed dramas and picture plays for the press. The former critics are all employed by Universal in various capacities, but sit en banc on each production before it is shipped to New York.

Among them are Waldemar Young, for many years dramatic editor of the San Francisco Examiner; Harvey Gates, formerly critic of the Dramatic Mirror; Bernard McConville, formerly of the Los Angeles Times; Gardner Bradford, former critic of the Los Angeles Times; William E. Wing and Paul Powell, who used to review for the Los Angeles Express, and Ham Beall, former dramatic critic of the Los Angeles News and one time editor of the Rounder, a Pacific Coast theatrical journal. Each former critic writes a two-hundred word review of the picture, which is turned in to Lawrence. Then Lawrence, the director, and the author read over the criticisms and make any valuable improvements that may be suggested.

Posters for "The Border Raiders."

For the exploitation of "The Border Raiders," the first of the Pathe program feature releases starring George Larkin and Betty Compson, an unusually attractive poster display has been prepared—one, three and six sheets, set 11x14 photographs, cuts and slides, all of which show the high spots of this swiftly moving drama of the West written by Frank Beresford and directed by Stuart Paton.

Actor Reads Novels to Get Right Idea

IN preparing for his work in "Three Mounted Men," the Universal special attraction, which is released October 7, Harry Carey read a lot of famous literature. He brought his mind to focus on a particular emotional angle that rarely occurs in real life, but of which the musty novels offer many examples.

The twist was that of a man suddenly receiving a pardon after long confinement in a solitary cell. There was some misgiving in the player's mind that such a piece of fate possessed realism enough to get over on the screen. These fears vanished when he found that fiction is full of such occurrences and that prison records contain many of them.

It was disclosed that Frank Stielow, a condemned prisoner in the death house at Sing Sing, was pardoned by a telephone within a half hour of the time set for his electrocution. Then Carey found dozens of other instances.

He read that in the old days the prison officials had a physician on hand to let the prisoner's blood before telling him of his sudden good fortune in order to prevent his death from the sudden joy of the shock. In "Three Mounted Men," Carey, as Cheyenne Harry, receives a pardon and the order to go out and get the man who caused his imprisonment. He captures the man, then is confronted by the necessity of rescuing him from the same officials to whom he has surrendered the captive.

Nazimova to New England Coast for Marine Scenes

MME. NAZIMOVA and twenty-five members of her company in "'Ception Shoals," the Nazimova superfeature now in process of production at the Metro studio, have gone to the Massachusetts coast to take important scenes in the play, which is a picture version of the H. Austin Adams drama, originally done on the speaking stage by the same actress. Mme. Nazimova will be presented in this seven-act picture by Richard A. Rowland and Maxwell Karger.

The party included the star, her director, Albert Capellani; his associate, Henry Kolker; assistant, Robert E. Stevens; technical director, Henri Menessier; leading man, Charles Bryant, and other players, including Henry Harmon, Tom Blake, Nancy Palmer, Marie Grant, Charles A. Smiley, Ada Scovill, J. O'Connor, T. Morse Koupal, William Jeffrey, Amelia Burleon, Harry Weiss. Lydia Wellmore, the boss cameraman; Eugene Gaudio, assistant cameraman; William Tuers, photographer; Eugene Morin, property man; Charles Devens, and a working crew, consisting of Daniel Carey, Charles Quinlan, Louis Onzevrdo and Frank Kirshner.

"'Ception Shoals" is first and foremost a drama of the sea and seafaring people, and most of its scenes are coast scenes. The action centers around the lighthouse tended by old Job Coffin (played by Henry Harmon). The Government has consented to the use of one of the coast lighthouses, with certain restrictions and stipulations, and the conditions will be rigidly adhered to by the Nazimova organization. David M. Thompson, Metro's expert on Government matters, made a specal trip to Washington for the purpose of obtaining permission for the use of the lighthouse. A real revolving lens, used to warn vessels of dangerous reefs, will be "shot" in action.

Mme. Nazimova plays two characters in "'Ception Shoals," and the lighthouse is the home of both. She first appears as Faith, the young mother, and then as Eve, who is orphaned when a tiny baby and brought up ignorant of life and its mysteries by her crabbed old uncle, Job Coffin. The lighthouse plays a vital part in the lives of both, for the young mother leaps from its top and meets her death, and the daughter, to escape its dreary confines, swims three miles out to sea to the yacht of Captain Blake, the character played by Charles Bryant.

The star has been practicing swimming at her country home at Port Chester, N. Y., and while the purposes of the picture would scarcely require that she actually swim the whole three miles, Director Capellani promises that there will be some genuinely dramatic "shots" of her battling with the waves. Mme. Nazimova looks forward to the adventure with pleasure.

A foggy day at sea is one of the photographic effects which Eugene Gaudio, boss cameraman, will record in connection with the Nazimova production. Some of the most important action in "'Ception Shoals" takes place on just such a day, when the dense pall refuses to lift.

Another striking effect which the Nazimova feature will contain will be the washing ashore of wreckage at night, with the waves riding high and the moon coming out from behind racks of wind-torn clouds. As this effect is necessary for the production, the company will wait until the weather is right before taking this scene. "Billy" Tuers will operate a second camera, as two sets of scenes will be taken simultaneously, to do the work on "'Ception Shoals" as quickly as possible in order to begin the production of the next Nazimova superfeature, "The Red Lantern."

Headquarters of the Nazimova working organization are for the time being removed to a small town on the Massachusetts coast, and within a radius of a few miles from this town all the sea scenes of "'Ception Shoals" will be photographed.

Lytell Starts Work on "The Spender."

Bert Lytell has started work on "The Spender," his sixth picture as a Metro star, at Metro's West Coast studios in Hollywood. "The Spender" is from Frederick Orin Bartlett's original story which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, and was adapted for the screen by George D. Baker, Metro's Western manager of production, and Albert G. Kenyon, of the scenario staff.

In accord with the war-time craving for cheerful stories, "The Spender" is wholesome comedy. Its chief purpose is to add to the gayety of audiences. It recounts the adventures of young Dick Bisbee, nephew of old "Tightwad" Bisbee, septuagenarian boss of the Bisbee Tanneries and a millionaire. Dick is "fired" when he propounds the revolutionary theory to his uncle that it is more blessed to spend than to hoard.

Clara Morris will play opposite Lytell in the role of Helen Stetson. The cast also includes Thomas Jefferson, son of the late Joseph Jefferson, as old man Bisbee; William V. Mong, and Clarence Burton. Charles Swickard is directing, with Robert B. Kurrle operating the camera.

Marion Davies in "The Belle of New York."

Bought at a price which is said to break all records, and in face of the most spirited competition ever known for screen rights, that most famous of all musical comedies, "The Belle of New York," has been secured for Marion Davies. The world renowned Casino success will furnish Miss Davies' next Select picture. It was first produced on September 28, 1897, at the Casino Theatre, New York, where it ran for two solid years. Following this engagement the original cast was taken to the Shaftesbury Theatre, London, where it ran for another year.

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY OCTOBER LINE

Imposing List of Features Introducing Caruso, Peat, Dorothy Gish and Washburn—Billie Burke Also Comes Back

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has just completed its schedule of releases for October, presenting a pretentious line-up of big box office attractions. Four new celebrities will make their first appearance as Paramount and Artcraft stars next month. They are Enrico Caruso, the famous opera star, Harold R. Peat, the well known soldier-author, better known as "Private Peat"; Dorothy Gish, prominently identified with D. W. Griffith productions, and Bryant Washburn, the popular screen idol. Others who will be seen in new Paramount and Artcraft pictures are William S. Hart, Wallace Reid, Enid Bennett, Lila Lee, Billie Burke, Ethel Clayton, Pauline Frederick and Vivian Martin.

S Hart on October 6.

The initial films of the month scheduled for October 6 release are William S. Hart in "The Border Wireless," Wallace Reid in "The Man from Funeral Range," and Dorothy Gish in her initial Paramount vehicle, "Battling Jane."

Wallace Reid's new Paramount picture was taken from the story by W. E. Wilkes, scenario by Monte Katterjohn, and produced under the direction of Walter Edwards. Ann Little again plays the leading feminine part opposite the star, who appears in the role of a mining prospector. The film is said to be replete with thrills and dramatic action, presenting on the whole one of Mr. Reid's most successful vehicles.

"Battling Jane," which serves as Dorothy Gish's introduction as a Paramount star, was written by Arnold Bernot and directed by Elmer Clifton. The story is one of deep heart interest, and allows Miss Gish particular opportunity to assert her talents.

"Private Peat" Appears October 13.

October 13 marks the release of the big Paramount-Artcraft special, "Private Peat," Enid Bennett in the Ince production, "When Do We Eat?" and Lila Lee in "Such a Little Pirate." Enid Bennett's new vehicle, produced by Fred Niblo under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince, portrays a story of a barn-storming actress who is stranded in a small town, evades the sheriff, and finds much excitement generally in a rural community. Al Ray plays the lead to the star.

As the second Paramount-Artcraft special of the year, Adolph Zukor presents "Private Peat," a photodrama based on Peat's own book and produced by arrangement with the Bobbs-Merrill Company, publishers. The scenario was prepared by Charles Whittaker, and Edward Jose, the noted French producer, staged the film.

Lila Lee's second Paramount picture, "Such a Little Pirate," was adapted by Monte M. Katterjohn from the story by James Oliver Curwood. The film offers a comedy-drama, with comedy predominant, but maintaining a romantic and whimsical atmosphere, together with the spirit of adventure. A notable characterization is said to be presented in this film by Theodore Roberts as the old "salt," Harrison Ford being entrusted with the lead to the star.

Caruso on October 20.

Enrico Caruson, in "My Cousin," makes his bow as an Artcraft star on October 20, the Paramount releases for this date being Billie Burke in "The Make-Believe Wife" and Bryant Washburn in "The Gypsy Trail," the last mentioned serving as Mr. Washburn's first Paramount vehicle.

"My Cousin," it is promised, will afford a great surprise to those skeptics who have never seen Caruso act. In this photoplay the famous star of the opera portrays two parts. The producers are highly enthusiastic over this photoplay, and predict a wonderful success for the popular Caruso as a film star. Carolina White, also of opera fame, makes her first appearance on the screen in this picture opposite the star. Edward Jose staged this film, an original story specially written for Caruso by Margaret Turnbull.

By arrangement with F. Ziegfeld, Jr., Billie Burke again appears under the Paramount banner. "The Make-Believe Wife" is from the story by Edward Childs Carpenter, scenario by Adrian Gil-Spear, and staged under the direction of John S. Robertson. David Powell plays the chief supporting role to the star.

Bryant Washburn's first appearance as a Paramount star in "The Gypsy Trail," the popular stage hit, it is felt, will give this well known favorite an auspicious start. The story by Robert Housum was adapted to the screen by Julia Crawford Ivers and staged under the direction of Walter Edwards. Wanda Hawley is leading lady.

Vivian Martin in "Mirandy Smiles" Oct. 27.

The last releases of the month on October 27 are Ethel Clayton in "Women's Weapons," Pauline Frederick in "A Daughter of the Old South" and Vivian Martin in "Mirandy Smiles."

Ethel Clayton's second Paramount vehicle, "Women's Weapons," is a novel subject by Beulah Marie Dix. Robert G. Vignola directed the photoplay, and Elliott Dexter appears opposite the star in the leading support.

In "A Daughter of the Old South," Pauline Frederick appears as a young and beautiful Creole girl. The story is by Alicia Ramsay and Rudolph de Cordova, scenario by Margaret Turnbull and direction by Emile Chautard, who is responsible for various recent Paramount screen triumphs.

Vivian Martin plays the role of a little scrub-girl in a small town "opry" house in "Mirandy Smiles," her newest Paramount picture. The story contains much heart interest material, together with a quaint humor that makes it a delightful vehicle for the charming little Paramount star. Edith Kennedy is responsible for the scenario, and William C. DeMille for the direction. Douglas MacLean plays the chief supporting part.

Hutchinson Enthusiastic Over Success of Stars

THE almost simultaneous appearance of new productions by the American Film Company, featuring their three stars, Fisher, Minter and Russell, has met an unprecedented reception from the exhibitors all over the country, is the word that comes from the American Film Company. Russell is better than ever; Margarita Fisher has perhaps never had a better vehicle than "Money Isn't Everything," and Miss Minter in "The Eyes of Julia Deep" has been given wider latitude and has risen to a higher altitude than ever before. From two-day to four-week runs have been booked by the leading theatres on both coasts and in the big central cities, and among the big circuits that have signed up for these new subjects are Marcus Loew, Turner & Dahnkin, Goebel, Ruben and Finkelstein, and other leading exhibitors of discernment and business insight.

"Without exaggeration," says President S. S. Hutchinson, "the Russell picture, 'Hobbs in a Hurry' comes as close as any picture to filling the requirements of a mixed audience. There is a good story, plenty of light comedy, an abundance of athletics, and not one of the great stunts in the story seem to be forced or illogical to the narrative.

"In 'Money Isn't Everything,' Miss Fisher is especially brilliant, and as soon as the projector begins to turn in the Minter subject, 'The Eyes of Julia Deep,' the onlooker knows that he is going to see an unusually interesting and entertaining screen performance.

"'Rosemary Climbs the Heights,' the second Minter subject, is a corking yarn, with both the spiritual and physical mastery of this young actress manifested to a high degree.

"Following these four subjects, Russell is coming out in a picture called 'All the World to Nothing,' the story of a super-friend, the suffering of super-man, where heart-stirring drama premeates throughout the picture, which superficially appears to be a comedy.

"Despite his all-pervading vivacity, Russell recreates the humane being on the screen, as he stands by the side of his dead pal to whose rank he has been reduced from a life of affluence and wealth. The American Film Company's pictures are improving in the same ratio as the public grows hypercritical."

There's Reason for May Allison's Trousers

MAY ALLISON wears trousers in "Kate of Kentucky," her newest Metro production, which is nearing completion at Metro's West Coast studios. Miss Allison wears 'em for a short while only, and has a worthy motive for doing so—to save her sweetheart from tar and feathers at the hands of some Kentucky moonshiners.

That is the only way that Kate Kendall (played by Miss Allison) can gain access to the secret conclaves of the mountain clansmen. So she impersonates one of them, and at the critical moment is able to turn their attention from her sweetheart to a wild scramble to save their own skins. Hence the trousers on Miss Allison.

This is one of the many amusing incidents in "Kate of Kentucky," which is an original melodrama of blue grass and white lights, written and adapted by George D. Baker and Tom J. Geraghty. The newest Allison vehicle promises to be sumptuous in lovely natural settings. It abounds in exteriors for which some of the most noted beauty spots of southern California were used as locations. These included the rugged woodlands in the heart of Topango Canyon, near Santa Monica, and the magnificent peaks of the San Bernardino Mountains, at Pine Crest, where the Allison company spent more than a week, getting some superb "shots."

Robert T. Thornby, recently of the Fox forces, is Miss Allison's director, and her camera man is William L. Fildew.

October O. Henry Subjects.

The October program of Broadway Star Features produced by the Vitagraph Company for distribution by General Film Company contains two O. Henry Stories and two Alfred Henry Lewis Wolfville Tales. The release dates are October 5, "The Rose of Wolfville"; October 12, "A Ramble in Aphasia" (O. Henry); October 19, "The Canyon Hold-Up" (Wolfville), and October 26, "The Ghost of a Chance" (O. Henry).

The featured players in the O. Henry Stories are Edward Earle and Agnes Ayres, while Patricia Palmer, the little Western ingenue, is again the lead in the Wolfville subjects. The clever characterizations required to interpret the whimsical plots of both the noted short story authors are thoroughly taken care of by excellent casts and some of the most successful of directors.

Hollander Represents American.

William H. Hollander, formerly president of the Brooklyn Exhibitors' League, now first vice-president of the old Post Office Theatre, accepted a new position as Brooklyn representative for the American Film Company, which is releasing Mary Miles Minter, Margarita Fisher and William Russel features through the Pathe Exchange, Inc. Mr. Hollander is closing up the majority of better class theatres throughout Brooklyn and is making a splendid representation for the American Film Co. in his territory.

Rosemary Thebe in Emotion Roles.

The first showing of Rosemary Thebe's picture, "Love's Pay Day," at the Triangle exhibition room demonstrated that this talented actress can portray emotional roles with more than ordinary success. It was at the earnest solicitation of her director in this picture, E. Mason Hopper, that Miss Thebe came to play the leading role in this production of Newfoundland fisher folk. With consummate skill she enacts the role of a simple fisher girl whose heart hungers for the gay life of the big city. E. Mason Hopper introduced some delightful touches in this production. The calm life of the fisher folk, the narrow streets with the boarded shacks, the unique types and unusual scenic effects all show the results of careful planning. The story is very spirited.

Clever Poster Scheme on "Lafayette, We Come"

SECRETARY-TREASURER William J. Clark of the Affiliated Distributors Corporation lately arrived in New York from Grand Rapids, Mich. The final details in connection with the deal with the Mutual Film Corporation, whereby the latter has been given the shipping contract and the physical distribution of Affiliated productions, have all been justified and ironed out.

During Mr. Clark's stay in the New York office of the Affiliated, contracts for the purchase of a number of productions to be released immediately following "Lafayette, We Come!" will be closed. Immediate release of "Lafayette, We Come!" to the first run houses is contemplated.

Included in the list of accessories for this feature is an item that may be uniquely applied toward advertising the production. Exhibitors will be furnished with a highly decorated pictorial one-sheet mentioning the title without any reference to the production whatsoever.

These one-sheets may be used by the exhibitor in conjunction with any national or local patriotic movement, and will afford the exhibitor an opportunity to post on spaces ordinarily barred to motion picture advertising. In this way the exhibitor can conduct a teaser campaign prior to his actual announcement of his securing the production. This stunt has proved itself in New York City when the Affiliated home office issued bulletins which were posted on the subway kiosks and entrances, and were also adopted by the American and French aviators and posted on Lafayette Day.

Carmel Myers' Next Bluebird.

"The Beautiful Mongrel" is the title of Carmel Myers' next play, which will be put into immediate production under the direction of Paul Powell at the Bluebird studios. Miss Myers has been enjoying a brief vacation after completing "One Bright Idea," also made under Powell's direction. M. Rodolpho de Valentina is again to be her leading man.

Interesting Pathe Subjects for Week of September 29

PATHE'S program for the week of September 29 presents Ruth Roland in the seventh episode of the swift-moving Western serial, "Hands Up." It is called "Tossed Into the Torrent," and the spectator is sure to marvel at the chances a popular serial star takes from time to time so that the story shall "go over." In this episode the heroine is thrown from a high embankment into the waters of a giant flume many feet below. Later she is in a runaway stage coach, which is wrecked in crossing a mountain stream, but emerges uninjured only to fall into the power of the Inca Regent.

Helene Chadwick is seen to advantage in a two-reel comedy-drama called "'Get-away' Kate." It was produced by Astra, and it is a brisk-moving story marked by sympathetic touches which are sure to gain the star many new friends.

Harold Lloyd, who is in the third-speed of popularity, is shown in a farce entitled "Swing Your Partner." That fairly explains it, for it has so much swing that, at some time or other, each of the comedians is up in the air. Harold's strenuous hilarious comedy is far better than his trick of punning, when he says, "I am just Rolin along."

The Poster Travel Picture, "St. Kitts—Mother Colony," has a timely interest now that we are at war and are harking back into history, for this spot in the West Indies is intimately related to subsequent events in this country. St. Kitts and its dependency, Nevis, which are separated by a strait only two miles in width, have been associated with English names that have figured prominently in American and English annals. In the latter island the American stateman, Alexander Hamilton, was born, and here the great seaman, Lord Nelson, met and married the charming Widow Nesbit. St. Kitts is honored as being the mother of the British colonies in the West Indies, and, in the early years of its history, was the centre of many conflicts between the French and English. Brimstone Hill still contains the ruins of what once was one of the greatest fortresses of the world, and today the ruins of this ancient citadel form one of the most interesting sights in the West Indies.

The Official War Review No. 14, released by Pathe the week beginning September 29, shows as one of its high points of interest "Ypres of Today"—the point that has figured so much in the news—the spot where the tide of battle has swirled back and forth, and where thousands of Britain's heroes have bravely fought and died. It is an impressive view, and one sees the fighting men of the Allies as they cooly wait to stand the shock of the Hun assault, and others grimly awaiting the signal to advance. To see the repair men, unperturbed by gun fire and deftly doing their work as cooly as if they were in shops at home, fills the beholder with admiration, and shows him what a thoroughgoing proposition the business of war is—the war whose sweep leads you, comfortably seated, through the ruins of France, where the Hun has left his trail.

In this group of pictures is also shown the Americans who have left home and office to live in trench and camp that a world ideal may be obtained; President Poincare, with General Humbert, bestowing rewards on brave, determined men; Italy's heroes battling in the mountain fastnesses, and the most remarkable picture of men, grouped in giant letters, ever shown on the screen taken at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, where thousands of eager Jackies united in a monster spectacular tribute to a brave Ally. Each week brings additional bookings of the Official War Review, and the Pathe purpose does not seem far from realization that soon it will be shown in every theatre and moving picture house in the country.

Famous Stage Name Gets Into Pictures

CLARA MORRIS has been engaged by George D. Baker, Metro's western manager of productions, to play opposite Bert Lytell in "The Spender," the young star's next picture. "The Spender," adapted by Baker and A. G. Kenyon from the Saturday Evening Post story by Frederick Orin Bartlett, will be Lytell's sixth starring vehicle produced on the West Coast. Miss Morris, despite her name, is not related to the Clara Morris of stage fame.

She is a Western girl who at the age of nineteen has already served an apprenticeship of three years in motion pictures. Miss Morris but recently entered the charmed circle of leading woman. Her rise was due as much to sheer hard work as to her striking beauty. She is an adept horsewoman and dancer.

Before going into motion pictures Miss Morris was a fashion model for an exclusive Los Angeles modiste. She recently did minor acting parts in "No Man's Land," with Bert Lytell, and "The Return of Mary," with May Allison. Her work on these occasions made an impression and she was engaged to play opposite Lytell immediately after she had finished a lead at Triangle.

David Wark Griffith gave Miss Morris her start in pictures.

Burlesque Queens as Strike Breakers.

"The Strike Breakers" is the title of the comedy Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran have lately completed. Eddie and Lee are henpecked husbands. Their wives decide to strike and live at the club and the husbands send for housekeepers. A burlesque show has become stranded and two "queens" are employed as strike breakers. The only clothes they have are their costumes.

"The Law of the North." "A Woman of Impulse." "Sleuths."

"Wilson or the Kaiser" a Forthcoming Screen Classic

PRELIMINARY scenes have already been photographed in connection with "Wilson or the Kaiser?" Screen Classics, Inc.'s next propaganda picture. The work will be placed in immediate production under the direction of Charles Miller at the Metro Studio. Maxwell Karger is the author of "Wilson or the Kaiser?" which has been scenariozed by Albert Shelby Le Vino, and the picture will be specially released and distributed by Metro.

"Wilson or the Kaiser?" is unique in that it will deal not only with the world struggle, but with the work of reconstruction and restoration. As the title would indicate, both President Wilson and Wilhelm of Hohenzollern are represented in the picture, the ideals of both being strongly contrasted, but the hero of the romantic drama around which the story centers will be a young Alsatian, who is forced at the outbreak of the war to fight for Germany.

Creighton Hale has been engaged to play the leads. Mr. Hale recently played opposite Emmy Wehlen in "His Bonded Wife," which will have early release. He was one of the first players ever engaged by Metro, appearing in the cast of the firm's second feature production, "The Three of Us," a screen version of the play.

Mr. Hale's ability as an aviator will be called into requisition in "Wilson or the Kaiser?" The player-aviator can overhaul and repair an aeroplane, as well as fly it. He is a member of the Aero Club of America.

Salient events in the world-war will be reproduced. In the Sarajeco assassination scene great pains have been taken to depict events faithfully. An Alsatian village will be reproduced in the picture, and the buildings will be erected under the supervision of Technical Director E. J. Shulter, only to be bombed and destroyed.

Charles Miller, into whose hands the producers have placed the direction of "Wilson or the Kaiser?" is rated among the ablest men in the industry. Associated with Mr. Miller in the production of "Wilson or the Kaiser?" will be Leander de Cordova and Edward Lawrence. George K. Hollister, who photographed "To Hell With the Kaiser," has been chosen as the boss cameraman. All scenes directly connected with trench warfare and conditions at the front will be supervised by a military adviser.

The martyrdom of Edith Cavell will be included among the scenes of "Wilson or the Kaiser?" The actress chosen to impersonate the brave Englishwoman is Margaret Aston James, who has been selected especially for her resemblance to Nurse Cavell. Miss James has been seen in a number of photodramas, but this will be her Metro debut. Charles Edwards plays Rev. Joseph Wilson, the father of the President. Mr. Edwards will also be seen in Hale Hamilton's forthcoming Metro starring vehicle, "Five Thousand an Hour."

Maggie Weston has been selected to play the part of the Empress, mother of the Kaiser, who was an Englishwoman by birth. An odd coincidence is that Miss Weston was born opposite Buckingham Palace. When the Queen Mother, Alexandra, was Princess of Wales, Miss Weston's mother was overseer of Marlborough House, and as a child Maggie Weston had the happy distinction of frequently being picked up and patted by the Princess herself.

Tank "Britannia" in Blackton Film.

A notable feature of J. Stuart Blackton's "The Common Cause," the eight-part special he is now completing for release next month through the Vitagraph Company's distributing organization, is the appearance therein of the famous British tank, "Britannia."

Through the co-operation of the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission, under whose auspices "The Common Cause" is being produced, Commodore Blackton was given the privilege of not only filming the "Britannia" alone in action for several scenes, but also using it in various trench scenes in which Allied soldiers are seen going "over the top," preceded by this invincible instrument of modern warfare. Other scenes show the "Britannia" near by with her ever-ready crew, while Herbert Rawlinson as "Captain Palmer," leads a graphic attack on an enemy trench which nets a few typical prisoners of war. Captain Richard Haig of the British Army, who was in service with the "Britannia" "over there" and his able crew, operated the famous tank, while Commodore Blackton filmed these scenes.

Belasco Player Makes His Screen Debut.

Gilbert Douglas will make his screen debut in "Five Thousand An Hour," the forthcoming Metro production, which will introduce Hale Hamilton as an individual star. Mr. Douglas has the part of the arch-villain, Paul Gresham, who makes it his special business to try to ruin Johnny Gamble (Mr. Hamilton) financially.

For the past two years Mr. Douglas has been playing the part of Preston De Witt in David Belasco's production, "The Boomerang." Preston De Witt, also, is a sort of "villain" part.

Poster Display for "Wolves of Kultur."

On the billboards of hundreds of towns of from only two or three thousand population up, the twenty-four sheet of "Wolves of Kultur" is now being posted. It is believed that the billboard campaign on this serial will reach more persons than any previous motion picture advertising.

Nor are the larger cities neglected. The campaign has been so planned that a traveler starting from the state of Maine on a trip to the coast, whether by train or automobile, wherever he goes, could never be far from a twenty-four sheet of "Wolves of Kultur," at any time, North, South, East and West, is literally being plastered with the paper on this serial. Certain cities, also, have been singled out for newspaper advertising.

That this extensive advertising is having its effect is evidenced by the advance bookings. They are most encouraging despite the fact that the record-breaking "Hands Up" has virtually only just started and the release date of "Wolves of Kultur" is still several weeks off—October 13.

Film Star Really Aids Red Cross.

Every time Monroe Salisbury goes on location it means a substantial donation for "the greatest mother in the world." When Salisbury and his company were at Huntington Lake for scenes in "That Devil, 'Bateese,'" the Bluebird players, headed by Monroe the Magnificent, staged a show for the Red Cross and raised $200. Salisbury beat that record by $100 on his recent trip to Bear Valley for the final scenes of "Hugon, the Mighty."

At the benefit Salisbury read palms; Margery Bennett, his leading woman, sang; George Holt recited, and the property man and the stage carpenter staged a wrestling match. In addition Chief Dark Cloud and White Eagle and some lesser Redskin lights staged a real-honest-to-goodness war dance, feathers, tomahawks and everything.

Ruth Clifford's Next "The Lure of Luxury"

"THE LURE OF LUXURY," the Bluebird feature formerly entitled "The Bargain True," featuring Ruth Clifford, has been definitely scheduled for release October 7. The picture was adapted by Fred Myton from a story by Nalbro Bartley that appeared recently in the Saturday Evening Post. It was directed by Elsie Jane Wilson.

Miss Clifford plays the role of Dale Aldis, a convent bred girl, who has been left alone in the world by her mother, with romance and mystery surrounding the latter's memory. When Dale leaves the convent to take up her home at World's End, her mother's estate, she finds that a barrier of suspicion and unfriendliness has been raised among the townspeople by the snobbish conduct of the family servants, and the aloofness of Mirza Aldis, the mother now long dead.

Dale falls in love with John Coventry, a country youth, who has proved virtually her only friend. Philip Leswing, a wealthy friend of Lord Aldis, the girl's father, strives to ween Dale from this love and win her for himself by dazzling the girl with the lure of luxury. This provides interesting situations.

Alice Brady Week in Greater New York.

Alice Brady, the famous Select Pictures star, whose brilliant work on the stage and screen has placed her among the nation's foremost screen celebrities, will become a modern Arabian Nights Genii for the coming week. Almost continuously during the entire week Miss Brady will appear in more than a score of places, all at the same time, in different costumes and in different roles.

During the entire week, as usual, Miss Brady will appear in her new stage starring vehicle, "Forever After," at the Central Theatre. At the same time her three Select attractions, "The Ordeal of Rosetta," "The Whirlpool" and "The Death Dance" will be shown almost continuously in more than thirty theatres in New York and its suburbs. The above named photoplays preceded Miss Brady's latest Select picture, "The Better Half," which is now being distributed throughout the country.

Film Star Fattens Her Cook Book.

Mary MacLaren, always anxious to help exhibitors showing her pictures make a success of them, staged a novel stunt in connection with the showing of "Bread," her latest Universal special attraction, when it was shown at the Symphony Theatre, Los Angeles, recently. She offered a prize for the best recipe for Victory Bread, and presented the gift in person to the housewife who sent in the formula for the most wheatless loaf.

The contest created much comment, and the house was jammed on a "lightless" Tuesday night when "the American beauty of the screen" made the presentation. More than 500 recipes were turned in by Los Angeles cooks, the chef of the Hotel Alexandria, Los Angeles' largest hostelry, even turning in a formula.

Clear the Track for "Hoosier Romance."

Excellent reports from exhibitors are coming in to Mutual on "A Hoosier Romance," the Selig production released through the Mutual exchanges August 18, featuring Colleen Moore, Thomas Jefferson and Harry McCoy.

A. S. Kirkpatrick, assistant general manager of Mutual, received the following telegram from the Star Theatre, Portland, Ore.:

"'A Hoosier Romance' opened at the Star Theatre for week's run September 14, with crowds packed to the car track all day Saturday and Sunday, and from the looks of the way they eat it up the 'Hoosier Romance' will keep them on the car track all week."

Billie Burke in "Good Gracious, Annabel."

The screen rights to Clara Kummer's play, "Good Gracious, Annabel," have been purchased by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and it will be used as Billie Burke's next Paramount starring vehicle following "The Make-Believe Wife," which Miss Burke recently completed at the Fort Lee studio.

Metro Director Works on Three Productions at Once

ALBERT CAPELLANI, who is directing Mme. Nazimova in the Screen Classic productions presented by Richard A. Rowland and Maxwell Karger, is probably the busiest director in the industry at the present time, for he is doing three separate and distinct things.

He is engaged in cutting and assembling the film of Nazimova's recently completed production, "Eye for Eye," a picturization of the three-act play "L'Occident," by the Belgian dramatist, Henry Kistemaeckers; directing Nazimova and her company in the screen version of her recent stage success, "'Ception Shoals," by H. Austin Adams, and preparing his scenario for his next production, "The Red Lantern," the novel by Edith Wherry, published by The Bodley Head. In addition Mr. Capellani recently directed the star in the Liberty Loan picture, "A Woman of France," written by herself, one of Metro's four contributions to the Fourth Loan campaign.

This program of activitles could not have been accomplished except by means of the most rigid system and perfect co-operation on the part of the star. Mr. Capellani speaks in the highest terms of the players with whom he is associated, and declares that never since his arrival in America has he enjoyed such happy co-operation as at the Metro studio.

The daylight hours Mr. Capellani has been giving to the actual camera work in connection with "'Ception Shoals." Before the rest of his company reports for duty in the morning, and during the lunch period, the director busies himself in the cutting of "Eye for Eye," and after his duties on these two productions are finished for the day he devotes the evening to the script of "The Red Lantern." To produce the Liberty Loan picture he and Mme. Nazimova, together with their working staff, and such whole-hearted players as Frank Currier, Tom Blake and others, took two days off to devote to this patriotic service. Star and director, with their entire producing force, expect to leave as soon as scenes of "'Ception Shoals" are completed on the Atlantic coast, for California, where "The Red Lantern" will be produced. In this production Mme. Nazimova will play the part of the Eurasian girl, Mahlee, in whose veins are united the conflicting elements of European and Asiatic civilizations.

Transforming Theatre Into Tea-Garden.

The Strand Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., has decided to make a special house display in connection with the showing of "His Birthright," the first Haworth production starring the Japanese actor, Sessue Hayakawa, released through Mutual exchanges. Manager Gelrup has booked "His Birthright" for four days, September 29, 30, October 1 and 2.

The interior of the theatre will be decorated in genuine Japanese style, while the stage and orchestra pit will be banked with potted plants and flowers, the entire effect being a realistic replica in Oriental splendor of a Japanese tea-garden. The girl ushers will be garbed as Geisha girls, while a selected chorus of Japanese girls will sing selections from "Madame Butterfly." The special musical setting made by Mutual for "His Birthright" will be rendered by the orchestra.

First Vangie Valentine Feature in Production

Harold J. Binney, who is presenting as well as personally directing Vangie Valentine in a series of eight strong feature comedy-dramas, all of which will be released in the coming twelve months by the William L. Sherry Service, announces that work on the first of the series has been started and that the picture is scheduled for release November 4. The story is from an original writing by George Edwardes Hall, who also prepared the scenario. Mr. Hall is one of the best known photoplay writers in the field today because of his many great successes while associated with Herbert Brenon for whom he prepared, either the original story or the working continuity, practically everything that Mr. Brennon ever did. He predicts that the Vangie Valentine pictures are going over with a big "Bang" because he feels that with her great beauty and talent and with Mr. Binney's direction, nothing is left to be desired, but good stories and a good cast to support the star. As Mr. Binney has entrusted the latter two items to Mr. Hall's selection there is no question, but what the very best obtainable will be used. Full particulars regarding the story and cast will be forthcoming within the week, in the mean time production is continuing most satisfactorily.

"Wolves of Kultur" Trade Showing Oct. 1.

A special showing of "Wolves of Kultur," produced by American Photoplays, and released through Pathe, will be made on the New York Roof on Tuesday, October 1 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. This patriotic serial, featuring Leah Baird with Sheldon Lewis, is based upon many actual happenings of German spies working in this country and with the exhibitors who are invited are included Government officials and representatives of the principal patriotic societies. The first three episodes will be shown and these sound the keynote and pitch the occasion of what is said to be a remarkable well-sustained story, full of breathless climaxes.

"Western Atmospher" is the ttile of Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran's latest Star Comedy, a burlesque of the activities of such western stars as Harry Carey, Bill Hart and Tom Mix. Dorothy De Vore has the leading feminine role.

"The Return of Mary." "Little Miss Money Bags." "Lady Frederick."

Mabel Normand Returns to Her Diving Days in "A Perfect 36"

IN "A PERFECT 36," her next Goldwyn picture, released October 21, Mabel Normand returns to her old love, the sea. Having made a safe return to the realm of rollicking comedy in "Peck's Bad Girl," the vivacious Goldwyn star has intrigued Father Neptune into taking her back. And the alliance is celebrated with much fun in the new comedy.

Her newest play is more than a comedy, and the star's exploits do not only suggest her former familiarity with the ways of the water, but "A Perfect 36" actually shows her in a one-piece bathing suit in the sea's embrace—and glad to be there.

Mabel Normand indulges in all her usual pranks—the sort of comedy no other star can approach—and supplements her fun-making with high dives, running jumps from extra springy springboards and any number of stunts while in the water.

This episode in "A Perfect 36," while having a direct bearing on the amusing plot, is cleverly introduced to give Mabel Normand every chance to return to aquatics with whole-hearted abandon. It is a prankful interlude, and she takes full advantage of it. Supposed to be a boarding house slavey who is induced to become a traveling saleswoman, she pauses in her tour of the small town to enjoy a dip in the ocean. Of course it becomes more than a dip.

She is not without companions, and the party is joined by others, as well as scores of onlookers, who participate in the interesting climax of the bathing episode when the heroine finds her clothes missing and starts to search for them. What this leads to gives the play a surprising and novel twist, full advantage of which has been taken by Director Charles Giblyn and the supporting players.

Pathescope Company Has Novel Generating Outfit

THE illustration shows a novel but very simple hand operated electric generating unit for use with the New Premier Pathescope, where existing electric current is not available. On account of the novel and extremely ingenious illuminating system, which has always distinguished the Pathescope from other portable projectors, that instrument is capable of producing brighter screen illumination with a current consumption of about 40 Watts than is obtainable with the ordinary system, using four 300 to 500 Watts.

On this account their instrument has always been a favorite with storage battery equipment on account of the very light current consumption, amounting to only a trifle over 2 amperes at 14 to 16 volts. Where storage batteries can be given intelligent attention and promptly recharged when exhausted, they make an ideal source of lighting current for the Pathescope but the makers have found that in remote localities the storage battery is not only subject to breakage in transit, but difficulties in recharging cause the batteries to be neglected until they are ruined by sulphating. On that account they have developed for remote localities, and particularly for export business, the hand operated generator, as illustrated. As shown, a high grade direct current generator is used directly driven by a belt from a fly wheel equipped with two cranks.

The generator gives sufficient current to properly illuminate an 8x10 foot screen at the very moderate speed of 1,500 r. p. m. The generator may also be placed at any distance from the projector, to which it is connected by a suitable current wiring.

The Pathescope Company can furnish either the complete self-contained generating unit, as shown, or the generator only, and it is obvious that the generator can be driven in any other way such as by a tiny gasoline motor or a windmill or water power. Only about 1/15 h. p. is required to operate the generator.

For light weight and portability, this outfit is certainly a big step in advance of anything hitherto developed. The projecter, as illustrated, is only 17 pounds and packs in a case 16x13½x8 inches. The generator weighs only 12 pounds. The driving mechanism, including the stand and telescoping legs, weighs 68 pounds.

Cavalieri in "A Woman of Impulse."

"A Woman of Impulse," the new Paramount photoplay starring Mme. Lina Cavalieri the famous diva known as "the most beautiful woman in Europe, is a picturization by Eve Unsell of the famous stage play of the same name written by Louis K. Anspacher and produced with signal success at the Hudson Theatre, New York, in 1909. The picture, which will be released Sept 29, is said to furnish Mme. Cavalieri with a vehicle which will take rank with her two previous Paramount successes, "The Eternal Temptress" and "Love's Conquest."

Mutual Gets Behind Loan Film.

"Banzai," the short drama written by Sessue Hayakawa and in which the great Japanese actor appears in the interest of the Liberty Loan drive, will have the big distributing organization of Mutual distribute to the exhibitor. This film story is one of thirty-five made by the most prominent film actors in the country to help Uncle Sam in his big drive for the Fourth Liberty Loan.

When the Government is ready to release these films every Mutual branch will be supplied with prints, and the entire force of the Mutual organization will be utilized in placing "Banzai" in every theatre in the country. The story of "Banzai" itself is wonderfully interesting, and the patriotic Japanese star has given of his best in order to "do his bit."

Story of "Lafayette, We Come!" to Be Syndicated.

By special arrangement with the Press Service Bureau, the Affiliated Distributors' Corporation has succeeded in placing the story of their first release, "Lafayette, We Come!" with the aforementioned syndicate for publication in newspapers throughout the country.

The novelization of the story, which was written by Robert W. Sneddon, was submitted to the Press Service Bureau, and, in spite of the latter's disinclination to accept motion picture material for publication, the story of "Lafayette, We Come!" was accepted by them because of its excellent appeal and timeliness. It has been further arranged, in view of the fact that Affiliated has waived payment for the syndication rights, that the Press Service Bureau will concentrate the publication of the story so as to appear simultaneously and in the same territories with the first-run showings of the film. Theatres in certain localities who book the production where the syndicate has no newspaper representation will be furnished mats of each installment of the novelization, accompanied by instructions enabling the exhibitor to place the story for publication in his local newspaper direct.

Support for Miss Marsh in "Hidden Fires"

MAE MARSH is given noteworthy support in her newest Goldwyn picture, "Hidden Fires," and the star's first production of Goldwyn's second year's output. She is surrounded by several players who have already made their mark in Goldwyn Pictures. "Hidden Fires" is noteworthy in that it gives Miss Marsh a dual role for the first time in her long and brilliant career. Miss Marsh's leading man is Rod La Rocque, whose splendid performance opposite Mabel Normand in "The Venus Model" made him a Goldwyn fixture. Florida Kingsley makes her second appearance with Mae Marsh in Goldwyn Pictures.

After a summer's rest Alec B. Francis, one of the ablest of screen players, returns to work in "Hidden Fires." Another Goldwyn favorite in "Hidden Fires" is Jere Austin, whose work with Mae Marsh in "All Woman" contributed not a little to the success of that Goldwyn production.

New Warren Kerrigan Productions.

Jesse D. Hampton, in his new studio in Los Angeles is busy putting the finishing touches on the newest J. Warren Kerrigan picture entitled "Three X Gordon." Following "Three X Gordon," Kerrigan will appear in another story by Kenneth Clarke, "The Unfinished Story," with most of the scenes in Alaska. It is an altogether unusual story, and, for the greater part, is played in a cabin that is occupied by three mining adventurers. From Alaska the scene shifts to Hartford, Conn.

As soon as "The Unfinished Story" is filmed Mr. Hampton will jump his star into "Come Again Smith," a screen adaptation of the comedy of the same name by John H. Blackwood. In this Kerrigan will be seen as Joe Smith, the son of a California oil millionaire.

"Of No Use to Germany," Red Cross Subject.

The latest American Red Cross film release is called with splendid irony "Of No Use to Germany," showing, as it does, the stream of very young children and very old adults that is received at the Red Cross station of Evian-Les-Bains on the Swiss-French border as they come out of Germany from the captured areas of Belgium and France. "Of No Use to Germany" is the third of the single-reel subjects issued by W. E. Waddell, director of the Bureau of Pictures of the American Red Cross, with the cooperation of General Film Company as distributor.

Newest Capitol, "Bill Camps Out."

Though Capitol Comedies are limited to two reels, "Smiling Bill" Parsons, star and creator of them, always introduces some novelty in each of his productions—mechanical devices and tricks of photography that would do credit to a feature picture. A visualization of alibis is a novel touch in his newest productions, "Bill Camps Out," distributed by Goldwyn.

Stuart Holmes Draws Loan Lithograph.

Stuart Holmes, who is prominent in the support of Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in their forthcoming Metro production, "Little Miss Moneybags," has completed a poster for the Fourth Liberty Loan drive upon which he has been working all summer. The drawing shows all the countries representing a face, with Germany illustrated by an ulcer. Uncle Sam, dressed as a surgeon, is shown cauterizing poisoned Germany.

Since boyhood Mr. Holmes has been much interested in art, and when fifteen he studied at the Art Institute in Chicago, working under Milligan and Lorado Taft. His first big piece of work was done in the modeling of the eagles which are now atop the post office in the Windy City. Much of the wood carving on the Potter Palmer estate was his, giving proof that his talent does not lie alone in the casting or with the brush.

Frank Griffin Now Directing L-Ko's.

Frank Griffin, the comedy director, long associated with Lubin and later with Keystone and Sennett for many years, is now with the L-Ko. He has just completed his first picture with the L-Ko entitled "The Chef," featuring Harry Gribbon, with Billy Armstrong, Mae Emory, Babe Hardy, Eva Novak and Rose Gore. Griffin's next picture will probably feature Babe Hardy, who was one of the stars in Griffin's old Lubin comedies.

Hodkinson Service Opens New Pantheon, Chicago.

"The White Lie," the latest Paralta production starring Bessie Barriscale, was chosen to open the Pantheon, the new million-dollar theatre of the Lubliner & Trinz Circuit, in Chicago, on Thursday, September 11. A triumph of beauty and simplicity, the Pantheon, with a seating capacity of 3,000, is one of the finest samples of the new style of architecture in motion picture theatres.

"Heart of Rachael" Takes Place of Glaum Release.

Owing to the difficulties attending the production of "The Goddess of Lost Lake," a Robert Brunton production, starring Louise Glaum, and scheduled for release by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation on October 30, which have resulted in a delay, a Bessie Barriscale feature, "The Heart of Rachael," completed for several weeks, will be released in its place.

"Hidden," a story by Evelyn Campbell, author of "A Soul For Sale," a recent Dorothy Phillips success, and "Bread," Mary MacLaren's newest Universal special attraction, has been bought by Universal to be made into Mary MacLaren's next starring vehicle. Rupert Julian, who created "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," will handle the megaphone on this newest MacLaren attraction.

"Temple of Dusk," with Sessue Hayakawa, Will Be Ready in October

SESSUE HAYAKAWA'S newest picture, "The Temple of Dusk," made by the Haworth Pictures Corporation, will be pre-released on Oct. 13. This is the second in the series of Hayakawa specials which will be released through the Mutual. In producing the picture, James Young, the director, is declared to have added materially to the strength of the story by his effective lightings and beautiful stagings.

The scenes of the Japanese gardens with their pergolas, flower beds, blossoming trees, playing fountains and winding walks were his selection. It was his effort throughout the production to secure lightings that would add to the interpretation of the parts.

Hayakawa is given a role in this production somewhat different than the part he has been playing. His characterization is one that is enveloped in ideals, honor and love. The story was written by Frances Marion, who has furnished Hayakawa with material in the past. She was the author of his "The City of Dim Faces." Other successful plays which came from her pen are "The Foundling" and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

The interest of the story centers about the character of Akira which is played by Sessue Hayakawa. This young Japanese poet loves an American girl who has been placed in the care of his father. When she dies, a few years after her marriage to an American millionaire, the care of the child is entrusted to Akira.

A splendid cast was gathered in support of Hayakawa in this production. Jane Novak, who has appeared in some of the recent successes, and Sylvia Bremer, whose name and work is also well known in the picture world, interprets the leading female parts. Lewis Willoughby has an important role in the part of Edward Markham. Henry Barrows and Mary Jane Irving complete the important leads.

Mutual's New Montreal Manager.

Raymond S. Peck has been appointed manager of the Mutual branch at Montreal succeeding Basil Horsfall. Mr. Peck comes to Mutual from the Canadian Moving Picture Digest, of which paper he has been editor. Previous to entering the motion picture business Mr. Peck was associated with daily papers in the United States and Canada.

His first experience in the picture business was with the Universal Film Company as director of publicity in Canada. He is widely known by the exhibitors throughout the Dominion and through his motion picture associations has gained an intimate knowledge of the business.

Homesick Herbert Rawlinson.

Herbert Rawlinson, who is featured with Sylvia Breamer in J. Stuart Blackton's special, "The Common Cause," frankly admits that he is homesick. He doesn't tragically cry, "Give me California or give me death!" but he is holding strong hopes that winter weather, a coal shortage or some other calamity, will make Commodore Blacton hear the call of the West soon again and journey to the coast for at least some scenes of one of the other specials which he has underlined for production.

Rawlinson has been guilty of saying that for "The Battle Cry of Liberty," which is to follow "The Common Cause," more appropriate atmosphere, in keeping with the title of the play, may be found in California than within a five to twenty-five-cent fare of Broadway.

Australian Manager Visits Hollywood.

Alec. B. Hellmrich, general manager of the Co-operative Film Exchange, Ltd., of Australia, distributor of Metro pictures in the antipodes, was a recent visitor to Metro's studios in Hollywood. Mr. Hellmrich spent a few days in Los Angeles en route from New York to Melbourne by way of San Francisco.

He declared business conditions to be thriving in Australia notwithstanding the war, and said Metro stars and productions were rapidly gaining in favor throughout the British dominion. Before his departure for San Francisco, where he boarded a Pacific liner for home, Hellmrich armed himself with a bundle of the newest photographs of May Allison and Bert Lytell.

Emmy Wehlen's New Leading Man.

W. I. Percival, who has been engaged by Metro to play the part of Jack Bradley opposite Emmy Wehlen, in "Sylvia on a Spree," has spent the past eight years in one unbroken stretch on Broadway. When not actually appearing in stage productions, he has lived on his Connecticut estate, where he has seventeen head of registered Jersey cows, in addition to the rest of his blooded stock.

Mr. Percival did his first work before the camera with Ethel Barrymore in "Our Mrs. McChesney," a Metro production. He had the part of "Beauty" Blair.

Sheldon Story for Louise Huff.

Harry S. Sheldon, the famous dramatist, best known for his authorship of "The Havoc," in which Henry Miller successfully starred, has sold to World Pictures an original story which bears the title of "The Little Intruder." A number of more important producing companies bid for this story, but World Pictures made such inducements to Mr. Sheldon that he gave this company the preference. It is the intention of World Pictures to use it as a vehicle for Louise Huff, who has scored a hit in her latest release, "T'other Dear Charmer."

Hall Uses Both General and State Right Exchanges

FOLLOWING the announcement contained in our last issue to the effect that the special production of the Producers' Distributing Corporation would be distributed in the West and South through the General Film Company, Frank Hall announces that "Her Mistake," starring Evelyn Nesbit, and the remainder of the features will be distributed in the East through independent exchsnges.

In New York and Northern New Jersey the franchise is held by the Liberty Distributing Corporation, while the American Feature Film Company is headquarters for New England, Solee Film Exchange for Illinois, Quaker City Feature Film Company for Eastern Pennsylvania, Day Film Company for Western Pennsylvania, and Success Film Company for Ohio.

In speaking of this arrangement, Mr. Hall states: "We have tried to apply the same sound business principles to the material distribution of our productions that were applied in the outlining of our policy, which pledges us to supply theatres with high class pictures with special advertising angles at fixed rental prices of ten, twenty and thirty dollars a day. Quick action in booking, and sure and efficient service to the exhibitors had to be absolutely assured in every territory. The demand for special and timely subjects is of such a nature that they must be supplied to the largest number of theatres in the shortest space of time. An exceptionally large number of prints with all of the accessories and special advertising helps must therefore be quickly and efficiently handled in every exchange, and each theatre must be served with the same careful attention to its needs. I feel that the exchanges through which our pictures are now being booked are especially well qualified to meet the conditions peculiar to their respective territories."

Jester Comedy Sales

WILLIAM STEINER, president of the Jester Comedy Company, announces the sale of the following territorial rights to Jester Comedies featuring Twede-Dan: To Standard Film Service, Cleveland, for Ohio, Kentucky and Michigan; to Equitable Film Corporation, 928 Main street, Kansas City, for Kansas and Western Missouri; to Unity Photoplays Company, Chicago, who have enlarged their present territory, consisting of Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin, by securing the entire state of Indiana; to Interstate Films, Inc., of which Milton Cohen is president, located at 729 Seventh avenue, New York, for New York City and Northern New Jersey.

New York Rights Sold on "Huns Within Our Gates"

THE right to exhibit "Huns Within Our Gates" in Greater New York and Northern New Jersey has been purchased by Hugo Frank, of the Mothers of Liberty Co., 145 West 45th street, New York, through the Arrow Film Corporation.

This feature is in six parts, and, while it is said to be a war picture of sensational turn, there are no battle scenes, and there is not one uniform present in the picture, which deals with the operation of dangerous enemy aliens in America who, while enjoying its institutions, seek to undermine the Government.

The story revolves about an invention of a young American which will act as substitute for gasoline in the operation of aeroplsnes. The enemy alien schemes to obtain the formula. He uses the young sweetheart of the inventor as a cat's paw, and the manner of her overcoming him in his insidious work is said to form a gripping chain of events

Nathan Hirsh—Pioneer

THE most prominent figure in connection with the successful exploitation of the feature photoplay, "Wives of Men," at the Casino Theatre on Broadway, New York, is Nathan Hirsh, president of the Pioneer Film Corporation, which is now offering this production on the state rights market

Mr Hirsh's rise in the film industry has been consistent and rapid In 1912 he bought the Cosmos Film Corporation, including the productions, "The Little Girl That He Forgot," "Lena Rivers," "Three Musketeers." Later he purchased the New York state rights to productions of the Great Northern Film Corporation. He then decided to enter the production field, and his first offering was "The Soul of a Child," featuring little Miss Gorman. He then formed a company and purchased the New York state rights to "Civilization" for a large sum. This company was afterwards reorganized as the Pioneer Film Corporation, which has since secured New York state rights to the following features: "Redemption," "The Mad Lover," "The Submarine Eye," "Today," "The Cold Deck," "The Garden of Allah," "Carmen of the Klondike, "The Struggle Everlasting," "The Still Alarm," "The Accidental Honeymoon" and "Wives of Men."

Nathan Hirsh,
President of Pioneer Film Corporation.

The present policy of the company is to buy negatives of features and sell foreign and state rights. The first picture so disposed of was "The Still Alarm," snd the present picture, "Wives of Men," will be handled along the same lines.

War Pictures Featured in Gaumont News Reels

GAUMONT NEWS NO. 26 shows how the course in automobile engineering at Tuft's College is teaching United States soldiers to fight with tools instead of guns. A Gaumont cameraman also visits the summer camp of the Noyes School of Rhythmic Expression, and follows these nimble nymphs from sunrise to sunset. Other interesting subjects include the aviators at the St. Paul flying field engaged in clearing a twenty-acre tract for their own use. California celebrates her sixty-eighth birthday in San Francisco, and in Bangor, Maine, a thirty-two foot sail boat finishes a trip from Seattle, which took three years. The Allied War Exposition opens in Chicago. Italian journalists visit Mare Island, Cal. The Union Station Plaza at Washington, D. C., is shown transformed into residence halls for war workers The Koppel Plant, enemy property at Pittsburgh, Pa., is sold at auction, and the proceeds buy Liberty Bonds.

Gaumont Graphic No. 26 contains interesting scenes from France. Our boys are shown being rushed to the front in motors. The camouflaged station of the commander of Battery B, 12th Field Artillery, and Hun prisoners captured at Chateau Thierry. There is also a scene at Aix-Les-Bains, a famous watering place, where our boys rest while on furlough. Other interesting pictures are the Peacocks of the navy on review at Great Lakes, Ill; enormous wheat crop marooned on the river bottom when Sacramento River reaches lowest ebb in history. In Chicago patriotic women sew buttons on soldiers' uniforms while they wait. On the Pacific the "sub" chasers show their efficiency and give an idea of what they will do to the Kaiser's skunks.

John Lopez to Direct New B. S. Moss Feature

JOHN S. LOPEZ, who has completed the adaptation and direction of Harry Rapf's latest production, "The Sins of the Children," begins next week the direction of an elaborate six-reel feature for B. S. Moss.

The new production has not yet been titled, but it is announced that it is not a war drama.

Work on the new feature will begin Monday in the Esstee Studios on West 125th street, and Director Lopez announces that the patrons of the silent drama have a surprise in store for them in the person of a new star, a young girl, an extra, who appeared in "The Sins of the Children," but who was given a chance owing to the non-appearance of the actress cast for the part.

Madison Handling Gaumont Serial.

The Gaumont Company announces that it has sold the rights to its twenty-reel serial, "The Hand of Vengeance," to the Madison Film Exchange, of Detroit, for all of Michigan, except the upper peninsula.

Artcraft to Release Tourneur's "Sporting Life"

WITH the successful premiere of Maurice Tourneur's initial production under his own management, "Sporting Life," at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, Hiller and Wilk announce the completion of arrangements by which the United States and Canadian rights to this production have been secured by the Famous Players-Lasky Company, and that it will be released as an Artcraft picture. This is said to be the first time that a production made by an outside company for the independent market has been released under this brand.

Considerable foreign territory has also been disposed of on "Sporting Life," but the following territory is still open, although negotiations are pending covering them: Panama, South America, South Africa, India, China, Japan, Dutch East Indies, Italy, Spain and Russia.

Mr. Tourneur announces that his second production, the title and nature of which has been kept a secret, will unfold a radically newer form of screen story presentation not only in the nature of the theme, but in the actual method of presentation on the screen, and states that it will be at least a step from the physical to the mental motion picture.

"Having produced a melodrama," says Mr. Tourneur, "I decided to do something as widely different as possible, so I went into a drama in which the superficial action is the result of the exposition of an idea. I aimed not only to delve deep into human character, but to present these reflections so that they will drive home my central idea. To me the theme of this new production is absorbing, going deeply not only into psychology, but into racial development, into the varying phases and problems of sex."

Secrecy is still maintained regarding the actual subject of this production, and the title has not yet been definitely decided upon. It will be interpreted by an excellent cast, including Flora Revalles, singer and dancer of the Bakst-Ballet Russe; Ethel Hallor, of the Century Roof Garden; Diana Allen, of the Zeigfeld Follies; Fair Binney, who appeared successfully in "Sporting Life"; Gloria Goodwin, vaudeville and musical comedy dancer. Among the men are Paul Clerget, the French actor, who appeared as Pierrot Sr., in "Pierrot, the Prodigal"; Escamillo Fernandez, who appeared as Pierre in "Heart of the Wilds"; Chester Barnett, Warner Richmond, who appeared in "Sporting Life, and Henry West.

Schomer Tells Plans for Foreign Sales Campaign

THE Schomer Photo-Play Producing Company announce that immediately following the trade showing of "Ruling Passions" plans which have been formulated for handling this picture and succeeding productions in allied and neutral countries of Europe and South America will be put into effect.

"At the request of representatives of foreign purchasing companies," says Mr. Schomer, "who wish to see the photoplay before making offers we have refrained from putting into effect our plans. If, however, their offers are not satisfactory, or what is more important, their plans for making the picture known throughout the lands for which they purchase are not up to what we have set as a standard, the Schomer Company will take the initiative, sending its representatives to foreign countries just as soon as passports can be secured. If foreign buyers are willing to do the right thing, to properly exploit and to show their audiences good pictures, I am content to work with them. If, however, they are not ready to do that, I am determined that my own representatives shall work effectively without them.

"While there is room for improvement," continued Mr. Schomer, "I have always believed and am still of the opinion that the American photoplay has been the best in quality afforded by the world's market. The war has brought the opportunity of proving this fact, and it is the duty of American manufacturers to make the present great demand a permanent and continually increasing one.

Creighton Hale in Cast of "Woman the Germans Shot"

CREIGHTON HALE will appear in the cast of Plunkett and Carroll's feature production, "The Woman the Germans Shot," based on the shooting of the British Red Cross nurse, Edith Cavell, and written by Anthony Paul Kelly. He will be seen in the important part of an English boy captured by the Germans during the invasion of Belgium.

Mr. Hale is well known to motion picture audiences, who have applauded him many times in exciting serials, and his part in this picture is said to offer him exceedingly fine opportunities.

Director John G. Adolfi is now working on the finishing touches of the picture, and he has surrounded Julia Arthur and Creighton Hale with a cast which includes Jack Johnson, Paul Panzer, Giorgo Majoni, Martin Faust and Fred Kohlgrin.

New State Rights Company Operating in Southwest

A NEW state rights concern has been formed in the Southwest, with headquarters at 1815½ Main street, Dallas. It is the S. & S. Film Corporation, chartered with $20,000 capital stock, $15,000 of which is announced as paid up, and will operate in the statos of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana.

The officials of this company are Joseph Shwarts, president, and Trice Sneed, secretary and manager, and the following feature productions are being offered to exhibitors: "God's Man," "Witching Hour," "Just Out of College," "End of the World," "Lonesome Trail," "Wife Who Wouldn't Tell" and "Redemption." In addition this company is also handling a number of two-reel William S. Hart, and Ella Wheeler Wilcox dramas, and Midget comedies.

Wit Battles with Wit in "The Hand of Vengeance"

JUST such a crime investigator as was made famous by Emile Gaboriau and Conan Doyle, to say nothing of those heroes of our boyish imagination, "Old Sleuth" and "Old Cap Collier," is pictured in the brainy detective who is so industrious in his attempts to bring the guilty to justice in the Gaumont photo-serial, "The Hand of Vengeance," which is now running at a large number of the best theatres in the United States and Canada. But even cleverer is the mysterious "Ultus," and who eludes the detective so successfully.

The enjoyment of the picture-goer is said to be enhanced by the knowledge that Ultus is not really a criminal, but a wronged man impatient of the law's delays. By spectacular means he revenges himself on the villain who robbed him of his fortune. Then he champions others, and in avenging their wrongs leads the detective an exciting if not a merry life.

Everything comes out all right in the end, and Ultus is honored by his country, but not before he has gone through many thrilling dangers shared by romantic and beautiful maidens, and escaped only by clever and ingenious methods.

The Gaumont Company is distributing this serial in ten episodes of two-reels each through state rights exchanges.

Romayne Now Producing a Seven-Reel Spectacle

H. E. ROMAYNE, president of the Romayne Superfilm Company, Los Angeles, announces that arrangements have been completed whereby the patriotic production made by this company, "Me Und Gott," will be distributed in Southern California and Arizona by the Liberty Film Exchange, and Northern California, Hawaii and Nevada by Turner and Dahnken, and that this picture is now being presented successfully at Miller's Alhambra Theatre, Los Angeles.

Mr. Romayne also reports that work has already commenced on his company's second production, which will be a spectacular seven-reel picture treating a burning question, national in scope, and of vital interest to the American people.

The Creation Filmed for First Carlton Production

ALTHOUGH it is a far cry from the days of the Garden of Eden and the creation of the earth to the present time, yet, in "Mother, I Need You," Lloyd Carlton Productions have dealt with both eras.

The picture is in six reels, with a biblical prologue which the producers claim to be one of the notable achievements of film craft, showing as it does the creation of land from the waters of the sea, the beginning of vegetation, the birth of man, the temptation and expulsion from the Garden.

Then follows the modern story dealing with the heritage of Eve as exemplified in the life of a girl of the present day whose mother is too absorbed in uplift work to hear the cry of the daughter at her side.

"Mother, I Need You," is the first offering of the Lloyd Carlton Productions, and it is interpreted by an excellent cast, including Enid Markey, Edward Coxen, G. Raymond Nye, Clarissa Selwynne and Eugenie Besserer.

More Sales Announced on "Topics of the Day"

TOPICS OF THE DAY FILM COMPANY announces that arrangements have been completed by which their weekly "Topics" will be distributed in New York State and Northern New Jersey by the Modern Feature Film Company, F. Y. Langtry remaining as special representative, but working through the Modern Feature Film Company, and the states of Tennessee, Arkansas and Mississippi will be handled by Kaufman Specials, Nashville, Tenn.

Gardiner Gets "Hand of Vengeance."

The Gardiner Syndicate, 47 W. Swan street, Buffalo, have secured from the Gaumont Company territorial rights to "The Hand of Vengeance," the twenty-reel serial, for New York State, north of the counties of Rockland and Westchester.

MOVES HEADQUARTERS TO KANSAS CITY

Main Offices of A. H. Blank Enterprises of Omaha Now Located at 317 Gloyd Building

By Kansas City News Service, 115 Railway Exchange, Kansas City, Mo.

GENERAL MANAGER C. E. HOLAH, of the A. H. Blank Enterprises, was a recent visitor in Kansas City. During his brief stay, Mr. Holah made extensive plans for establishing the headquarters of the A. H. Blank Enterprises in Kansas City instead of Omaha, Neb. The entire territory will be handled from the company's offices at 317 Gloyd Building, of which S. Goldham will have charge. Mr. Holah commented at length upon the big success which the company's releases had met with generally, and particularly upon the increasing volume done in small cities and towns on the strongest pictures, such as "Pershing's Crusaders" and "Four Years in Germany."

Italian Societies to See War Film.

A meeting of the Allied Italian Societies, of Kansas City, was held September 15 for the purpose of arranging for a committee to view the Kleine-Edison war release, "Behind the Lines in Italy." The advisability of using this film for the benefit of the Italian Red Cross and the channels through which it should be handled are under consideration. Mr. Donici, owner of the Palace Theatre at Tenth and Main, is president of the organization.

Books All Goldwyn Star Series.

The Doric Theatre has booked the entire list of Goldwyn star series releases for the first run in Kansas City, and has just completed a most successful week on Geraldine Farrar in "The Turn of the Wheel" as the first of the Goldwyn productions. Mr. Curtis, manager of the Doric, is using some original lobby displays and methods of "putting over" features. His lobby display of Mabel Normand in "Peck's Bad Girl" consists in the main of cards in the form of a board fence on which the attraction is announced in the topsy-turvy lettering of Peck's Bad Girl herself.

Kansas City Briefs.

The Garden Theatre is now closed for the purpose of undergoing complete interior remodeling and redecorating. The date for reopening will be announced shortly.

EXHIBITORS GET HONOR CERTIFICATES

Cincinnati Managers Rewarded by Government for Co-operation Extended to Four Minute Speakers

By Kenneth C. Crain, 307 First National Bank, Cincinnati, Ohio.

CINCINNATI theatres that have given the fullest possible co-operation to the work of the Four-Minute Men as a patriotic matter were honored by specific recognition of their aid on the part of the Government. At all of the theatres the managers were called forward at one of the crowded evening performances by the Four-Minute speaker assigned and each was formally presented, in the name of the United States Government, with a certificate of theatre membership in the organization. It is understood that the idea of making the theatres themselves members of the Four-Minute organization which numbers 40,000 speakers, was that of President Wilson himself, and there is no question but that the loyal co-operation of the exhibitors, which has been given to every aspect of war work in which they could aid, will be enlisted even more fully hereafter, if possible, through this graceful and timely recognition of their assistance.

Cincinnatians Flock to See Griffith's Film.

The engagement of "Hearts of the World" at the Grand Opera House, Cincinnati, at prices ranging from 25 cents minimum to $1.50 maximum at the evening performances has been greeted with capacity audiences right along, the great Griffith production meeting with enthusiastic approval on the part of the public. Many people have been turned away at each of the several daily performances. A big orchestra added to the merit of the attraction with appropriate music.

Walnut Betters Its Musical Programs.

The Walnut Theatre has the distinction of being one of the first of Cincinnati's big moving picture houses to feature music of the better sort as an added attraction to the public. The Walnut Symphony Orchestra, under Musical Director Menges, was recently installed as a permanent feature at the theatre, and Mr. Menges gives his whole attention to the preparation of musical programs which fit in with the pictures being run. Results have been distinctly worth while in the added pleasure shown by the big houses at the Walnut, and increasing attendance is also noted.

Shows Metro Comedies at Club Meeting.

W. C. Bachmeyer, the popular Metro exchange manager at Cincinnati, who is the film member of the Kiwanis Club, contributed handsomely to the success of the first fall meeting of that organization by showing a pair of his best comedies.

Plans to Erect Big Picture Theatre.

The American Amusement Company, of Steubenville, O., which has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000 by John Peters, A. G. Constant, Harry L. May and others, is planning the construction of a big moving picture theatre.

Texas Brevities.

W. F. Sonneman's new Waco motion picture theatre is expected to open before the end of September. In a contest staged by Mr. Sonneman among Waco film fans the new theatre was christened the Victory.

Vuba and Kleinberg have opened their new Orpheum Theatre at Lawton, Okla., with a General program.

ALLENS ENTERTAIN CANADIAN SOLDIERS

Sends Operators, Projectors and Orchestra with "Hearts of the World" to Camps and Hospitals

By W. M. Gladish, 33 Wineva Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

SOLDIERS in three different localities in Canada have had the pleasure of seeing "Hearts of the World" as the guests of Jule and J. J. Allen, of Toronto, who control the Griffith spectacle for the Dominion. Several weeks ago the soldiers at the Whitby Military Hospital were treated to a presentation of the feature with full orchestral accompaniment, the event being the objective of an automobile outing of Allan Theatre staff and employes at Toronto. On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, Sept. 11-13, the feature was presented free of charge in the Y. M. C. A. tent at Niagara Camp, Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ontario, through an arrangement between the Allens, E. Elliott, in charge of the Y. M. C. A. facilities, and the military officers of the camp. One half of the rank and file saw the picture on each of the two first nights and the officers, with their friends, witnessed the presentation on the Friday evening.

The proper showing of the feature was possible through the sending of extra operators, an extra projection machine and the musical score from Toronto to the camp by the Allens.

At the Tuxedo Military Hospital in Manitoba, "Hearts of the World" was also shown to 1,200 invalided Canadian soldiers through the kindness of the Allens. The orchestra of the Dominion Theatre, numbering twenty pieces, under the leadership of Nicola Del Negro, played the accompaniment for this performance. The auditorium at the hospital had to be fitted up with music stands, special wiring and other equipment for this show. The soldiers at two other hospitals, the General Hospital and the Deer Lodge Home, were brought to the Tuxedo institution for the event.

The Allens deserve considerable credit for the manner in which they have been looking after the entertainment of soldiers in Canada. They have been supplying considerable films to the various hospitals throughout Ontario and they have put on special shows at a number of places for the soldiers. Several times they have provided the whole entertainment at the Davisville Military Hospital.

It is interesting to note, in this connection, that Jule and J. J. Allen have promised the first Canadian run of "The Better 'Ole," the English feature adapted from the cartoons of Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, to the Whitby Military Hospital. The Canadian rights for this picture have been secured by the Allens.

National Closes Temporarily.

The National Theatre, Ottawa, has been closed temporarily. It will be reopened under new management. The National has a seating capacity of 800. Two Ottawa theatres have raised their admission prices a five cent notch. They are the Family and Casino theatres.

Photographs Relatives of Soldiers.

The Rotary Club of Calgary, Alberta, put on a fine stunt on Sept. 18, when the immediate relatives of Calgary's soldiers, now in the trenches or in England, were rounded up for the taking of moving pictures which will be shown as soon as possible in the military theatres behind the firing line. The automobile owners of the city, to the number of several hundred, co-operated in the event by calling for the families of the soldiers and parading from Mewata Park to St. George's Island Park, the route extending over Seventh avenue.

At the park the relatives were marshaled into various groups for special pictures. One interesting group consisted of young babies, whose fathers had never seen them, the children having been born subsequent to the departure of the paternal guardian. The event was under the management of E. L. Richardson, representing the Rotary Club.

Robson Gives Children's Matinees.

With the adoption of a new policy for the Strand Theatre, Toronto, starting Sept. 30, Manager Clarence Robson adopted an unusual procedure when he arranged for special children's performances during the showing of Marguerite Clark's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" for three days. Children's matinees were scheduled for Thursday and Friday afternoon at 3.45 while a third special performance for the children was arranged for 11 A. M. Saturday morning. The admission price for the youngsters was 10 cents. For two weeks in advance of the showing special programs were distributed in the theatre. These programs outlined the new policy of the house and also drew attention to the forthcoming children's matinees.

Imperial Did Not Raise Admission.

Although announcement was made that the Imperial Theatre, one of Montreal's largest moving picture theatres, had joined with nine other local houses in raising admission prices from 20 cents to 25 cents on Sept. 15, Manager Howard Conover of that theatre has denied that such is the case. He declares that no change is contemplated in either matinee or evening prices. His scale of prices is as follows: Matinees, 10 cents for any part of the house; evenings: 10 cents and 15 cents, with box seats 25 cents. War tax is charged extra.

Winnipeg Enjoying Prosperous Times.

An indication of the prosperous conditions now prevalent in Winnipeg, Man., is found in the announcement by the City of Winnipeg that six theatre licenses were granted during the month of August.

One of the new theatres is the Majestic on Portage avenue, near Carlton street. The Majestic is not new in every respect, but it has been reopened under new auspices and now presents a very different appearance. When the structure was built eight years ago, the theatre was the largest and finest moving picture theatre in Winnipeg and was really the first of a series of brilliant downtown enterprises. It enjoyed varying fortunes, however, during the past year or two and was finally closed altogether.

The new Majestic is under the management of Henry A. Morton, who has been a prominent exhibitor in Winnipeg for a number of years. Under his direction, the theatre will cater to the best patronage. Programs will be changed twice weekly, except for special presentations. The Majestic opens each day at 12.30 and up to 7 P. M. the general admission is 15 cents. After 7 P. M. the general admission is 20 cents. The first attraction was Alice Joyce in "The Song of the Soul."

A. F. BRENTLINGER OPENS THE LIBERTY

Newest Picture House in Terre Haute Has Largest Pipe Organ of Any Theatre in Indiana—Seats 1,300

By Indiana Trade News Service, 69 Layman Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.

ALL roads led to the corner of Wabash avenue and Eighth street between the hours of 1 and 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon, September 12, the time of the opening of Terre Haute's beautiful new Liberty Theatre. Long before the opening hour the lobby of the theatre as well as the sidewalk in front of the building was lined with people. In fact the crowds were so great that many were unable to gain admission.

The theatre is a beautiful piece of work and the appointments and equipment are in keeping with the determination of the owners to obtain the best for their patrons. While some few details in the permanent arrangement of the rest rooms for men and women have not yet been decided on, this item for the comfort of the theatre-goers has not been overlooked and already the lounging and rest rooms are open, convenient to the main and gallery entrances.

The new theatre has a seating capacity of 1,300 seats, with 1,000 of these situated on the first floor. It has one of the largest pipe organs installed in any motion picture theatre in the state and the operating room is large and equipped with the latest kind of projection machines, spot and flood lights. The beauty of the house, the decorations and furnishings, are of the simplest nature and of a military tone, carrying out the idea of the name Liberty.

The theatre is under the management of of A. F. Brentlinger, vice-president of the Terre Haute Theatres Company, owners of the theatre, and also vice-president of the Peoples Theatres Company, at Richmond, and the Bankers' and Merchants' Theatre Company, of Fort Wayne. The new house will feature motion pictures and vaudeville.

Mr. Brentlinger was pleasantly surprised at the opening by the unexpected arrival of a number of his friends from Fort Wayne. His employes at the Orpheum in Fort Wayne and the Murray and Muratte in Richmond sent him large bouquets with their wishes for the success of his new venture, as did also the Fox Film Company, of New York, which sent a large horseshoe design.

Theatre Manager Called to Colors.

A call to the colors, which Maurice A. Fox, manager of the Orpheum Theatre, Terre Haute, has been expecting for some time, came this week and about three hours after its arrival the youngest of the city's theatre managers left for Ft. Benjamin Harrison, at Indianapolis, to be inducted into Uncle Sam's service. Young Fox has for nearly two years had full charge of the Orpheum, the owners of the theatre, his father and E. W. Keating, giving him a free hand in directing the policy of the house.

Reopens on First Anniversary.

The Castle Theatre, South Bend's attractive photoplay house on South Michigan avenue, which was closed for a few weeks to permit interior decorators to make a few changes in the place, was reopened last Friday on its first anniversary under the present management. The past year has been a very successful one for the Crystal and the new fall season has started out with every evidence of continued success.

Washington Has New Theatre Opening.

The Liberty Theatre, Washington's new motion picture house, on Main street, near Meridian street, will open its doors next Monday evening for the first time. The Liberty, which is under the management of A. E. DeVoe, is one of the most attractive and best arranged theatres in any city of this size in the state.

Collects $98.83 in Admission Taxes.

The Gaiety Theatre Company, operating the Gaiety Theatre, Bluffton, remitted $98.83 to the Government for admission tax collected at the theatre during the month of August. A large jar, placed in the lobby of the theatre by the local chapter of the Red Cross, netted $6 during the month just ended, the management reported.

BUSINESS IN CALIFORNIA IMPROVING

End of Warm Spell Brings Opening of Many Theatres Closed for Summer—Many New Houses Being Built

By T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Conditions in the territory served by local film exchanges have shown a marked improvement of late and many houses that have been closed for the summer season are being reopened, while others are getting back to winter schedules. Warm weather is about at an end in the interior, the harvesting of crops is about over and schools are reopening, all of which point to a better attendance at moving picture shows.

While new theatres are not as common as in the past there are several in this territory that are nearing completion, and contracts have been awarded for the erection of several others. The largest of these new houses is the Coliseum Theatre, being erected in the Richmond district of this city by S. H. Levin. This theatre, which will have a seating capacity of about 2,000, and which will be ready in November, is a handsome one and ranks in beauty and convenience of arrangement with the best. The new theatre of A. A. Richards, at Lado, Cal., will be opened in September and will give that city a house of which it may well be proud. It has a seating capacity of 1,400 and will be devoted to moving pictures and road shows. The New Garden Theatre of A. B. Archibald at Burlingame, a suburb of San Francisco, will also be opened this month. This is likewise a handsome house with a seating capacity of 1,200.

Power Shortage Serious.

The heavy rain which swept California during the second week of September encouraged exhibitors to express the belief that the power shortage would be relieved at an early date, but this hope is not shared by State Power Administrator H. G. Butler. His "lightless night" order, which forbids the illumination of signs and store fronts, and which does away with all unnecessary street illumination, expires this month, but he has intimated that it will be extended. All power companies have been ordered to prepare a list of their customers, the class of work performed, the amount of power consumed and the percentage of work classed as a war essential.

"America's Answer" Off to Great Start.

While no intensive booking campaign has as yet been inaugurated on "America's Answer" by the Film Division of the California State Council of Defense, many exhibitors have already made arrangements for showing this picture. Practically every exhibitor in this territory booked the first official war feature, "Pershing's Crusaders," and this proved such a splendid box office attraction and had such a patriotic appeal that the release of the second one has been eagerly looked forward to. A pre-view of "America's Answer" is to be held at the Palace Hotel before the regular engagement at the Rialto Theatre and more than five hundred state and county officials and leaders in war work have been invited to attend this. The Rialto management has secured this production for a two weeks' run, with an option on a third week, paying more for it than for any other attraction booked at the house.

Edmonds Hooks Up with Hodkinson.

W. O. Edmonds, well known in this territory, has returned to Film Row, and is now acting as manager of the Hodkinson Service, with headquarters at the General Film branch. The appointment was made by P. N. Brink, manager of the division west of the Mississippi, who has been covering the territory, installing managers at all of the branches maintained by the General Film Company. Mr. Edmonds came here a little more than two years ago to open an office for George Kleine, resigning to take charge of the Majestic Theatre at Reno, Nev. He recently gave up this position and was preparing to make an Eastern trip when the proposition to join the Hodkinson Service was advanced.

Improvements at Rialto.

Extensive improvements are under way at the Rialto Theatre, and when these are completed some interesting innovations in the presentation of moving pictures are promised. The changes will permit the use of the big stage, and J. H. Walraven, who now has charge of the presentation of shows, is arranging a series of prologues, designing special settings for special productions, and lining up talent with the idea of giving the moving picture public something new. Maurice Lawrence has been placed in charge of the orchestra, which has been doubled in size, and music will be made more of an attraction than ever.

Brehany Goes to Chicago.

J. A. Brehany, general manager for Sol L. Lesser, of the district covering eleven Middle Western states rights to "Hearts of the World," has left for the Chicago office for a stay of a few weeks and while there will organize ten new companies and outfit them with film, managers, music and properties. As soon as they are all on the road he will return to San Francisco, the headquarters of the Lesser activities. The engagement of "Hearts of the World" at the Alcazar Theatre has been continued beyond the time originally set for it and has entered upon its fourteenth week.

With the Moving Picture Stars.

Lila Lee, the new Paramount star, appeared in person at the Imperial Theatre for three days recently.

Miss Bessie Bird, who recently starred in the film, "The Life of General Pershing," soon to be released, came from New York to unveil the statute and tablet at the United States School of military aeronautics at the University of California on Pershing's birthday, September 13. The statute was presented to the school by the graduating class of airmen.

Miss Sutherland Griffith, formerly a moving picture star, but now engaged in Y. W. C. A. work, was a recent visitor here, coming to California from Bremerton, Wash., to take part in a moving picture entitled, "The Second Line of Defense," which is to depict the war activities of this organization. The scenario has been written by Wilbur Hall, the photographic work will be done by Ralph Radnor Earle, of San Francisco, and the art features will be under the direction of Maynard Dixon, one of the best known Western artists.

Mrs. Chester M. Franklin, also known as Ruth Darling, a former moving picture actress, was killed in this city on September 11 in an automobile collision. She was married to Chester M. Franklin, a moving picture director of Los Angeles, five months ago, and when he joined the army and was sent to this city she came here to be near him. At the time of the accident she was on her way downtown to purchase a birthday gift for him.

Loses Triangle Re-Issues.

The Sunset Film Corporation, which recently moved to new quarters at 94 Golden Gate avenue, has returned its Triangle re-issues to the Western Triangle Distributing Corporation. J. L. Lazarus, president of this concern, is making a business trip to New York.

Walter Rand Visits Town.

Walter S. Rand, division manager for the General Film Company in the territory west of Denver, arrived here recently from his Los Angeles headquarters and will resume his trip north after a brief stay. While here he assumed the duties of Manager Harry Schmidt for a few days, to enable the latter to make a trip into the Sacramento Valley.

William Farnum at Rialto Theatre.

San Francisco moving picture fans always flock to see a popular screen star, but it is seldom that such crowds gather as was the case recently when William Farnum appeared at the Rialto Theatre. The film attraction during his visit was one of his own productions, "Riders of the Purple Sage," and as a ballyhoo an old Wells-Fargo stage was pressed into service. The accompanying illustration gives a good idea of the holdout crowd.

Crowd waiting to get into the Rialto Theatre, San Francisco, to hear William Farnum Speak.

San Francisco Briefs.

Major Meyer J. Cohen, manager of the George Kleine System interests here, has left for Chicago and the East for a business conference.

E. C. Mix, formerly manager of the Theatre St. Francis, has joined the booking staff of the Select Picture Corporation.

Gus Geicke, of the Photo Play Theatre on Twenty-fourth street, has taken over the special film delivery business of Tom Gilboy.

Edgar T. Lowman, for the past five years with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, is leaving this month to take up war work in France with the Knights of Columbus.

A. M. Miller has been placed in charge of the T. & D. Theatre at San Jose, succeeding Harry Oviatt.

Short Dallas Items.

Manager Harry Owens of Paramount announces that W. M. Saale, formerly with Fox, has joined the Paramount branch as chief booker. H. G. Robinson has joined the Paramount force as branch auditor.

"Hearts of the World" will make its first visit to the Southwest late in September. E. H. Husley has booked the big Griffith attraction for two weeks at the Hippodrome Theatre.

Bert King, formerly Vitagraph manager in New Orleans, and who has many friends in Dallas, has written them from New York saying that he is on his way to France with his regiment.

BELIEVE DAY OF TEN-CENT MOVIE PAST

Leading Detroit Exhibitors Contend That To Be Successful Prices Must Now Be 15 and 20 Cents

By Jacob Smith, 719 Free Press Building, Detroit, Mich.

IT IS the contention of many of Detroit's leading exhibitors that the day of the ten-cent movie is past and that the successful house of the future must have a minimum of 15 cents, with some seats at 20 cents. There are a great many theatres that would gladly raise their prices if they could get their competitors in the same sections to do likewise. Wesley Schram, of the Schram Amusement Company, operating five houses in Detroit, says on this subject: "How any exhibitor can stick at the old prices when his own business has fallen off and his operating expenses have increased, is more than I can understand. All of us must come to the point sooner or later when 10-cent prices are abolished and placed in the class of things that are obsolete. Every piece of merchandise—everything you buy, everything you pay for, everything the exhibitor needs and buys—costs a great deal more than it did in 1916 and 1917. In the face of such conditions why should prices of our seats remain at a standstill? When the butcher, the baker and other storekeepers pay more for their merchandise, what do they do? Add their regular percentage of profit and pass it to the public, and the public pays with very little complaining. And so it would be if the exhibitors did the same. We simply cannot remain in the rut if we are to continue business. Advanced prices are a step toward progressiveness, and they enable the exhibitor to keep up the quality of his productions and the general atmosphere about his theatre. The public would take kindly to the advanced prices if action was unanimous. They could not be surprised, because they realize the situation and thoroughly understand that the theatre owner has just as much right to raise prices when his operating costs increase as has the shoe merchant, the hatter, the baker, the jeweler, the laundry owner, the cleaner and dyer, etc."

New Managers for Kunsky Houses.

John H. Kunsky announces a number of changes in his staff of managers. Fred M. Shafer, manager of the Liberty Theatre, has resigned, taking effect September 21, to manage the Academy of Music in New York for William Fox. He will be succeeded by L. H. Gardner, who will book the theatre in addition to booking and managing the Garden, Royal and Empress theatres, all of which are Kunsky houses. Russell G. Pearce, manager of the Adams Theatre, has resigned, and up to the time of writing Mr. Kunsky had made no announcement of his successor.

Combination Program at the Majestic.

For the week of September 29 Manager M. W. McGee, of the Majestic Theatre, Detroit, has booked a combination program from the George Kleine exchange. He will feature "Behind the Lines in Italy," with "In the Fog" (Raymond McKee is the star) as an added attraction. He expects to do some big things in the way of advertising and publicity to put over this combination entertainment.

Ferry Field Theatre Raises Prices.

Among the largest and finest residential theatres in Detroit is the Ferry Field Theatre at Grand River and the Boulevard, managed by Hal Smith. In view of the increased cost of operation these days and the fact that he wanted to continue giving his patrons the very best the market affords, Mr. Smith decided it was necessary to get more money at the box office for his seats. He raised the price of every seat five cents, made an intelligent and comprehensive explanation to his patrons on the screen and in his program, and the result is that since September 1, when the new schedule took effect, he has been enjoying an increased gross business, while his number of patrons has not fallen off. His prices now are 15, 25 and 30 cents. He uses a seven-piece orchestra besides the organist.

Fox Special Starts on Indefinite Run.

"The Prussian Cur," a big Fox Special, will play an indefinite engagement at the Detroit Opera House starting about the latter part of September. It is to be given an elaborate presentation, a special set of decorations are to ornament the lobby of the theatre, and the town is to be heavily billed both in the newspapers and billboards.

Will Continue to Release Griffith Film.

Lest there may be a shadow of doubt the writer is asked to mention in these columns that "The Hearts of the World," Griffith's production, will continue to be released through the Dawn Masterplay Company. This picture is practically owned for Michigan by Charles Seaman, of Grand Rapids, and Arthur S. Hyman, of Detroit. It is now in its thirteenth week at the new Campus Theatre, holding the Detroit record for long runs. Four prints are booked throughout Michigan for many weeks to come, and everywhere it is proving a big box office attraction. Manager Hyman states that following its run at the Campus Theatre bookings will be arranged with other Detroit exhibitors.

Leases the Duplex Theatre.

The Duplex Theatre, East Grand Boulevard near Woodward, Detroit, which has had a checkered career since its inception, has been leased by Clare and Graham Hoffman. These men formerly conducted the Colonial and Palace theatres—in fact, they promoted both houses. They are giving their individual attention to the Duplex, and believe they can make it a profitable proposition. The Duplex, as the name implies, has two auditoriums under the same roof. One auditorium, however, is operated on week days, the other being rented out for Christian Science meetings.

Bert Williams Resigns.

Bert Williams, for many years connected with the Woodward Theatres Company, being general manager for the past several years, has resigned to devote his entire time to the management of the Palace, a vaudeville theatre on Monroe avenue. Theodore Maxwell succeeds Mr. Williams at the Woodward Theatre Company. He has been with the firm since its inception.

Blythe to Manage a Liberty Theatre.

Dave Blythe, former manager of the Drury Lane Theatre, and recently Detroit salesman for the Fox Film Corporation, has tendered his resignation, and shortly will be leaving for one of the Liberty theatres at a southern cantonment.

Hunter Enlarges the Palace.

J. B. Hunter, of the Palace Theatre, Grand Ledge, has just completed enlarging his theatre, making extensive improvements and building a marquee over the sidewalk.

Many Bookings on "Hearts of the World."

E. C. Beatty, general manager of the Butterfield Enterprises in Michigan, has rebooked "Hearts of the World" for his entire circuit, starting the first week in October. This means it will play again in Battle Creek, Bay City, Saginaw, Flint, Jackson, Lansing and Kalamazoo.

Charles Seaman, of Grand Rapids, has rebooked "Hearts of the World" for Powers Theatre for October.

Paul Schlossman played "Hearts of the World" for three days at his Regent Theatre, Muskegon, to such enormous business that he has rebooked it.

"Five prints are working solidly on 'Hearts of the World,'" said Arthur S. Hyman, of the Dawn Masterplay Company, "and we have yet to run across a single exhibitor throughout the entire state who has not made a big profit with this Griffith production."

Orders Extra Prints of Metro's "Kaiser."

John Niebes, of the Dawn Theatre, Detroit, says he broke his house record with "To Hell With the Kaiser." This Metro special, according to Manager Stanley W. Hatch, is going so strong that extra prints have been ordered and bookings are now being made way into December and January. "It's booking stronger than any special I have ever handled," said Manager Hatch.

To Handle "Klondike" Film in Detroit.

Under a new releasing plan in Michigan "Carmen of the Klondike" is being sold in Detroit by the Triangle exchange, while outside of Detroit it has been sold to George Pulmer Pound. He is playing the picture everywhere on a percentage arrangement. Both in and out of Detroit this Triangle film has many bookings.

Signs for All Fox Releases.

Lipp & Cross, of Battle Creek, have signed a contract to take 100 per cent. of the output of the William Fox exchange. This includes the Fox Specials, Fox-Standards, Fox-Sunshine Comedies, Mutt and Jeff Cartoons, Victory and Excel brands of program pictures.

Simons Helps Swell Patriotic Funds.

Elwyn M. Simons, of Adrian, Mich., who operates the New Family and Garden Theatres, has a unique display at the Lenawee County Fair. He has a small tent theatre, seating 102 persons, and is showing Official War Pictures. He makes no admission charge, but patrons are asked or urged to contribute as they go out, the amount of their contribution depending on what they actually believe the show to have been worth. The receipts from the theatre will go to one of the patriotic funds. Mr. Simons and his assistant, Ernie Raiser, distributed many souvenirs and considerable literature regarding the Family and Garden Theatres and the coming film attractions there.

Victory Singing Successful at Regent.

Victory singing is a big success at the Regent Theatre, Detroit, where it is being conducted for several weeks under the auspices of Henry Santrey. The most popular war songs are sung, with the enpieces, the audience becomes highly entire audience singing. Led by Mr. Santrey and the Regent orchestra of thirty-five thusiastic and patriotic, and the scene at every performance is one long to be remembered by those who participate.

Detroit Brevities.

Alvin Smith has been appointed manager of the Fine Arts, Detroit. He formerly managed the Gratiot, Globe and Liberty theatres.

Harry Rapf, producer of "Today" and "The Mad Lover" was in Detroit on September 7 conferring with Joseph Horwitz, of the Foursquare Exchange, who recently bought these pictures for Michigan.

The Moving Picture World correspondent is in receipt of a letter from Harry S. Lorch in which he states he is now manager of the Liberty Theatre, Camp Pike, Ark. Mr. Lorch was for twelve months manager of the State Film Company in Detroit, and has previously been connected with the Butterfield circuit of theatres throughout the state.

Ernest H. Fobres has been appointed manager of the Detroit branch of the United Theatre Equipment Company, succeeding L. J. Gardiner, who resigned to devote his entire time to the sales of the Gardiner Velvet Gold Fibre Screen, which is sold through the various U. T. E. branches. Mr. Fobres has been with the Detroit office for the past year.

EXHIBITORS AWAIT LIBERTY LOAN FILMS

Minneapolis Theatremen Are Pleased to Hear That Pictures to Aid Next Drive Will Soon Be on Hand

By William Edward Mulligan, Minneapolis Journal, Minneapolis, Minn.

WITH all patriotic pictures reported booking well and doing heavy business in the Northwest, the announcement of several Minneapolis exchanges that they are soon to receive new special productions to assist the Fourth Liberty Loan Drive has been received with great interest by exhibitors in this territory.

Hal Hodes, Universal publicity man from New York, who was in Minneapolis on his journey around the circuit in the interest of the latest Jewel production, "Crashing Through to Berlin," said that the "country is going wild" over timely patriotic pictures and that the pictures themselves were proving "a fine tonic for the morale of the American public."

E. R. Pearson, manager of the Minneapolis First National exchange, reports exceptionally heavy bookings on the latest First National release, "Italy's Flaming Front." Other government specials are going over big, he says.

"To Hell with the Kaiser" has broken all box office records at the Rex Theatre in Duluth. Thomas Furness, proprietor, wired A. H. Fisher, manager of the Minneapolis Metro exchange. Manager Fisher states that within a few days he will receive three Liberty Loan pictures, starring Harold Lockwood, Emily Stevens and Edith Storey.

"The Sinking of the Lusitania," Windsor McCay's pen pictures of the great sea tragedy, was introduced in the Northwest at the New Lyric of Minneapolis. Patrons of the Lyric were well pleased and the clever animation caused much comment. The Lyric advertised the one-reeler with original drawings by McCay in its lobby.

Mr. Hodes, Universal's publicity expert, came to Minneapolis from Chicago, where he made arrangements to show "Crashing Through to Berlin" at the auditorium under the auspices of the Chicago Examiner. The net receipts from this showing for the first week were more than $10,000, according to the Examiner, and Mr. Hodes reports that in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Atlanta, where the chronological film history of the war has been shown, the feature played to big business. The picture will be given its initial showing in the Northwest at the Minneapolis Strand Theatre the week of Sept. 29, during the Fourth Liberty Loan Drive, Manager L. H. Coen of the Minneapolis Universal exchange has announced. He states that this showing will receive the biggest newspaper advertising boost that any film shown in Minneapolis has ever received.

Bickert Works for Uncle Sam.

M. C. Bickert, formerly associated with A. J. Kavanagh of Grand Forks, N. D., is now manager of motion pictures for the committee of public information division of films. He has been spending several weeks in Northwest territory.

Takes Crockton Theatre.

Theodore Hays, manager of the New Garrick, of St. Paul, has taken a lease on the Grand Theatre, of Crockton, Minn., formerly operated by A. J. Kavanagh, of Grand Forks, N. D.

New Grand Forks Theatre.

Joe Isaacs, formerly owner of the Lyceum Theatre at Moorhead, Minn., has opened a new theatre at Grand Forks, N. D., and named it "The Strand." The new showhouse has a seating capacity of 510 and has a beautiful interior.

New Park Theatre Is Enlarged.

Joe Friedman has made many new improvements and enlarged his New Park Theatre at St. Paul. The house has been entirely redecorated and is now in fine shape. Mr. Friedman has engaged a ten-piece jazz orchestra and has for its leader David Rubenoff, a clever young Russian violinist. As part of an extensive advertising campaign, Mr. Friedman is billboarding St. Paul with 150 eight-sheets which will remain on the boards for 60 days. He reports that the new changes are bringing results.

Lestico Visits Range; Reports Good Business.

W. C. Lestico, manager of the Minneapolis Triange office, after a flying trip to Duluth, Superior, and towns on the Iron range, reports excellent business in that territory. He states that range exhibitors are well pleased with Triangle service.

Burgess to Minneapolis.

Bruce Burgess, formerly with the Des Moines Paramount-Artcraft office, the oldest film salesman in Iowa in point of service, has been transferred to the Minneapolis Paramount exchange.

Peavey on Honeymoon.

C. L. Peavey, manager of the Minneapolis Paramount exchange, is spending a two weeks' wedding trip with his bride at Battle Creek, Mich.

Rollo in Minneapolis.

S. J. Rollo, assistant general manager of the Mutual Film Corporation of Chicago, spent a week in Minneapolis looking into the local situation with Dan Donnellan, Minneapolis exchange manager. Mr. Rollo was enthusiastic over Mutual accomplishments and predicted exhibitors may look for bigger things from that concern.

McGowan Visits Exchange.

C. H. McGowan, assistant general manager for the Universal Film Manufacturing Company of New York, spent three days in Minneapolis last week going over Universal affairs with Louis H. Coen, Minneapolis exchange manager. The film business, considering the war and other elements, is doing well, according to Mr. McGowan. Mr. McGowan was making a business trip taking him to Detroit, Chicago, Omaha, Indianapolis and Cincinnati. At the conclusion of the trip he will take a vacation in the Adirondacks.

New R. & F. Theatre.

Ruben & Finkelstein, who are among the leading exhibitors of the Northwest, added another theatre to their string on Thursday, Sept. 12, when they took over the New Garden in Minneapolis. Billy B. Watson, who has been managing the theatre for eighteen months, will continue to look after the theatre's interests, as well as to assist with the management of several other R. & F. theatres.

Northwest Brevities.

Alderman Tony Zambrocki has opened his new theatre at Winona, Minn.

J. L. Hasbrouck has leased the Opera House at Clinton, Minn.

O. D. Benjamin is the new proprietor of the moving picture theatre at Farmington, Minn.

John Chromy has made arrangements to open a moving picture theatre at Waubun, Minn.

Mrs. Phil Bibb has disposed of her interest in the Grand Theatre at Walker, Minn., to A. A. Green.

L. G. Rocsner, of the Colonial Theatre at Winona, Minn., heads a company which will take over all the theatres in the city.

William J. Rezac, manager of the Lyric Theatre at Virginia, Minn., will in the near future open the Grand Theatre in that community.

M. F. Keegan has disposed of his picture theatre at Maple Lake, Minn.

Nic Linabitz has purchased the moving picture theatre at Hebron, N. D., from Professor Felton.

Editor Vernon of the Forman News has purchased the picture theatre at Forman, N. D., from Charles Wallock.

Logan Storey and Herb E. Cook, both of Minneapolis, have purchased a moving picture theatre at Marshalltown, Ia.

DISPLAY HONOR CERTIFICATES IN LOBBY

Dallas Exhibitors Place on View Evidence of Official Recognition of Aid to Four Minute Men

By Phil Fox, Times-Herald, Dallas, Texas.

PRESENTATION of honor certificates and autographed photographs of President Wilson to Dallas motion picture exhibitors who have aided the Four-Minute Men's campaigns here took place on the second Saturday in September.

William H. Atwell, former United States attorney, made the presentations at the various theatres, assuring their proprietors that their patriotism in aiding the Four-Minute speakers since the declaration of war was due signal recognition. The honor certificates, neatly framed, are now hung in the lobbies of the Old Mill, Queen, Majestic, Gaiety, Jefferson, Washington, Cliff Queen, Crystal, Ideal, Colonial and Columbia theatres in Dallas.

Makes Donation to Canteen Fund.

A benefit performance was given early in September by W. O. Williamson, of the New Theatre at San Marcos, Texas, for the San Marcos troop of national guard cavalry who are soon to go on patrol duty along the Mexican border. The net receipts of one day's exhibition of Chaplin's "Dog's Life" were donated to the troop's canteen fund.

Directs Fourth Loan Drive Publicity.

When Dallas business men wanted a live wire to direct the publicity for the Fourth Liberty Loan they snatched Douglas Hawley away from his desk at the First National Exhibitors' Circuit offices and told him to get on the job.

Hawley, who until he entered the film business was one of the best newspapermen in the South, at once formed a compact organization for boosting the bonds which will help beat the Hun. He appointed city editors of the four Dallas dailies on his committee, and is directing this part of the big campaign, in the home city of the Eleventh Federal Reserve District. His slogan, "Join the Fighting Fourth," met with an immediate response.

Kelley Now Smiles in Oak Cliff, Too.

Smiling Jimmy Kelley, of General, expects the official Italian war pictures to go big in Texas. The Jefferson Theatre will show the big war feature in Dallas, and the Queen will show it in Fort Worth. From El Paso the Italian consul wires that he wishes to arrange for a special exhibition there. Mr. Kelley has purchased a new home at Tenth and Clinton streets, Oak Cliff, and plans a house warming for his friends in the near future.

Dismiss Case Against Exhibitor Zuccara.

Andrew Zuccara, of the Queen Theatre, Fort Worth, was arrested and tried in police court early in September on charges of displaying signs on the sidewalk in the business section of town.

In order to aid the registration under the selective draft on September 12, Zuccara displayed a big canvas poster in front of his theatre reading, "All men between 18 and 45 who love their country must register." He also displayed a big picture of President Wilson and the flags of the allied nations.

"I don't care how many times they arrest me," Zuccara told the police judge. "What is a technicality when the country is at war, and we should all do our patriotic duty. The theatres of the nation were asked by the Government to give publicity to registration day." The case was dismissed.

Staged Benefit for Dallas Soldiers.

For the benefit of the Dallas soldiers with the Rainbow Division in France, Hulsey's Hippodrome Theatre showing "The Prussian Cur" and the Jefferson Theatre showing "Smashing Through to Berlin" staged a week's benefit commencing Monday, September 15. Half of the money from ticket sales made by members of the Rainbow Motor Club, an organization composed of mothers of Rainbow Division men, went into the club's treasury.

The neat sum of money raised will be used to purchase Christmas presents to be forwarded to the soldiers of two Dallas motor truck companies with the Rainbows.

Will Run Gerard's Film During Loan Drive

Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany" will be run at the Hulsey Theatre in Texas during the Liberty Loan campaign in October to stimulate patriotism. E. H. Hulsey will invest all the money received from these exhibitions in Liberty Bonds. The Hulsey houses in Dallas, Houston, Galveston and Waco will participate in this plan.

To Handle Theatre Advertising.

Fort Worth exhibitors have employed Franklin H. McMahon, of Dallas, to handle all their advertising for them. Mr. McMahon is an advertising man well known in North Texas, and while in Dallas made quite a name for himself as a film critic. He was with the advertising department of the Times-Herald, and also at various times handled publicity and advertising for several large Dallas mercantile concerns. In Fort Worth he will write advertisements and plan features for practically every important motion picture house in the city.

Private Peat Coming to Dallas.

Private Peat, in person, is coming to Dallas to deliver a war lecture under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club. Manager Harry Owens, of Paramount, is trying to see if he can secure the release of Private Peat's big war film, so that it can be shown in Dallas at the same time the celebrated fighting man is paying his visit.

New Picture Theatre at Columbus.

Columbus, Texas., has a new theatre. It was built by Frnka & Frnka, and is called the Columbia. It will show pictures only. The senior member of the firm, J. C. Frnka, is a well known attorney. His nephew will have active charge of the show. The opening attraction of the Columbia was "Pershing's Crusaders."

Exhibitors Who Visited Dallas.

Many exhibitors visited Dallas film row in mid-September. Among them were Sam Parish, Dixie Theatre, Huntsville; J. T. Ferguson, Deport Theatre, Deport; W. A. Stuckert, Rex Theatre, Brenham; William Batsell, King Theatre, Sherman; A. L. Middleton, Queen Theatre, DeQueen, Ark.; Don Stevenson, Alamo Theatre, Waco, and Peter Jecker, Rex Theatre, Victoria.

Dallas Shorts.

Many Texas exhibitors have recently interested themselves in the newly developed oil fields in the northern part of the state. According to film row gossip two who have struck it rich lately are Joe Davenport, of Waxahachie, and P. C. Levy, of Fort Worth.

Manager Ned Depinet, of Consolidated, announces that John D. Jones, well known Texas film man, has joined his force as a special salesman.

The Jefferson Theatre Company of Dallas was recently granted the right by the state department to increase its capital stock from $7,500 to $50,000.

WANTS CONTRACT VIOLATIONS STOPPED

Cleveland Exchange Managers Board Says Pacts Between Exhibitors and Distributors Must Be Observed

By M. A. Malaney, 206 Sloan Building, Cleveland, Ohio.

THE Board of Motion Picture Exchange Managers of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce has notified all exhibitors in the territory served by the Cleveland exchanges that in the future they will require every contract made to be fully lived up to.

The board also warns all exhibitors to know thoroughly what is contained in each contract they sign so that there can be no misunderstandings afterward.

The notice says:

Due to the fact that exchanges do not use a uniform contract, we urge you to be fully conversant with the terms and conditions of each and every contract you sign. The practice of signing contracts by exhibitors and then ignoring those contracts is fundamentally unsound and must be discontinued at once.

You are hereby notified that this Board will require the fulfillment by the exchange as well as the exhibitor of every signed and approved contract. Every violation by an exchange or an exhibitor is to be reported to the secretary of this Board with the assurance of prompt and definite action. This proposition covers not only infringement by one exhibitor on the contract of another exhibitor, but also the booking and paying for pictures in accordance with the terms of the contract. Furthermore, the failure of an exhibitor to give an exchange proper cancellation notice—in other words, the complete fulfillment of the contract—will be given special attention by this Board.

If all exhibitors will acquaint themselves with the terms and conditions of the contracts which they sign, we are positive that many acrimonious discussions between the contracting parties will be avoided. That being the case we will have, in a measure, accomplished the second purpose of this Board, which is as follows:

"To bring about a more harmonious and thorough understanding between the various factors of the motion picture business, particularly exhibitors and exchanges."

This letter is being sent to you by registered mail, so that there will be absolutely no excuse for an exhibitor's saying that he had no knowledge of the intentions of the Board relative to contracts.

In conclusion, we will remind you that the approved contract will in all cases govern the exhibitor and the exchange. This means that verbal agreements will at no time be recognized.

Unique Lobby Display for Artcraft Film.

For "Bound in Morocco," an Artcraft picture, the Mall Theatre, Cleveland, had a very clever lobby display. Manager Carroll fashioned a big frame to represent a book about 5 by 7 feet, and had it covered with a paper imitation of morocco. In the centre he had a head of Doug Fairbanks. The book, properly lettered and Doug's face on it with a winsome grin, caught the eyes of everybody.

Phelos Leaves for Camp Sherman.

Melton Phelos, theatre manager of Elyria, has gone to Camp Sherman, Ohio, where he now is being directed by Uncle Sam in the greatest drama in the history of the world.

Armstrong Sells His Nemo Theatre.

The Select Amusement Company has purchased the Nemo Theatre, Cleveland, from G. W. Armstrong. This is the third theatre recently acquired by the Select. Mr. Armstrong expects to enter the service of Uncle Sam.

Advertising Metro's "Kaiser" Film.

How George Schade, of the Schade Theatre, Sandusky, Ohio, put over "To Hell with the Kaiser," a Metro feature, is clearly shown by the accompanying photograph. This big front display attracted enormous attention and brought big business.

Schade made this display by stuffing costumes of the Kaiser and the Devil with sawdust and mounting them on a platform; he fastened it to the top of the markee. The cut-out, showing the two Yanks holding the Kaiser, was made from a poster, while in front of the theatre at the curb he arranged three graves, labeled with headstones; one for the "Clown Prince," another for "Hindenbug," and the third for the "Kaiser."

Rochester News Letter

By L. B. Skeffington, 61 Main Street, East Rochester, N. Y.

Takes Advantages of Mormon Campaign.

ROCHESTER.—Just now one of the biggest issues in this section is the Mormon Church. Mormon missionaries having quietly conducted a campaign of proselyting in Western and Central New York, the forces opposed to Mormonism are thoroughly aroused and are organizing for a giant campaign. Taking advantage of the situation and with the true instincts of showmanship, Albert A. Fennyvessey, president and general manager of the Theatres Operating Company, has secured control of "The Mormon Maid" and plans to feature the film in several of his local theatres. The picture is being shown at the Rialto all this week. The picture being calculated to show Mormonism in a poor light, the membership of the Rochester Ministerial League was invited to attend the preliminary screening at the Strand Theatre, and since have been urging their congregations from the pulpit to see the picture.

Four Stars in Cridler's Service Flag.

Manager E. B. Cridler, of the picture palace in the village of Dansville, near here, has hung out a service flag with four stars on it for former employees of his house. The men who have joined the colors are: Charles Friedel, Howard Morse, George Rechtenwald and Harold Sorg.

Assigned to Assist Films Director.

Thomas Martell, captain of the local protectives and assistant to Edgar F. Edwards, secretary and manager of the Rochester Exposition Association, has tendered his resignation to accept a position with the commission on training camp activities. He has been assigned to assist the director of the division of films.

JERNBERG REOPENS PROVINCE THEATRE

After Undergoing Thorough Overhauling Big Winnipeg Picture House Blazes Forth in New Dress

By W. M. Gladish, 33 Wineva Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

THE big Province Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, was re-opened on Monday, September 16, with the presentation of "Revelation." The house had been dark for six weeks, during which time it bad been completely done over. The seating capacity has been increased by three bundred through the construction of a balcony which also accommodates tbe new projection room. The latter has a film box set into the wall while tbe film rewinder is also enclosed. In a second room is to be found the equipment other than the projection machines proper. A novel arrangement has been effected with the switchboard for the house lights. This has been placed so that the switches may be handled from either the inside or the outside of the projection room.

On the third floor are two large and airy offices for Manager Jernberg and his assistants, while a third room is used for advertising matter. On the South side of this floor is found the large motor which operates all the lighting and projection equipment. Close by is the main ventilating fan. Four large exhaust "registers" have been placed in the orchestra floor and two more have been placed in each wall, so that the foul air in all parts of the building is quickly discharged. The pipe to each of these registers is independently controlled.

The lobby walls have been covered witb marble panels, the large slabs reaching to within three inches of the ceiling. In the centre is a commodious box office with accommodation for two cashiers. Three new illuminating fixtures cast a warm glow around the entrance and lobby.

The auditorium itself presents a beautiful appearance with the new decorative effect which consists of a color scheme combining cream, old ivory, green and gold. At the rear of the main floor are a dozen loges with a seating capacity of one hundred and two.

The Province Theatre will now accommodate about 1,200 persons. A handsome marquee has been erected over the main entrance and a fine electric sign has also been placed in position.

Specialty Takes On New Managers.

The Specialty Film Import, Limited, Canadian distributors of Pathe releases, are now represented in Western Canada by two new managers. G. S. Scoullar, until recently a boot and shoe merchant, became Vancouver branch manager for the company and made good, with the result that he is now in general charge of the Western business of the company.

Announcement is also made by L. E. Ouimet, of Montreal, president and general manager of the Specialty Company, that Thomas Watson comes from Calgary and takes the place of Ralph Miller, who is now manager of the Starland Theatre, Winnipeg. Mr. Ouimet was recently a visitor in Winnipeg.

Avenue Theatre Being Remodeled.

Although only one year old, the Avenue Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, is being remodeled. The front has been torn out and a confectionary store is being made into a rest room for patrons. The furnishing of the room will be quite elaborate, it is promised by Manager George Graham, who also announces that tbe future policy of the theatre will be to change programs twice weekly instead of three times each week. Special illuminating effects will be obtained on the new front, the electrical display restrictions not affecting Winnipeg as in other Eastern cities.

Nine Theatres Raise Admissions.

No less than nine of Montreal's prominent moving picture theatres raised tbeir admission prices on Sunday, Sept. 15, following the holding of a series of conferences among the various managers. The theatres affected include the New Grand, Tivoli, Strand, Regent, Holman, Fairyland, Canada, Dominion and Connaught Theatres. The general admission price has been raised from 20 cents to 25 cents, but the new prices will include war tax so that the real difference will be three cents.

Allens Open Their Twentieth House.

The new Allen Theatre at 5038 Sherbrooke street, West Montreal, opened on Monday evening, September 16, with the first presentation of "Hearts of the World" in Montreal under the temporary management of B. L. Cronk, general manager of the Allen Theatre Enterprises. The company, which erected the theatre, consists of a number of business men in the West End of the city, who saw the need for an attractive theatre in their locality. The company was formed two years ago and before its completion was taken over by Jule and J. J. Allen of Toronto under a long lease. The new house has 1,200 seats and there are no balconies, the interior being in the form of an amphitheatre.

After the run of "Hearts of the World," which is scheduled to cover a period of two weeks at least, the theatre will go on its regular policy of three program changes each week. The regular price of admission to be adopted will be 20 cents, with 35 cents for loge seats.

General Manager Cronk has been in Montreal for six or seven weeks in order to give the house a good start. One of the features was the big advertising campaign. Half-page space was used in several local papers and other advertising has appeared on bill boards and street cars.

The Allens are now actually operating some twenty theatres from Edmonton to Montreal and other theatres are being built.

STRIKE HINDERS DELIVERY OF FILMS

Refusal of Express Employes to Work Handicaps Shipments of Maritime Provinces Exchanges

By Alice Fairweather, care of Standard, St. John, N. B.

THE strike of the Dominion Express employes created for a time an awkward situation in the film business of the Provinces. As has been frequently stated, pictures are closely booked in this part of the territory and the loss of a day or even a few hours makes a mix-up in the booking. The strike began on Tuesday, Sept. 10, and ended the following Friday. The Canadian Express Company go to practically the same points except the places on the shore line like St. Stephan, St. Andrews and towns above Fredericton, but they found it difficult to handle all the business. All the film delivered in St. John on Tuesday had to be taken from the station by the exchanges themselves, and as the teamsters were sympathetic it meant carrying by hand usually.

The Specialty Film Import hired an automobile which conveyed its films from Digby to Windsor, N. S., and from Moncton to Campbellton until the pictures were shipped from Montreal by trains. No reports of darkened houses on account of the strike were heard, but there were some anxious moments regarding serials and specially advertised features.

Women's Council Indorses Artcraft Picture.

The Women's Council of St. John at a recent meeting by a standing vote strongly indorsed the Artcraft picture "The Blue Bird" as a fine example of a good motion picture and a splendid influence for good. The matter was brought to the notice of the Council by Miss Fairweather, who spoke of the fact that last year in the agitation for a woman censor there had been much adverse criticism of the kind of pictures shown on St. John screens, and it was pointed out that with the showing of such a picture as "The Blue Bird" an opportunity was given the women of St. John to show their appreciation of a good picture. The presiding officer at the meeting, Miss Grace Leavitt, spoke of the beauty of the film, and Mrs. A. C. D. Wilson, a well known authority on matters theatrical and herself a producer of plays, seconded the motion and made a speech in favor of the motion which was moved by Mrs. E. Flewelling. This was published in all the papers.

May Move Exchanges from St. John.

G. A. Margetts, of the Canadian Universal, has returned from a trip to Montreal and Toronto. While in Toronto, Mr. Margetts, who is president of the Exchange Managers' Association, had a conference with the heads of the trade in that city, and the decision arrived at in regard to the moving of the exchanges from St. John is that it will be necessary unless some arrangement is made with the civic authorities in regard to the lessening of the taxes. The managers state that it is impossible to do business in St. John at the present rate of taxation except at a distinct loss.

Another matter taken up was the desired change in the censorship system. It is hoped to have this system changed to that of Nova Scotia, whereby films will have to be censored only when they have been condemned in other Provinces, thus doing away with much loss of time and some expense. This will betaken up with the Government and it is hoped by the exchanges that they may be brought to see the reasonableness of the request. In Montreal Mr. Margetts met Joseph Brandt, the New York representative; Claire Hague, the Canadian general manager, and Phil Hazza, manager of the Montreal office. Mr. Brandt outlined the policy for the coming season and discussed plans for next year.

Letters have been received by the newspapers from the Department of Soldier's Civil Re-establishment of Ottawa, asking that the press here give publicity to items regarding the showing in St. John of the five-reel feature "Canada's Work for Wounded Soldiers," which will shortly be booked in this city. The newspapers are asked to use cuts illustrating the film in the motion picture department of the paper the Saturday previous to the release of the picture.

Spencer Makes Theatre Purchases.

A late development in St. John is the purchase by F. G. Spencer of the property on Charlotte street, the site of the Unique Theatre; Mr. Spencer has been operating this theatre for ten years and the site is unquestionably one of the finest in the city for theatrical purposes. The lot extends almost through to the next block with right of way to Germaon street. Mr. Spencer has also taken over the Strand Theatre in Truro formerly owned by K. Keltie and will run it in conjunction with the Princess, the two houses varying their policy.

Mr. Spencer is spending some time this week in Toronto, Ontario, on business in connection with his State Right picture, "Damaged Goods," which he has purchased for that Province and Quebec. The ban has not yet been removed by the censors in either of these Provinces, but in every other part of Canada the picture has been successfully exploited.

Will Celebrate Fifth Anniversary.

The Imperial is making preparations for the showing of "The Blue Bird," an Artcraft picture, the last three days of the week. This coming week marks the fifth anniversary of the opening of the Imperial Theatre. Mary Pickford in M'liss is chosen for the first three days of the celebration with "The Blue Birds" to follow, and already the windows are filled with realistic blue birds in flight. The Imperial along with other theatres allowed collecting to be done in the theatre on the day of September 5, when a tag day was held for The Navy League.

Canadian Theatre Notes.

The Gaiety Theatre in Fairville with T. J. O'Rourke manager has been reopened after being closed some ten days for repairs.

H. H. McArthur of the Lyceum Theatre, Charlottetown, was in town Friday of this week and states that he has closed his theatre there for a few weeks as he hopes to move into more centrally located quarters.

G. L. Smith of the Opera House, Campbellton; W. R. McLaren of Grand Falls, and W. W. O. Fenety of the Gaiety, Fredericton, were in town this week arranging for fall program.

Louis Connor of Black's Harbor has reopened his theatre at the Harbor and is running Mutual pictures.

Utica News

By Clifford A. Carroll, Utica Observer, Utica, N. Y.

Leo Buskey Enters the Navy.

LEO BUSKEY, an operator, left last week for the Naval Training Station at Pelham Bay. His employer, A. Van Natta, manager of the Rialto, presented him with a wrist watch upon his departure. More than half of the members of the operators local in this city are now in the service.

DeLuxe Theatre Has Newspaper Matinee.

A newspaper matinee was one of the stunts used by the enterprising management of the DeLuxe Theatre during the past school vacation period with excellent results. On a certain day in the week every child that brought ten old newspapers and one cent war tax were admitted. The theatre was more than crowded each week of the stunt and the advertising possibilities derived were great.

Perhaps more comment was created as a result of the Wild Flower Matinee than the previous one. This scheme was used just before school began. Every child that brought a bouquet of wild flowers to the DeLuxe on a certain afternoon, were admitted only upon the payment of one cent war tax. The child bringing the best one and the child bringing the largest one were awarded suitable prizes. After the house had filled up for the afternoon the flowers were distributed among the various hospitals here. Manager Hatheway of the DeLuxe is a livewire and is constantly springing new stunts upon his patrons that pack his house every day.

Park Theatre Has New Manager.

Charles E. Faust, formerly road man for Paramount and Artcraft in New England, will be the manager of the Park Theatre, Utica, now operated by the Goldstein Brothers Amusement Company of Springfield, Mass. Vaudeville and pictures will be the policy and the opening will take place Monday, Sept. 23. Clifford A. Carroll, who was with the Park last year, is press agent for the theatre.

Gerard's Film in Utica for Third Time.

"My Four Years in Germany," Gerard's picture, played the New Orpheum last Friday for the third time in this city, and capacity business was the rule all day.

W. S. S. RALLY AT BALTIMORE'S GARDEN

Secure Pledges for $250,000 of Thrift Stamps of Which $192,000 Was Subscribed to by Clubs

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mt. Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

THROUGH the efforts of Louis A. DeHoff, the indefatigable manager of the New Theatre, a gigantic patriotic rally was held at the Garden Theatre, Lexington street at Park avenue, of which Charles E. Whitehurst is the president, and pledges amounting to $250,000 for War Savings Stamps were made on Sunday night, September 15.

A fine program of music and pictures was given, and the chief attraction of the event was the personal appearance of June Caprice, the pretty Fox Film Company star, who not only appeared on the stage and stated that it gave her pleasure to stay over in Baltimore for the event to aid the good cause, but personally subscribed to $1,000 worth of stamps herself, challenging the men in the audience to match her. One did. She appeared very radiant with a huge bouquet of roses as she was presented to the audience.

The affair was held under the auspices of the United Social Service Clubs, Inc., made up of eight clubs of the organization, which subscribed to $192,000 of the total amount pledged. Several forceful patriotic addresses were made.

Victoria Manager in Service.

Among the three hundred limited service men from Baltimore who recently went to Camp Humphreys was Abe Seligman, formerly manager of Nixon's Victoria Theatre, 415 East Baltimore street. Mr. Seligman has been connected with the Nixon-Nirdlinger interests for several years. Before becoming manager of the Victoria, he acted as treasurer of that theatre, and later, after having been associated with theatres in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia on the Nixon-Nirdlinger circuit, he returned to the Victoria as manager.

DeHoff Arranges Shows for Soldiers.

In order to give the soldier lads who come to Baltimore to spend the weekends at the United Service Hotel, at Lexington and Holliday streets, an enjoyable Sunday, Manager L. A. DeHoff, of the New Theatre, 210 West Lexington street, has installed a screen and a projection machine in a large room of this hotel, so that two shows can be given each Sunday. He has made arrangements so that the program of pictures used at the New Theatre the previous week can be used for the two Sunday shows. On taking the matter up with the Operator's Union, Local No. 181, and the Musical Union of Baltimore, both consented to lend operators and musicians, without charge, for the performances given to the soldiers. Thus by the combined efforts of Mr. De Hoff and the two unions, the khaki boys are assured two pleasant programs of music and pictures on Sundays.

Griffith Film at Ford's.

D. W. Griffith's "Hearts of the World" received a tremendous ovation at Ford's Opera House, where it was booked by Charles E. and John T. Ford, co-proprietors, during the week of September 16. It is estimated that the audience numbered 2,300 on the first night and hundreds were turned away.

Depkin Aids Service Club.

Bernard Depkin, Jr., supervising manager of the Parkway interests, is always ready to give a helping hand to aid the soldiers. He gladly co-operated with the United Service Club of Baltimore in arranging benefit performances which were given at the Parkway, Strand and Wizard theatres, the most popular on the Parkway circuit, on Thursday and Friday, September 12 and 13. Mrs. Charles Lewis, of the Service Club, had charge of the affair. The event was a complete success and 5,000 tickets were sold. The purpose of the benefit was to buy blankets for the cots at the United Service Club, which wants to raise $2,000 for the purpose.

Shubert Visits Baltimore.

For the purpose of making an inspection of the Auditorium Theatre, of which Leonard McLaughlin is the manager, Lee Shubert came to Baltimore on Monday and went over the house with Mr. McLaughlin. He is said to have been pleased with the playhouse and is optimistic regarding the present season. The Auditorium is on the Shubert circuit.

Ford Commended for Gallant Action.

For bravery in action, Frank M. Ford, son of John T. Ford, co-proprietor of Ford's Opera House, has been commended by General Pershing, according to word received in Baltimore. He has been awarded the distinguished service cross. He enlisted in April, 1917.

Price Sent to Officers' Training School.

The same spirit of efficiency is being shown by Edward R. Price, who formerly acted as the live wire representative of several film companies in Baltimore, since he joined the army as he displayed while selling films. He went to Camp Meade on June 24. He is now a first sergeant and has now been sent to the officers' training school at Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga. Arthur B. Price, manager of several Baltimore theatres, and Frank Price, also connected with the film industry in Baltimore, who are themselves hustlers, have reason to be proud of their brother "Eddie."

Bell Becomes American Film Representative.

Louis H. Bell, who is well known as a publicity man in Philadelphia, having acted in that capacity for the Metro and Paramount-Artcraft Film Companies and the Nixon-Nirdlinger theatrical interests in that city, is now associated with the American Film Company as their representative for Maryland, Virginia, the District of Columbia and Baltimore territory.

Personals of Baltimore.

The marriage of Miss Elsie Cupero, daughter of Prof. E. V. Cupero, leader of the orchestra at the New Theatre, to Carlin Milburn, has been announced. The ceremony took place on Sunday, September 15.

Harry E. Kahn, who has had eight years' experience in the film business and has managed several theatres in Boston, Mass., has taken over the management of the Waverly Theatre, 3211 Greenmount avenue.

Walter Pacey, who has managed the Garden Theatre, Charles and Cross streets, for a number of years, will now book the pictures for the Hampden Theatre, 911 West 36th street, which is owned by C. A. Hicks.

The Pathe Film Exchange, 210 North Calvert street, of which Nat Glasser is the manager, was visited by Tom North, Pathe District Manager, and Mr. Champion, manager of the Washington Pathe exchange, on Thursday, September 19.

Frank A. Hornig, president of the Maryland Exhibitors' League and proprietor of the Horn and Royal theatres, took an automobile trip to Washington, Pa., last week, with his family. L. A. DeHoff, manager of the New Theatre, looked after his theatres while Mr. Hornig was away.

THREE SEATTLE THEATRES RAISE PRICES

Clemmer Adds the War Tax; the Coliseum and Levy's Orpheum Advance Rate to Twenty-five Cents

By S. J. Anderson, 424 Seaboard Building, Seattle, Wash.

THREE of Seattle's leading motion picture theatres have recently raised their admission prices from the twenty-cent regular admission price that has been the rule among the downtown houses for the last year. The Clemmer was the first to take the step, adding only the war tax to the regular prices already in force. The Coliseum, which had its orchestra augmented to thirty pieces two months ago, has raised to twenty-five cents, with loges at forty cents. The same prices as the Coliseum were established last week at Levy's Orpheum on the opening of the Essanay-Chaplin comedy, "Triple Trouble." The Liberty, the Strand, and the Mission are the only first-run houses in the city now charging only twenty cents

Film Trade Board Discusses New Laws.

At this week's meeting of the Northwest Film Board of Trade, Melvin G. Winstock gave an interpretation of the new revenue law as applied to the motion picture industry, and upon a motion by him it was voted that the attorney for the organization wire to Washington for a complete copy of the law. Discussion as to the probable modification of the law affecting the style of cans to be used in the shipment of films was also brought up during the meeting.

Seattle Men Return from Conventions.

Ed. J. Fisher, official representative of the Washington Theatre Managers' Association, returned this week from a trip to the East, during which he attended the convention in Boston and also the one in Chicago. J. G. von Herberg, of the firm of Jensen & von Herberg, also attended the Chicago convention. On his return journey from that city Mr. von Herberg traveled with Sid Chaplin, who is spending a few days in Seattle before proceeding on to Los Angeles. Another delegate to the Chicago convention from the Pacific Northwest was Herman Brown, of Boise, head of the Idaho organization of exhibitors.

Will Devote Time to Griffith Film.

Mike Rosenberg, who has recently acquired the Northwest rights to "Nine-Tenths of the Law" and "How Stars Shine Away from the Studio," will devote all of his personal attention for the remainder of this season to "Hearts of the World," the Griffith spectacle which he is handling as a road show. He has engaged C. M. Thall to manage his De Luxe Feature Film Company in Seattle during this time. H. B. Dobbs, formerly manager of the Select office, is sales manager.

Mark Thall, Second, Arrives.

C. M. Thall, manager of the De Luxe Feature Film Company and also the manager of the Cassady and McKee Amusement Company, which operates the Victory Theatre at Camp Lewis, was presented by Mrs. Thall on September 5 with a Mark Thall, Second, whom his proud father declares will become as well known in the amusement business as the infant's grandfather, Mark Thall, First, manager of the famous old Alcazar in San Francisco.

Schlaifer Adds to List of Attractions.

Three new pictures have been added to the list of the L. J. Schlaifer Attractions. They are "The Traitor Within the Gates," "Babbling Tongues," and a new Jester comedy, "The Fly Balls." L. J. Schlaifer, who spent the summer in the training camp for marines at Mare Island, has been transferred to the navy yard at Bremerton.

Major Eastabrook Now in France.

Major E. P. Eastabrook, who served for two years as chaplain for the Coast Artillery Corps stationed at Fort Worden and Port Townsend, and who furnished the boys of the post with motion pictures during his entire stay, is now in France with the field artillery. Major Eastabrook did a great service for the boys in giving them entertainment, and the film men who aided him by either giving their pictures outright, or simply charging him enough to cover expenses of handling them, have a great admiration for him. Many of the rented pictures were paid for with his own money.

Blames Autos for Poor Business.

W. W. Kriegel, of Anacortes, says that his business has not increased in proportion to the prosperity of the town and attributes the slackness to the great number of automobiles owned by the working people. These being a new toy for this class of people are being used more for entertainment than their old standby, the motion picture theatre.

Now Owns All Theatres in Baker.

J. P. Cotter, who has been operating the Empress and the Orpheum theatres, in Baker, Ore., has taken over the Baker Theatre, that city, and after remodeling it, opened it as a home for high class vaudeville and motion picture road shows. He has placed girl ushers in all his houses and, as an appropriate costume for war times, has provided them blue skirts, white middies, and white shoes and stockings. Mr. Cotter now controls all the theatres in Baker.

Service Spelled with All Caps.

Seattle exchanges are always emphasizing their service, and once in a while they have a chance to show it. Last week when "The Bargain" failed to arrive at the Weir Theatre, Bellingham, on the proper train, Mike Rosenberg, president of the De Luxe Feature Film Company, who is handling the picture, drove the 130 miles in his automobile and just arrived with the film as the comedy was finished. Ed Dolan, manager of the theatre, was standing out on the street waiting, and Mike says that the look of relief which came over Ed's face when he drove was enough to compensate him for the long drive.

A slightly different case was that of a Tacoma exhibitor who telephoned over to the office of the L. J. Schlaifer Attractions, saying that he had booked a picture for that day and it had not arrived. On looking up this picture on their booking sheet they found that the exhibitor had not booked it, as he seemed to think he had, but they sent a man with the picture over to Tacoma in order that he might not be without a show.

Atlanta News Letter

By Linton K. Starr, The Atlanta Journal, Atlanta, Ga.

Griffith Film Still Smashing Records.

GRIFFITH'S film, "Hearts of the World," which smashed all house records at the Atlanta Theatre, the city's legitimate house, during its first week's presentation here, concluded the second week of its local engagement with scarcely any diminishment in the patronage accorded the spectacle. While no definite figures were made public concerning the attendance for the last half of the run it is understood that the film proved one of the biggest "clean-ups" ever recorded in Atlanta's screen history.

The management of the Liberty Theatre, at Fort McPherson, a nearby cantonment, has announced that the attraction will be presented there the latter part of September.

Musicians' Demand Not Yet Granted.

Whether a recent demand by the local musicians' union for a twenty per cent. increase in the salaries of theatre orchestra members figured as a reason for the formation of the Atlanta Theatre Managers' Association is not yet known. The various managements were notified of the increase two weeks ago, and it is understood that without exception the raise has not been granted. While stating that the matter was under consideration, a number of exhibitors have expressed themselves as being strongly disinclined to paying the advance.

The present picture house scale pays $25 per man with $37.50 to the leader. The new basis would mean $30 per man and $45 for the leader.

Corley Now Naval Petty Officer.

J. Walter Corley, for several years proprietor of the Alsha Theatre, a neighborhood house, visited film row last week in the uniform of a naval petty officer. Mr. Corley volunteered in the naval reserve early this year, and has been in active service at the Charleston, S. C. station for several months.

Strand Uses Twenty-four Sheet Stands.

The Strand has been acquiring twenty-four sheet stands throughout the business and residential districts recently, and now proclaims its weekly or bi-weekly change of program from a dozen or more desirable locations. The house features Goldwyn and Fox service.

Tax on Five-Cent Rate Hits Eight Houses.

Four downtown and four suburban houses will be hit by the new tax applying to five-cent admission. The first group are the Ammo No. 1, Savoy, Alpha and Vaudette; the others are the Bellwood, West End, Park and Fulton. It appears likely that most of the managers will add the tax to the present charge.

Jackson's Advertising Wins Praise.

Manager James J. Jackson, of the Tudor, is winning much commendation for his forceful newspaper publicity. In exploiting his Universal specials, Manager Jackson employs the dailies extensively, using prepared lay-outs for his displays that are not only artistic and original, but also undeniable business-getters.

Iowa Brevities

By Joe Esler, Quincy, Ill.

Three Operators from Strand in Service.

The Strand Theatre, Grinnell, Iowa, under the management of G. W. and W. H. Mart, has given three of its operators to the service. Dawson Kline is stationed at Boston with the Naval Reserves, Carl Zirbel is with the 109th Ammunition Train, and Zeke Von Draska, is with the Y. M. C. A. in France. Business has been rather quiet during the summer months, but is due for an awakening as soon as the Grinnell College opens in October. Several hundred men will be trained there for the Government, and this will give the theatres a fertile field from which to draw patronage. W. H. Mart has won his fight for Sunday opening of the theatres, and the fine of $50 that was assessed against him last fall has been held up by an injunction granted by Judge Talbot.

Appointed Major in Red Cross Service.

J. H. Blanchard, of Davenport, Iowa, well known theatrical manager, has been appointed a major in the Red Cross Service for overseas duty. He leaves at once for France where he will be stationed in the Red Cross work. Mr. Blanchard's rise in the theatrical world has been meteoric. Starting several years ago with a small picture theatre, he has pushed forward until today he is president of nine prosperous corporations scattered from New York to Davenport.

Files Incorporation Papers.

Articles of incorporation were filed Saturday with the county recorder by the Liberty Amusement Company, of Davenport, with a capital stock of $100,000. The purpose of the company is to erect a motion picture house on East Third street, near Perry. The officers are: H. H. Treffer, president; T. B. Funk, vice-president; E. W. Lewis, secretary; J. F. Gorman, treasurer.

"MONEY ISN'T EVERYTHING."

Margarita Fisher's First Appearance on Pathe Program Fails to Substantiate Comedy Effort.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE first of the Margarita Fisher productions appearing on the program of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., by arrangement with the American Film Company is a comedy-drama entitled "Money Isn't Everything." This is an adaptation of a story "Beauty to Let" by Fred Jackson, and has been directed by Edward Sloman. The production is considerably lacking in the comedy element, and as straight comedy-drama falls short of the "punch" which is usually expected in this class of picture. Whether it is the story that is at fault or the method of presentation, which is unconvincing, is a matter rather difficult of analysis. Margarita Fisher has done better work. The remainder of the cast, including Jack Mower, J. Norris Foster, Wedgwood Nowell and Kate Price, sustain well the characterizations allotted them.

The story follows the career of a poor young lawyer and a young woman of unusual beauty, also penniless. The woman applying to the young lawyer for advice as to how to better her financial position is drawn into a scheme whereby she rents her beauty and her time to persons wishing a pretty partner to attend dances, dinners, teas and theatricals. The result is a financial boom for both parties. A millionaire wishing to propose to her is obliged to confide his desire to her partner, because the contract under which she is working prohibits her speaking to anyone. The result is that in the adjustment of a romance which has been working between them they discover their love for each other. The girl also recovers a large sum of money which her partner has been swindled out of.

"COME ON IN."

Shirley Mason and Ernest Truex in Novel and Amusing Paramount Production.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

IN its amusing and entertaining side "Come On In," the Paramount picture written by John Emerson and Anita Loos, and introducing Shirley Mason and Ernest Truex as Paramount stars, is one of the most novel and refreshing releases of the year. It starts off with a verbal drive at the Huns and develops into a witty satire of the Kaiser and all things German that is as keen and cutting as a razor blade. It also permits Ernest Truex to impersonate a particularly likable type of patriotic young American, and show that it is the spirit of a man and not his weight or inches that pushes him forward in the army.

Shirley Mason, as a stenographer who tries to capture a nest of German spies, has not been given as favorable an opportunity to win the esteem of the spectator. The character of the girl is weakened by not giving her enough insight to see through the German spy who is one of her suitors and whom she just escapes marrying. Her individual work is up to its previous standard, and she is as good to look at and as clever artistically as ever. Ernest Truex's impersonation has none of the marks of the usual screen debut. As Eddie Short, the light weight young office man who enlists at the first call for soldiers, he is finished, of a most engaging personality, and takes to his new branch of acting with surprising ease.

The plot in its bare outline is neither new nor impressive, but it has been enriched by so many deft touches and the production has been so intelligently directed by John Emerson that the entire picture seems quite out of the ordinary. A German spy plot at this late day is a test for any dramatist's skill. "Come On In" gets by with flying colors, and any one who takes the advice conveyed in the title will be on good terms with himself.

The cast is excellent all through. One of the best characterizations is Joseph Burke's acting of Prof. G. Wottan Orphul-Schmell. Others on the honor list are Charles DePlanta as Count von Bumstuff, Renault Tourneur as A. Schlobb, Bernard Randall as Otto B. Schott, Blanche Craig as Mrs. Schrieder, Meyer Berenson as the office boy, Richie Ling as The Colonel, and Louis Hendrick as a German spy.

"PALS FIRST."

Metro Screen Classic Features Harold Lockwood in Strong Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THERE is a pleasing air of suspense that keeps growing and growing as this story progresses. The yarn gets a very leisurely start, picturing the hero and his friend, "Dominie," as two knights of the road, strolling along apparently without funds or without friends. They turn into a fine country place, of the old colonial style, where two negro servants welcome the hero, Danny Rowland, as the missing son of the house, Dick Castleman.

The two hoboes make themselves at home, and Danny, seeing the way the land lies, decides to take the place of the missing son and heir. There is of course the question of succession to the property, the elder Castleman having just died, and there is a girl in the case, Jean Logan, with whom Dick was in love. Then, for a villain, there is a rascally cousin who keeps trouble stirring.

The story, which was adapted by Lee Wilson Dodd from a novel by Francis Perry Elliott, begins getting a firm hold on the interest after the first preliminary scenes and works up to a strong climax. The plot is far from obvious and the mystery of the hero's actual identity is kept till the very end. The subject is six reels in length.

Harold Lockwood is an agreeable figure as the hero and James Lackaye develops a most infectious humor as Dominie. Ruby de Remer has the role of the heroine, and others in the cast are Frank De Vernon, Richard R. Neill, Anthony Byrd, Pauline Dempsey, Walter P. Lewis and Rollo Lloyd. Edwin Carewe directed.

There are some attractive out-door scenes in this, and the production as a whole may be put down as a pleasing one of the sympathetic, entertaining sort.

"THE BRAZEN BEAUTY."

Priscilla Dean Scores Screen Triumph in Bluebird Offering.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel Bluebird photoplay, "The Brazen Beauty," is one that may without untruth or impropriety be called a knockout. It is one of those occasional subjects that please the observer in so many different ways that it leaves him tingling with admiration. It contains brilliant acting, an agreeable cast, fine settings, clear photography and tells a story at once romantic and gripping in its interest. The original story, written by Louise Winter, was adapted to the screen by William E. Wing and directed by Tod Browning. It leaves little to be desired in the matter of plot interest, editing and intelligent direction.

Priscilla Dean, who recently did such good work in "The Two-Soul Woman," surpasses her previous efforts in this number. The part of Jacala is one that would perhaps be entertaining in any hands, but Miss Dean brings to it a personal fire and conviction that carries everything before it. Her picture of the self-reliant spitfire of a Western girl who invades high society, after inheriting her father's millions, is one not soon to be forgotten. She is a young actress who has been doing careful, consistent work in minor parts for some time, and it is a pleasure to record her splendid advance in this number.

The story begins in the West, where Jacala is shown in a few brief scenes, which give a good insight into her character, a character which is carefully adhered to through the changes of environment which follow. The contrast of conditions after she comes East and buys a million-dollar home is another good feature of the plot. It has often been done, but seldom with so much effect as in this subject. The love story is told in happy high lights that conform to the artistic stamp of the production as a whole.

Thurston Hall has the role of the lover, Gertrude Astor plays Mrs. Van Ruysdael, and others in the cast are Katherine Griffith, Thornton Church, Kate Wilson and Leo White.

"THE RETURN OF MARY."

Metro Production Features May Allison in Story of Mystery.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS is one of the type of stories which work gradually up from a series of situations that appear quite ordinary into a turn of events that is at once surprising and dramatic. The opening scenes in this, even the first three reels, give no hint of the strong dramatic twist that is to follow.

May Allison is cast in the role of Mary, the heroine. The story centers about the missing daughter of John Denby, Sr., president of a railroad. He and his family have for years mourned the loss of Mary and they are accordingly astonished when a man turns up one day with a fourteen-year-old girl, whom he says is the missing daughter. The stranger refuses to give his name, but convinces Denby that the child is his own.

This occurs just at the time when an engineer, John Graham, is about to be sentenced to the penitentiary for criminal carelessness in disobeying orders. Years pass and Mary grows up, beloved by the Denbys and accepted as their own. The son, Jack, loves her with a regard perhaps unusual in a brother, though he does not understand it to be so.

The dramatic events follow when John Graham is released from prison, after his pardon. The girl recognizes him at once as the man she had known as "Daddy." She is torn by love of this man and the Denbys. The denouement is the strong feature of the story and is quite ingenious. It raises the production from one of rather ordinary quality into the class of successful entertainment.

Others in the cast are Clarence Burton, Claire McDowell, Darrell Foss, Frank Brownlee and Joseph Belmont.

FOUR CHRISTIE COMEDIES.

"Are Second Marriages Happy," "Don't Believe Everything," "Married by Proxie," and "Some Cave Man" Ready for Release.

Reviewed by Walter K. Hill.

FOUR Christie Comedies were shown recently at one session to reviewers for the trade press. The impression gained from witnessing the four reels was creditable to the Christie organization in that clean work by good looking players, who had no recourse to "rough stuff" seemed to encourage the increasing market for good humor advanced along sane, sensible lines. The slap-stick and the bladder took no part in the proceedings.

"Some Cave Man."

Bobby Vernon and Dorothy Dane, with a lively supporting company, made the most of a light idea in this merry joust with the stuffed club of the "stone age." Bobby had been instrumental in having Dorothy invited to a week-end party that he might propose to her in ideal surroundings. There were other chaps in the competition, however, and Dorothy was a bit coy when Bobby tried to monopolize her society. In fact, she seemed more than willing to have the other fellows do the monopolizing. Sympathetic girl friends of Bobby told him that the slogan of the tanks, "Treat 'Em Rough," was the proper rule in love making—and so Bobby tried it. He kidnapped Dorothy in a motor, drove her to the mountains and forced her by wielding the "cave man's club" to don tiger skins as dress and submit to his commands. That Dorothy liked the idea was evident when the entire week-end delegation followed them forthwith to the mountain cave, bringing along a minister to tie the knot.

"Married by Proxy."

In the merry farce Bobby Vernon helps a friend to gather in an inheritance, just in the nick of time, and likewise impels a reluctant damsel to enter bonds of matrimony somewhat in advance of her own stipulated calculations. Dorothy Dane loves Bobby's friend, sure enough, but she tantalizingly puts off from date to date the march to "Lohengrin's" popular excerpt. The hopeful bridegroom must marry within a specified time to meet the terms of a will that means, for him, a fortune. Bobby takes pity on the downcast lover and formulates a scheme, wherein Bobby is to dress in his sister's clothes, go to a nearsighted justice and be married. All's well until the lawyer requires the signatures of bride and groom on the dotted line that passes over the fortune. Then Bobby goes further and persuades his sister to become really the rightful "party of the first part."

"Are Second Marriages Happy?"

Husband and wife, both twice married, are spending their time at separate industries, both working to the same end—gambling away the family cash. Hubby plays cards at his club, wifey entertains her lady friends at whist gambols. Each charges the other with being willful and neither will give up their cards until the other has taken the initiative. The wife decides that by inspiring jealousy she will make her husband weaken. She hangs on the wall a portrait of "her first husband." Hubby goes to a picture shop and buys a portrait that he hangs on the opposite wall to impersonate "his first wife." Matters are still at deadlock until his wife follows the husband to the home of a married couple, who have been out of town for a year—and when the four people are cleverly assembled in one situation, it is disclosed that the keeper of the picture store has sold two portraits that had been sent to him to frame. This catastrophy that had, for the moment threatened, is dissipated as morning mist before the rising sun—and happiness reigns forever after. Jay Belasco and Ethel Lynn are the leading players in this one.

"Don't Believe Everything."

"Smiling" Billy Mason is an automobile salesman. His wedding day is set and the minister has called for a dress rehearsal. Ethel Lynn, his prospective bride, awaits Billy at her home—but near the hour set for rehearsal Billy gets a chance to sell an automobile. The fact that the prospective purchaser is a pretty girl does not lessen Billy's desire to make a sale—but he reluctantly takes the girl on a demonstration trip at a time dangerously near the hour for his wedding rehearsal. The journey meets several halts, and slight mishaps puts the demonstration trip behind its tentative schedule. To make it back to town on time Billy must order his chauffeur to "speed"—and the order amounts to mentioning the chauffeur's middle name. Fairly flying over the turnpike Billy sees the rehearsal easy to make on time—until he is halted by the town constable for speeding. Resisting the officer only lands Billy in jail. His belligerance gets him a ten-day sentence, and it is only through the ingenuity of his "best man" that Billy even gets to his wedding—without a rehearsal. Pleadings in vain, the Justice of Peace insists that Billy shall serve his term. The "best man" brings a pot of red paint; Billy decorates his face with red flecks—and the jailor spreads the alarm that Billy has small pox. The "best man" awaits results, outside the jail, with the engine running in a high-power machine. In the rush to get out of reach, Billy finds himself alone in the jail, and soon exits for his "joy ride" to the wedding party.

"KILDARE OF STORM."

Metro Production Proves Strong Offering of the Tragic Type.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

STRONG emotional forces are at work in this five-reel number, entitled "Kildare of Storm." Emily Stevens and King Baggot have the leading roles and acquit themselves with credit. Mr. Baggot appears as Basil Kildare, who may safely be termed one of the "cussedest" characters that ever set foot in the silent drama; Miss Stevens appears as his unwilling and unhappy wife. Crauford Kent completes the triangle situation as the other man, playing the role of Dr. Jacques Benoix, a friend of both parties.

This story, adapted by June Mathis and Jere Looney from a novel by Eleanor Mercein Kelly and directed by Harry L. Franklin, varies greatly from the usual order of screen stories. It is not a happy tale in any sense of the word, but it pictures a certain raw and brutish type of human nature that makes an interesting change. It is carefully made and should appeal to high class audiences which like a touch of really forceful drama.

Basil Kildare owns a southern estate, over which he rules with iron hand. He is a good-looking but cold-hearted fellow, and is the father of an illegitimate child by a servant named Mahaly. Basil determines to marry and chooses as his wife Kate Leigh, daughter of an ambitious woman. He introduces his wife to the dinner guests as "the mother of the future Kildares." His coarseness appals her, and in time she falls in love with the friend, Jacques. The dramatic incidents have to do with the murder of Kildare and subsequent happenings, but Kate finally gains happiness with the man she really loves. The story is well-constructed and a successful one of its type.

Florence Shore appears as Mahaly, and others in the cast are Edward Davis, Helen Lindroth and Maggie Breyer.

"DESERT LAW"

Jack Richardson, Bad Man of Quick Action, in Triangle Western Melodrama.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

GUN play, and plenty of it, figures in "Desert Law," a five-part Triangle Western melodrama that is packed with quick action. The story was written by Louis H. Klipatrick, and directed by Jack Conway. It is full of fine shots of the rugged mountains and picturesque roads of the Southwest and its stretches of sandy desert. Not a great deal of effort is shown in the character drawing, but the picture is always consistent to its class, and is a "thriller" through and through.

Rufe Dorsey, the part played by Jack Richardson, is the bad man of the district. When he finds out that Donald McLane, a young homesteader, has won the hand of Julia Wharton, he frames up a murder charge against Donald. In a fight at the Wharton ranch between Dorsey's gang and McLane and the Wharton family, the battle ends in favor of the hero by the arrival of a mysterious stranger who turns out to be the governor of the state. The governor has already ordered a detachment of state militia to the scene, and the Dorsey gang is rounded up in short order.

Jack Richardson is well cast as the bad man, and Al. Whitman is an excellent hero. Adequate performances are given by George Pearce, Leotta Lorraine, Ray Hanford, Bert Appling, James Farley, Phil Gastrock, Joe Singleton, Leo Pierson and Curley Baldwin. Photographed by B. Edmond.

"TREASON"

Five-Part Goodrich Feature for Mutual Program Not Strongly Convincing.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

EDNA GOODRICH looks well, dresses well and acts well in the five-part adaptation of the Harry Durant story, "Treason," scheduled for release on the Mutual program September 29. In spite of this, however, and in spite of capable work on the part of the cast, and also of the director, Burton King, the production presents a picture of American womanhood, which at this particular time, when the heart of every true American woman is filled with the spirit of sacrifice, is nothing short of a travesty which an intelligent audience will resent. The production is far from convincing.

The story opens at the country home of an American citizen who is experimenting with high explosives. Because of his close confinement to his laboratory his pretty wife becomes petulant, feeling that her husband is neglecting her. When the Government, learning of the success of his experiments with a certain kind of explosive which is also being experimented with at the Government laboratories, places the matter entirely in his hands, and a secret service man is stationed at his home as a means of protection, the wife, kept in ignorance of the honor conferred upon her husband, becomes still more piqued. The outcome of the affair is that in becoming associated socially with a German spy she is persuaded to steal the Government formula along with her husband's, and all but succeeds in getting herself and husband indicted for treason. Discovering the serious mistake she has made she hurriedly goes to the spy's apartment, gains possession of the papers, and holds them by fighting off her adversary with a bottle. The husband and secret service man arrive on the scene in time to save the situation and arrest the spy.

"ZAZA."

Paramount Reissues Former Product With a Strong Characterization by Pauline Frederick.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

TO those who have not seen the pictured version of "Zaza," there is pleasure in store from the remarkable acting of Miss Frederick in the leading role, one of the finest impersonations she has made. It is that of gay Parisienne turned to absorbing love through a dramatic incident in connection with a man she supposes free to love her. It is purely emotional, this intense passion, the more pitiful that it is unguided by other than instinct and impulse. The interpretation by Miss Frederick is well worth the study of actresses who attempt to portray French character, for it is pure art, resulting from a highly intelligent grasp of the role and its opportunities. The entire production is above the average of reissues and has what the French call a "raison d'etre," a good reason for being, an entirely good reason for the reissue.

"VIVE LA FRANCE."

Paramount Presents Dorothy Dalton in a Stirring Drama of These Times by Gardner Sullivan.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

A PRODUCTION of unusual merit because its logical presentment by a talented author, because the subject matter is vital, and through fine characterization by Miss Dalton and support, the values of this screen story range high in the summing up. In the absence of enough suspense, these fine qualities will carry the play over to undoubted popularity. So far as interpretation is concerned, the submissive role of a girl at the mercy of circumstances is possibly the best thing Miss Dalton has done—she responds to her finer opportunity—but the strongest element is undoubtedly attributable to "atmosphere." This is due to Mr. Ince, and, while it is not enough to carry over alone, its combination with other elements of success is a very important one, a strong contribution to holding the attention of any audience.

The main story incidents glimpse the activities of two motion picture stars, already engaged to be married, who undertake to serve their country at the front, one as a Red Cross nurse, Miss Dalton, the other, impersonated by Edmond Lowe, in the Aviation Corps. They are completely separated, but they are brought together under thrilling circumstances. The airman is brought down while on an important mission near a ruined chateau, where his fiancee has been sequestered by a licentious Hun officer and branded on the breast as his own. He tortures his victim to the point of despair, but is called away before accomplishing his purpose. While he is away, the wounded aviator seeks temporary asylum in the same chateau. There is more than one crisis in the dramatic scenes which follow, which result in eventual escape and a conclusion of honor for both. Because of the story's spirited and serious mood, the interpolation of two smiling children at the last seems detrimental and is unnecessary to the whole effect. The presentation will undoubtedly meet with generous applause and deserve the approval it calls forth.

"THE EMBARRASSMENT OF RICHES."

Lillian Walker Finds Limited Opportunities in Five-Reel Version of Anspacher Play.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE opportunities offered to Lillian Walker in the five-reel version of the Louis K. Anspacher play, in which she is being presented by Lester Park on the W. W. Hodkinson program are limited. The writer is inclined to believe, however, that both the direction and the arrangement are at fault, and that the picture could have been presented with less padding and in more entertaining style. As it is the impression left with the spectator is that there is not sufficient material in the story for a five-reel feature. The first few scenes of the picture move smoothly and well, and the scenes of the raid on the gambling den are the spiciest and best managed of all. Miss Walker does well with the opportunities afforded her and is supported by a competent cast.

The story of the play follows the fortunes of a young woman who is introduced as a factory girl earning her living by doing machine work on feminine garments. One evening after envying her companions the various attentions received by them from male affinities she is surprised to learn that she has suddenly become the heiress of a large fortune. Worrying along with life among the upper ten she finally decides to look about for something more interesting and discovers a settlement house which is run by a benevolent young man. Here she poses as secretary to herself and brings regularly cash donations from her supposed mistress, and she is on the spot when a raid on the gambling den next door takes place, and which has been brought about by the persistent fight of the young settlement worker against the gambling faction. At the culmination of a romance, which has developed, he learns that his sweetheart is not the secretary, but the heiress. The forging of the young woman's name on a $5,000 check also figures in the gambler's conspiracy near the close of the story.

"SPORTING LIFE"

Maurice Tourneur Produces Fine Screen Version of Famous Drury Lane Melodrama.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

TO the present generation the famous old Drury Lane melodrama, "Sporting Life," is not even a memory. It belonged to a far less sophisticated period than the present. Originally produced in England and patronized by the best class of theatregoers, it was brought out in this country at one of the leading theatres years ago, and had a celebrated cast of players.

The screen version of the old piece, produced and directed by Maurice Tourneur, turns out to be excellent entertainment for the general public. A certain portion of superior persons will look with either amusement or disdain upon its ancient plot and melodramatic situations, but the majority of moving picture patrons will follow the unfolding of its story with interest, and find it vastly more entertaining than some of the original scenarios that have neither the vitality nor the varied incident of this survivor of the old English racing drama.

Maurice Tourneur's reason for selecting "Sporting Life" for a screen production must have been two-fold. In the first place, the success in picture form of "The Whip," a play of the same class directed by him, must have influenced his judgment. The strongest argument in favor of the drama, however, is the fundamental appeal of its red-blooded hero, and the fact that all the veneer of culture and advanced thought in the world cannot curb the primitive passions when we see a man battling his way to right and justice by brute strength.

The record of the English fighting man in France justified his love of the prize ring and the whole round of sport. This is a time when the weakling is in the discard, and brawn and muscle count. The machinery of the play may creak at times from age, but most of us are eager to applaud when Lord Woodstock's horse wins the race and when the young nobleman takes the place of his drugged champion in the ring and knocks out his opponent and the plot to ruin him.

Such a state of mind would have been utterly impossible without the masterly direction given the picture by Maurice Tourneur. It is difficult to recall any detail of production that could have been bettered. The English atmosphere, the night effects and the care shown in every scene are admirable. The interiors of the National Sporting Club and the running race are among the best of the episodes.

The cast is also a credit to Maurice Tourneur's reputation. None of the names is that of a screen celebrity, and Willette Kershaw is hardly pronounced enough as the adventuress, Olive de Carteret. The Earl of Woodstock, by Ralph Graves; Warner Richmond as Joe Lee, Charles Eldridge as Miles Cavanaugh, Charles Craig as Malet de Carteret, Henry West as Straker, Constance Binney as Norah Cavanagh, and Faire Binney as Kitty are up to the high mark. Winthrop Kelley made the scenario.

"THE GIRL OF TODAY"

Vitagraph Production of Robert W. Chambers' Story with Corinne Griffith Has Merit.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

WITH such a title as "The Girl of Today," the Robert W. Chambers story must naturaly deal with the war. The Vitagraph screen production directed by John Robertson brings out the best points of the novel, and introduces a number of famous locations in New York State when they are covered with a heavy fall of snow. The situations involving the use of these places are dramatic, and skill has been shown in adapting the action to the different scenes.

"The Girl of Today," in this case, is a patriotic young woman named Leslie Seldon. Her sweetheart, Jack Wynn, has not been drafted, and Leslie is inclined to look upon him as a slacker. Jack, however, is doing some secret war work. Believing that Doctor Wolff, an admirer of Leslie's, who claims to be a Danish scientist, is a German spy, and that he is connected with an attempt to blow up a wire plant belonging to the elder Wynn, Jack goes to the Wolff residence and charges the doctor with the crime. The young chap is overpowered and forced to send Leslie a note saying that he has run away to escape the draft. The girl knows her best fellow better than that. She finds out the truth by getting into the Wolff house and installing a dictograph.

Leslie also learns that Wolff and his associates are planning to wreck a number of places in New York and destroy the water supply. She informs the authorities, and goes with the state police when they start out to capture the spies. The adventure proves exciting, and ends with the rescue of Jack from the Wolff house just as he is about to be put to death.

The leading parts are capitally acted by Corinne Griffith, Marc MacDermott, Charles A. Stevens, Ida Darling and Webster Campbell.

"THE YELLOW DOG."

Jewel Production of a Strong Patriotic Subject with Rousing Finish.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

A VERY creditable six-part film story has been made by Jewel Productions from the short story by Henry Irving Dodge, originally published in The Saturday Evening Post. The story itself has been immensely popular, as it touched a weak spot in the German propaganda system, and offered a way for combating it. The film will also be deservedly popular, for it enforces the same proposition and does it with both humor and drama. There are a lot of smiles in this subject, but it also reaches deeper feelings and winds up with a triple launching that will bring cheers from any audience.

Arthur Hoyt is cast in the chief role, that of Albert Walker, about the only active and ardent patriot visible in a certain shipbuilding community. He comes into continual touch, at the beginning of our part in the war, with a lot of weak-kneed, loose-tongued individuals who are consciously or unconsciously engaged in spreading German propaganda. Walker gets into a fine Berseker rage and tackles several individuals personally, but this is too slow a process, so he finally organizes the boys of the town into a club for locating the "Yellow Dog" talkers.

The atmosphere of the small town community is in good evidence all through this and contributes largely to the humor. The plot is sufficient to carry the interest and has some fine dramatic moments.

Frank Clark has the role of the chief German propagandist, who primes others with false doctrines and later plans to destroy the shipbuilding plant. Others in the cast are Clara Horton, Frank Hayes and a typical group of small boys who form the "Yellow Dog" club.

"OUT OF A CLEAR SKY"

Marguerite Clark's Latest Paramount Release Proves a Pleasing Romance.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel

MUTTERINGS of the great storm in Europe are heard faintly in "Out of a Clear Sky," a five-part Paramount picture, adapted from a story by Maria Thompson Davies by Charles Maigne and directed by Marshall Neilan. The novel is a romance of the George Barr McCutcheon type, where the titled heroine marries the sturdy American hero. It is quite as improbable as any member of that school of fiction—and quite as pleasing. We know that the whole kit of yarns are nothing but over-grown fairy stories, but that does not lessen our enjoyment. Marguerite Clark makes a dainty and charming Belgian countess, who refuses to wed a German princeling and runs away to America to avoid being forced into the alliance by her uncle, an unbelievably depraved gentleman who sold himself to the Germans.

Once in this country with her English governess, the Countess Celeste DeBersek takes a train for the South, and jumps off at a water tank when she discovers that her uncle is on the same train. Celeste lands in the arms of Robert Lawrence, a nice looking young Tennesseean, and finds she couldn't have done better if she had picked him out before hand. Lawrence helps her to evade pursuit and takes her near his home.

While he is trying to arrange with some mountain people to hide her the countess is caught in a hard shower. She seeks shelter in a cottage, changes her dress, starts with a small boy to find his mother, and narrowly escapes death. The cottage is struck by lightning, and then blown to atoms by a box of dynamite stored in the place. It is easy after that to convince her wicked uncle she is dead; so the countess discards her old identity forever and becomes an American citizen by marrying Robert.

The serious part of the story need not be taken too seriously, but the author has filled the tale with a liberal supply of homely touches and human types. It is a sorry soul that will not rejoice at the happy ending and the marriage of Robert and Celeste.

One piece of the author's logic is rather puzzling: Why anyone should chain up a boy to keep him away from a box of dynamite instead of chaining up the box of dynamite to keep it away from the boy is not made exactly clear. The locations are picturesque, and Director Neilan has done his share of the work very expertly. Thomas Meighan as Robert Lawrence, E. J. Radcliffe as Uncle Dryek, Maggie H. Fisher as Granny White, and Bobby Connelly as the boy who is chained up are the leading members of an excellent cast.

"MR. LOGAN, U. S. A."

Tom Mix Puts Vim and Daring Into Fox Western Drama Staged by Lynn Reynolds.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel

ABOUT the only thing that doesn't go straight to the mark in the Fox picture, "Mr. Logan, U. S. A.," is the language used by the hard-riding and quick-witted chap impersonated by Tom Mix. Alfred Lewis used an alleged dialect for his Western characters that was amusing while it was novel. No man on top of the earth every talked anything that remotely resembled the Lewis speech. Since the screen dramatist has taken to trying his hand at improving it, the circumlocution and flights of rhetorical fancy that he has employed have become a weariness, and interfere with the proper flow of events.

Putting this aside, the story that Lynn Reynolds has written and directed for Tom Mix is as good a specimen of Western melodrama as ever got on the screen. Matters start off smartly, and go with a zip and a bang to the end. It could hardly be different with the energetic star to inject vim and daring into every situation.

A tungsten mine in New Mexico owned by William Morton, the father of the heroine, is the object of a German plot. Jimmy Logan, a United States Secret Service man, is detailed to run down the plotters and save the mine from being destroyed. Jimmy, of course, has to keep his identity hidden. Not even Suzanne Morton is trusted with the secret, after Jimmy rescues her from a gila monster and she and Mr. Logan fall in love.

This leads to a misunderstanding between the two, and the girl encourages the attentions of the German spy. The mine is saved after a series of exciting incidents, and Tom Mix does a lot of stunts on horseback and on foot that will delight his admirers.

Kathleen Connors is an attractive Suzanne. Other parts are capably acted by Dick LaReno, Charles LaMoyne, Jack W. Dill, Val Paul and Maude Emery.

"LAUGHING BILL HYDE."

Rex Beach Releases Through Goldwyn an Interesting Story with Will Rogers in Title Role.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

WHETHER or not the story holds you at all times, the humorous subtitles will join Will Rogers in warming your heart and you will seem to see an actual phase of life instead of being told about it. The story is logical in conception and presentation, and it is to that extent convincing. The motive is modern, that of unveiling the good in a man who has been a thief most of his life, a confirmed one, for no one is born with morality, or with lack of it. Laughing Bill Hyde loves to steal—it has become a part of his nature, yet a young doctor who becomes his Alaska pal by force of circumstances so deeply impresses Laughing Bill through his susceptibilities that his predatory habits are turned to rendering crude justice. He deftly restores the stolen property of a hard-working half-breed girl—she has been robbed by the immune methods of "good business"—and he contrives with great ingenuity to bring fortune to his deserving pal, the young doctor.

All this is accomplished without using methods either arbitrary or theatrical. In consequence the story satisfies—it does not jar common sense—and it is bright with originality in both construction and treatment. There are no beauties among its people. They are homespun, of the every-day kind. Suspense is not high, but the characterization is so strong that it compensates. Will Rogers is a big factor. His interpretation of the laughing thief is one of the most delightful and natural yet shown on the screen of its particular kind. He is amazingly homely, and wondrously suited to the part, but his personality is so intense that it is probably what the author intended—a visualization of human frailty made winning because it is part of ourselves. Both the author-producer and the star are to be congratulated for their fine work.

"THE MANTLE OF CHARITY"

American - Pathe Subject Mixes Comedy with Relief Work for Poor.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel number, "The Mantle of Charity," combines comedy of a somewhat farcical type with an interesting depiction of the way charity is dispensed. It gives a really valuable exposition of the harmfulness of too much red tape in dispensing aid to the needy poor. On the other hand, the heroine's method of passing out food and clothing to all-comers could hardly be admitted as any great improvement, so there is no real solution offered of the difficult problem. But it does leave the impression that more kindness is needed, and that a real interest in conditions of the poor is better than too much efficiency.

The comedy features of the story are excellent. The hero meets the girl on a train, mistaking her dog, wrapped up in baby clothes, for a real infant. He thinks she has been victimized, and offers her a job with his charity organization. She accepts, but disagrees with the hero as to how such an organization should be conducted. Finally, being a wealthy girl, she starts relief work herself, and the rivalry proves very interesting. Some laughable effects are obtained in the hero's fight with the drunken husband, and there is a touch of real human nature in the way the wife comes to the husband's aid.

Marguerita Fisher and Jack Mowrer have the leading roles in this entertaining offering.

"THE TALK OF THE TOWN"

Bluebird Offering Features Dorothy Phillips as Girl Heroine.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THERE is perhaps not a screen artist in the business who can get a more delicate and artistic naturalness into her performances than Dorothy Phillips. She throws a certain charm about even a more or less trivial story that makes it appeal to the observer. This five-reel subject, "The Talk of the Town," written by Harold Vickers and produced by Allen Holubar, provides her with a medium of fair quality, which she makes the most of.

She appears as Genevra French, daughter of an irascible old major who runs his home under severe military discipline. The girl grows up to womanhood knowing nothing about the mysteries of life and sex, but thinking about them a great deal. She yearns for a social career, and reads a book on "Attracting the Opposite Sex." In due time she gets opportunity to practice her wiles on Lawrence Tabor, a young visitor at the home, with whom she comes in contact by accident.

Tabor quickly falls in love with Genevra, and she marries him without loving him in order to escape from the bondage of her home. The later events of the piece show how she falls in love with a "lounge lizard" named Jack Lang-home. The husband, learning this, employs Langhome to lure his wife to a hotel and make an attack upon her, giving himself opportunity to play the rescuing hero. The scheme works out very nicely, with something of a surprise to the audience, as well as the wife. The latter then sees the error of her course, and turns to her husband. They are later blessed with several children.

The number is attractive in the way of settings. Others in the cast are William Stowell, Norman Kerry, George Lewis and Clarissa Selwynne.

"THE APPEARANCE OF EVIL"

World Picture Features June Elvidge in Story of Moderate Strength.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel subject, entitled "The Appearance of Evil," is more amusing than convincing. It was built up deliberately upon a situation which could have but one explanation, and, while the events occurring between the opening scenes and the explanations in question are clever and amusing in their way, there is still considerable that is not explained.

June Elvidge has the role of Maida Brown, a wealthy young woman living with her small son in a country place. A young man, Louis Letchworth, comes to see her, and stays over the week-end. Her maid, whose father is president of the local Purity League, is astonished at the situation, and is discharged for making adverse comment. The Purity League and Maida Brown's neighbors generally proceed to take a hand with things, and it must be admitted that their interference seemed justified. The employment of the shadowed figures disrobing at the windows is a feature that will no doubt meet with criticism in this picture. The general situation itself is sufficiently unconventional without being elaborated upon to any extent. The use of separate rooms seemed a mere trick, since they were married.

The explanation to the effect that the young widow, Maida Brown, had really been married to Letchworth in Belgium at the outbreak of the war is acceptable. But the contents of the first husband's will, through which the widow would lose two million dollars if she married again, is given as the reason for secrecy.

This will undoubtedly pass as an entertaining subject, though loosely constructed and rather broad in certain situations. It at any rate is not obvious, and is pleasingly presented.

The story was written by Horace Hazeltine and directed by Lawrence C. Windom. Others in the cast are Frank Mayo, Douglas Redmond, Jr.; Clay Clement, Jr.; George MacQuarrie, Nora Cecil, Inex Marcel, Louis Grizel and Jack Drumier.

COMMENTS

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

THE BRAZEN BEAUTY (Bluebird).—A splendid five-reel subject, written by Louise Winter, adapted by William E. Wing and directed by Tod Browning. Priscilla Dean scores a personal triumph in this number, which may be unreservedly recommended for its general excellence. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Christie Film Corporation.

SOME CAVE MAN (Christie Comedy).—Bobby Vernon and Dorothy Dane are stars of a lively comedy based on the tank slogan, "Treat 'Em Rough." Bobby gains a reluctant bride when he kidnaps her, makes her don leopard skin and start upon a cave life in the mountains. There is a swimming pool scene and displays of female loveliness that don't hurt the comedy a bit. In fact—every little bit helps.

MARRIED BY PROXY (Christie Comedy).—Bobby Vernon and Dorothy Dane are leaders of a lively company that play fast-moving farce well and effectively. In this Bobby masquerades as his sister, is "married" by a near-sighted justice and eventually brings a fortune into the family when his sister relents and marries the fellow Bobby has befriended in an unusual manner.

ARE SECOND MARRIAGES HAPPY (Christie Comedy).—Jay Belasco and Ethel Lynn prove that the title may be answered pro and con within one reel of film. Demon Jealousy is introduced in the form of two photographs purchased at a picture store and hung on opposite sides of the family living room. Matters approach disaster when it is discovered that the originals of the photographs are man and wife living in another part of town, who never heard of Jay and Ethel until their family feud led them to the door of the unsuspecting originals of the photographs.

DON'T BELIEVE EVERYTHING (Christie Comedy).—"Smiling" Billy Mason is an automobile salesman with his marriage to Ethel Lynn fixed for the next day. On the afternoon of the wedding rehearsal he goes into the country with a pretty girl to demonstrate a car and clinch a sale. Speeding home he is arrested, thrown into jail, sentenced to ten days—and then his "best man" proves himself all that by untangling the skein that binds Billy in the toils of rural justice. Bringing Billy a pot of red paint the prisoner flecks his face in imitation of small-pox rash—and finds the way suddenly opened to freedom and the waiting bride.

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

THE GIRL OF THE GOLDEN WEST (Lasky), Sept. 15.—This reissue of the Belasco drama is an excellent example of the sort of moving picture that was being made three or four years ago. Directed by Cecil B. De Mille and with a cast headed by Mabel Van Buren, Theodore Roberts and House Peters, the story made a record in its day. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

VIVE LA FRANCE (Paramount), Sept. 15.—A vital story made strong and effective through the impressive realism of Thomas Ince, and one of the best interpretations of character Dorothy Dalton has ever done, possibly her finest. The story will prove popular with all classes. Reviewed elsewhere in this week's issue.

COME ON IN (Paramount), Sept. 22.—The first release starring Shirley Mason and Ernest Truex. This five-part picture is the best kind of fun. It also is strong for the Allies. It was written by John Emerson and Anita Loos. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

ZAZA (Paramount Reissue), Sept. 22.—Worth the reissue because of very fine interpretation of the leading role by Pauline Frederick and capable presentation throughout. Reviewed elsewhere in this week's issue.

BEWARE OF BOARDERS (Paramount-Sennet).—A farce of new situations and incidents of the liveliest kind, as well as a parody on wornout serious drama. Chester Conklin and Ford Sterling in a very amusing winner. Reviewed in last week's issue.

A WOMAN OF IMPULSE (Paramount).—Lina Cavalieri, very beautiful and graceful, a delight to the eye and amid artistic settings, but with limited dramatic material in the story. Reviewed in last week's issue.

Foursquare Pictures, Inc.

A WOMAN OF EXPERIENCE (Backer-Bacon).—Taken from Paul Potter's play of "Agnes," this five-part picture has a good human story and is cleverly acted by Mary Boland and the rest of the cast. Perry N. Vekroff was the director. The picture was given an extended review on page 1920, September 28 issue.

Fox Film Corporation.

MR. LOGAN, U. S. A., Sept 8.—Tom Mix does a lot of stunt riding and acts with his usual vigor in this western melodrama, which has a well worked out story and several over-worked titles. It was written and staged by Lynn Reynolds. Reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

PECK'S BAD GIRL, Sept. 9.—Mabel Normand returns to her original style of fun making in this five-part comedy, and makes a lot of laughs. It is reviewed at length on page 1920, issue of September 28.

JUST FOR TO-NIGHT, Sept. 16.—Tom Moore is the star of this five-part crook story written by Charles A. Logue. The action is slow getting started, but a surprise finish helps out considerably. It was directed by Charles Giblyn. A longer review was printed on page 1919 of the September 28 issue.

Greater Vitagraph, Inc.

THE GIRL OF TO-DAY, Sept. 23.—Corinne Griffith is the star of this screen version of Robert W. Chambers' story. The picture has an interesting plot and a number of novel locations in New York State. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Hiller & Wilk, Inc.

SPORTING LIFE (Tourneur).—An excellent screen version has been made by Maurice Tourneur of the old Drury Lane melodrama. A longer review appears on another page of this issue.

Metro Pictures Corporation.

KILDARE OF STORM, Sept. 16.—A five-reel subject, adapted from a novel by Eleanor Mercein Kelly and directed by Harry L. Franklin. Emily Stevens and King Baggot have the leading roles. The story is one of the tragic type, well-constructed and convincing throughout. It will appeal to all audiences who like human nature in the rough and want drama of a forceful type. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

THE RETURN OF MARY, Sept. 23.—A five-reel number from the drama by Hale Hamilton, directed by Wilfred Lucas. May Allison has the role of the heroine, and is supported by a capable cast. The chief strength of this offering is in the story itself, which leads up to a surprise ending, effectively done. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

PALS FIRST (Metro Screen Classic).—A pleasing six-reel subject, adapted by Lee Wilson Dodd from a story by Francis Perry Elliott. Harold Lockwood, Ruby de Reymer and James Lackaye have the leading roles. The story contains an absorbing mystery and one that grows stronger until the denouement at the very end. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Mutual Film Corporation.

FINEST ON FOUR FEET (Outing-Chester), Sept. 8.—In this number of the Outing-Chester the dog has his day, and a goodly number at that. There are muts and thoroughbreds of all kinds, including the collie, the Airedale, the Pekinese, the police dog and even the Daschund comes in for a share of attention. The picture is well subtitled and contains some comic moments.

TREASON (Goodrich), Sept. 29.—A five-part production which is well acted and well made, but which will not appeal to all audiences for the reason that the story is somewhat unconvincing. The type of American woman portrayed in the stellar role is not such as can be idealized. A full review will be found elsewhere.

A MAN AND A MAID (Strand).—This is a truely amusing comedy which the Strand director has turned out in this instance. It concerns in the first place the love affair and marriage of a man and a woman of mature years. One of them has a son at college and the other a daughter, and each is in ignorance of the other's encumbrance. The home-coming of the children makes it necessary either to "'fess up" or to still guard the secret. The latter method of dealing with the situation is chosen, and the young man taking the place of the butler and the young woman the place of the maid opens up some funny situations, which ends in a thorough understanding by all parties and the betrothal of the youthful pair.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

OFFICIAL WAR REVIEW No. 13 (Pathe), Sept. 22.—This opens with views of the Italian front, showing the manner in which pontoon bridges are constructed. Scenes with the British Tommies follow, then in the French trenches and with American soldiers crossing the seas. The living "Victory" flag at the close is sure to be well received.

THE FLAME OF VENGEANCE (Pathe), Sept. 22.—Episode No. 6 of "Hands Up." This brings to a close the exciting fight on the train, picturing the escape of Echo and the hero. There is a change of heroes in this instalment, the war having called George Chesbro to the front. His place is being taken by George Larkin, who may be expected to keep up the pace of this really thrilling serial.

SWING YOUR PARTNERS (Rolin-Pathe), Sept. 29.—A Harold Lloyd comic, in which Harold and his side partner, Harry Pollard, appear as two gentlemen of the road. They invade a dancing school and take an amusing turn at classic dancing, attired in leopard skins. This is a subject that will bring laughter.

THE BORDER RAIDERS (Diando-Pathe), Oct. 6.—A five-reel number by Frank Beresford and Jack Cunningham, with Betty Compson, George Larkin and others in the cast. This opens well, with a story of melodramatic events along the Mexican border, but the closing reels are weakly constructed and lack suspense. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

WINNING THE WAR (Pathe).—This number, which bears the special title "Solving the Farm Problem," is an important one, showing rural activities throughout the country during the present war. The organization of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve has answered to a great extent the question of raising food for the Allies. The number is alive with interest.

ALL FOR LIBERTY (Pathe).—This pictures the celebration of Bastile Day in France, showing troops of the Allied nations marching through Paris streets. It is a great marching subject and will certainly please.

Triangle Pictures Corporation.

DESERT LAW, Sept. 22.—Jack Richardson plays a western bad man in this five-part picture, which has plenty of action and is well supplied with fine flashes of scenery. Al Whitman is another member of the cast. The picture is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Universal Film Company.

A NEW PERIL (Universal), Oct. 7.—Episode No. 10 of "The Brass Bullet." The opens with the rescue of both Jack and Rosalind from the clutches of Joe's gang Spring Gilbert then offers a reward for the dead body of Rosalind, after she refuses to return to King. The number is one of average interest, but well-constructed and keeps the plot moving.

THE FAST MAIL, Oct. 12.—A stirring three-reel railroad story, based on a tale by Frank H. Spearman. Helen Gibson performs a daring feat in the closing reel jumping from a telephone pole to the top of a moving train. The story has considerable plot, telling of the struggle between competing railroad lines to get a Government mail contract. Others in the cast are Val Paul, Buck Conners and G. Raymond Nye. A strong subject.

World Pictures Corporation.

A SOUL WITHOUT WINDOWS (World Picture), Sept. 30.—An absorbing five-reel number, written by Julia Burnham and directed by Travers Vale, with Ethel Clayton in the leading role. This is a quaint and unusual story of a girl raised by a colony of "Shakers." It has a strong plot and proves thoroughly entertaining. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Synopses of Liberty Loan Specials

"The Bonds That Tie" (Goldwyn).

The cast: Miss Columbia, Geraldine Farrar; a Soldier, Milton Sills, a Sailor, Tom Santschi.—The title tells how previous loans have equipped and sent to France two million soldiers and sailors, and fades into a troop-laden transport. How Liberty Bonds aid in freeing the armies, supplying ammunition, bottling up Germany, and how they will aid in bringing the soldiers home are also shown. Then Miss Columbia announces that Liberty Bonds are bonds of love and appeals for subscriptions to the new loan.

"A Bullet for Berlin" (Famous Players-Lasky).

William S. Hart is featured. He dreams he is called before the War Council as an expert gunman and is directed to "remove" the Kaiser. Proceeding to Berlin he perceives the Kaiser on a hobby horse receiving his courtiers, and in rage over the fourth Liberty Loan drive. Bill fires and the Kaiser falls. Bill is captured and is about to be bayoncted when he wakes up. He wishes his .45 could reach to Berlin, but reads that a Liberty Loan is the one thing that can make its influence felt, and immediately rides to obtain this kind of ammunition.

"The Choice" (Vitagraph).

The cast: Mary a working girl, Alice Joyce. Mary and Susie meet a friend, but Susie's attractive clothes win his attention, so Mary determines to buy pretty clothes too, but a poster attracts her attention, and she buys savings stamps. Susie proves fickle and goes in wholeheartedly for pleasure. A disillusioned soldier, one of her victims, sees Mary at the stamp booth counting her purchases. He congratulates her on her determination to help the boys. Mary says she has signed her Declaration of Independence and requests the audience to do likewise.

"The Biggest and the Littlest Lady in the World" (Famous Players-Lasky).

Featuring Marguerite Clark. The little girl is saving her pennies to buy the biggest doll she can find, but on meeting her soldier and sailor friends determines to buy Liberty Bonds instead. Uncle Sam tells her if every child purchases a $50.00 bond it will win the war. The little girl tells the soldiers to bring back the Kaiser's helmet, and a double exposure reveals the biggest and littlest ladies, Miss Clark, at the feet of the Statue of Liberty.

"100% American" (Famous Players-Lasky).

The cast: Mayme, Mary Pickford. Mayme and her chum spend their hard-earned money on clothes and luxuries. Mayme hears a bond salesman and starts saving her money and buys a bond, while her chum continues to be extravagant. At the close of the war there is a ball of 100% Americans, the admission being a uniform, or the showing of a Liberty Bond. Mayme generously loans her bond to her friend. Just then her soldier sweetheart tells her he has two bonds besides his uniform and they will lead the grand march because they are 100% Americans.

"It's a Cinch" (Famous Players-Lasky).

The cast: Louise Fazenda, Ford Sterling, Chester Conklin, Ben Turpin. A cannon awakens the players at the opening of the Liberty Bond campaign, they jump into their clothes and make for the nearest bond booth. They fairly whiz through the air, bowling over and kidnapping pedestrians. Ben takes the American flag away from a hyphenated citizen who is not buying bonds and hustles him away. The scene changes to a battlefield, the Americans begin their smash, which leads to the Kaiser's dugout in Berlin. The Hun flag is pulled down and the Stars and Stripes raised in its stead.

Alice Brady in a Liberty Loan Appeal (Select).

Expressing a wish that she were a boy and could be "over there," Miss Brady demonstrates that a woman's bit is most vital to success. She pledges to equip and arm ten soldiers and support their families with her Liberty bond subscriptions. With the aid of a soldier she shows how a soldier's full outfit may be the contribution of the women at home. A moment's reflection convinces her that her first check is too small, so she writes out another for double the amount of Liberty Bonds.

William Faversham in a Liberty Loan Appeal (Famous Players-Lasky).

Mr. Faversham, the English actor, makes a plea for even greater friendship between England and America. He presents a forceful argument for the Liberty Loan, saying every bond will help to arm aviators, marines, soldiers and sailors. "My English pounds and sovereigns," he announces, are going into good United States Liberty Bonds."

Charles Ray in a Liberty Bond Plea (Famous Players-Lasky).

The cast: The Farm Hand, Charles Ray. The fourth Liberty Loan is represented by an alarm clock which tries ineffectually to awaken the American people typified by the farm hand. Finally Miss Liberty awakens him. Uncle Sam explains the need of money, the farm hand invests his savings in Liberty Bonds and is told to sow them in a field. The crop produces both armed men and grain. The picture closes with a smashing attack upon the Huns by the Americans, while the alarm clock continues to ring out its appeal.

Dorothy Dalton in a Liberty Loan Appeal (Famous Players-Lasky).

The cast: Red Cross Nurse, Dorothy Dalton. A Red Cross nurse back of the lines in France is writing a letter for a soldier when Hun flyers drop bombs on the hospital. She refuses to leave, and is badly wounded, but struggles to her feet with a prayer for an awakened America to pledge every resource to help win the war. She sees a vision of Americans charging over the top, and then the answer "Buy Liberty Bonds."

Enid Bennett in a Liberty Loan Appeal (Famous Players-Lasky).

The cast: Sister of the soldier and sailor, Enid Bennett. Enid, bidding goodbye to her brothers who are going to war, regrets she is not a boy, borrows her younger brother's clothes and tries to enlist. The recruiting officers tell her she can help with the Liberty Loan campaign. She invests her savings and under her eager eye the ten dollar bills become bonds, which march to the assistance of her brothers. She explains to her parents that this is a branch open to both old and young, and they convert their savings into Liberty Bonds.

"Stake Uncle Sam to Play Your Hand" (Goldwyn).

The cast: Miss Liberty Loan, Pauline Frederick; Uncle Sam, J. W. Herbert; Joan of Arc, Madge Kennedy; Italian Girl, Mabel Normand; Soldier Boy, Tom Moore; Belgian Girl, Mae Marsh; Kaiser, John

Sainpolis; King Albert, Matt Moore; England, Barry Whitcombe; Italian Soldier, Hobart Henley. The picture opens with Millet's "The Angelus" representing peace. Then the Kaiser takes a pack of cards and forces King Albert to play with him. England, France and Italy enter the game, but the Kaiser still has the best of it. Uncle Sam then gets in the game. Miss Liberty Loan promises to back him and sells bonds for the chips. The Kaiser loses heavily and the picture closes with the Liberty Bond slogan, "We Buy, You Buy, They Buy, and Good Bye." In addition, symbolic representation is made of various striking incidents of the war, including battle scenes.

"Sylvia's Last Pledge" (Vitagraph).

The cast: Sylvia, Gladys Leslie. Sylvia's grandmother writes a letter to the soldier boy in France, and in a vision sees the boys go over the top. As Sylvia retires, she hears a noise and finds a burgler. She tells him there is nothing to steal as everything has been pledged to buy Liberty Bonds, and urges him to sign a pledge. He says the Government does not want his money, and she tells him to pay with the kind it does want, so he signs the pledge, and with a new look on his face says "I'll come back and redeem my bond."

Lillian Gish in a Liberty Loan Appeal (D. W. Griffith).

Despite her mother's pleas to buy Liberty Bonds, Lillian decides to buy wearing apparel. Falling asleep, she dreams her home has been captured by Huns, her brother killed and her mother and sister carried away. Two Hun officers enter her room and she tries frantically to escape. She awakens and her relief is so great that she puts all her money in Liberty Bonds.

Ready Money Ringfield (Sherman).

The cast: Ringfield, Dustin Farnum. Ringfield, a rancher, closes a successful business deal and prepares to get married. His banker urges him to buy Liberty Bonds, but he says he needs the money for his wedding; finally he reluctantly buys $5,000 worth. He falls asleep, dreams that thirty years have passed and he is about to be dispossessed for non-payment of rent, when he comes across the Liberty Bond, which the landlord tells him has doubled in value. He wakes up, and immediately phones the banker to double his subscription, as he will only retain $1,000 to get married on.

"The Spirit That Wins" (Famous Players-Lasky).

The cast: The Girl, Elsie Ferguson; the Soldier, Eugene O'Brien. The girl reads a letter from her soldier, appealing for the purchase of Liberty Bonds. In a vision she sees the soldiers crossing No Man's Land, and determines to make sacrifices to help them, and releases her maid for service in the Red Cross and her chauffeur for the army. She disposes of her luxurious car and the next day takes a taxi to the studio, where she meets her maid in a Red Cross uniform, and her chauffeur, who has entered the army as a mechanician.

"Edith's Victory for Democracy" (Metro).

The cast: Edith, Edith Storey; "Red" Regan, Joseph Kilgour. A Western girl saves her money and sells her cattle to buy Liberty Bonds. She is followed by "Red," a desperado. Catching him off his guard she forces him to give up all the money he has, and tells him she will invest it in Liberty Bonds and hold them for him.

"Building for Democracy" (Metro).

The cast: The Wife, Emily Stevens; the Husband, King Baggot; Democracy, Christine Mayo. The wife's one ambition is to save enough money to build a home like a model her husband has made. The fourth Liberty Loan drive starts, and everyone is investing. A vision of Democracy comes before the wife, presents the crimes of autocracy, and she is glad to use her savings to purchase Liberty Bonds.

"The Taming of Kaiser Bull" (Universal).

The cast: Kaiser Bull (Autocracy), Himself; Miss America, Mae Murray. Democracy is threatened by the raging "Kaiser Bull" when Miss America with a shot (First Liberty Loan) distracts his attention. She then tries a large stone (Second Liberty Loan) with painful results to "Kaiser Bull" and snares him with a rope (Third Liberty Loan). "Kaiser Bull" drags Miss America, she calls for help, Pershing's Riders rescue her and she brands him "4 L L" (Fourth Liberty Loan), then pointing her .45 at the audience says "Dig Deep, friends, and come across.

Norma Talmadge in a Liberty Bond Appeal (Select).

The Cast: The Girl, Norma Talmadge; The Soldier, Thomas Meighan. The Hun hordes sweeping down upon a French village discover a mother and daughter behind barricades doors, which they break down and drag the two women from their home. American soldiers follow the trail, overpower the enemy, and rescue mother and daughter. The titles are arguments for purchase of Liberty Bonds.

"Liberty Bond Jimmy" (Metro).

The Cast: Liberty Bond Jimmy, Harold Lockwood; His Father, Frank Currier; The Pro-German, Louis Stern. The son of a millionaire becomes a workman for the good of his country. He persuades the servants to invest in Liberty Bonds. He endeavors to place a patriotic button on the coat of a guest and discovers that the guest is a pro-German. Retribution follows swiftly, while Jimmy's father purchases a large amount of Liberty Bonds.

"Fatty" Arbuckle in a Liberty Loan Appeal (Famous Players-Lasky).

Fatty calls at the palace in Berlin and refuses to be "raused" by the guards. Entering, he confronts the Kaiser and "Clown Quince," asks about their treatment of Belgium and shows them "scraps of paper" from America (Liberty Bonds) which completely cow them. They attempt to escape, but are barred by the Italian, English, French and American armies. "Fatty" introduces "the boys you said were afraid to fight" rising from the midst of the scraps of paper (Fourth Liberty Loan Bonds) which make a snowstorm. The Huns plead for mercy.

"My Country" (Kalem).

The Cast: The Lawyer, John Costello; The Grandmother, Mabel Strickland; The Grandson, the Soldier, Jack Hayden; The Spirit of 1776, Richard Brandt. The Grandmother bids adieu to her grandson departing for France. American soldiers are shown marching to the front. Later the grandmother hears that the boy has been killed, and places his photograph alongside the other heroes in the family album. When the Fourth Liberty Loan begins, she orders her home sold and invests the proceeds in Liberty Bonds.

"Banzai" (Haworth).

The Cast: American General, Sessue Hayakawa. Huns carousing at headquarters refer to America's war plans as a joke, and state that after Paris, New York will fall. American troops suddenly appear and wipe out the Huns. The American general discovers his men are without ammunition. An orderly announces that the Fourth Liberty Loan drive is on, and the general shouts "This means victory and the end of the war." The camera is moved showing the action has taken place on a stage. The General advances for a curtain call and presents a liberty loan plea, and shouts "Banzai" (hurrah).

"His Extra Bit" (Famous Players-Lasky).

The Cast: The Wife, Dorothy Davenport; The Husband, Wallace Reid; The Child, Wallace Reid, Jr. The wife suggests that Wally set aside a pocket for his Liberty Bond money, and he gladly agrees, and places in it the money he would have spent for cigars and other things. His friends hear of the scheme and adopt it, and even Mandy, the cook, prevents Rastus from buying a watermelon so as to save the bonds. When the Fourth Liberty Loan drive opens, Wally finds his scheme has spread like wildfire.

William Farnum in a Liberty Loan Film (Fox).

Mrs. Heath bids her soldier boy goodbye. From his dugout he writes an appeal to the home folks to buy Liberty Bonds. He receives a letter that the Third Loan is oversubscribed, and in the midst of a celebration is killed by an exploding shell. When the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign is opened, Mrs. Heath invests all her savings in Liberty Bonds in the hope that they will bring some other mother's son safely home.

George M. Cohan in a Liberty Loan Appeal (Famous Players-Lasky).

The picture opens with a view of a Liberty Loan poster "The Hun—His Mark —Blot It Out," Cohan mounting a rostrum launches into a fiery appeal for the Loan. There is a running fire of arguments and appeals including "What Are You Giving Besides Three Cheers." "Noise Won't Win the War." "A Liberty Bond Button admits you into the league of official cheerers."

"A Wise Purchase" (Vitagraph).

The cast: Helen Loring, Corinne Griffith. Helen's uncle leaves her $1,000 to be spent in twenty-four hours. She finds it a difficult task and is about to buy clothes, when a poster attracts her attention and she invests in Liberty Bonds. The lawyer then tells her that it was a test, and she is to receive her uncle's entire fortune. She again demonstrates her wisdom by investing the entire sum in Liberty Bonds.

"Sic 'Em, Sam" (Famous Players-Lasky).

The Cast: Democracy, Douglas Fairbanks; Prussianism, "Bull" Montana; Propaganda, Tully Marshall; National Liberty, Sara Mason. All are dwelling in peace until Prussianism overcomes National Liberty. Democracy, undaunted by propaganda, goes to her aid. Belgium, France, Great Britain, Italy, Japan and others join. Prussianism throws a bomb "submarine atrocities," the explosion rings the Liberty Bell and America sends great numbers of men, and three lines of fire hose, then with the Fourth Liberty Loan aids in making headway against the blaze. The Allies rescue Liberty and Prussianism seeks to hide in the Hall of Justice. Democracy tears off his cloek of kultur, smashes him into insensibility and with a fire hose washes Prussianism down the sewer.

"When it Strikes Home" (Famous Players-Lasky).

The Cast: Antonio, George Beban; Maria, Ethel Lynne; Bond salesman, Charles Hammond; The Parrot, Himself. Antonio, a poor Italian, saves money to send to his sweetheart in Italy and takes a day off to celebrate. A salesman tries to sell him Liberty Bonds. He tells him what might happen to his sweetheart and the scene fades to an attack by Hun soldiers on a young girl. Antonio's parrot yells "Hurrah for the Kaiser." His master chucks him out of the window. He tells the salesman to give him bonds, and decides to go back to work.

"The Grouch" (Vitagraph).

The Cast: Ross Baxter, Harry Morey; Agnes Dawley, Betty Blythe. Agnes, a hat check girl, tries to earn a living for her mother and herself. Baxter, a hotel owner, dines in the cabaret. The manager grudgingly permits a sergeant to appeal for the Liberty Loan. The guests become so interested that they neglect their orders. Agnes subscribes for three one hundred dollar bonds. The Manager becomes suspicious as the hat check receipts have fallen off, and fires her. Baxter kicks the Manager into the street, offers to add $10,000 to each subscription. When Agnes returns home she finds a $10,000 bond and notice that she is to have a better position.

Earle Williams In a Liberty Loan Appeal (Vitagraph).

The Kaiser and Crown Prince brutally assault Belgium; Civilization calls for help, France and England respond. The Huns chain Liberty. Young America appears with a small file (First Liberty Loan). He then tries a larger file (Second Liberty Loan) and then removes some of the chains with a still larger file (Third Liberty Loan). One large chain remains; but Capital, Labor, the Schools and the Church contribute to the Fourth Liberty Loan which frees Liberty. Young America then seizes the two Hun chiefs and bumps their head together.

"The Decision" (Vitagraph).

Featuring William Duncan. The husband of a small family is about to invest his savings in a business deal, when his wife dreams the Huns attack their home and butcher the children, and tie her husband to a riderless horse, which drags him over the prairie. The husband breaks the bonds and mounts the horse. The animal is shot, and the husband with a rope makes a bridge over a chasm, but falls headlong over a steep cliff. The wife wakes, tells her husband of her dream, and he decides to invest the savings in Liberty Bonds.

"The Bond" (First National Exhibitors Circuit).

The Cast: Charlie, Charlie Chaplin; Edna, Edna Purviance. Charlie finds a friend supporting a lamp post. The friend makes a "touch." Continuing, Charlie sees Edna. Hanging his stick on the moon, Charlie starts a conversation. Cupid gets busy. They visit a minister, a friend beans Charlie with an old shoe, Then they go to a Liberty Bond booth; Charlie buys a bond from Uncle Sam, who presents it to Industry, who arms a soldier. He buys another, and Industry arms a sailor. The scene fades, the Kaiser attacks Miss Liberty, but is stopped by a soldier. Charlie comes to her rescue and trounces the Kaiser with a sledge marked "Liberty Bonds."

"Financing the Fourth" (V. B. K.).

The Cast: Polly, Mrs. Sydney Drew; Henry, Sidney Drew; Bobby, Bobby Connelly; Mandy, Myha Brooks; Boy Scout, Scout Hyman Brown. Henry and Polly discuss the Fourth Liberty Loan Campaign. They decide to sacrifice luxuries and buy Bonds. Bobby wants a bicycle, but Henry reminds him of the cost of the war and the sacrifices necessary, so Bobby catches the spirit. Mandy, the cook, also catches the bond buying spirit, so when a Boy Scout solicits subscriptions, they all buy Liberty Bonds.

"A Woman Of France" (Metro).

The Cast: Louise, Madame Nazimova; Marquis X. Henry Harmon; German Baron, Tom Blake. Somewhere in France, German troops occupy the chateau of Marquis X. The commanding officer see the aged Marquis attempt to signal his daughter Louise, and seizing a paper writes an order demanding her presence. On the paper is a message in code from the Marquis to ring the bell as a signal to the French troops. Louise kills one of the German officers and rings the bell, though she knows it will mean death for her father and herself. The picture fades into a Liberty Bell ringing out "Buy, buy, buy, Bonds."

How a Cut Caption Can Confuse.

The Universal reports that some exchanges are under the impression that a new special attraction featuring Harry Carey is entitled "Three Wounded Men," and that therefore it is some kind of a war play. The title is, in fact, "Three Mounted Men," and the film is a Western Drama.

The mistake was originally made in a caption under a picture from the film that appeared in the Motion Picture World.

"Cupid in Quarantine" (Mutual).

Home-made smallpox helps Elinor Field out in a love affair in her forthcoming Strand-Mutual comedy "Cupid in Quarantine." It is a good story, handled well by Miss Field. It develops surprising situations and amusing incidents when Jack, Elinor's "particular fren" is denied the house. A few ink spots on his face gave Elinor the idea of faking smallpox. Miss Field's vivaciousness permeates the entire picture, filling it with life and action and a humor that is contagious. "Cupid in Quarantine" was released by Mutual on September 10.

Four October Paramounts.

Four subjects have been scheduled by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as the Success Series releases for the month of October. They are John Barrymore in "The Man from Mexico," Oct. 6; Jack Pickford in "Seventeen," Oct. 13; Victor Moore in "Snobs," Oct. 20, and the special production, "The Cheat," in which Fannie Ward and Sessue Hayakawa are featured.

Power's Road Man Gets Results.

W. W. Lewis, traveling representative of the Nicholas Power Company, Inc., not so very long ago took a partner to double his joys and share his responsibilities. But the lady doesn't take all of his time. Some of it he devotes to selling Cameragraphs with excellent results. He writes in that Fox Liberty Theatre, St. Louis, is to be equipped with Power's 6-B8.

Harry Depp with Strand-Mutuals.

Harry Depp has been secured to play leads with Elinor Field, the winsome star of the Strand Mutual comedies.

For eight years previous to entering pictures Mr. Depp was under the management of Klaw and Erlanger, playing with Elsie Janis, Weber and Fields and other noted players. During this time he appeared in "The Fair Co-Ed," "The Pink Lady," "The Little Cafe," and numerous other popular productions.

With the Triangle Keystone he played leads in "The Love Girl," "Saving the Family Name," "The Youth of Fortune," and a long list of comedies. The first Strand-Mutual, in which Mr. Depp will appear, is "The Maid and The Man," which will be released on Sept. 24.

Henley Scores In "Laughing Bill Hyde."

Again Hobart Henley has scored. Directing Rex Beach's "Laughing Bill Hyde," with Will Rogers, he has distinguished himself and added lustre to the Goldwyn trademark. His success in this instance is twofold. He has produced what is, in the opinion of Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn, a wonderful picture, and has introduced to the screens of the world an extraordinary personality in Will Rogers.

Cinema Association Ball.

The Cinema Exhibitors Association of Bronx County, Bronx Local, N. A. M. P. I. Exhibitors' Branch, will hold its 6th Annual Movie Entertainment and Ball on Monday evening, November 4 (Election Eve), at 8 P. M., at Hunts Point Palace, 163d St. and Southern Boulevard, Bronx.

It's "Major" Evans Now.

Thomas Evans, head of the Evans Film Manufacturing Company of New York City, has been promoted to the rank of major in the Sanitary Corps, where he has important duties in connection with the Instruction School at Washington. His promotion probably makes Evans one of the youngest majors in the service, and was brought about by his creation of numerous ideas that the Surgeon General's office found workable and resultful.

Genuine Circus Scene For Serial.

Eddie Polo, the Hercules of the film, is to leave the movies for the "circles" or "circusies," whichever is correct—for one day, at least. When Barnum & Bailey visit Los Angeles, Polo will do his act before an audience. But the Universal camera will be clicking all the time under J. P. McGowan's direction, for it is all to be a part of Polo's big new serial, "The Lure of the Circus," which is now in its twelfth episode of production.

"Come On In" Released September 22.

September 22 has been decided upon by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for what in truth will be a quadruple premiere. For this is the release date of "Come On In," the first John Emerson-Anita Loos Production for Paramount, in which Shirley Mason and Ernest Truex will make their initial appearance as Paramount stars.

Truckee Snow Scenes In Ray Picture.

Truckee, the Mecca of Western picture folk, when Northern scenes are required, was the locale of the splendid snow pictures that abound in "The Law of the North," Charles Ray's new Paramount picture produced under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince, and which is released Sept. 29.

Exhibitors Seek Pre-Releases on "Treason."

"Treason," the next Mutual special production starring Edna Goodrich, scheduled for release on Sept. 29, is being sought by exhibitors for pre-release bookings at a number of the Mutual exchanges. The home office of Mutual has been receiving requests from their various branch managers for the past two weeks for permission to book the picture before release date in some of the leading theatres in their territory.

Follow the Paramount Plan.

Have you noticed the Paramount envelopes recently put in use for sending out press material? Here is a real plan for keeping your mailing list checked up. In case you do not get the Paramount service, this is the idea: The envelope is printed up with > Postmaster: If not delivered within five days, notify the sender and return postage will be paid. If returned please note why as requested by law.

Five check marks are provided for under "Does not receive mail here, Refused, Unclaimed, Dead, Removed." Have this printed up on your program envelopes and you'll be able to keep your list clean of dead addresses and get a line on removals. Then with proper care in getting new names, you'll have a list that is 100% efficient.

Goodwin Has Big Part In Bluebird's Latest.

Harold Goodwin, boy actor, has an important part in "A Romance for Roma," Edith Roberts' latest Bluebird starring vehicle, now being made under the direction of Tod Browning at the Bluebird west coast studios. Harry Hilliard is the leading man, and others in the cast include Molly McConnell and Blanche Gray. The scenario was written by Rex Taylor from a magazine story by James F. Poland.

Kent Returns to the Universal.

Leon Kent, who played in and directed the original Universal Westerns many years ago, has returned to the Universal fold and is appearing in the new series of two-reel "Westerns," in which Helen Gibson is starred, under the direction of Harry Harvey. Mr. Kent is one of the earliest heavy men on the screen, having started to shoot them for the camera about nine years ago.

Fritzi Brunette is featured in the next Bluebird film which will be released November 4. It is entitled "The Cabaret Girl." The film is being directed by Douglas Gerrard. It was taken from the story by Hope Loring, with a working script prepared by Rex Taxlor.

Advertising Aids for Busy Managers

"WILDFLOWER"

Adolph Zukor Presents Marguerite Clark in One of Her Earliest and Still One of Her Greatest Successes of Both Screen and Stage.

Cast.

Letty Roberts.....Marguerite Clark
Arnold Boyd .....Harold Lockwood
Gerald Boyd.....James Cooley
The Lawyer .....E. L. Davenport
Bud Haskins .....Jack Pickford

Directed by Allan Dwan.

The Story: Arnold Boyd, seeking rest in the wilderness, comes in contact with Letty Roberts, whom he nicknames "Wildflower." His interest is in her personality rather than in the child-woman herself, but his brother, who comes to visit him, views her differently and persuades her to elope with him. Arnold follows and takes her from Gerald, taking her to his home, where she passes as his wife. It is long before she comprehends the reason for his action, but in the ripeness of time she understands and the "Wildflower" becomes devoted to the man who saved her from a hateful bondage.

Feature Marguerite Clark as Letty Roberts and Harold Lockwood as Arnold Boyd.

Program and Advertising Phrases: How a Wife in Name Only Won Happiness Through Strange Stroke of Fate.
Country Girl Surrenders to City Villain—and Find Happiness.
Force of Character Changes a Wildflower Into Flaming Bush.
How Two Brothers Battled to Bring Happiness to Trusting Girl.
Strange Outcome of an Adventure in the Wilds of Civilization.
Marguerite Clark Star of Her Latest and Best Photoplay.

Advertising Angles: Make more noise over this than you would over a more recent issue. Hundreds will remember, and not only want to see it again, but will urge their friends. Do not offer it as Miss Clark's newest, but as one of her best. She has had few plays as successful. Centre on Miss Clark, but tell that Harold Lockwood, Jack Pickford and others are in her support. You have a number of strong angles to play up. Work them all.

Advertising Aids: Two designs each one and three sheets. One six-sheet. Thumbnail and one to three-column cuts in electro or mats. Press book.

Released September 8.

"THE LAW OF THE NORTH."

Thomas H. Ince Presents Charles Ray in a Bit of Life in the Trading Posts of the Frozen North.

Cast.

Alain de Montcalm.....Charles Ray
Therese Le Noir.....Doris Lee
Caesar Le Noir.....Robert McKim
Virginie de Montcalm.....Gloria Hope
Michel de Montcalm....Charles K. French
Numa, an Indian.....Manuel Ojeda

Directed by Irvin W. Willat.

The Story: Alain de Montcalm is the son of the commandant of a trading post. The second in command, Le Noir, is accused of having wronged an Indian girl. Le Noir takes advantage of Alain's absence from the post to tell Virginie, Alain's sister, that he took the blame for Alain. He is overheard by Montcalm, who thrashes him. In revenge Le Noir kills his chief and abducts the girl. Alain, arriving with Le Noir's daughter, starts in pursuit. The girl, Therese, also goes in search of her father. In the end Le Noir falls a prey to the wolves and Alain discovers that his enmity does not extend to the daughter.

Feature Charles Ray as Alain de Montcalm and Doris Lee as Therese Le Noir.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Rugged Drama of Love and Vengeance in Snow-clad Climes Farthest North.
Thrilling Photodrama of Life in the Far North.
Love and Lynch Law Where It's "Five Shirts Cold."
How Love for a Helpless Girl Blunted Lust for Revenge.
Where Gentle Love Overcome Wild Outbursts of Brute Force.
Charles Ray Star of a Dandy Photoplay of the Klondyke.

Advertising Angles: Centre interest in the star and tell that he is seen in a vivid picture of the north, where every man is a law unto himself. For a newspaper feature play up the death of Le Noir at bay, and his threat to kill Virginie with his last bullet.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.

Released September 29.

"THE BETTER HALF"

Select Pictures Presents Alice Brady in a Powerful Dramatization of Miriam Michelson's Wldely Read Novel, "Michael Thwaite's Wife."

Cast.

Louise ..... } Alice Brady
Trixie ..... }
Michael Thwaite .....David Powell
Hendrick Thurston.....Crauford Kent
Judge Thorley, the twins' uncle, W. T. Carlton
Mrs. Cortlandt, their aunt, Isabelle O'Madigan
Doctor .....Richard Allen

Directed by J. S. Robertson.

The Story: Louise and Trixie are twin sisters in all but nature. Trixie goes to New York to enter the household of a wealthy aunt, while Louise gives up her chance to nurse her bedridden father. In the same unselfish fashion she gives to Trixie, Michael Thwaite, though her love for him is deep. At her father's death she becomes a nurse. Trixie tires of Michael and becomes infatuated with Hendrick Thurston. When Michael upbraids her she goes to Louise, who plans to effect a reconciliation. But Trixie elopes with Thurston and Louise takes her place in Michael's household, through the fact that he has been blinded. She finds comfort in ministering to the afflicted man, but Trixie again comes home and her position is threatened, but not for long, and things come right at last.

Feature Alice Brady as Louise and Trixie, and David Powell as Michael Thwaite.

Program and Advertisinq Phrases: Alice Brady Star of Effective Photoplay in Which She Plays the Double Role of Twin Sisters.
Skill and Artistry Displayed by Alice Brady in Dual Roles.
Difficult Task of Playing Her Own Twin Sister Proves Alice Brady a Great Actress.
Blind Man Lives Years in Happy Unconsciousness of Great Wrong.
Blind Man Married to One Sister Spends Years with Her Twin.
Strange Circumstances Under Which Twin Sisters Wreck and Save a Trusting Husband.

Advertising Angles: Try to get the local booksellers to display the novel. Also work the library angle. For your newspaper work tell the story of the substitution without giving the ending of the story. Work the play of words in the title for your catch phrases. Play up Miss Brady and capitalize her popularity. Make most of your campaign on the unusual features of the plot.

Advertising Aids: Two one-sheets, two three-sheet, one six-sheet, one 24-sheet. Window cards, 14x21. Heralds. Lobby display photographs, 8x10, 11x14, 22x28. Slides. Cuts, two one-column, one one-half-column cut of star, and one one-column and one two-column cuts of star.

Released in September.

and his brutality causes her death. Her virtual murder is avenged by Dick Gregory, her sister's sweetheart, while the greater criminal suffers for his own misdeeds and those for which he is responsible.

Feature the principals in the cast.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Capt. Horst von der Golst, Self Confessed Hun Spy, Featured as Photoplayer.

Big Scenes Depict the Revolting Brutality of the Hun.

How an American Youth Trapped and Imprisoned a Band of Spies.

Thrilling War Drama Exposing the Hun in His Hellishness.

Startling Revelations of Hun Beastliness in Propaganda Play.

Showing Up the Kind of a Beast Who Would Parley with Humans.

Advertising Angles: This story must be circused to bring the best results. Post plenty of paper, including as many of the larger stands as you can find wall space for. Tell that here is a spy story written from the inside, with one of the spy heads in a leading role. Get as many of the press stories used as possible, even though this may mean the taking of extra advertising space—you'll need that, too.

Advertising Aids: Two each, one and three sheets; one each, six and twenty-four sheets. Lobby displays, 8x10 (black and white), 11x14 (gelatine), 22x28 (colored), 8x10 stills of war, 22x28 sepia gelatine of star. Slides. Scene cuts and mats. Music cues. Advertising cuts and mats. Press book.

"UNEXPECTED PLACES"

Metro Presents Bert Lytell in a Screen Version of Lieutenant Frank R. Adams' "Inside" Story of the Great War.

Dick Holloway ..... Bert Lytell
Lord Varden ..... Colin Menney
Hiram Penfield ..... Louis Morrison
Mrs. Penfield ..... Edythe Chapman
Ruth Penfield ..... Rhea Mitchell
Jocelyn ..... John Burton
"Cherie" ..... Rosemary Theby
Brauer ..... Stanton Heck
Meyer ..... Jay Dwiggins

Directed by E. Mason Hopper.

The Story: The valet of Lord Harold Varden, on a secret mission to our Government, has been murdered. Dick Holloway, a reporter, detailed to the story, calls on Lord Varden just as the latter feels the effects of poison administered to him. He takes the place of the nobleman when his American cousins come for him, and not only saves his lordship's papers, but captures the spies detailed to get them.

Feature Bert Lytell as Dick Holloway and Rhea Mitchell as Ruth Penfield.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Photoplay Founded on Thrilling Story First Printed in Blue Book Magazine.

Story of a Murder Mystery Unraveled by a Star Newspaper Reporter.

Poisoned Food Reveals Clue to Equally Poisonous German Propaganda.

Murder Mystery Revealed in Clearing Up Hun Spy Plots.

The World War Linked with Fast-Moving Mystery Play of Love and Vengeance.

Thrilling Melodrama Based on Crime Story of Deep Significance.

Advertising Angles: Make capital of the fact that this is a Blue Book story, written by a man who should know. Tell that it abounds in spirited action. You can work over an old idea by announcing that free tickets are to be found in "unexpected places," planting a couple of dozen passes along the main street in places easy of access and yet within the meaning of the word. Working with some daily paper you can work up quite an excitement with this scheme.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten-minute novel. Slide. Heralds. Lobby displays, 8x10 sepia, 11x14, sepia, 22x28 colored. Cuts.

Released September 30.

"A SOUL WITHOUT WINDOWS."

World-Pictures Presents Ethel Clayton in the Story of a Wild Elf in a Quaker Village Who Cut Windows to a Man's Soul.

Cast.

Hopama ..... Ethel Clayton
Joshua ..... Richard Clarke
Hannah ..... Eugene Woodward.
Nehemiah ..... Victor Kennard
Pedro Camillio ..... David Davies
Murio ..... Gus Pixley
Mrs. Mallory ..... Zadee Burbank
Scott Mallory ..... Frank Mayo
Faith Palmer ..... Pinna Nesbit
Mr. Palmer ..... Jack Drumier
Griswold ..... Jack Roberts
Woman ..... Sadie Schaeffer
Girl ..... Violet Aksel

Directed by Travers Vale.

The Story: A little child is found by the roadside with her dying mother and taken in charge by the kindly but severe Quakers of the settlement. The child knows only that her name is "Hopama." She grows up in the narrow life, a thing foreign to the peaceful community. She comes into the life of Scott Mallory, who has been paralyzed saving his fiancee from drowning. The girl has taken back her liberty and until Hopama came he doubted all the world. Scott is cured by an operation and, fearful that her son will marry the unknown girl, Mrs. Mallory tells Hopama that Scott is to marry Faith Palmer, his old sweetheart. Hopama steals away to an old musician and in the end it is revealed that her baby name is merely Hope Palmer, and the stain on her birth cleared away. Mrs. Mallory welcomes her as a daughter.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Ethel Clayton Star of World Film's Newest Screen Classic.

The Kind of Picture that Delights Beholders and Sticks in Memory.

Photodrama that is Pleasant and Effective from Start to Finish.

An Interesting, Unusual and Thoroughly Delightful Photoplay.

Letting the Love Light Into a Darkened Soul.

Ethel Clayton Now Presenting the Best Photoplay She Has Ever Appeared In.

Feature Ethel Clayton as Hopama and Frank Mayo as Scott Mallory.

Advertising Angles: Make capital of Miss Clayton's name and lay emphasis upon the suggestion of the opportunity her odd role offers, a child of the world in a Quaker settlement. You can work up decided interest in the story. Work on the title with such phrases as "Eyes are the windows of the soul, yet this man was not blind. He simply would not let in the light," etc. Make a special effort to procure the use of one or more cuts, which are better than usual.

Advertising Aids: Two one-sheets, two three-sheets, two six-sheets, two eight-sheets, and one 24-sheet. Eight 8x11 blackand-white, eight 11x14 colored, and two 22x28 colored lobby displays. One two-column cut, two one-column cuts. Slides, press sheets and music cues.

"TALK OF THE TOWN."

Universal Presents Dorothy Phillips In the Story of a Girl Who Wanted to See Real Life and Got Almost More Than She Wanted.

Cast.

Genevra French.....Dorothy Phillips
Major French.....George Fawcett
Aunt Harriet.....Clarissa Selwyne
Lawrence Tabor.....William Stowell
Jack Langhome.....Lon Chaney

Directed by Allen Holubar.

The Story: Genevra French has been too carefully brought up. She wants a little freedom and to gain this she persuades Lawrence Tabor to elope with her. The marriage finds her father's approval, but she makes it plain to Tabor that she married for freedom and not to exchange guardians. Tabor gives her all the liberty she desires and she makes herself the talk of the town. But she becomes entangled in a flirtation with Jack Langhome that goes too far to be pleasant to her. Tabor arrives at the road house to which Langhome has taken her just in time to save her. His forbearance wins her love at last. Not until long afterward does she discover that Tabor hired Langhome to play his part.

Feature Dorothy Phillips as Genevra French, William Stowell as Lawrence Tabor.

Program and Advertising Phrases: The Engaging Story of a Society Girl Reared Behind Bars of a Gilded Cage.
Dorothy Phillips, Star of Many Screen Successes, in New Photoplay.
Strange Outcome of a Girl's Experiment with Mail-Order Love-Making.
Married as an Experiment, the Wife Falls in Love—and Is Happy.
Trying to Trick Dan Cupid Works Out in Surprising Denouement.
Odd Theme for Photoplay Leads Interest to a Surprise Finish.

Advertising Angles: Tell that this is a Snappy Stories tale by Harold Vickers. Play up the star and before advertising the title announce that "Dorothy Phillips will be the Talk of the Town" on a certain date. Use one or more double-barrelled advertisements to mothers who are too strict and to daughters who think they are too sternly treated.

Advertising Aids: Two ones, two threes, one six-sheet and one twenty-four sheet. One sheet of players. Black and white lobby displays. Slides. Player cuts. Heralds. Press book. Ideas sheet.
Released September 28.

"A DIPLOMATIC MISSION."

Cast.

Sylvester Todd.....Earle Williams
Lady Diana.....Grace Darmond
Sir John Boyden.....Leslie Stuart
Lady Boyden.....Kathleen Kirkham
Von Goetz.....Gordon Russell

Directed by Jack Conway.

The Story: Sylvester Todd, while traveling the South Seas, meets Lady Diana at Somona, an island under the rule of the Grand Duke of a German principality. Todd rescues Diana from the insults of the duke's son, and has to make his escape. He goes to Singapore, where his old friend, Sir John Boyden, persuades him to go to the island of Platina, where valuable platinum mines are about to be seized by the Germans, already on the brink of the great war. Todd not only saves the island to the British, but saves Lady Diana, who has taken refuge there—and she means more to him than the platinum.

Feature Earle Williams as Sylvester Todd and Grace Darmond as Lady Diana.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature Reflects Thrilling Story of Love and Adventure in Strange Lands.
Pre-War Story Brought to Thrilling Climax Through Hun Conniving.
Engaging Story of Love and Adventure in South Sea Isles.
How Cunning Hun Was Thwarted in Some of His Pre-War Schemes.
Thrills and Excitement in Rugged Story of a Strange Uprising.
Sensational Film Carries Story of True and Stirring Adventure.

Advertising Angles: Tell that this is a story of the events preceding the war laid on islands in the South Sea. Play up the scenery and novelty of the locations. Make a punch of the fact that the hero gets the girl a German prince coveted and also defeats the plans of a German emissary to gain stores of platinum for war supplies. Make generous use of the names of the stars, both of whom should be popular with your patrons.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six sheets. Window cards. Lobby display, 11x14 and 22x28. Heralds. Slides. Plan book. Press sheet.

"LAUGHING BILL HYDE."

Goldwyn Presents the Cowboy Philosopher, Will Rogers, in an Extraordinary Production of One of Rex Beach's Most Famous Stories.

Cast.

Laughing Bill Hyde.....Will Rogers
Ponotah.....Anna Lehr
Black Jack Burg.....John Sainpolis
Dr. Evan Thomas.....Clarence Oliver
Alice.....Mabel Ballin
Joseph Wesley Slayforth..Joseph Herbert
Denny Slevin.....Robert Conville
Danny Dorgan.....Dan Mason

Directed by Hobart Henley.

The Story: Bill Hyde escapes from the penitentiary and makes his way to Alaska. There he falls in with the doctor who befriended him on his escape and they cast their fortunes together. He rescues Ponotah, a half breed girl, from insult and learns that she has a half interest in a mine run by Slayforth, who is keeping her from her own. Bill, in his own peculiar way, gets square with Slayforth, gives Ponotah her money and sells a salted mine for his medical friend, paving the way for a double wedding.

Feature Will Rogers as Laughing Bill Hyde and Anna Lehr as Ponotah.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Will Rogers, Famous Rope Expert of Big Time Vaudeville, Featured Now in Photoplay.
Rex Beach Picture Unfolds Gripping Story in Convincing Scenes.
Crooks Robbed of Loot to Pay the Minister a Marriage Fee.
"Keep Smiling" Is Motto of Laughing Bill Hyde in Rex Beach Play.
Will Rogers Featured in Rex Beach's Tremendous Drama of Redemption.
How Kindness Paved the Way for Outlaw's Final Redemption.

Advertising Angles: Save in those towns where the Ziegfeld show plays, it will be necessary to establish the identity of this star. Pick up matter from the press book and proclaim his one of the most unique figures in Broadway theatricals, a busted cowboy, who came into a salary of $1,000 a week because of his nimble wit. But do not overlook the authorship angle. Play this up as one of the characteristic Beach stories. It ap-

"THE ROAD TO FRANCE."

World-Pictures Presents Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley in an Intense Love Story Woven About the Romance of Ship Building for the Government.

Cast.

Tom Whitney.....Carlyle Blackwell
Helen Bemis.....Evelyn Greeley
John Bemis.....Jack Drumier
Mollie.....Muriel Ostriche
Robert Whitney.....George De Carlton
Mrs. Whitney.....Jane Sterling
Hector Winter.....Richard Neill
Mrs. O'Leary.....Inez Shannon
Burns.....Henry West
Hugo Kraus.....Alex. Shannon
Chief of Police.....Joseph Smiley
Dennis O'Leary.....James Davis
Little O'Leary Girl....Elizabeth Kennedy

Directed by Dell Henderson.

The Story: Tom Whitney, well connected but a social derelict because of his weakness for drink, is released from the draft because of an old football injury, but a policeman persuades him that he can still do his bit in the shipyards. He takes a job in the yard owned by the man to whose daughter he was engaged in happier times. Three German propagandists seek to foment a strike to delay the work, and largely through Tom's efforts the plan goes amiss and the strike is called off. Rehabilitated by work, the launching of The Liberty is a forecast of his own rebirth.

Feature Carlyle Blackwell as Tom Whitney and Evelyn Greeley as Helen Bemis.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greely Stars of Inspiring Photoplay.
Photographic Proof that a Bridge of Ships is the Road to France.
Thwarting the Schemes of German Spies in American Shipyards.
Thrilling Encounters and Rugged Patriotism in Fine Photoplay.
Gripping Photodrama Built Against the Background of Patriotism.
Jammed with Thrills and Excitement and Bubbling with Love Interest.

Advertising Angles: The press sheet offers some excellent suggestions, which should be followed. This is virtually Government propaganda in attractive form, and should be played up from every angle. Get the newspapers to help you help the Government. Put it in that way, for the story assuredly can help. But in your advertising call it a romance and not a propaganda, for it is first of all a dramatic story.

Advertising Aids: Two one-sheets, two three-sheets, two six-sheets, two eight-sheets, and one 24-sheet. Eight 8x11 black-and-white, eight 11x14 colored, and two, 22x28 colored lobby displays. One two-column cut, two one-column cuts. Slides, press sheets, and music cues.

Released October 14.

WE SELL ON THE INSTALLMENT PLAN

HE'S gone across—
YOU "come across"!

Adopt a SOLDIER and Supply him with "SMOKES" for the Duration of the WAR!

YOU know that our fighting men are begging for tobacco. Tobacco cheers them. They need it. "Send more cigarettes." "We can't get half enough smokes over here." "A cigarette is the first thing a wounded man asks for." Almost every mail brings many thousands of such requests.

$1.00 a Month Keeps a Soldier Supplied — Will YOU Be a "BIG BROTHER" or a "BIG SISTER" to a Lonely Fighting Man?

Every dollar sends four 45c. packages of tobacco. Mail the money and coupon right now.

"OUR BOYS IN FRANCE TOBACCO FUND"
19 West 44th Street, New York

GENTLEMEN: I want to do my part to help the American soldiers who are fighting my battle in France. If tobacco will do it, I'm for tobacco. (Check below how you desire to contribute.)

I enclose $1.00. I will adopt a soldier and send you $1.00 a month to supply him with "smokes" for the duration of the war.

I send you herewith ....., my contribution towards the purchase of tobacco for American soldiers. This does not obligate me to contribute more.

"FAME AND FORTUNE."

William Fox Presents Tom Mix in a Story of Vivid Action in Which the Cowboy Star Offers Countless Thrills.

Cast.

Clay Burgess.....Tom Mix
Della Bowen.....Kathleen Connors
"Big" Dave Dawley.....George Nicholls
Judge Quinn.....C. McHugh
Ben Davis.....Jack Dill
Mattie Carson.....Annette DeFoe
Flash Denby.....Val Paul
Kuneen.....E. N. Wallack
Sheriff of Paola.....Clarence Burton

Directed by Lynn Reynolds.

The Story: The town of Paola is virtually run by "Big" Dave Hawley, who has the local judge under his control. When William Burgess, the banker, dies, Dave forges a will giving him the property and has it probated by the judge. Ben Davis is driven from town because he will not affix his notary seal to the fraud. When Clay Burgess comes to claim the property, Dave arranges to have him murdered, but Clay doesn't believe in such things and kills one of his would-be slayers, for which Dave has him arrested. Clay escapes and not only wins back his own, but he cleans up Paola like a steam laundry.

Feature Tom Mix as Clay Burgess and Kathleen Connors as Della Bowen.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Tom Mix, Daredevil Exponent of Western Life in Thrilling Photodrama.
Quick Action, Wild Riding, Straight Shooting Thriller.
A Peppery Western Play with Warm Hearts and Cold Lead.
Thrills Unceasing Lead to Solar Plexus Finish.
Thrilling Western Drama with Thrill of Wild Prairie Life.
Photoplay that Thrills and Snaps Like Chain Lightning.

Advertising Angles: Tell that these new "Victory" pictures will present Tom Mix in better plays than ever, and tell enough of this story to show that there is action in more than plenty. If you have a local ring in your town you can offer discreet suggestions that Mix will show how to clean it up, but be careful of libel. Work catch-phrases along the lines of "Paola was a one-man town, but after Tom Mix got there, in Fame and Fortune, he was the man." In all your announcements work to convey the suggestion of bigness in story.

Advertising Aids: One, three and six-sheets, two styles of each. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Announcement slide. Cuts, mats and press sheets (cuts are made on special order at rate of 20 cents per column; mats and press sheets are mailed gratis).

Released October 6.

"THE GREY PARASOL"

Triangle Presents Wellington Cross in His First Screen Production, in Which He Foils German Agents and Wins a Pretty Girl's Heart and Hand.

Cast.

Hamilton Hill.....Wellington Cross
Estelle Redding.....Claire Anderson
Edward Burnham.....Joe Bennett
Bud Ralston.....Frank Thorne
Rodger Irwin.....Ed Brady
Farraday Childs.....William Quinn

Directed by Lawrence Windom.

The Story: Hamilton Hill becomes interested in a woman he sees in a parasol shop. She is attacked by two men and he goes to her relief. He overcomes one, but the other and the girl disappear. The captive asserts that he is a secret service agent and that the girl is a German spy. Half convinced, Hill goes with him to the girl's house, learning that she is Estelle Redding. She asserts that they are trying to rob her of a formula for a coal substitute, and it is shown that they are not in Government employ, but are agents of the coal trust. After many exciting episodes the formula comes into proper hands at last and Hill wins a bride.

Feature Wellington Cross as Hamilton Hill and Claire Anderson as Estelle Redding.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Wellington Cross, Vaudeville and Musical Comedy Star, Makes His Screen Debut.
Hollow Handle of Woman's Parasol Object of Photoplay Sensations.
German Spy Plots Frustrated by Acrobatic Photoplay Hero.
Mystery and Excitement Follow Through Photoplay Adventure.
Surprise Outcome of Mystery Photoplay Makes Happy Climax.

Advertising Angles: Wellington Cross is a well-known stage star who will need no introduction where his professional engagements have taken him. In the smaller towns he should be identified to the patrons. You can rouse interest by reciting some fragments of the story. You might letter a gray parasol for street work, letting it be carried by a well-dressed man with "For the reason I carry this see The Grey Parasol at (house and date)."

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six sheets. Special process art heralds. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Photographs. Slides. Electros and mats. Triangle Magazines. Press sheets.
Released September 29.

"THE BORDER RAIDERS"

Pathe Presents Betty Compson and George Larkin in a Novelty Story of the Mexican Border in These Troubled Times.

Cast.

Rose Hardy.....Betty Compson
John Smith.....George Larkin
Mock Sing.....Frank Deshon
John Hardy.....H. C. Carpenter
Cleo Dade.....Claire Du Brey
Emanuel Riggs.....Howard Crampton
"Square Deal" Dixon....Fred M. Malatesta

Directed by Stuart Paton.

The Story: Ever since civil war started in Mexico the border has been a hotbed of trouble for United States officials. John Hardy, a widower, has a ranch near the border. He is trapped into a marriage with Cleo Dade by Mock Sing, a Chinaman who is head of a league of gun-runners. Cleo hates Rose, Hardy's daughter, and plans to take the estate from her. Hardy has disappeared. The riders on the ranch are loyal to Rose and contest the effort to prove up a forged will. In the fight that ensues John Smith, a tool of Sing's, rescues Rose. Later he kills Sing and liberates Rose's father, who has been held prisoner. Then it develops that Smith in reality is a secret service agent, and what follows may be imagined.

Feature Betty Compson as Rose Hardy and George Larkin as John Smith.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Cattle Rustling, Opium-Smuggling and Gun Toting Furnishes Basis of Exciting Border Play.
Romance and Adventure Enter into tale of Mexican Border Life.
Crafty Chinamen Make Headway in Crime Until Uncle Sam Finishes Them.
Story of the United States Secret Service Pulses with Thrills.
Gang Rule and Border Raiding Lend Excitement to Photoplay.

Advertising Angles: Miss Compson gained her initial favor in comedy, and her admirers should be interested in seeing how she fares in drama. Frame your advertisements to arouse their curiosity. Announce the play as a vivid border drama abounding in action, but work mostly to Miss Compson. Photographs and cuts will help a lot.

Advertising Aids: One one-sheet, two three-sheets, one six-sheet, one 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 11x14, both in sepia and color; also 22x28. Slide. Campaign book. Cuts.
Released October 6.

"THE VELVET HAND"

Bluebird Presents Fritzi Brunette in a Play Based Upon a Story by Edith Barnard Delano.

Cast.

Russo Russelli.....Fred Turner
Russino.....Eugene Corey
Gianna.....Fritzi Brunette
Count Paul Trovelli.....William Conklin
Prince Viscomte.....Wedgwood Nowell
Countess Michetti.....Carmen Phillips
Secretary.....Nicholas Duneau

Directed by Douglas Gerrard.

The Story: Gianna and her brother, Russino, are training to become professional dancers. They are dancing at the seaside, when Russino becomes entangled with Netta, a vacationist. Count Paul Trovilli and his friend, Prince Viscomte, visit the resort. The prince recognizes Netta as the Countess Michetti, with whom he has had an affair. Renewing old acquaintance in the course of a stroll, he is followed by Russino, and the latter is killed in the quarrel which follows. Gianna finds the count standing over her brother's dead body, and believing him to be the murderer, declares vendetta. Later, now a famous dancer, she is in a position to carry out her vow.

Feature Eugene Corey as Russino and Carmen Phillips as Countess Michetti.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Gripping Story of Relentless Vendetta in Which Love Triumphs.
How Love and Vengeance Worked Out on Italy's Sunny Shores.
Sensational Photoplay Filled with Thrills and Excitement.
Plenty of Thrills to Satisfy Lovers of the Sensational.
Novelty in Photoplay Leads to Surprising Finish.

Advertising Angles: The vendetta angle will probably be found the stronger appeal. Work on that. But you can do something with the dancing angle, possibly running a fancy dancing contest to advertise the picture. If there is a local dancing master, join forces.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six sheets. Stock one-sheet of star. Colored and black-and-white lobby displays. Slide. Heralds. Player cuts in three sizes. Scene cuts one and two columns wide. Press book.
Released September 30.

I Am Public Opinion

All men fear me!

I declare that Uncle Sam shall not go to his knees to beg you to buy his bonds. That is no position for a fighting man. But if you have the money to buy, and do not buy, I will make this No Man's Land for you!

I will judge you not by an allegiance expressed in mere words.

I will judge you not by your mad cheers as our boys march away to whatever fate may have in store for them.

I will judge you not by the warmth of the tears you shed over the lists of the dead and the injured that come to us from time to time.

I will judge you not by your uncovered head and solemn mien as our maimed in battle return to our shores for loving care.

But, as wise as I am just, I will judge you by the material aid you give to the fighting men who are facing death that you may live and move and have your being in a world made safe.

I warn you—don't talk patriotism over here, unless your money is talking victory Over There.

I am Public Opinion!

As I judge, all men stand or fall!

WHITE A.C. SPECIAL
MOTION PICTURE CARBONS
Prove Their Merit For Alternating Current Projection

White A. C. Special Carbons have made good the claims made for them from the very day they were placed on the market. Hundreds of voluntary letters from all parts of the country testify to that fact. These carbons have met the requirements so exactly, that they are now the standard of alternating current carbons.

White A. C. Special Carbons give the penetrating, pure white, flickerless light so necessary for even screen illumination and clear, sharply defined pictures. In using these carbons no new equipment is necessary. Simply put in a trim of the new carbons.

FOR DIRECT CURRENT PROJECTION
The Silvertip is the standard negative carbon.
It gives a steady arc with maximum brilliancy.

Educate Your Audience to Help Fight Censorship

Introducing a bill providing for the Censorship of Moving Pictures is a favorite indoor pastime in legislative halls throughout the country. Eternal vigilance is the price of the Exhibitor's mere safety if not his success.

Presented in the proper manner, the Censorship of Moving Pictures is just as obnoxious to the Exhibitor's audiences as it is to the Exhibitor. And public opinion aroused in behalf of moving pictures and against their unfair and discriminatory control is the surest weapon to defeat Censorship.

The Management of this Theatre desires the co-operation of its patrons in providing good clean entertainment. : : : :
We want no "legalized" censorship of moving pictures

We have prepared a series of nine different stereopticon slides which crystallize the argument against Censorship; one of the slides is shown herewith.

These slides shown repeatedly in any theatre cannot fail to influence public opinion in that locality against Censorship. They will line up the general public on the side of the Exhibitor.

You Ought to Be Showing Them Now! Legislatures Everywhere Are Convening

Set of Nine Slides, carefully packed, will be sent postpaid on receipt of $1.00.

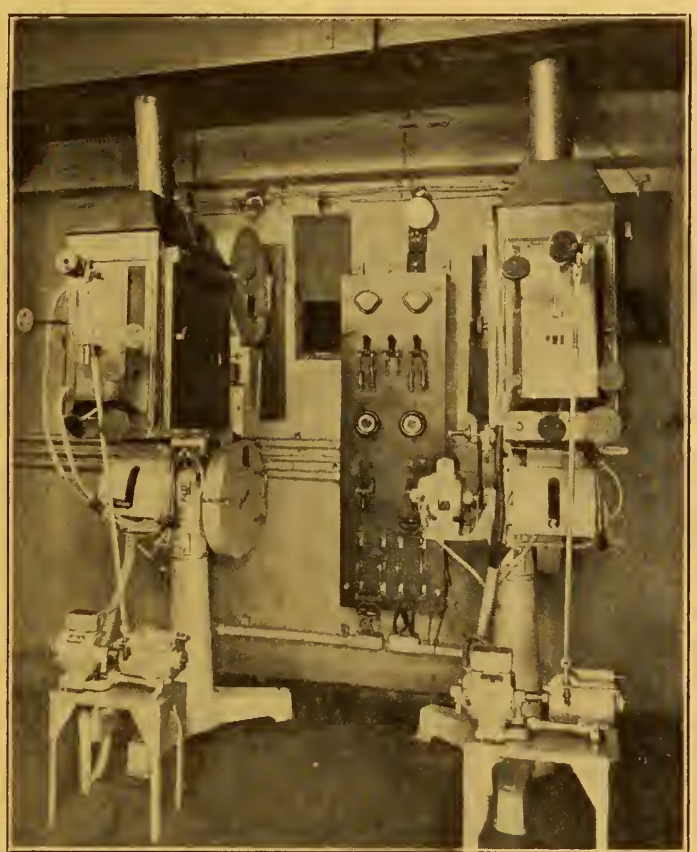
Would this be a "Model" Operating Room?

The illustration below is taken from an article in the Motion Picture News of September 14, by Mr. A. S. Cory, the Projection Expert, describing the "Model Operating Room of the Standard Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio—one of the finest to be found in the United States."

The article is refreshing reading. Those who realize that the Operating Room is the Heart of the House, and treat it as such, deserve our profound respect. Our hats off to the Managers of the Standard!



Such equipment makes the Operator's heart glad; it gives him real pride in his work, raises the standard of his profession, all of which is reflected on the Screen, and the gratifying results extend clear to the Box Office.

Simplex Projectors are used. Of course. In fact, one can't help wondering if, even if all the other efficient appointments were left as they are, this could really be such a "Model" Operating Room without them. (We have the acts of the Masters of the Industry to support us in this thought.)

Next week we'll show how the Simplex Twins keep the Operator from quitting.

A Tremendous HIT with the Public

"AROUND THE CLOCK WITH A ROOKIE" (1st release)—"AROUND THE CLOCK WITH THE SAILOR" (2d release)—and the coming release—"AROUND THE CLOCK WITH THE MARINE"—were all experiments. We didn't know how the public would like them. NOW they are little short of sensational successes because the public are cramming their way in to see how our Yanks are having the time of their young lives, training to smash hell out of the huns.

SPECIAL posters—special ads, and other big ad helps will assist you in putting this over in your house with a wallop. BUT—before you book, do as we have always advised you to do, if you have the time. SEE WITH YOUR OWN EYES how big these specials really are. If you haven't shown the first release, book that and advertise this series. Boost 'em to the very limit. Your local Y. M. C. A. will cooperate with you. Exclusive and Official

Someone, most likely a group of envious or jealous Salesmen, has been attempting to confuse Exhibitors as regards bookings on our seven-episode feature—"FIGHTING FOR FREEDOM"—by circulating the false statement that this big series could be booked at VARIOUS COMPETITIVE exchanges.

This advertisement is published to nail that lie. "Fighting for Freedom" constitutes seven releases of one reel each, being the EXCLUSIVE OFFICIAL British War Pictures, not shown by other than Universal Exchanges and not to be had at any other than Universal Exchanges.

"Fighting for Freedom" is scoring little short of sensational successes wherever shown. Thus the false rumor to confuse Exhibitors who are now booking. Further—a special advertising campaign, complete special posters, lobby displays, slides, publicity and press matter of wide variety has been prepared for this great Series. If you haven't secured a copy of this Ad Campaign book, send for a copy to your nearest Universal Exchange. It tells the whole big story in "boiled down" facts.

DON'T let ANYONE confuse you. You can see this series and you can book this series EXCLUSIVELY and ONLY thru UNIVERSAL EXCHANGES. It's the series the public wants right this minute, with the tremendous British and Allied offensives smashing the Huns at every turn. Keep your public thrilled to their nerve ends every week for 7 big weeks. Go out and get some of this big money that demands merely the exploitation of this big series in advertising. and other Executives of Production and Distribution in the Film Industry

Gentlemen:-

That there is a great deal of waste in the production and distribution of films is known to us all.

We can put our fingers on the collective waste, but refuse to find it in our own organizations, or cannot eradicate it, unless competitors do likewise.

On September 14th I sent a letter to the Priorities Committee of the War Industries Board at Washington, in which are recommended drastic curtailments in production and distribution, for the good of the Nation; and possibly also for that of the Industry.

Loudly proclaiming our patriotism, eagerly professing a wish to help win the war, some of us nevertheless increase production, piling Ossa upon Pelion, furnishing a Gargantuan feed to a market already overfed. We multiply distributing offices instead of reducing them. We cover the country with a swarm of traveling solicitors, while Uncle Sam needs able bodied men for war work.

Let's help the government by lessening our activities, not increasing them.

Action by Washington along the lines of my letter will have a vital effect upon the industry. Therefore, I will send a copy on request to executives and others directly affected by such action.

Very truly yours,

George Kleine

William S. Hart in a Thrilling Love Story of Hun Spies, A Brave Man and a Beautiful Girl

"RIALTO melodrama is screen at best. Five reels pass like one in 'The Border Wireless' with William S. Hart." The New York Sun.

"The best picture that William S. Hart has made is being shown at the Rialto this week. It is called 'The Border Wireless.' The way the various scenes were worked up, and the suspense which is felt, make the picture one of the best things of the kind done on the screen."—The New York Tribune.

"Hart again scores. William S. Hart, in 'The Border Wireless,' yesterday, packed the Rialto. Hart, the familiar hair-trigger hero, this time running down a band of German spies. His appearance as a U. S. soldier was a pleasant change. Wanda Hawley unusually charming. The craftsmanship of the production was of the usual excellent Ince standard." The New York Evening Mail.

"The film fan's best bet is the Hart picture, 'The Border Wireless.' He throws a glamour over 'The Border Wireless' that makes it different from the ordinary spy play."—The New York Globe.

"The Great Love" in Milwaukee

"Best Business in History of Milwaukee"

TO be really successful, a picture has to do three things; please the audience, please the critics and please the box office.

D. W. Griffith's first Artcraft Picture "The Great Love," had its Milwaukee premiere in the Alhambra Theatre, managed by George Fischer. Here is Mr. Fischer's statement:

"Never in the history of Milwaukee has a picture gone over bigger or done a more phenomenal business than D. W. Griffith's 'The Great Love.' So enthusiastic were the audiences that they not only applauded but stood up and cheered. Never has a picture had such favorable comments. Congratulations to Mr. Griffith and Artcraft."

The success in Milwaukee is not the exception, but the rule. "The Great Love" will break records in your town.

ONCE again Hodkinson Service has been chosen to open a new shrine to the Motion Picture Art.

The telegram reproduced above tells its own story of the mating of quality pictures with quality houses.

The new million-dollar Pantheon Theatre, latest addition to the Lubliner Trinz Circuit, is in a position to secure whatever product it desires, and its choice of Hodkinson Service should have a special significance to all exhibitors.

There could hardly be more concrete proof of the success of the Hodkinson system of selecting Quality Product for Quality Houses, than the above.

IT IS A WONDERFUL MONEY GETTING PICTURE BECAUSE—it breathes the spirit of free America—it carries the note of the unquenchable love of freedom that no tyrant can subdue—it has that wonderful message that the folks at home are sending to our boys over there. It means comfort, cheer and pleased audiences everywhere, for it shows what Chairman Hurley meant in saying "A BRIDGE OF SHIPS" is "THE ROAD TO FRANCE."

"The ROAD TO FRANCE" IS A DRAMA —a great big, gripping, red-blooded story of the shipyards, photographed by permission of the government during the building and launching of some of our largest new steel vessels.
There is a beautiful love story—there are spies and German intrigue (no bloodshed or battle scenes) and enough brilliant action to make it rank as the most important release of today.

REX BEACH'S
"Laughing Bill Hyde" Is The Hit of the Year.

NEW YORK, whether you ridicule it or not, always knows a real success from a sham success. Its amusement verdicts are sound; they represent the blended opinions of millions of people representing every section of America.

No more substantial success has ever been registered in America's largest city than that scored at the Rivoli Theatre, under the direction of Samuel L. Rothapfel, by

REX BEACH'S
Drama of Redemption
Laughing Bill Hyde
with WILL ROGERS
Directed by Hobart Henley

In the four great essentials of author, Goldwyn supervision, star and story there has not been one dissenting opinion or review among the great metropolitan newspapers, several of which wrongly regard the screen as a trivial art.

Exhibitors in every part of the nation will be quick to recognize the tremendous box-office value that "Laughing Bill Hyde" will have in their houses and they can safely accept this powerful production as a criterion for the five other Rex Beach Star Series productions on which Goldwyn is placing its stamp of quality and strength and which are released exclusively through Goldwyn.

REX BEACH PICTURES

Here Are The Most Remarkable Reviews Any Picture Has Received in Years

N. Y. EVENING MAIL—Rex Beach's "Laughing Bill Hyde" is all good—so decisively good that those who watched it at the Rivoli all felt that they were sitting in on an historic filmland event—the birth of a new star. Will Rogers is another David Warfield; another Joseph Jefferson.

NEW YORK SUN—"Laughing Bill Hyde" registers a personal triumph for Will Rogers and a successful big hit for Rex Beach and Goldwyn. The audiences just "ate it up," they liked the story and acting so.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS: R. E. Pritchard—There have been few pictures shown at the Rivoli that pleased as well as this one. Audiences did not hesitate to show they liked it.

NEW YORK JOURNAL—Will Rogers makes his successful screen debut in Rex Beach's newest drama of the North . . . "Laughing Bill Hyde" makes an exceptional headliner at the Rivoli.

NEW YORK GLOBE—Rex Beach in "Laughing Bill Hyde" has given Will Rogers the opportunity to score as big a success on the screen as he scored on the stage.

N. Y. JOURNAL OF COMMERCE—"Laughing Bill Hyde" instantly places Will Rogers well up as a screen star.... a remarkable picture, remarkably acted.

NEW YORK TIMES—The real Will Rogers is on the reels of Rex Beach's "Laughing Bill Hyde".... a magnetic new personality for the screen.

NEW YORK TELEGRAPH—Like all the Rex Beach pictures, the story and production of "Laughing Bill Hyde" are strong on their own account . . . Will Rogers' wit, pathos and comedy are all there . . . His smile is a real, cheering war-time asset.

NEW YORK WORLD—The country has a new motion picture actor to compete with Fairbanks and Chaplin in the field of film comedy.... Rex Beach's "Laughing Bill Hyde" pleased Rivoli audiences immensely.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD—Goldwyn presents the cowboy philosopher, Will Rogers, in an extraordinary production of one of Rex Beach's most famous stories. Congratulations to author, producer and the star.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS: P. S. Harrison—Pat yourself on the back if you have this picture coming. You will advertise it to the limit. And it deserves to be.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE—"Laughing Bill Hyde" is one of the best pictures Mr. Rothapfel has ever shown.... If Will Rogers remains on the screen the rest of his life he cannot possibly do anything better than the laughing criminal hero of Rex Beach's story.

EXHIBITORS' TRADE REVIEW: Helen Rockwell—Rex Beach and Will Rogers are packing the Rivoli this week and New York seems to have gone quite mad about the combination. Will Rogers has a smile that must have originally started the earth revolving on its axis.

Wid's Praise of "Smiling Bill" Parsons in Capitol Comedies

30. Wid's DAILY

Cuts and Flashes

I caught a Bill Parsons comedy this week that made me feel good way down inside and the gang that sat in with me ate it up It was called "Dad's Knockout," is as clean as a whistle and sure provides gobs of chuckles and several real yells. They had a clever story and what's more, it was cleverly handled all the way with settings and a general classy atmosphere that compares favorably with most of our longer offerings. Anybody that can't cut loose with a grin when "Smiling" Bill Parsons makes those dimples of his'n register is sure in a bad way. He appeared in this as the father of Neal Burns, who had a chorus girl in tow. Billy objects and decides to give his proposed daughter-in-law the double-O before he consents to the match. He goes to the show and gets a close-up of Teddy Sampson, the girl, with a result that he falls, hook, line and sinker and then we have the amusing situation of father and son being rivals for the girl. This results in complications which are really funny and Bill Parsons, dog-gone him, he's got such a nice, kind face that any audience is going to be for him from his first close-up 'til the finish

The titles were very good throughout because they didn't try to be funny and the cast was excellent. Jay Belasco was Neal's chum and George French was a friend of Billy's

SECOND CALL!

We discovered what scenes in the 'Kaiser' films sent them into frenzies. Then we built situations—in the thunder of applause—that will turn any theatre into bedlam.

There's the kick of a French '155' in every foot.

There's a barrage of suspense before every climax as intense as a corps of American artillery.

There's the strategy of a Foch in the supreme sensations of the story.

There's every ingredient for a roar of response from each scene.

On The Way

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE

By Sir Sidney Low

The Romantic Life Story of the Great Welsh Statesman

Produced by The Ideal Film Renting Co., Ltd., LONDON

(Under the sole direction of MAURICE ELVEY)

TEN PARTS TEN PARTS

Which allied Statesman, outside America, has most CAPTURED THE IMAGINATION and won the hearts of the world?

Beyond a doubt it is DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, the great little Welshman, who has fought his way up by sheer grit, FROM COTTAGE TO PARLIAMENT, from bootmaker's protege to the Champion of England and the cause of civilization!

Fiction in its most fascinating pages contains no more captivating chapter than the real-life ROMANCE OF DAVID LLOYD GEORGE. The old saying that "Truth is stranger than Fiction" has received no more wonderful exemplification than in Lloyd George's great upward climb to leadership.

AMERICA AND LLOYD GEORGE

To-day the entire world hangs upon his every utterance and in particular no international figure makes so VIVID an APPEAL TO THE PEOPLE OF AMERICA!

His picturesque speech, his freedom from the spirit of caste, his rise to fame from humble origins, his determination to make the common people prevail over TYRANTS IN PURPLE, all give him in especial degree the ear and the heart of the Democracy of the United States.

LIKE ABRAHAM LINCOLN

It is not to be wondered at that the Nation that produced an ABRAHAM LINCOLN should admire such a figure as DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, for there is something wonderfully akin in the characters and careers of the two men.

The "Ideal Film Renting Co.," whose famous masterpieces such as "MY OLD DUTCH" and "MASKS AND FACES" found a warm welcome in America, have been engaged for AN ENTIRE YEAR ON THE PICTURE!—such is their determination to make it accurate as well as realistic!

The life story of LLOYD GEORGE, besides its fascinating romance, will be the most vivid illustration of THE REAL OBJECTS OF THE WAR that has yet been anywhere exhibited.

Through it move such famous Americans as WASHINGTON, LINCOLN, WILSON, etc., and it is, otherwise, PACKED WITH INTEREST FOR THE PEOPLE OF AMERICA.

SHOWING SOON

THE LIFE STORY OF DAVID LLOYD GEORGE will be shown to the Trade in London in October.

Those who may be interested please communicate at the earliest moment with the "IDEAL FILM RENTING CO., LTD.," 76-78 WARDOUR STREET, LONDON, W. 1, and arrange without fail to be represented at the Trade Show.

! A MODEL CINEBIOGRAPHY THE PICTURE THAT ALL AMERICA WILL WANT TO SEE !

Note:—The picture has been so constructed that it may be released in episodes or completely

The news reel is today the most essential expression of the motion picture, essential to the public and essential to the exhibitor. There are cheaper news reels than the SCREEN TELEGRAM but the bookings at the high class theatres may be taken to indicate that there is no better one.

Three Big Groups

STANDARD PICTURES: These tremendous successes of last season will be even better and stronger money makers during 1918-1919. They have been augmented by the engagement of Evelyn Nesbit, the most widely advertised actress in the world.

VICTORY PICTURES: A new series featuring Tom Mix, Gladys Brockwell and George Walsh, dramatic whirlwinds, in the punchy, peppery sort of productions that insure maximum box office strength—that will prove big profit producers.

EXCEL PICTURES: Far outclassing any competing brand in dramatic and revenue value, these productions now are further fortified by the addition of Madlaine Traverse, whose sensational work in "The Caillaux Case" is the talk of the country.

Peggy Hyland in "Marriages Are Made"

Every Peggy Hyland production makes new friends for EXCEL PICTURES. The latest production of this popular star is a tensely romantic, dramatic, thrilling story of a battle of wits between a loyal American girl and a crew of Hohenzollern spies. The Accidental Honeymoon, with Robert Warwick.—Comedy drama that is just as big a drawing card as a Fairbanks picture.—Bodkin and Keane, Star Theatre, Madison St., near Clark, Loop, Chicago.—Transient patronage.

Intolerance (D. W. Griffith).—An immense production in ten reels. Massive settings and big effects. Four stories twisted into the feature make it hard to follow. Too much material. At the same time it holds interest on account of the spectacular effects. Big business at advanced prices.—A. R. Anderson, Orpheum Theatre, Twin Falls, Idaho.—Critical patronage.

ONE BILLION FOR THE FOURTH LOAN

Motion Picture Industry Has Pledged Itself to Produce One-sixth of the Nation's Total for the Fourth Liberty Loan Drive Against the Hun

THE motion picture industry's bit for the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign, which began Sept. 28, is to be the greatest contribution yet given by the industry to the Government's "Win-the-War-Quick" program, according to an announcement made by Adolph Zukor, chairman of the industry's Liberty Loan Committee. Not only will the motion picture industry provide what the Government confidently expects to be the greatest single sales agency of the entire campaign—the Liberty Loan films contributed by the stars and producing companies—but the amount which the industry has been pledged to obtain for the Fourth Liberty Loan has been set at $1,000,000,000, a record breaking quota for the industry.

Inasmuch as the Treasury Department has definitely announced that the amount of the fourth loan will be $6,000,000,000, the motion picture industry's contribution will be one-sixth of the entire sum to be raised for war purposes by the American people. The industry's pledge is declared by film men to be the heartiest and most sweeping response yet given to the Government's call, and the success of its campaign will establish for all time the industry's status as an essential arm of the Government.

Chairman Zukor has appealed to the exhibitors of the country for their hearty co-operation in the work of screening the Liberty Loan films and in obtaining subscriptions in their theatres. All subscriptions received in the motion picture theatres of the country will be included in the subscriptions obtained by the Motion Picture Industry, and arrangements have been made to supply each exhibitor with blank forms for use in making daily reports to the exchanges as to the amounts collected in his theatre.

Great Opportunity for Industry.

"The fact that the motion picture industry has pledged itself to sell $1,000,000,000 in bonds of the Fourth Liberty Loan offers the greatest opportunity the industry has yet had to demonstrate the value of its service in war times," said Mr. Zukor. "This contribution was not asked by the Government, but represents the desire of the industry at large to prove its usefulness and essentiality in the most effective manner possible. The manner in which it meets this supreme test will establish its status for years to come. The industry's pledge should serve as a call to arms to every member unit of the entire industry.

"This pledge must be raised through the medium of subscriptions from the producers, distributors, stars and players, exhibitors and the patrons who support the industry. All subscriptions received through the agency of the theatres of the country will be included in the industry's quota, and it behooves every loyal, 100 per cent. member of the industry to roll up his sleeves and see that his share of the gigantic campaign is carried on successfully.

"The Silent Salesmen of the Screen."

"Still another indication of the importance of the recognition given the motion picture industry by the Government is the fact that the Liberty Loan films, patriotically contributed by the stars and producing companies, are expected to be the most successful medium of selling bonds at the disposal of the Treasury Department. These Liberty Loan films have already stood the acid test of good showmanship, and the silent salesmen of the screen will undoubtedly prove to be the greatest single agency for the sale of bonds to be used throughout the entire campaign. How splendidly the motion picture industry has responded to the country's call is well known to all those who have seen these pictures. Government officials have shown the greatest interest and enthusiasm, and it is no secret that the Treasury Department is convinced that the Liberty Loan films will be one of the most important factors in the success of the Fourth Liberty Loan.

"In order to obtain the maximum results desired by the Government, it will be necessary to obtain as nearly as possible 100 per cent. distributioin for the Liberty Loan prints. The exhibitor, therefore, will be the most important link in this chain. Four-Minute speakers and other forms of co-operation offered by the Liberty Loan workers should be used as extensively as possible.

Daily Record Will be Kept.

"Arrangements have been made by the Liberty Loan Committee of the N. A. M. P. I. to keep a daily record of all bond sales in the moving picture theatres of the country. The various exchanges have been instructed to see that the exhibitors, co-operating in the motion picture drive, are supplied with the proper blanks to be used in making daily reports of the total amount of Liberty Loan subscriptions taken in the theatres on each day of the campaign. These reports should be rendered daily to the exchanges, which will be required to prepare daily reports of the total of subscriptions taken in the theatres booking the Liberty Loan prints. Thus it will be possible at any stage of the campaign to obtain definite information as to the progress made towards the industry's billion dollar goal.

"Good showmanship, as well as patriotic reasons, demand the widest possible showing of the Liberty Loan films. Each of these special films carries a powerful and entertaining story worthy of a five-reel feature, and will add tremendously to the value of any program. It will be possible for many theatres to obtain pictures featuring stars, whose films have never been shown in their theatres.

"Every theatre should be converted into a recruiting and sales station for Liberty Bonds. The Government is placing more reliance than ever upon the co-operation of the motion picture industry. It is the exhibitor's turn to fall into line with the other units of the industry, and there is every indication that 'slackerism' will be unknown insofar as the exhibitors are concerned in this drive."

Zukor Writes to Schaefer.

An invitation to the exhibitors of the country to join hands in making the motion picture Liberty Loan campaign a complete success was extended by Adolph Zukor, chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee of the N. A. M. P. I., in a letter to Peter Schaefer, of Chicago, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America. Mr. Zukor's letter was as follows:

My dear Mr. Schaefer: As chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, which committee is co-operating and is in charge of all film activities in connection with the coming Liberty Loan drive starting September 28, I am writing you as president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America to endeavor to obtain your full co-operation in this work.

First, we expect each and every exhibitor in the country to do his full duty—

1. By arranging to show each film.
2. By obtaining subscription blanks from the Federal Reserve Boards.
3. To see that subscriptions are made in his theatre immediately after the showing of each of the Liberty Loan pictures.

4. By making a record of the subscriptions on the form that will be provided each exhibitor through the exchanges for that purpose.

Now I thought the biggest work which the local presidents of your league could do is to see that the exhibitors follow the above method as outlined and to particularly see that they are fully provided with subscription blanks, as well as to make sure all of their time is fully booked with Liberty Loan films during the period of the drive.

I am sure that you will be glad to co-operate with us in the matter, and that you will help the industry sell a billion dollars worth of bonds, which is our pledge.

Attached herewith is a complete set of the instructions concerning the manner in which the films are to be distributed.

ADOLPH ZUKOR, Chairman.

WASHINGTON PRAISES LIBERTY FILMS

At Showing Before National Press Club Vice-President Makes Address—New Yorkers Cheered

ADOLPH ZUKOR, Walter W. Irwin, Al Lichtman, Marcus Loew and John C. Flinn received a rather unexpected ovation last night when, during the speech of Frank R. Wilson, chairman of publicity for the Fourth Liberty Loan, at the Central High School, they were asked, one by one, to rise from their seats and show a rather large audience "what they looked like."

The occasion was the opening of the Fourth Liberty Loan drive held under the auspices of the National Press Club. The speaker of the evening was Vice-President Marshall—the entertainer of the evening was Miss Geraldine Farrar. The big feature was the enthusiasm brought about by the speeches and the singing, and by the advance exhibition of a number of the films made by the industry as a present to Uncle Sam to assist in floating the bond issue.

Interest in the trade naturally rests upon Mr. Wilson. He paid tribute to the patriotism of the men and women of the screen through whose efforts there have been produced thirty-five subjects without cost to the Government. He told his audience that had ths Government been compelled to pay for the subjects, the cost would have been in excess of $200,000. From these forty-three hundred copies are to be made, providing in all in excess of two million feet of film.

Gus Karger, president of the National Press Club, introduced the Vice-President, who in turn spoke of the efforts of the film men and women to make the drive a big success. The entertainment was then turned over to Labert St. Clair, an official of the Press Club, and assistant director of publicity for the Fourth Liberty Loan. He introduced Earl Godwin, of the Washington Times, who spoke briefly on the duty of the newspaper men to "come through big," and then Miss Farrar, who sang patriotic songs.

Ceraldine Farrar Selling the First Bond to Vice-President Marshall.

Geraldine Farrar Taking Bond Subscriptions on Treasury Building Steps.

It was not, of course, possible to exhibit all of the thirty-five subjects for the review of the newspapermen and others present, but many were run off before midnight.

All Films Well Received.

All of the films were well received. The men and women of the audience appreciated the efforts of the stars, the producers and others whose activities made the films possible, but despite that fact they showed preferences, as made noticeable by their applause. Favor was perhaps equally divided between Wallace Reid's "The Extra Bit" and Mack Sennett's "It's a Cinch." The writer heard many expressions of approval of the sentiment in the first-named, and there is no doubt that the example set by Mr. Reid will be followed by a great many people who are patriotic enough to set aside money for investment in Liberty Loan bonds or War Saving Stamps which they would otherwise spend foolishly or needlessly.

"It's a Cinch" that the Sennett comedy was appreciated; it was a good laugh producer. "Sic 'Em, Sam," with Douglas Fairbanks, held the audience tense and brought forth cheers. This is a good film. "A Liberty Loan Appeal," featuring Dustin Farnum, was well received. Another applause-bringing script was Mme. Nazimova's "Women of France."

Little Mary in "The Hindenburg Line," William Duncan in "The Decision," Geraldine Farrar in "Bonds that Tie," Alice Joyce in "The Choice," and Charlie Chaplin in "The Bond" were applauded, laughed at, or cried with, as the varying scenes demanded.

The President's band from the U. S. S. "Mayflower," the Presidentjal yacht, played throughout the evening and furnished soloists. Sixty or more soldiers, just back from the front, all of whom had been wounded, some being minus a leg or legs, an arm, or fingers, or who had been gassed or otherwise severely hurt, were brought in from the Walter Reed (Army) Hospital.

Bill Smith to the Rescue.

Aside from the fact that there seemed to be some little difficulty getting proper projection at the first of the evening's picture entertainment, the whole affair went off without a hitch. The difficulties with the machine, however, were promptly adjusted by W. C. Smith, of the Nicholas Power Company, who happily was in the audience at the time.

Present in the audience, additional to the representatives of nearly every large newspaper in the country, famous magazine writers, and Liberty Loan workers, were many senators and congressmen and other prominent Government officials, and the following representatives of the motion picture industry:

Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, chairman of the Motion Picture Liberty Loan Committee; Marcus Loew, Loew's Theatres; Walter W. Irwin, vice-president of the Greater Vitagraph, chairman of the Executive Committe of the N. A. M. P. I.; R. A. Rowland, president, and J. Robert Rubin, secretary, of the Metro Pictures Corporation; Louis Innerarity, secretary Pathe, Inc.; W. C. Smith, general manager of the Nicholas Power Company; Al Lichtman, general manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; John C. Flinn, secretary, Motion Picture Liberty Loan Committee, publicity director of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and Mrs. John C. Flinn; Harry M. Crandall, Colonel Barry Bulkley and George Crouch, of the Crandall Amusement Company, of Washington; Sidney B. Lust, president, and Leo Garner, Super-Films Attractions, Inc., Washington; Miss Geraldine Farrar; Peter G. Smith, assistant secretary, Motion Picture Liberty Loan Committee; Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary, National Association Motion Picture Industry; Oscar A. Morgan, manager of the Washington exchange of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and secretary of the Washington Exchange Managers' Association; Eugene Zukor and Arthur Loew.

Miss Farrar Sells First Bond.

Geraldine Farrar inaugurated the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign in Washington, on September 29, by selling the first bond in the new series to Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo. Standing on a platform erected at the head of the Treasury steps, and surrounded by a brilliant throng of notables, the Goldwyn star brought the dignity of motion pictures to the affairs of the nation. To the crowd she faced, estimated at 50,000, she brought her magnetic personality to bear in taking subscriptions for the new bonds.

The night before, at a meeting of the National Press Club, where she sang the "Marseillaise" and "The Star Spangled Banner," the international celebrity received the subscription of Vice-President Marshall for the first bond of a larger denomination. At the official opening of the campaign Secretary McAdoo, to make the occasion a thoroughly democratic one, bought a bond of small denomination. Secretary of State Lansing was the second purchaser, after which came a steady stream of other officials.

In advance of the ceremonies on the steps of the Treasury, a reception was held in honor of Miss Farrar. More than a hundred persons prominent in official, diplomatic, Congressional and Army and Navy circles were introduced to the prima donna. Among those who attended were Secretary and Mrs. McAdoo, Secretary and Mrs. Lansing, Secretary and Mrs. Lane, Secretary of Agriculture Houston and Mrs. Houston, Commissioner of Internal Revenue Daniel C. Roper, Comptroller of Currency John Skelton Williams, Andrew S. White, former ambassador to France, Mrs. Blaine Beale, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Thomas S. Walsh, Mrs. Edward B. McLean, Mrs. Thomas Chadbourne and many others.

Would Teach Operating to Soldiers.

Many Washington film men have expressed a willingness to take crippled returned soldiers from France and teach them operating, with a view to giving them employment or enabling them to secure employment at other theatres or in other cities. Sidney B. Lust, president of the Washington Exchange Managers' Association, has been in touch with the authorities in Washington with a view to lending his aid and that of his co-members in the rehabilitation work that is going on for the benefit of the crippled men from the war.

There are perhaps five hundred men at Walter Reed General Hospital who have been sent back because of wounds. Additional men are coming in weekly. Of course there are a great many of these men who have lost an arm, or both arms; others are minus fingers; some have lost their eyesight, and still others have lost both legs. The men who have lost one leg, but who have both hands and arms, can be made into good operators, and it is the desire of the film men to help these. Mr. Lust promises an early announcement in the matter.

At Walter Reed General Hospital there are workrooms, to one of which a manufacturer has promised to send a projection machine. The exchange managers have volunteered to devote one or two nights weekly to teaching classes in operating and inspecting.

Balboa Plant May Be Sold.

A meeting of the creditors of the Balboa Film Company, of which the Horkheimer Brothers were the principal owners, was held Saturday, September 20, in a Long Beach, California, bank, to discuss plans for liquidating the outstanding obligations. The plant invoices more than $250,000, and in the property rooms is a collection of material from practically all over the world. Included in the equipment are several automobiles and a number of valuable cameras.

An assignment for the benefit of the creditors was made last March, and since that time the Long Beach Board of Trade has been in control. The purpose has been to hold the property intact until it could be thus disposed of, and the Messrs. Horkheimer have been in New York for some time trying to effect financial arrangements whereby they could proceed with their own productions or sell the plant in its entirety.

The creditors, whose claims amount to about $60,000, are so insistent, however, that a last effort will be made to sell the plant as a whole, otherwise it will be dismantled and the material and equipment will be parceled off and sold. As the building of studios is restricted on account of the war it is hoped that producers with the idea of expansion will be interested in taking over the plant as it stands.

Keeney Picture Well Under Way.

"Her Family's Honor," the latest picture of the Frank A. Keeney Pictures Corporation with Catherine Calvert as star, is now about half completed. All the interiors are being made at the Keeney Studios, on East Forty-eighth street. Numerous picturesque exteriors have been filmed.

The story of this picture, which was written by E. Lloyd Sheldon expressly for Miss Calvert, is a tensely dramatic and very human one. Miss Calvert takes the part of Natalie Rand, daughter of a widow enjoying greater social prestige than wealth.

Pathe Cameraman Goes to Orient.

Camille Legrand, one of Pathe Freres' most valued cameramen, has arrived in New York from Paris on his way to the far East. Mr. Legrand will go to San Francisco, from whence he will sail for Japan. After spending some time in Japan in taking pictures he will go to Shanghai, Singapore, the Straits Settlements, etc., and then to India. His trip will cover more than two years. Mr. Legrand will devote particular attention to scientific subjects, ethnology, architecture and archaeology. His itinerary has been most carefully planned, as have also been the subjects for his camera.

"LET'S CLEAN HOUSE," SAYS QUINN

Los Angeles Exhibitor in Plain Talk Says Time Has Come to Quit "Kidding" Ourselves

J. A. Quinn, widely known as one of the leading exhibitors of Los Angeles, has long entertained positive ideas concerning the production of motion pictures and the method of handling the finished production. He has recently felt a desire to see those opinions published, believing the publication thereof might lead to the correction of certain evils which have sprung up in the business to its detriment. While the Moving Picture World holds no brief for Mr. Quinn or his opinions, we believe that his experience in the business entitles him to a hearing; also that he may have something valuable to suggest, and, for that reason, ought to be heard. The article which follows is the first of a series which Mr. Quinn has expressed a desire to have printed.—Editor.

IF you had a friend with an ailment that was sapping the life out of him and he did not realize it, but you did, and knew that by opening up on him and telling him the whole truth you might save him further distress, don't you think you ought to get busy and break the news?

I may be criticised by some for what I am going to say, but I think the time has come for us to stop "kidding" ourselves along, wake up to the truth and get busy trying to eliminate the "rottenness" in our producing system. At this time, especially when conservation is the watchword of the day, where is there a better place to start house-cleaning than in the motion picture producing business? I have stood by and watched this big "joke factory" operate, flaunting its "inflated value," so-called stars that are in many cases not the equal of ordinary, good stock actors of the old school. I have seen its so-called wonderful stories and wonderful directors heralded at large in huge "display ads" that, either through rank ignorance or with direct intention to mislead and "short-change" exhibitors, are one big, long "continuous lie."

The slump in business blamed on war conditions, Hooverizing, etc., is no doubt responsible for some shrinkage in attendance that we might get under normal conditions; but if you don't believe me ask the public, who like to patronize good pictures, and you will find that the tiresome, unreasonable, poorly timed and drawn-out pictures that are being inflicted on them is the big reason for them staying away.

With a "Picture" It's Child's Play.

I have had many theatres, have played to all classes and have passed through the period of the early days when we had the single-reel program, dependent on the "passerby" for trade, and found it necessary to use all sorts of artificial methods to draw the public into the houses, and I contend that it's child's play now in comparison with those old days, providing you have the "picture."

The public is sick and tired of the inconsistent and fake advertising that is being inflicted upon them. They are getting keener-scented every day, and they will respond quickly if you deliver them the goods. But they refuse to be buncoed any longer, and the sooner we wake up to this fact and get busy inventing a "cure" the better it will be for everybody concerned.

The right way to begin, in my mind, is by the process of "elimination." Now let's get down to real cold facts:

How many are there in the motion picture business who really know the business or understand what the public want?

How many directors are there who really know the "art" of directing and the timing of the audiences' emotions?

How many stories are being filmed that have a sufficient number and variety of situations to warrant the length of the picture?

How many pictures are properly cast?

How many are there in the business who really know how to "cut" a picture?

How many so-called stars are being forced onto the exhibitor and the public through pull and favoritism?

How much money is being wasted through ignorance and rank misjudgment?

How many good and high-class people have been and still are being induced to invest in the "air castles" of would-be producers? In many cases through this channel many who would have been staunch and true supporters of the industry have now become completely disgusted with it. To all who are really conscientious and really want the business to live permanently and grow instead of shrink I will say: "Let's get busy and clean house."

Exhibitor Pays for Producer's Mistakes.

It is the exhibitor who really pays for all the flagrant mistakes of the producer, and the flooding of the market with low-grade pictures lowers the earning power of good producers just as the "jitney-bus" nibbles at the profits of the street-car company.

Let us seek out the conscientious people in the business who really know something and are willing to try and learn "more," and let us stand by them and co-operate with them in a movement to eliminate the fakers and the ignorant from the business.

Let us confine ourselves to truthful and consistent advertising, and deliver what we advertise.

The result will undoubtedly be better pictures at lower rental prices, more consistent attendance and consequentlly more consistent earnings for the conscientious producer and exhibitor.

J. A. QUINN.

Haworth Company to Add Two Stars to Organization

THE success with which the first two Hayakawa pictures have been produced and sold under the Haworth plan brings the announcement that Haworth Pictures Corporation is in negotiation with two important women stars for the production and release of pictures under the same arrangement.

When the Haworth Pictures Corporation was quietly organized on the Pacific Coast it was assumed that it was formed for the sole purpose of producing and exploiting pictures of Sessue Hayakawa, and it has been generally accepted within the trade that Haworth was an exclusive Hayakawa company.

Satisfied now that the Haworth plan is a success, certain that there is a place in the field for a company dedicated to the policies which it has inaugurated, the Haworth company plans upon immediate expansion of the activities. From the Eastern offices of the company in New York, Sam E. Rork, general repreeintative of the Haworth interests, refused to go into detail as to the company's plan.

"You may say," Mr. Rork said, "that Haworth Pictures Corporation will not confine itself to the production of Hayakawa pictures. Hayakawa is merely our first star. We will produce with two more stars, and perhaps with others. There will be two under all circumstances.

"We have convinced ourselves and the Mutual organization has been convinced that we can produce and exploit pictures starring at least two more distinguished artists and we are setting about to do it. We are going to do it in the quickest possible time because the industry now demands the sort of pictures we are producing with Hayakawa, but we are not going to permit haste to interfere with our determination to get the very best."

Illness of Mrs. Farnum Brings Fox Player East

TANNED to a berry-brown after a summer spent in filming plays in the Grand Canyon of Arizona and elsewhere in the West, William Farnum, the Fox star, is back in New York, where he was called by the illness of Mrs. Farnum.

Mr. Farnum, it is said, will stay in New York long enough to produce another big Standard Picture for William Fox, and then, with other Fox stars, will return to Hollywood for the winter.

"This summer has been the most successful in my motion picture career," said Mr. Farnum at the Fox offices this week, where he was renewing his friendships after a long absence in the West. "I have made 'Riders of the Purple Sage' and 'The Rainbow Trail,' two Zane Grey pictures, and have just finished another picture, which is temporarily titled 'The Man of Power.' Besides producing these three Standard Pictures I have also made a special Liberty Loan film for the Government.

"So you can see that I have been pretty busy. However," and the star of "Les Miserables" and other big Fox successes chuckled, "I have managed to sneak away once in a while to Catalina Island and get in a little fishing."

Just when Mr. Farnum will begin work in the East has not been decided. He was gratified to learn on his arrival that Mrs. Farnum's condition was greaty improved.

World Conducting Postcard Campaign.

At the suggestion of the Division of Films of the Committee on Public Information World Pictures, which has been awarded the distribution of "America's Answer," the second official Government war picture, is conducting a postcard campaign to determine what theatres in the United States desire to show this patriotic production. Though the campaign has been in progress only a few days, the responses already received are simply enormous. It looks as though every theatre in the country wants to give its patrons the opportunity of seeing this attraction. This, by the way, so far as is known, is the first mail sales campaign of the sort ever undertaken in the picture industry.

EXPORTS SHOW A FOOTAGE DECREASE

Department of Commerce Reports Falling Off of Over Fifty Per Cent. in Quantity and Value for Seven-Month Period Compared With Other Years

THE record of our exports to foreign countries for the seven-months period ending with July, just made available by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, of the Department of Commerce, shows a falling off in footage of more than 50 per cent, and the value shows a similar decrease when compared with our foreign business for a similar period two years ago.

The heaviest losses in trade is with Great Britain. During the seven months ending with July, 1916, we sent over there 71,508,902 feet of exposed film, valued at $2,903,376; during the seven months ending with July, 1917, these exports dropped to 21,482,107 feet and the value was stated as $1,570,946. During the seven months ending with July of this year the footage dropped to 1,085,063, and the value was given as $558,910.

France, another of our Allies, has also been forced to cut down her purchases of pictures in the United States to a most alarming extent, found herself able to buy and ship across the water during the seven months ending with July, 1918, 1,059,233 feet valued at $182,280, while during the first seven months of the year before the figures had been 9,527,767 feet valued at $227,931, and during the seven months of the preceding year (1916) 14,035,512 feet, valued at $379,198.

Factors Against Foreign Trade.

Restricted cargo space and necessitated prohibitions against the importations of certain types of merchandise into the country named, as well as our own export embargoes and conservation measures, are, of course, responsible for a considerable part of the falling off in our exports of pictures to the European countries. And for these and other natural reasons due to the war Italy also decreased her purchase in the United States. During the first seven months of 1916 Italy bought in moving picture films 7,017,436 feet, valued at $177,127. During the same period of the next year, probably because the French market was closed to a still greater degree than at any other period since the commencement of the war, our sales increased to 9,639,102 feet, valued at $233,075. But for the first seven months of this year our sales to Italy totaled but 633,797 feet, valued at but $14,889.

On this side of the world and in Australia our business has generally increased. During the first seven months of 1916 Australia purchased in American films 3,547,856 feet, valued at $262,-599. These purchases were increased during the first seven months of 1917 to 5,523,466 feet, valued at $367,564. During the first seven months of this year we exported to that country a high total of 7,356,909 feet, valued at $394,827.

Canada imported from the United States during the first seven months of 1916, 7,229,216 feet, valued at $541,681; during the first seven months of 1917, 8,550,229 feet, valued at $645,766; during the first seven months of 1918, 7,850,042 feet, valued at $573,028.

Our exportation to Newfoundland and Labrador decreased to a considerable extent this year. In 1916, during the first seven months ending with July, these countries purchased 1,073,320 feet valued at $61,041. During the same period next year the purchases reached 1,098,600 feet, valued at $43,929—this year, during the seven-months period, the footage was 770,387 and the value $24,702.

Greater Interest in South America.

Apparently a greater interest is being taken in South America, for figures available for the seven months period this year show that we shipped to Argentina 2,666,870 feet, valued at $100,364, and to Brazil 1,607,036 feet, valued at $96,115. This is the first year that figures for these two countries have been given separately from the classification "Other Countries."

In all, during the first seven months of 1916, our exports totaled 114,463,687 feet, valued at $4,687,534, of which 10,-051,445 feet, valued at $362,412, went to countries other than those named above; during the first seven months of 1917, to 75,814,776 feet, valued at $4,007,-815, of which 19,993,505 feet, valued at $928,604, went to countries other than those named above; and during the first seven months of the present year, to 50,208,925 feet, valued at $2,689,551, of which 17,180,407 feet, valued at $744,436 went to all other countries than those named above.

A feature of our foreign business for the month of July, 1918, as compared with that of July, 1917, is the fact that while the footage showed a considerable increase, there was a marked decrease in the value. This year, for the month named, the figures are given as 3,051,291 feet valued at $197,520, as against 2,738,523 feet, valued at $33,397 last year.

Exports and Imports Compared.

Figures showing our purchases and sales in foreign countries of raw stock moving picture film have just been made available by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, of the Department of Commerce, for the seven months ending with July.

During the first seven months of 1916, we bought 22,884,356 feet, valued at $333,-787. During the same period the following year, the footage totaled 40,811,-280 and the value $610,194. This year the figures are 13,806, 414 feet valued at $236,550.

Our exports are recorded as follows. For the first seven months of 1916, 48,-019,717 feet, valued at $1,536,707 (more than double the footage and nearly five times greater than the value of our imports for the same period); of 1917, 43,145,314 feet, valued at $899,746; and, 1918, 38,734,367 feet, valued at $937,-249.

Figures showing the value of our importations of motion picture films for the seven-months period ending with July, 1916, 1917, and 1918, have just been prepared by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, of the Department of Commerce. That period of the present year shows a marked falling off as compared with the others. The business has been divided to show our trade in negatives and positives, as follows:

Negatives.—For the seven months ending with July, 1916, 435,516 feet, valued at $136,114; 1917, 455,840 feet, valued at $273,207; 1918, 251,803 feet, valued at $71,993.

Positives.—For the seven months ending with July, 1916, 3,295,103 feet, valued at $150,830; 1917, 2,252,456 feet, valued at $157,043; 1,235,629 feet, valued at $82,532.

"Hearts of the World" To End Its New York Run

THE definite announcement that D. W. Griffith's production, "Hearts of the World" will have its final showing at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, New York City, on Saturday evening, Oct. 5, brings to light some interesting facts regarding this splendid entertainment. Statistics compiled by Mr. Griffith's executive department disclose the fact that 742,000 persons have seen "Hearts of the World" during its New York engagement. Its final showing also will register upward of 370 performances at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, by far the greatest record for a single run at this playhouse, and a glowing tribute to Mr. Griffith as the producer of super-films.

Many notable Americans have seen "Hearts of the World" during its New York stay, and these have added their indorsements to those of Lloyd George and the other British and French officials, who not only aided in bringing it into being, but also have considered it the finest possible propaganda that has been put forth for the cause of the Allies.

Mr. Griffith may well rest on his laurels. To have produced "Hearts of the World" was in itself a fine achievement for any man. To have it become his greatest success is but the just reward for the many months he spent on the battlefields of France securing the remarkable battle scenes that go to make up the latter part of his story.

Official Pictorial Mats of the War.

W. J. MacInnes, director of advertising and publicity for the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, is organizing an art department for furnishing picture mats covering the various film activities of the organization to newspapers throughout the United States.

The mats include many novel layouts, with up-to-date pictures from the various fighting fronts, and have a distinct news and pictorial value quite apart from the fact that they accentuate interest in the official films.

ARMY ASKS AID IN ITS GAS DEFENSE

Makes Call on Exhibitors to Appeal to Patrons for Saving of Shells and Fruit Pits for Masks

THE United States Army needs peach-stones in order that the lives of the soldiers on the firing line in France may be saved, and is calling on the motion picture exhibitors of the United States to provide them.

The chemical in a gas mask which filters the deadly German gases and makes them harmless to our soldiers is carbon. This carbon is obtained from peach-stones, the pits of other fruits and nut shells. There is a great scarcity of this raw material, and the Gas Defense Division of the Chemical Warfare Service of the United States Army has requested the aid and co-operation of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry to urge the exhibitors of the country to organize campaigns in their communities to obtain this raw material, nearly all of which is now going to waste, from the public.

Every motion picture exhibitor in the country is urged to run slides in his theatre calling the attention of his audience to the necessity of saving fruit pits and nut shells. Arrangements have been made with the local chapters of the Red Cross to collect and ship all of these peach-stones and nut shells that the theatres may collect.

Peach-Stone Matinees Suggested.

It is also suggested that the exhibitors run peach-stone matinees, in which the patron be requested to present a peach-stone in addition to the regular admission price before he is admitted to the theatre. This has been tried in several instances and has been found exceedingly profitable for the exhibitor and extremely beneficial for the army.

In its communication to the National Association the Gas Defense Service stated that the best material from which to manufacture carbon for gas masks was cocoanut shells. Large quantities of these are on the way from Far East, but they will not arrive for six months. In the meantime some other raw material must be found if masks in sufficient quantities are to be manufactured to supply the men on the firing lines overseas.

This substitute has been found in the form of peach-stones, apricot pits, prune pits, plum pits, olive pits, date seeds, cherry pits, Brazil nut shells and the shells of hickory nuts, walnuts and butter nuts. The demand at the present time is five hundred tons of raw material per day, and practically all of this must be supplied from this raw material which is now going to waste.

Ask Exhibitors to Show Slides.

The Gas Defense Service believes that there is plenty of this raw material right here at home that is being thrown away every day. The big thing is to impress on the people the necessity for saving it and to provide means whereby it can be collected. It believes that in calling in the aid of the motion picture exhibitors of the country it is taking the most effective means of reaching the great mass of the people. The officers in charge are therefore asking the exhibitors to use a series of slides calling the attention of their audiences on the great necessity of saving fruit pits and nut shells, and to provide barrels or hogsheads in front of their theatres in which they can be placed.

An official circular has been sent out by the Gas Defense Division for the guidance of exhibitors, and they are requested to use the material contained therein with which to make slides. It is particularly urgent that these slides be shown at every performance for at least the next thirty days and that the barrels for the collection of the material be kept in front of the theatres until further notice.

This Peach Pitter No Peach

OUT in Port Washington, Long Island, the proprietor of the Nassau Theatre offered a weekly pass to any youngster who called at the box office with five pounds of peach-stones for the gas mask industry.

Two nights after this liberal offer had appeared upon the Nassau's screen Druggist Hunold of the same town missed the barrel which had been placed in front of his store for donated pits.

Hart Names Terms for "America's Answer"

CHARLES S. HART, director of the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, who recently announced the coming release of "America's Answer," the second official war picture, under conditions that will make it possible for motion picture houses, large or small, to show the picture at a profit without the necessity of increasing their admission price, now makes public the plan formulated by Dennis J. Sullivan, manager of domestic distribution, for giving both the exhibitor and the public a fair deal.

As already announced, "America's Answer" will be released through the World Film Corporation. The date will be October 28, instead of October 14, as previously indicated. The plan does not comprehend a percentage of the receipts, but a straight rental of 33 1-3 per cent. of the average daily business of the house, plus 25 per cent. increase for the additional business that a Government picture insures.

For instance, if a theatre's business has averaged $1,000 a day since November 1, 1917, 25 per cent., or $250, is added, thus figuring the prospective business for the official picture $1,250. The rental for the picture in that case would be $41.67. A small motion picture house, with a daily average business of only $15, would see the Government picture for the very small sum of $6.25.

The addition of 25 per cent. to the average daily business of the theatre is considered very fair, because "Pershing's Crusaders" has increased the business of the houses from 50 to 200 per cent. over the normal receipts.

Director Hart also makes another announcement of interest to exhibitors.

"In order to avoid any misunderstandings," he says, "exhibitors should bear in mind that the Government tax on theatre tickets is remitted only when the official films are shown directly under Government auspices. When the pictures are shown on a rental basis the usual war tax for motion picture theatre admissions must be collected."

Division of Films Makes Additions to Office Staff

COINCIDENT with the removal of the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, to its new quarters in the big office building at 6 and 8 West Forty-eighth street, Director Charles S. Hart announces several important changes in the alignment of the staff. W. J. MacInnes, who assisted in planning and furnished a great deal of the copy for the big advertising campaigns on different war activities, including the Liberty Loan and Red Cross drives, from their inception, and who came from Chicago to establish the Official Film News, published by the Division of Films in the interest of the Government war pictures, is named as director of advertising and publicity, and will have entire charge of all exploitation, except that of the bureau for community co-operation, which continues in charge of Ryerson Ritchie.

All publicity for the Division of Films, including the designing and placing of trade paper and daily newspaper advertising, poster and window displays, and other methods of stimulating public interest, will be included in the department of advertising and publicity. Willard D. Coxey will be manager of the press bureau, under direction of Mr. MacInnes. Howard Herrick, recently in charge of press publicity, will be associated with Manager George Bowles as assistant manager of feature films. One of the innovations to be introduced by the new department will be a mat and film news service, covering the activities of the Division of Films, for the mutual benefit of newspapers and motion picture theatres in the smaller cities.

At the present time the Division of Films is using only the sixth floor of the Forty-eighth street building, but when the work of fitting up the offices is completed three entire floors will be utilized. The executive offices will be on the seventh floor, the sales department on the sixth and the Educational Films Department on the fourth.

BAMBERGER GOES TO CAMP.

The name of Leon J. Bamberger, head of the contract department of the Fox Film Corporation, has been added to the long and rapidly growing Fox roll of honor. Mr. Bamberger left September 23 for Camp Greene, N. C.

Mr. Bamberger, who is widely known in the film industry, has been with the Fox corporation about a year, most of this time as head of the contract department. Mr. Bamberger also worked under William Fox in the latter's campaigns to raise funds for the Knights of Columbus, the War Relief and the Red Cross.

L-Ko Has New Scenario Editor.

Anthony W. Coldwey, well known for his scenario work with the Sennet comedies and formerly with the American, is now in charge of the scenario department of the L-Ko company. Realizing the necessity of a well-knit story, L-Ko has adopted the policy of producing comedies with funny situations and "gags," but all built around the main theme of the story.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

By A. H. GIEBLER

New Company to Exploit Baby Star.

A company has been formed of Los Angeles capitalists under the laws of the State of California to make pictures featuring little Gloria Joy, which will be known as the Mission Productions. Gloria is now being seen on the screen in the Oakdale releases, and I. W. Keerl, secretary of the Coronna Cinema Company, and organizer of the new company, says that in the coming pictures the little actress will be given a wider range of stories and parts to depict than she has ever had before.

Sherwood MacDonald, who directed Gloria when she was with the Balboa company, will have charge of the Mission Productions, and Dan F. Whitcomb, who formerly wrote stories for Baby Marie Osborne, will be in charge of the scenario department. William Beckway will be chief cameraman. Mr. Keerl says that no new stars will be added to the Mission Productions until the Gloria Joy features have been firmly established.

Kitty Gordon Leases a Home.

Kitty Gordon, who arrived in Los Angeles a few days ago, and will produce her pictures at the Brunton studios, has leased a house at 425 Windsor boulevard, where she will reside during her stay on the West Coast. The house, known as the Goodwin home, is built on the old English type of architecture, and is surrounded by a garden of rare tropical plants and trees. Miss Gordon has taken a lease for two years on the property.

Marie Dressler Aids Liberty Loan.

Marie Dressler, who has been in Los Angeles for some months, will visit the principal cities on the West Coast under the auspices of the women's campaign committee of the State of California, in the interests of the Fourth Liberty Loan. For two weeks Miss Dressler will appear at the various army theatres at the cantonments. Then for three weeks more she will appear at public bond selling booths and other places, beginning at Seattle and working down along the coast, taking in the towns of Tacoma, Portland, Spokane, San Francisco, Oakland, and Los Angeles, San Diego and other cities in Southern California. The women's committee hope to inaugurate a flying squadron to accompany Miss Dressler on her tour and assist in the Liberty Bond work.

Actor Marries Mississippi Girl.

John Gilbert, who has been kept busy supporting the various west coast stars because of a shortage of leading men, and who expects to shortly enter Uncle Sam's service himself, has been married to Miss Olivia Burwell, of Ebenezer, Miss. The bride lives with her relatives on a cotton plantation, and Jack says she will continue to raise guncotton for cartridges while he is chasing the Hun at the battle front.

Lois Weber Breaks Arm.

While shopping in a downtown store on September 18, Lois Weber, producer of motion pictures, slipped on the polished floor and broke her arm in two places. Miss Weber was purchasing rugs for her new home in Beverly Hills, formerly occupied by Frances Marion, the writer. Phillips Smalley, husband and business partner of Miss Weber, returned from New York on the day of the accident, and had forgotten the address and telephone number of his new home, which had been acquired during his absence. It was while he was making inquiries about how to get there that he discovered his wife's accident, and quickly joined her at the California Hospital, where she had been taken to have her broken arm attended. Miss Weber had the finishing touches to put on her newest production, but the picture will have to wait until she is able to go to the studio again.

Operated on for Appendicitis.

Alma Rubens, Triangle star, is critically ill in the California Hospital as the result of an operation for an acute attack of appendicitis that developed on the 15th of September. Miss Rubens has had recurring attacks of the ailment for the past two years, and always recovered without the necessity of undergoing an operation, but this time the operation was unavoidable.

To Represent Photoplay Interests.

Grant Carpenter, lawyer, writer and photoplaywright, has been authorized to represent and act for the United Pictures interests in Southern California, and has left for Washington, where he will establish headquarters and will investigate all matter appertaining to motion picture legislation. Upon his arrival in Washington, Carpenter will present to the Government for D. W. Griffith two propaganda photoplays made expressly for the drive against Germany. These films will be delivered to the Government free.

Ochs in Los Angeles.

Lee Ochs, vice-president of the United Picture Theatres of America, arrived in Los Angeles September 16, and lost no time in getting in touch with local exhibitors in regard to motion picture business. He announced that the new California Theatre would be the first run house of the United Theatres productions, which will include the features starring Dustin Farnum, Florence Reed, Kitty Gordon and other stars now at work on pictures for the organization.

Patriotic Birthday Party.

On the occasion of her birthday, Tsuru Aoki, wife of the Japanese star, Sessue Hayakawa, was hostess at a patriotic party in celebration of the event. The favors and decorations were national emblems and flags of both America and Japan, and the guests included many of the leading film players of the west coast studios.

Victory Opens at High Noon.

The Victory Theater, at 838 South Broadway, which has been completely remodeled, refurnished and renovated during the summer months, opened for the season on September 18 at high noon with a big double bill, with Edith Storey as the star in one attraction and Harry Morey playing the leading character in the other. The policy to be maintained by the management of the Victory will be a change of program twice a week and a flat admission fee of a dime at any time or any day in the year. C. E. Halzell is the new proprietor of the playhouse.

Harry Caulfield, proprietor of the Garrick Theatre, is at Big Bear Lake for a short vacation.

Mrs. B. C. Steele, wife of the manager of the Symphony Theatre, left for Cleveland, Ohio, last week to visit relatives.

Will Manage Minneapolis House.

Warren Lemon, for several months manager of Clune's Auditorium, will be sent in the near future to Minneapolis to take charge of one of the Pantages houses in that city.

Players' Union Rates Suggested.

At a meeting held by the recently organized Motion Picture Players Union at Walker's Theatre Building, one of the members suggested that the union stand for a flat rate of $5 a day for "atmosphere" people, and if the actors emerge from the crowd up to the stage their pay should be $7.50 a day.

Photoplaywright's Wife Dies.

Mrs. Verne Hardin Porter, wife of the photoplaywright, died at her home in Venice after an illness of several years' duration. Mrs. Porter was twenty-five years of age, and just recently her health had seemed to be improving, but the end came suddenly on the afternoon of September 19. The funeral services were held at the Los Angeles crematory.

Edward Lanning Dead.

Edward Lanning, film actor at Universal City, and brother of Frank Lanning, died on September 19, while riding in an automobile with two friends from Pasadena. Lanning had complained of feeling ill, and his companions were in search of a doctor, but he died before one could be reached.

Wife of Director Dies.

The wife of Edward Cline, director of comedies, died on September 17, after a short illness.

Worked Day and Night.

William Farnum, who was called back suddenly to New York on account of his wife's illness, worked day and night on "The Man of Power," in order to complete the production before he left. Frank Lloyd, who directed the picture, expects to go to New York within a few weeks, and it is possible that he will produce one or two pictures in the east with Farnum before they return to California. Lloyd is said to have a great historical production in mind for Farnum that will outclass "Les Miserables."

War Notes.

Pliny Horne, a cameraman at Triangle, has been admitted to Uncle Sam's Signal Corps School of Photography at Columbia, and is waiting for orders to report in New York City.

Dick Rush, assistant director at Triangle, has gone to Canada, where he will go into training for the army. Rush is an Australian, and expects to fight with the Anzacs when he reaches France.

David Silverman, formerly connected with film distributing concerns in Los Angeles, came back in khaki last week to visit friends. Dave is stationed at the Presidio in San Francisco.

A. P. Younger, from the editorial department, and Don Smith, a cutter, left Triangle to join the colors last week.

A Dollar An Hour.

Fatty Arbuckle was fined $7 one day last week because he had been driving his car seven miles per hour faster than the law allows in California.

RUBBERNECKING IN FILMLAND

Los Angeles Correspondent Personally Conducts Our Readers Through the West Coast Studios

By Giebler

LADIES and Gentlemen, after leaving the seething and ceaseless activities of Hollywood, we find ourselves traversing Cahuenga Pass, famed in song and story of the West.

A journey of six miles over this historic highway, which, as you see, is a natural passage cleft by nature between the towering tops of the mountains adjacent to our right and the towering tops of the mountains adjacent to our left, will bring us to Universal City, the largest picture plant in the country, which was founded and built by Carl California Wall Fruit.

Laemmle, otherwise known as the King of the Movies.

A glance to the right gives us an advance glimpse of the object of our visit. The group of buildings reposing like jewels on the wide plain between the two ranges of hills in the foreground, is Universal City.

The depression in the landscape to the left is where the Los Angeles River lashes its shores with its wild waves and rolls its turgid flood onward to the sea.

As we near the portals of this famous place, bend your observant gaze on the busy scene. Observe the activities that are occurring here. Jitney busses arriving with clocklike regularity, disgorging their loads of human freight and actors and hurrying back to Hollywood for still other loads. Great trucks piled to the guards with properties and other supplies to be used in the making of Universal films.

Note the long line of variously garbed people emerging from the gates of the studios and making their exit into the building to the right.

The Bewhiskered Go Soupless to Work.

No, lady, a battle scene is not being staged in the building to the right. The seeming sounds of mortal combat and the clash of arms is naught but the roar and rattle of table cutlery, a diapason of dishes, a furore of finger bowls and other dining room discords.

The building to the right is the studio cafeteria, where the players assemble for their noonday cakes and beans.

We may enter here and see the actor at his feed, truly an inspiring and at times an awesome sight.

There are certain restrictions to eating in this place. All actors in costume, whose make-up includes whiskers, are either compelled to check their facial foliage at the desk, or eschew soup.

The tables to the right are reserved for directors and leading players. This is not, as you might think, a social distinction, but a necessity. The directors are compelled to watch the diet of the leading players very carefully.

Only last week a villain, hitherto noted for the realism of his dastardly doings, tried to choke the heroine into insensibility with one hand because he had succumbed to the longings of a depraved appetite for bread pudding at his noonday lunch.

Another sad case was discovered when a hero was posed for a close-up with a beautiful leading lady. It was the end of the play. She lay in his arms safe and sound after having been saved by him from many perilous perils. His strong right arm encircled her slender waist, her hair streamed like a cascade of golden ripples across the wide expanse of his boiled shirt.

When Onions Spoiled a Close-Up.

He gazed into her eyes with the regulation close-up gaze which requires the tips of the noses of the gazer and the gazee to be seven-sixteenths of an inch apart, registering unutterable love and fond affection.

"Close your eyes and murmur something," said the director to the girl.

The beautiful creature closed her eyes, opened her mouth and murmured—and a splendid close-up was irretrievably spoiled—she had had onions for lunch!

The scene before us is indeed a rare sight. You are afforded the spectacle of thousand-dollars-a-week stars toying with the prehensile noodle; spirituelle leading ladies bombarding their delicate systems with the deadly frijole, or red kidney bean cooked Mex style; villains masticating veal cutlets; beautiful blondes barking at corn on the cob; juveniles doing away with roast beef au jus; character people consuming carrots in a shameless manner; ingenues eating that curse of California cafeterias, the summer squash; directors doing things to apple dumplings, and over all the soft and soothing sound of soup as it ripples from the spoon to lip.

Some of the most famous folk of the films are feeding here today. At the tables near the window may be seen Ashton Dearholt, Priscilla Dean, and that clever juvenile, George Hackathorn; Director Colin Campbell, of "Crisis" fame; Harry Carey, Neva Gerber, Carmen Phillips, Ruth Clifford, Harry Carter, J. P. McGowan, Harry Hilliard, Edith Roberts, Al Whitman, Douglas Gerrard, Marie Walcamp, tamer of lions and other wild beasts; Mary MacLaren, Mae Murray—and over in the far corner General Manager Cistrom, Casting Director Hoyt, and Director of Publicity Beall talking business over their beans.

Blow the Foghorn Softly.

We will now enter the studio grounds.

This vast place contains 237 acres, many of which are covered with buildings. Everything necessary to the making of movies is found here. Machine and carpenter shops, electric light plants, a post office, a hospital, a fire department, an elephant named Charlie and a goat of the William variety; and as you can see by looking toward the south, a well-preserved and serviceable mountain.

There are fourteen large stages, with a combined space of 104,242 square feet. Thirty-five thousand of these feet are found in the electric lighted, or covered stages, while the remaining 69,242 feet are canopied with our beautiful cerulean sky when the weather is good. At other times our celebrated fogs are used.

No, lady, fogs are not mentioned in the guide books, but any disgruntled inhabitant can give you exhaustive and profane information about them.

As we proceed down this boulevard, which is named after Carl Laemmle, we are given visual evidence of the magnitude of the place.

Under the covered stage to the right, Director Allan Holubar is making scenes for a big ten-reel spectacular film to be called "Till I Come Back to You," with Lee Moran Simulating a Stew.

Dorothy Phillips and Robert Anderson, who was Monsieur Cuckoo in "Hearts of the World" in the leading parts.

A peep through the door from whence comes the strain of patriotic music, shows us Monroe Salisbury and Betty Compson being directed in a play called "The Renegade," by William Wolbert. The two California peaches on the brick wall are Carmel Myers and Ruth Clifford.

Over on the big stage, which is three hundred feet in length, J. P. McGowan is making an episode of "The Lure of the Circus," starring Eddie Polo, the big brudda Sylvest' of the movies. The young lady poised in the open window and about to put a thrill in the work by plunging from the dizzy heights to the ground below is Eileen Sedgwick. The dark "complected" gentleman telling Miss Sedgwick how to jump is Mr. Polo.

Lee Moran Mixes a Stew.

We are now coming to the comedy stages, which are far removed from the stages where dramatic work is done, in order that big, tense moments may not be spoiled by the dramatists.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, two prominent disciples of hilarity, make their comedies here. The man with the silk hat and the simulation of a stew posing in the door of the taxicab, is Mr. Moran.

This road leads us away from the main buildings and to the back lots, where big outdoor stuff is staged.

The crowd in the field to the right is the Ben Wilson company making a big moment for "The Brass Bullet" serial. They are getting ready for the airplane, which you see being maneuvered farther away, to swoop down and pick up Jack Mulhall from the armored car, after which he will escape from the airplane in a parachute.

To the left is the Zoo, where as many animals as Noah took into the ark with him are kept.

How Works of Old Writers Reappear in a New Form

ONE of the most extraordinary angles of the scenario department of feature productions," says Charles Sarver, scenario editor of World Pictures, "is the multiple adaptations made by ambitious young writers of the old stand-by days, as the efforts of 'The Duchess,' Charles Garvice, Mrs. Alexander, Mary Cecil Hay have come to me in a hundred different forms. These are the principal sources of inspiration to the young girls who look for fame and easy money as writers.

"The young male scribe resorts to Gaboriau, whose mighty 'Lecoque' under a thousand aliases is the hero of hair-raising tales that would fill 'young America' with unalloyed joy, but which the censor unquestionably would ban.

"The spinster—she of uncertain age—finds in Miss Mulock, Jane Austin, Charlotte Bronte the ideas that to her mind should be made into pictures. It is a peculiar mind, to say the least, of the novice in the picture-writing game. The fact that a story has been duly credited to some one else has no weight as regards ownership, providing they have changed the locale or the names of their characters. The mere fact that they have made a few changes gives them the right to claim sole ownership and remuneration."

Power's to Show 'Em to Censors.

Power's Cameragraph has been selected by Australia for projecting all pictures before the censorship board. Every film used in Australia must pass before the censors. This projector was selected for this important task after competitive tests.

MANY RED CROSS PRODUCTIONS COMING

General Film Reports Wide Interest in Those Subjects Already Issued—Pictures Exclusive

STRONG appreciation of the scope and importance of the American Red Cross motion picture activities is becoming apparent throughout the country. It is now only a few weeks since the reorganized bureau of pictures of the American Red Cross, with W. E. Waddell as director, issued its first release, which proved to be a subject of happy selection for a premiere, "The Historic Fourth of July in Paris." The enthusiasm, with which this one-reel patriotic film was received in the largest down to the smallest theatres of the country, stand out prominently in recent film history. Since then, as part of the original plan, other releases have been made, and a series of such releases is to be continued at regular intervals to cover the war from a Red Cross angle. The forthcoming releases will follow the current subjects, which are, "Soothing the Heart of Italy," and "Of No Use to Germany."

The Bureau of Pictures of the American Red Cross is a department of the national publicity department of the American Red Cross, with Joseph Johnson as head of the department. In behalf of the organization, the bureau of pictures is undertaking to give the widest circulation to film from abroad which has been taken under Red Cross auspices and to present it to the American public as a graphic review of the important uses made of the funds so liberally subscribed for works of mercy in the war torn countries. Back of this presentation is nearly every facility of the great organization.

Society is Co-operating.

The full force of this co-operation is just beginning to be felt. There are many angles to it, but one of the most impressive is the co-operation provided by the thirteen division organizations of the Red Cross in the United States. Each of these divisions is separately organized to co-ordinate the work of the national body. The publicity departments of the thirteen district organizations are aiding in every way the work of the Bureau of Pictures. One result alone is the weekly publication in thirteen separate division organs of the latest news of the releases. These organs reach the responsible heads of every Red Cross chapter in the United States.

Also Make Pictures for Showing Abroad.

The issues of films by the Bureau of Pictures are available in this form to the more general public eager to see the work of the Red Cross. Moreover, an additional distribution of Red Cross pictures taken in the United States is provided for foreign shores by the bureau, whose work is growing to proportions of which its present scope is only a foretaste.

The Bureau of Pictures most intelligently refrained from undertaking to build up its own system of distribution depots, and chose rather to employ one of the existing distributing systems. The films already produced, and a series of others which are in work, are routed for the American Red Cross through General Film Company exchanges, these having been thrown open to the Red Cross in a spirit of co-operation. Theatres, desiring to use these immensely popular films, may obtain them through these exchanges at a limited cost. Local Red Cross chapters are also served by these exchanges. The Bureau of Pictures desires it understood by the theatres and the trade that it is acting under the advice of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry as to distributing its materials. And it is further anxious for everyone to know that its film operations are not designed for revenue in any sense of the word. Any money that is received is to cover back the expense of taking and production.

The film received from its branches abroad by the Bureau of Pictures are all exclusive in character. As far as possible they are assembled to tell a definite story in each reel, the topics varying with the locality of the action. Some intensely interesting releases are promised in the series now under preparation. Some of these will be available from no other source, such as certain scenes in Serbia, Roumania and Russia, which at the present time are prominently in the news dispatches.

National Arbitrators Give Operators Increase

FOR the first time as far as trade paper reports are concerned the United States has conducted arbitration proceedings to settle a wage scale controversy in the moving picture business.

This was in Cleveland, when the arbitration board handling the operators' demand for a wage increase from 62½ cents per hour to 80 cents, granted them 75 cents per hour until January 1, 1918, and 80 cents after that.

The exhibitors were obliged to pay up the difference in the new scale from August 19, and the new scale runs until August 19, 1920.

The exhibitors' league protested the award and asked the Secretary of Labor to review the proceedings. Henry Lustig, president of the league, said:

"The third member of the arbitration board was named by A. L. Faulkner, Federal mediator, after we disagreed upon the list of third men submitted by the operators and when they declined to accept one on our list. This man was William Begley, who operates a print shop. We accepted him under protest because we felt, he being a printer, could not consistently arbitrate in a satisfactory manner."

Soldiers to See "Sic 'Em, Sam."

By special arrangement Douglas Fairbanks is to show his Liberty Loan propaganda film "Sic 'Em Sam" in every training camp in the United States for the benefit of the boys who are preparing to go "over there."

Copies of this film have already been placed with the Western camps, which will releay them along the line, and they are then to be shipped abroad for the boys on the field of action.

EXCHANGEMEN GET TOGETHER ON DRIVE

Watterson Rothacker Outlines to Managers Plans for Use of Screen in Seventh Federal District

THERE were several important points brought up for discussion and a few resolutions adopted at the meeting of Chicago exchange managers in the seventh federal reserve district, held in the La Salle Hotel on Wednesday, September 25. These will be helpful to the exhibitor at this time, although the fourth Liberty Loan drive will be well under way and the circulation of the Liberty Loan films will have gained a good start before the publication of these notes.

The meeting was called by Watterson R. Rothacker, director of the moving picture bureau, for the purpose of explaining the plans for the exploitation of the loan by way of the screen. Ben F. McCutcheon, George A. King and F. Howard Russ, representing the department of publicity of the Liberty Loan executive committee, were present. It was revealed during the course of the session that, in addition to the subjects produced and distributed by the companies directly affiliated with the National Association, there will be a number of trailers and single productions made especially for Liberty Loan advertising purposes available at independent exchanges. Each branch of the George Kleine System, for instance, has been provided with prints of subjects in which Grace Valentine and other stars appear. The Celebrated Players' Film Company of Chicago will also distribute without charge small subjects of like nature.

To meet the requirements of the Government in so far as the booking of the pictures is concerned, it was agreed unanimously that a recording secretary be appointed to keep in touch with each exchange manager each day in order to secure and maintain a list of open booking dates on all films. Joseph Freidman was chosen for this position. Exhibitors therefore are requested to make booking applications to the Celebrated Players' Film Company, 207 South Wabash avenue, when informed by any other exchange that none of its films is procurable.

A sufficient quantity of slides will be on hand in every exchange. These are being prepared by the publicity department of the executive committee, and will contain concise, direct messages to the public. At the suggestion of F. Howard Russ, chairman of publicity for the state of Michigan, Watterson R. Rothacker, Nathan Ascher and Joseph Freidman were appointed as a committee of three to form a permanent organization with an object to promote Government propaganda between loans. Work will be started in this direction immediately after the present drive.

Nearly every exchange manager in Chicago, besides the aforementioned Government publicists, attended the meeting. Every one seemed anxious to serve his best.

Personal soliciting for Liberty Loan subscriptions will not begin in Chicago theatres until the last week of the drive. The ward organizations will have complete charge of the sales in the theatres, and each organization will appoint a captain for each theatre, who will work in co-operation with the theatre managers and will have supervision over the work.

It has been arranged to have women take the subscriptions.

Kleine's Fourth Liberty Loan Trailers.

The trailers prepared by George Kleine to advertise the fourth Liberty Loan, in which Grace Valentine appears in a serious of characteristic poses, are not only somewhat different from other aids of the kind, but they make a strong appeal to the spectator from a patriotic standpoint.

The sub-titles were written by Arthur J. Warde, publicity man for the George Kleine System. Here are a few:

"In the thought of the moment that is in every true American's heart and soul—Buy Liberty Bonds."

"The spirit of the martyred girls of France and Belgium cry out—Buy Bonds."

"From the depths of the ocean the soulful prayers of the innocent women and children, victims of Hun treachery and cruelty, cry aloud—Avenge Us and Buy Bonds."

"Crush the Kaiser and his hosts with the weight of gold—Buy Bonds."

A unique campaign moving picture is in preparation at the Selig studios under the direction of George Bainbridge, formerly director for Essanay. The picture is designed to assist in the November drive of the Y. M. C. A. for a $170,500,000 war fund. The first 1,400 feet of the picture, which is to be in two reels, will be devoted to exhibition of the work of the Y. M. C. A., the Salvation Army and allied organizations at the war front and in the training camps. For this part of the picture Fred Stone, the Dolly Sisters and other stars have made scenes. They will represent the entertainment provided through the Y. M. C. A. overseas. Pictures will be shown of hospital work, of canteen and relief work in the huts and of President Wilson himself, who will write a campaign message in front of the camera.

The final few feet of the last reel will be devoted to soldiers and sailors in nearby camps. Pictures will be taken in every training camp in the Union for this portion of the film, so that no matter where the picture is shown scenes of familiar camps and "boys from home" will conclude it. Different pictures may be inserted at this point with every showing. It is expected to be the most elaborate picture of its sort yet produced.
